For the 1968-69 academic year the National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta will award the Maria Leonard, the Alice Crocker Lloyd, the Adele Hagner Stamp, the Kathryn Slison Phillips Fellowship, and the Christine Yerkes Conway Fellowship for graduate study. The amount of each fellowship is $2,000. Attendance at a graduate school which has a chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta is encouraged.

Any member of Alpha Lambda Delta who was graduated in 1965, 1966, or 1967 and who has maintained the scholastic average throughout her college career is eligible. Graduating seniors may apply if they have maintained this average to the end of the first semester (or first quarter) of this year.

Willett Appoints Blackwell Dean

Three Longwood College staff and faculty members have been elevated to top administrative positions, one of which is new.

Confirmation of the appointments, as recommended by President Henry I. Willett, Jr., was made by the board of visitors at a regular quarterly session at the college on Tuesday, Feb. 6.

Dr. Herbert R. Blackwell, associate professor of English and chairman-elect of the English department, will become dean of the college, succeeding Dr. Richard B. Brooks who became dean of the school of education at the College of William and Mary on Feb. 1.

In a major administrative change, John E. Carr III, business manager and treasurer, will move up to the new position of vice-president for administration with the faculty rank of associate professor.

Jimmy H. Paul, assistant business manager and treasurer, succeeds Carr as business manager and treasurer of the college. It is anticipated that the position of assistant business manager and treasurer will be filled shortly.

Until Dr. Blackwell's appointment becomes effective July 1, Edwin H. Vassar, assistant professor of education, will continue to serve as acting dean. Foster B. Gresham, associate professor of English, will continue to serve as acting chairman of the English department until September 1.

One of Blackwell's first duties will be to assist Dr. Willett in securing a permanent English department chairman.

Obviously pleased with his appointments, Dr. Willett stated that it was the college's good fortune to have among its staff and faculty the caliber of leadership required at a time of increasing student enrollment and expanding facilities.

Speaking of the college's second-ranking officer, Dr. Willett said, "In Bob Blackwell, Longwood will have as its dean a dedicated scholar whose leadership will help us maintain our high academic standards and essential educational services to the State. In moving from the classroom to his administrative position, Bob's broad interests, sense of organization, and personality traits will enable him to make an even greater contribution to the life of the college."

Dr. Blackwell joined the faculty in 1964 after having taught at the University of Virginia, Millsaps College, and Delta State College. His academic area of special interest is 17th and 18th century English literature.

A native Virginian who attended the public schools of Richmond, Dr. Blackwell received the Ph.D. degree from the University of Virginia and bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from the University of Richmond. He is a veteran of World War II and the Korean War.

Commenting upon Carr's appointment to the new administrative position, Dr. Willett said that the position will make possible a greater degree of administrative coordination that has become necessary because of Longwood's recent and projected growth.

"Appointing Col. Carr to this new position will enable us to utilize more fully his high-level administrative experience in the Army and demonstrated capacity for leadership since he joined our staff," Dr. Willett stated.

Carr, a 43-year-old retired U. S. Army staff officer, has managed Longwood's business affairs since December 1966. With an efficiency rating ranking him in the top one-percent of all Army officers, Carr's broad military experience included the career management of some 7,000 Army ordnance officers and serving as comptroller of headquarters for the U. S. Army in Europe, a position in which he was responsible for annual expenditures amounting to 12 billion dollars. He received the B.S. in commerce degree from the Citadel and master of business administration de-

Two LC publications welcomed new editors and staffs at the beginning of this semester. Brenda Holly is the new Editor-in-Chief of the GYRE, the literary magazine, and Karen Maher heads the new staff of the ROTUNDA, the student newspaper.

Brenda, a junior from Richmond, is an English major who has worked with Publications since the beginning of her sophomore year. Currently she is also treasurer of Pi Delta Epsilon, and a member of the SGA and Kappa Delta Pi.

While the most recent issue of the GYRE will go to press this week, Brenda is already anticipating the spring Awards issue. She expressed hope for increased participation and a bigger and better magazine.

The remainder of the GYRE staff includes Becky Powers, Feature Editor; Bobbie Powers, Short Story Editor; Karla Myers, Essay Editor; Donna Barnes, Poetry Editor; Emily Gillespie and Janie Ragland, Art Editors; Stuart Fowlkes, Business Manager; and Regina Pavlak, Circulation Manager.

Karen Maher is also a junior English major from Richmond. This is her second year on the ROTUNDA staff. She is also a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, and the Newman Club.

Karen and her staff are already working on many improvements for future issues of the ROTUNDA.

The new Managing Editor of the newspaper is Candy Maher, a junior transfer from Michigan State. Candy is a Mathematics major. She is from Falls Church, and is also a member of the Newman Club.

Candy Jamison, president of Legislative Board, congratulates Dr. Blackwell, Dean-elect, as Mr. Paul, successor to Col. Carr as Business Manager and Treasurer, looks on.

Senior Represents Longwood

As Best Dressed College Girl

Miss Virginia Hope Daughtrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Daughtrey from Portsmouth, has been chosen Longwood's representative in "Glamour's" "10 Best Dressed College Girl" contest. "Ginny" is a senior majoring in elementary education.

A slim 5'6-1/4", she wears a size ten. Her frosted hair and deep blue eyes pose her as our campus winner. But Ginny has considered modeling before! "I modeled for a department store in high school," she began, "and last summer I even had some test shots taken." Although Ginny doesn't sew, she enjoys choosing her own clothes. Each contestant was required to model three different outfits: a on-campus outfit, an off-campus outfit, and a party dress. For her on-campus outfit, Ginny chose a navy and white, jersey, knitted, one-piece dress, accented with navy around the collar and the sleeves. For her off-campus wear, she selected an apple-green A-line dress with a waisted brass buckle. Matching shoes sported heels matching the belt buckle to complete the "total look". For her party wardrobe, Ginny chose a short, white, straight dress with a turtled-jeweled neckline with the jewels accented on both sides. Silver hose and sparkling shoes helped make Ginny Longwood's perfect lady.

Ginny's first reaction was one of disbelief. Asked if she had ever dreamed of becoming the winner, she answered, "Heavens no!" She really was excited about the whole idea of winning. "Was I excited when I heard my name?"

The contestants were chosen to represent various campus organizations and dorms. Judges included Mrs. Blackwell, Lus Schuppiesser, Mr. Stauffer, Leigh Gardner, and Hita Matthews. The girls were judged on originality in style and use of fabrics, perfect fit, and basic design. Appropriateness for the occasion was considered, as well as color and texture of accessories to match the outfits. In preparation for the contest, the girls were informally presented to the judges at a tea last Friday afternoon. Miss Pat Armistead accompanied the girls' modeling on the organ.

First Runner Up was Miss Neblett Torrence, sponsored by the freshman class. Linda Etheridge, Kappa Delta's contestant, won as Second Runner-Up. The remaining three finalists included Mary Jeter, Kappa Delta; Kathy Kamps, Alpha Sigma Tau, and Sandra Dew, Alpha Sigma Alpha.

Building Committee Reports Growing Use Of Lankford Bldg.

The Lankford Building Committee met Thursday afternoon, January 4, to review the progress of student activities in the new building.

The committee was encouraged to receive the report that students are using the building in increasing numbers.

They were, however, puzzled that there seems to be some confusion about the use of the Lankford Building bowling alley. Therefore, the committee took the occasion of their meeting to emphasize that Longwood students may bowl free of charge, that their dates and guests will pay .35 per game bowled, .15 for the shoe rental, that faculty and staff bowling will be allowed on Tuesday nights, that the faculty and staff will pay .15 for shoe rental and that their guests, including family members, will pay this charge in addition to .35 per game bowled.

The committee also recognized and endorsed the memorandum to town officials by Colonel Carr, college business manager, that the bowling alley in Lankford Building is not a public enterprise open to townspeople.

Before adjourning, the committee expressed full confidence in Building Director Gilbert Wood's ability to manage the building's activities according to the guidelines set down in the committee's open letter earlier this semester. Should any conflicts of interest arise, address them to Mr. Wood personally.

Dr. William Mallard To Deliver Lectures

Dr. William Mallard, Associate Professor of Theology at Emory University will hold a series of lectures and discussion groups on the topic: "Wanted: God - Dead or Alive. The Importance of Theology Today."

The lectures will be based on Bonhoeffer's "Letters and Papers from Prison," Tillich's "The Courage to Be," and Altizer's "The Gospel of Christian Atheism." These books may be borrowed from the Wesley Foundation Library.

Dr. Mallard will hold a total of three sessions at the Wesley Foundation Student Center, Sunday, February 18, at 6:30 p.m., Monday, February 19, beginning at 4:30 p.m., with an informal period, followed by the second lecture. There will be a one hour break for dinner and the final lecture and discussion will begin at 7:00 p.m.

Personal conferences with Dr. Mallard may be arranged by seeing Virginia Sly in Cox 117 or Malinda Ayres at the Wesley Foundation Student Center.

Tonight the Artist Serist will present the First Chamber Dance Quartet, who will perform in Jarman Auditorium at 7:30 P. M.

Among the selections that the ballet dancers will perform are: "Collection of an Ace," by Francois-Adrien Boileau; "The Millers Dance," by Manuel de Falla; "La Folia," by Arcangelo Corelli; and "Inner Obstacle," by Dimitri Shostakovich.

Lychnos Recognizes Science, Math Honors

"Lychnos," the honorary science and math club at Longwood College, is a very purposeful organization that few Longwood students know about. This society, only eligible to juniors and seniors, meets at least once a month at which time the members discuss business and have informal programs dealing with science or math topics. About four times a year, "Lychnos" invites professional speakers outside the college to come and speak to them about science or math topics and to inform the girls of new developments in those fields.

Preprofessional students who remain at Longwood their junior and senior year are also eligible for membership into this organization. All members, both science and math majors as well as preprofessional majors, must have an accumulative average of 2.5 and an average of 3.0 in both their science and math courses before they are considered for membership into "Lychnos."

Like most other organizations on Longwood's campus, "Lychnos" has elected officers who take responsibility for conducting the business of the club. The officers for the year 1967-68 are: President - Jo Lynn Davis; Vice President - Ann Vickers Bruce; Secretary - Lany Pawl; and Treasurer - Carolyn Glass Comer.

Although students are not eligible for "Lychnos" until their junior or senior year, the society does not overlook freshmen. "Lychnos" held an informal tea for all freshmen who are science and math majors at Lankford Building. The purpose of this informal gathering was to give them a chance to meet the faculty members who are on the science and math staffs.

The KD's returned from a busy semester break to a new semester and a new slate of officers. They are: Dianne O'Berry, president; Cookie Moore, vice-president; Mary Ross, secretary; Peggy Vaughn, treasurer; Patsy Peach, assistant treasurer; Koko Wooling, membership chairman; and Brenda Rountree, editor. The new semester also finds the following KD's student teaching: Susan Barwick, Myra Boone, Margaret Bridges, Karen Foster, Jinks Johnson, Barbara Hooper, Mary Jo Maddex, Nancy Robison, and Susanne Wright. We miss these girls, but wish them the best of luck.

When grades were distributed Kappa Delta was proud to find the names of Karen Burke and Neblette Torrence on the Dean's List. Neblette also proved that brains and beauty can be combined by being elected as one of the Freshman representatives to the May Court.

Three KD's also participated in Glamour's Best Dressed College Girl contest. We were especially excited when Mary Jeter was named as one of the six semifinalists, while Linda Etheridge was second runner-up and Neblette Torrence was first-runner-up. Congratulations to these girls for representing us so well.

Institute Of Culture Presents Charles Dufour

Nancy Clements

Friday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the conference room of the Lankford building, a noted New Orleans author, journalist, and college professor, Charles L. Dufour, spoke to students, faculty, and public about the colorful Cajuns of the Louisiana low-country.

Mr. Dufour was sponsored by the Southern Institute of Culture. His was the second of this year's series of three lectures presented by the Institute. The last lecture of the current series is scheduled for April 12, when Dr. Herbert R. Blackwell, Associate professor and dean-elect, will speak on "Eccentrics in Southern Literature."

An informal luncheon, at which Mr. Dufour was special guest, was arranged by the institute committee, of which Miss Virginia Bedford is Chairman. Other committee members are Foster B. Gresham, L. Marshall Hall, Jr., and Miss Helen B. Savage.

A versatile writer, Dufour has a broad background in the newspaper field. He has been a reporter, music critic, sports writer, and member of an advertising department. For three years he presented a radio sports program.

Nicknamed "Pie," he has a wide following as a columnist whose "A La Mode" has been a popular feature of the New Orleans States for many years.

An instructor in American history at Tulane University since 1956, he is an author of note who has delved deeply into Southern history and produced a number of books dealing with historical events and personalities of special interest to Civil War "buffs" and other students of the old South.

His most recent book is "Ten

Flags in the Wind," a history of Louisiana. He provided the text for a picture book on New Orleans, published in January. His sixth book, completed last summer, is "A Compact History of the Mexican War." Earlier he had authored three Civil War books: "Gentle Tiger," "The Night the War was Lost," the story of the fall of New Orleans in 1862; and "Nine Men in Gray," a series of biographical profiles of forgotten or less-known Confederates.

A native of New Orleans, he is a graduate of Tulane University. A veteran of World War II, he graduated from the officer candidate school at Ft. Benning, following which he served in Washington in the military intelligence division and was later assigned military attaché to Syria and Lebanon.

gree from Syracuse University. He has the distinction of having graduated from the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College.

Mr. Paul, the new business manager and treasurer, graduated with a major in accounting from Louisiana Polytechnic Institute. He came to Longwood as assistant business manager and treasurer in December of 1966.

Dr. Willett commended Paul for the part he has played in the management of the college and said, "In Jimmy Paul we will have a highly competent business manager and treasurer who did an outstanding job in his previous assignment and deserves this promotion to a position of greater responsibility."

"Sing Out South" professors "Up With People."

Sing Out South Group Presented By YWCA

On Friday evening, February 9, "Sing-Out South" invaded the quiet Longwood campus. In great exhilaration, sixty Richmond high school and college students piled out of their own "Sing-Out South Express" bus carrying with them into Iler Gymnasium costumes, instruments, and a mass of audio equipment. There were smiles on every face as each member went about his own task toward preparing for the exciting concert that would christen the spring semester, and provide a wealth of enthusiasm for the cause they sing about. This cause, for a strong and free America, is expressed in such songs as: "The Ride of Paul Revere," "Can't You Hear America Calling?," "I Want To Be Strong," and "Up With People." This last song they have professed as their theme. As a member of Sing-Out said, "Our UP THE PEOPLE of music. They are demonstrations of a generation speaking and singing out with a creative new voice and a commitment to tackle together the crucial issues of our day."

The Sing-Out South concert was sponsored by the Y.W.C.A. as part of a welcome for the new February freshmen. The "Y" hopes to bring Sing-Out back again in the Fall.

President Holds Press Conference; Clarifies New Changes, Honor System

"The day you put your Honor system on the same basis as a court system, you may as well forget the Honor system."

"I don't know of anything we can't study or take a look at; I promise you that," but "I don't believe in change for change's sake."

The above quotes state two major ideas which Dr. Henry Willett, President of the college, stressed at his first press conference here, last Thursday afternoon.

The Gold Room in the Lankford Building barely accommodated the large crowd of over 300 students, who came to question and to listen. Dr. Herbert Blackwell, Dean-elect, introduced Dr. Willett, who was immediately faced with many questions concerning the activities of the Judicial Board.

A recurring question revealed dissatisfaction with the fact that, under our Honor system, an accused is not faced with her accuser. It was in this connection that Dr. Willett pointed out that some normal judicial processes are not applicable to our Judicial Board, for the cases it handles cannot be compared to court trials. He commented that he knows of no Honor system in other schools in which the accused faces the accuser, mainly because few violators would be turned in under such circumstances.

The President's warning was clear: "If you try to become too legalistic about it, you'll kill the whole system." He explained that an Honor system completely analogous to a court system would necessitate some policing force, which in turn would destroy the essential purpose of the Honor system.

Dr. Willett then suggested that perhaps only cases of lying, cheating, and stealing should be brought before the Judicial Board, and others handled in some other manner. He admitted that this possibility is now being studied.

In answer to a query concerning academic versus social punishment, he claimed a general misconception among the students as to the true nature of an academic punishment. He considered the lowering of a grade to be such a penalty, and reminded his listeners that if suspension were considered in such a manner, no student could be suspended by the administration for any offense.

In defense of our Honor system, Dr. Willett pointed out that there are certain safeguards built into it, that are rare in other systems. For example, no faculty member can sit in on any trial; and he himself has the final right of review on every case, which provides the accused with a final appeal.

The next area of questioning centered around the new drinking rule. Asked how the change had come about, the President gave most of the credit to Dr. Ruth Wilson, Dean of Women. He revealed that one of the first things he was confronted with upon his arrival was the need for changes in the rules concerning drinking and student cars. He admitted that he himself would have moved more slowly on the drinking change, had he not had considerable backing from the faculty and staff.

But discussion on this matter is not closed, he announced. An extension of the new rule is under consideration, and perhaps Longwood students may eventually be able to buy legally from the ABC store in Farmville.

This statement led to the obvious question of drinking in the dorms. Many were surprised to learn that this is not an LC regulation, but a state law, which forbids the possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages on state property. While Dr. Willett expressed a need for a change, it's up to the state legislature. He predicted that we would see a modification of the rule, although probably not in the near future; and stated that then he would be willing to consider a change for Longwood.

During the last few minutes, inquiries were directed concerning scheduling of classes, registration, and graduation. Of particular interest was the discovery that the President is

Ginny Daughtrey, Nancy Maxey 68 May Queen, Maid Of Honor

Longwood's 1968 May Queen, Miss Virginia Daughtrey, heads a court of seventeen girls chosen by their classmates. Ginny, a senior from Portsmouth, has completed her student teaching and has recently won the title as the "Best Dressed College Girl." She has been a class representative on the May Court since her freshman year, and she had "... virtually no idea I'd become queen one day!" Ginny has served on House Council and now is a hall president for eight weeks.

"I was really surprised I won. My parents just couldn't believe it!" she added.

Nancy Maxey, one-time Miss Longwood and past member of the May Court herself, was selected Maid of Honor under Ginny. A Physical Education major, Nancy is now student teaching in Roanoke. A senior from the Arlington area, Nancy is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha.

The four senior representatives on May Court include: Margie Wood from Alexandria, Sharon Bannon from Richmond, Christina Torre from Mex-

Anson Mount Of 'Playboy' Key Speaker On Sexual Morality

In an attempt to explore the implications of the Sexual Revolution, Randolph-Macon College has invited a trio of nationally prominent speakers to conduct a symposium on The New Morality, March 1-3.

Anson Mount, Donald Welch, and Father Paul Durbin will offer insight into the changing moral attitudes of American Society.

As religion editor and director of public affairs of one of the most influential vehicles for moral change, Anson Mount of "Playboy Magazine," corresponds regularly with over 2,000 subscribers in the clergy. Educated at the Episcopal-supported School of Theology of The University of the South, Mount is a frequent lecturer on the provocative "Playboy Philosophy."

Father Paul Durbin is a specialist in Sexual Morality. An author and professor from St. Stephens College in Dover, Massachusetts, Durbin has two forthcoming books in 1968. He holds the M.A. degree in philosophy from The Catholic University of America and the Ph.D. in philosophy from the Aquinas Institute of Philosophy in River Forest, Illinois. Durbin has conducted numerous conferences and discussions on sexual ethics with clergy and college groups.

As a minister of The Methodist Church, Donald J. Welch is dedicated to church renewal. He has addressed over 50 church and college groups on the New Morality. Welch is presently serving as assistant dean of the Duke University Divinity School. He is also an ordained elder of the Kentucky Conference of The Methodist Church.

The weekend conference consists of lectures, group discussions, social events, and films. Women from 10 area colleges have been invited. Community residents of Ashland will house the visitors.

Registration fee is $8.00, covering accommodations and meals, and should be returned to Chaplain C. W. Gibson, Box 705, Ashland, Virginia 23005. Students must be registered in order to be admitted to the conference sessions.

Dr. Berkis Publishes "History Of Courland"; Scolnick Collaborates On "Why The Draft?"

By NANCY CLEMENTS
Longwood College should be quite proud of two faculty members from the department of History and Social Science. Dr. Alexander Berkis and Mr. Joseph Scolnick both have works which have been accepted for publication and will soon appear before the public. Dr. Berkis, Associate professor of History and Social Science, received his LL.D. degree from the University of Latvia, his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Wisconsin. Before coming to the United States, he practiced law in his native country of Latvia. He has been at Longwood since 1961.

His newest book, "The History of the Duchy of Courland from 1562-1795," will come out this spring. It is being published by Paul Harrook of the "Baltimore Sun." In it, Dr. Berkis deals with the political history of Courland which is a buffer state between Poland, Sweden, and Russia. Also discussed are the economic and colonial history of Courland.

This book is based upon a considerable amount of primary material particularly German sources. He has also used the writings of Catherine the Great and Frederick the Great. In addition to this book, Dr. Berkis has also written another book in English, "The Reign of Duke James in Courland 1638-1682," which was published in 1960. He is also co-author of three books written in Latvia and published in Sweden.

Mr. Scolnick received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Virginia and has seen active duty as an officer in the United States Navy. Last year he and six doctoral candidates at the University of Virginia collaborated on the book, "Why The Draft: The Case for a Volunteer Army," which examines reasons for instituting a volunteer army in the United States instead of the present selective service system and the major objectives voiced to the concept of a nonconscript military.

Although the book was written by men in academic life, it was not meant to be highly technical and thus of interest only to a limited audience. It is hoped by the authors that the book will be read and discussed by the general public. To quote Mr. Scolnick, "If it helps to stir a great deal of serious, intelligent debate on the subject, the book will have succeeded in its major purpose."

Also associated with the book are Mr. Robert Tollison, a former economics instructor here at Longwood, and Dr. Thomas D. Willett, the younger brother of Longwood's new President. Mr. James C. Miller III, the editor of the book, will appear on the Longwood campus in April under the auspices of the Political Science Club to speak on the volunteer army.

This book has already received attention from some prominent American figures. Senator Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts wrote the introduction to the book and concluded his introduction with the statements, "This is indisputably an important book. I earnestly commend it to the attention of all thinking Americans."

In addition to Senator Brooke's favorable judgment of the book, it has been the subject of laudatory statements by Milton Friedman, professor of Economics at the University of Chicago and economic advisor to Barry Goldwater during the 1964 Presidential campaign, and John Kenneth Galbraith, professor of Economics at Harvard, author of "The Affluent Society," former ambassador to India, and one of America's most publicized liberals. Thus, it can be seen that the book does not appeal exclusively to people of only one section of America's political spectrum.

For those who may be interested, the book is scheduled to be on shelves March 12 and will be available in the Longwood bookstore.

Willett's Conference Praised

Last Thursday, Dr. Willett held his first press conference as President of Longwood College. The size of the crowd that turned out for the occasion was gratifying. It is obvious that the students appreciated the opportunity that was being offered them, and in turn, President Willett was clearly pleased with the evidence of student interest.

But as the conference progressed, it was apparent that the pleasure was the students'. They listened with rapt attention to the man about whom Dr. Blackwell, in his introduction, had said, "will do fine things for the college," and who, in our opinion, has already shown a genuine concern for the needs of the college community and its members.

We believe that our new President is to be commended for the enthusiasm which he has brought to his position. Since his arrival, we have witnessed two major changes in our regulations; yet this is only the beginning. As revealed at the Conference, many more topics are still under consideration, and the students may eventually enjoy a wider range of freedoms.

We may consider our President progressive, yet it is clear that he is also realistic. He was careful not to build any false hopes as he explained his studies, and emphasized that he didn't believe in "change for change's sake."

But the fact remains that he has said he is willing to take a look at anything that the students consider a problem, and for this we are grateful.

The conference proved to be a rewarding experience for all concerned. If you missed this one, plan on attending the second on Monday. You won't regret it. Dr. Willett has done a lot for us; let's give him our support!

— M. A. M.

"At Least I Remembered To Bring A Towel."

Courtesy Needed In Lankford

Are you enjoying our beautiful new Student Activities Building, or are you having trouble changing the channel on the color televisions because the dials have mysteriously disappeared? Do you race eagerly over to the television rooms and find that you have to squeeze into a two-by-four room packed with fifteen other girls while the other two rooms each have only one couple to monopolize the space?

The Student Activities Building was designed for the enjoyment of all students. It is difficult to satisfy the demands of 1700 individuals, but the problem can be alleviated by the realization of one word — CONSIDERATION. We must consider the rights of each person.

Whoever took the knobs off the televisions lacked consideration for the property of others. The couples who continuously monopolize the TV rooms lack consideration for the other students. If the girls wish to bring their dates over to Lankford to watch television, that is their prerogative. But why can't all couples watch TV in one room and leave the other two rooms to the rest of the student body, unless no one else is planning to view the set.

If anything, the Longwood Lady should be considerate of her fellow students. Remember, girls, "share and share alike."

The (Un) Co-op

(This editorial was taken from Washington and Lee University's Ring-Tum Phi.)

More this year than before, it seems, there is a general dissatisfaction, here and elsewhere, with the prices demanded for textbooks in college bookstores. Newspapers at other schools have almost unanimously printed exposes written by students of outrageous mark-ups, and lame refutations written by the booksellers. Now comes the Ring-Tum Phi to ask, "Is it necessary for our University-owned textbook shop to charge $6.25 for a 300-page paperback?"

A couple of incidents, in addition to the general first-of-the-semester murmur of discontent, make us question whether prices couldn't be a little bit lower. We saw one student pay $9 for an English text, go outside, and open the book up to find this notice by the publisher on the inside front cover: "Dear Mr. Book-Dealer: This book is sent to you with our compliments. List price: $7.95." Everybody has experienced, or at least heard tell of, similar instances. The ultimate, perhaps, involved the group of students who discovered it was cheaper for them to buy, collectively, one copy of the text and then each of them xerox it, than for each of them to buy a separate copy.

The University long ago quit calling the supply store a "co-op." The reason is obvious. The necessity of it is not.

To Bed At Eleven And Up By Seven . . . . .?

Is there a time during the week that you do not have eight o'clock classes? Probably you've scheduled your time so the night before you stayed up studying for that test tomorrow, and these few precious hours in the morning are a welcomed relief. Tragedy! Have you ever tried sleeping with a roommate in the shower singing "Louie Louie?" Think about how hard it is to pretend you're asleep, and then after 10 minutes or so, give up. You just can't fool the old sandman; when you're awake, it's too late to try to force yourself to return to sleep.

But then, there's that science building they're hammering away on every morning at seven o'clock. Yep, if you don't have an eight o'clock class, then you may as well resolve to wake up early anyway. It's annoying to be startled out of sleep with a grinding drill. The noise stops for a few minutes, allowing your shot nerves a rest. . . you're almost asleep again, and the mail truck has arrived! Okay, thirty or forty girls are screaming and laughing outside your door, so you grab another pillow and wiggle even lower under the covers. There's just no escape!

Wee to those girls whose rooms are near the public baths, entrance doors, or fire alarms. It's 2 a.m. You've got this history test tomorrow that you've crammed for all night. You need these last few minutes of silence to re-read your notes, but the kid across the hall decides this is the night she's going to frost her hair, or straighten it, or dye it. Nevertheless, she and her cohort trod into the bathroom and giggle and joke about how the job's going to turn out. You're as excited as they are. But you're excited because now you know a way to hush that noise. . . simply turn your hair dryer on full blast and pray that your roommate is as tolerant of you as you are of those amateur beauticians!

Oh yes, and if your room is the last on a hall, the entrance door squeaks back and forth every half minute, at the minimum. Under two pillows it's still hard not to overhear broken bits of conversations as the girls tramp past your door. And if you put up a sign that says "Sleeping," some practical joker will knock as loudly as possible to see if you're really asleep, or if you just want quiet. Normally, these incidences lead to a friendly conversation over a coke; meanwhile your efforts to catch a little shut-eye are exhausted again. To try to get to sleep during a meal is a virtual impossibility. We sound like a herd of lunas going over and lunch. We run down the dorm steps and laugh loudly, unaware that there may be someone trying to sleep.

However, we are supposed to sleep at night, not during the day. A "to bed at eleven, awake at seven" schedule proves the most effective if you can consciously follow it. But, there are always deviations, and we find ourselves having to stay up studying for the quiz, because for an hour after supper, instead of getting right to our work, we listened to the new "Temptations" album, popped some popcorn and invited our friends in for 'coke and corn,' etc., etc. Whatever the reason, we will all experience the time when we won't be able to crawl in bed at the stroke of eleven. If, perchance, we are so lucky, the Fire Warden decides this is the night for the monthly fire drill. Ha-ha-ha—a brisk walk in 16-degree weather at 12:30 at night never did any Longwood girl any harm. Pajamas were made to wear outside for fire drills; so were books and towels and raincoats. But the most startling effect on the sleeper is that noise screaming from the alarm. It sounds as if we're under atomic attack! I'm sure it could wake the dead — otherwise, how would a lot of our sound sleepers wake up nearly in tears? I must admit, our fire alarm system is most effective.

One problem remains. How about that girl who gets calls from her boyfriend as late as one or two in the morning, and who not mind what they have to say, it's just that you're trying to sleep. . . and the phone is directly across the hall. You hate give a call-down. What you do is walk past your buddy and give her this pleading "puppy dog" look. (By that time you look dog-tired, anyway!) If she doesn't have her glasses on and can't recognize your expression, then you politely interrupt her conversation and ask her if she'll be very long because you need to make a call. Obviously, this works.

The only solution to the apparent problem of trying to sleep during the daytime, seems logical. Come fortified with a hair dryer, cotton balls, ear plugs, a sufficient number of silencing pillows, and lots of determination, because they're all a necessity for the day-sleeper. The best suggestion, though, is to try to sleep at night. Unless you can bear hammers, saws, drills, herds of turtles, screams and laughter, bee-top music, guitars playing, and that girl across the hall talking speech 101 who practices aloud before class, you'd better learn to sleep at night. The odds are greater. At night, you only have to compete with the telephone and the fire alarm. Well, fire alarms occur seldom, so that's not really a consideration; and who's to know you're lifted the receiver off the hook until the following morning? Sh-h-h!

Letters To The Editor

There are some of us on the Longwood campus who have recently discovered an appalling situation centered in our newly-acquired television rooms. Some inconsiderate girls are taking their dates over to the Lankford Building for a presumed night of watching the "Eds," and turning out precious television rooms into makeshift headquarters for the unimaginative. Now why can't these people find some other place for their "courtin' and sparkin'" instead of taking up a whole couch and a whole television room? It would be fine for couples to gather, several in a room, but they should be willing to share the room with the dateless and not demand privacy for their own concerns. Those TV rooms were built for the enjoyment of all, not just a few, and they were equipped with televisions and furniture for the comfort of all. So please, those of you who are guilty of this, don't come to the TV rooms unless you want to watch television, with company.

Dear Dr. Willett,

On the past Thursday, Feb. 8, 1968, the Red Cross Bloodmobile came to Longwood College as you know. Our quota for this visit was 145 pints. We received 231 pints. We are so proud and so pleased, I felt I must say thank you to all the volunteers and donors who made the visit such an overwhelming success. It would be impossible to do this on an individual basis so perhaps by this letter to the Rotunda I can reach as many as possible.

We had quite a problem this time—the donors had such a long wait before giving blood—that I feel I must apologize, and toward the end we ran out of food and donor pints! We know we always have good visits with Longwood and Hampden-Sydney and we try to be prepared with extra donor tables and refreshments, but this time it went far beyond our expectations. There were in fact many students who had to leave before giving blood because the waiting line was so long and time was so short. To these also I apologize and say thank you. On our next visit we shall try our best to be better prepared.

I know you are so proud and so pleased as we are over the enthusiasm and cooperation of both Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students and personnel and join us in extending to them our gratitude and congratulations.

Respectfully,
Mary Ellen Munoz, R.N.

Va. Museum Presents Two Art Displays; Feb. 12-March 2

The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts will sponsor two displays at Longwood from February 12 to March 2. There will be a watercolor presentation in the Art department and a contemporary American sculpture exhibition in the Lancaster Library from the museum's traveling exhibit.

The watercolor exhibit includes works from various New York galleries and from the California Watercolor Society. Among the artists represented are Walter Shuppig, a traditional realist, John Hultberg, who leans toward Expressionism, Lewandowski, a precisionist with realist subject matter, and Robert Moskowitz, who is considered a Pop Artist.

In the 20th Century, water color has become a recognized form of expression as an end in itself.

The sculpture presentation consists of fifteen works purchased for the permanent collection of the museum.

The media used include marble, cast and welded bronze, iron, welded steel plate, brass, and wood. The concepts range from realism, construction, and abstraction to free imagery.

The sculptors represented in the display are Louis Rosenfeld, a former Virginian, Jacques Hippitz, William Zorach, and Oronzo Maldarelli.

Try-Outs For Tennis Continue In Gym; Spring Matches Set

By SIBIL PROUSE

Coaching Longwood's varsity tennis team, Miss Phyllis Harris has great hopes for this year's squad.

"Last year's team was great, but this year's will be even better."

Practices and try-outs will continue on Mondays and Wednesdays at 5 o'clock in the Her Gymnasium. When the weather improves, practice will be moved outside on the Barlow courts at 4 o'clock.

By spring break the varsity team will be selected. Interested students are encouraged to participate in the try-outs.

The majority of last season's team members will return to vie against several promising freshmen for positions on the squad. Miss Harris expects to carry at least ten players.

At present, Barbara Jenkins, manager of the tennis team, reports of nine or ten tentatively scheduled games. Matches with other schools include Lynchburg, Old Dominion, Bridgewater, Furrow, Westhampton, William and Mary, Roanoke, and possibly Mary Washington.

At the end of the season four of the top players will travel to Mary Baldwin for three days for the Mid-Atlantic Conference Tennis Tournament.

Dixieland Stompers Perform In Jarman, Tuesday, Feb. 27

The Dixieland Stompers, a dixieland jazz band from Richmond, will perform in Jarman Auditorium at 7:30 p.m., on Tuesday, February 27. A faculty committee, led by Mr. Walter Carson, of the Mathematics Department, is responsible for bringing the group to the campus.

The group was organized several years ago under the leadership of Jim Black and has appeared on numerous occasions in the Richmond area as well as having given previous performances at Longwood.

Of special interest to the students is the fact that Warren Cole, who plays electric bass with the group, is the father of Virginia Cole, who is a freshman here this year, and also of Sue Ella Cole, who graduated from Longwood last June.

The concert is a personal endeavor on the part of the faculty group. Mr. Carson stated that they wanted to give the LC students an opportunity to hear a variety of music which they rarely get a chance to hear.

The concert is open to the public, and there will be no admission charge.

Organization Brings Foreign Lecturers: de Boinville Nadow

Tuesday night in the ABC Room in the Lankford Building, the Political Science Club of Longwood College presented the first of a series of international speakers. David deBoinville spoke on "Britain in the 60's."

Mr. deBoinville is the Regional Information Officer at the British Embassy in Washington, D.C.

The newly-organized Political Science Club plans to present the second international speaker on March 13, when Mr. Vladimir Nadow, second Secretary of the Russian Embassy, will speak to all interested parties.

Lambda Iota Tau Elects Officers:

New officers for Lambda Iota Tau were elected recently and assumed their positions at the beginning of the second semester. The officers are as follows:

President: Mary Lee McKeever; Vice-President: Liz Hill; Secretary: Sandy Johnson; Treasurer: Janet Sullivan; and Historian: Meg Pherson.

Plans are being made to continue the program of art films to be presented here in Farmville. The attendance at the previous two films "Marat/Sade" and "David and Lisa" proved the success of the program. In addition, there will be featured speakers on literary topics.

Dr. O'Neill instructs her fencing class in the basic techniques of the sport, which will enable them to teach it.

P.E. Department Incorporates Beginning Fencing Techniques

By YVONNE LESTER

Three fencing classes are being offered this semester for the first time at Longwood College.

Dr. O'Neill, head of the Physical Education Department, is instructing a fencing technique class. This class is primarily aimed at teaching junior physical education majors the basic techniques of fencing which will enable them to teach fencing.

Two classes of beginner fencing are being taught by Miss Bush, a member of the Physical Education Department who attended the Fencing Conference at New York University last summer. Her classes have been practicing the advance, retreat and lunge positions. After learning these basic skills, the students will progress to the defensive methods of fencing.

Remarking, "Fencing is a fast growing sport with more and more colleges," Miss Bush is glad to see fencing become a part of Longwood's program. She thinks the future of fencing at Longwood looks bright and hopes to set up fencing intramural play. A varsity fencing squad may also be formed in the future.

Film Society Presents Award Winning Movie

On February 27th and 28th, the Longwood College Foreign Film Society will present "The Knack" at the State Theatre. The film has just won the Cannes Film Festival Award for the Best Picture of the Year. The following article was taken from the United States - Lopert Pictures Pressbook.

One of Britain's fastest rising male romantic leads, youthful Michael Crawford makes his debut before American audiences in the Cannes Film Festival Award-Winner "The Knack...and how to get it." Woodfall Film production for United Artists-Lopert Pictures Corp. release.

Co-starring with Rita Tushingham, who impressed so widely in "The Girl With Green Eyes" and "A Taste of Honey," and with Ray Brooks and Donald Donnelly, Crawford is one of England's top TV performances and despite his youth has an impressive list of accomplishments in pictures, the radio and on the stage as well.

In "The Knack," which is a screen treatment by Charles Wood of the Ann Jellicoe stage success, Crawford plays the role of a young gent who simply hasn't got the knack, the latter being the ability to attract women. Brooks undertakes to remedy this for him and therein lies much of the film's hilarity.

Produced by Oscar Lewenstein and with music by John Barry, "The Knack" was directed by Richard Lester, famed among other things for his comedy "A Hard Day's Night," the recent Beatles hit.

Crawford was cited by the London Variety recently as "the most promising newcomer of the year," and from all indications seems to be living up to the promise.

Don't forget the second Presidential Press Conference on Monday, February 26.

Sire Spectates

Don't forget the Water Show which will be coming up next month. The Corkettes and H.O. Club members have already begun practicing the show numbers which they designed and wrote especially for the show!

Orchestra will also present its annual spring concert. Watch for an announcement of the exact date of this dance program. Serving as President of Orchestra this year is Monkee Schools. Mrs. E. K. Landrum sponsors this honorary modern dance group.

Class & Color Basketball should really be exciting this year, as indicated by participation in the intramural games. The Seniors could use a few more members of the Class of '68 on the court!!

Best of Luck to the Varsity Basketball teams as they "invade" the College of William and Mary this Saturday. The use of the word "invade" actually means "Bring home 2 victories for L.C.!" The teams have chosen a new theme song - The William Tell Overture!

Seems like most of the girls on campus have really been getting their exercise. Walking seems to be a big thing now, especially to Tom's and to the Stagroom!!

The next Varsity Basketball HOME GAME will be on February 26 at 4 p.m. L.C. will take on the visiting players from Madison College.

LC Team Makes Road Trips: Beats MWC, Loses To Macon

Last Saturday, L.C.'s Varsity Basketball teams came out ahead of the Mary Washington College players by scores of 49-38, and 34-27. After a slow first quarter, Lynne Coleman sparked the offense by pouring in 9 points in the second quarter; her final total was 17. Mary Tolley had 6 long field goals for 12 points, while Freda Lunsford added 10 points and Becky Bondurant, 9 points. In case you haven't noticed, that adds up to only 48 points. Stationary guard, Fran Anthony, sank a free throw to account for the final total of 49 points. Carolyn Thompson, the other stationary guard blocked many of the Mary Washington shots and continually came down with the rebounds. The team hit for 8 out of 14 from the charity stripe. Teamwork was quite evident as players were scored on fast break plays as well as on drives and outside shots.

In the second game, 3 of our girls combined their efforts to put 25 points through the hoop. Mary Washington college led at the half 18 to 15, and again at the end of the third quarter, 24 to 22. Then the L.C. defense took over by continually stealing the ball at mid-court. The offense had fine passing and shooting which enabled them to score 12 points in the last quarter as compared to 3 for M.W.C. Congratulations to both teams on their fine play!

On February 13, when L.C. traveled to Lynchburg to play Randolph-Macon Women's College, the outcome was exactly opposite of the M.W.C. games. In the first game L.C. led in the third quarter by a score of 44 to 34. Exactly what happened in the fourth quarter? The R.M.W.C. shooting got hot and L.C. ran into quite a few personal foul problems. Longwood dropped the game by a score of 53 to 48 in R.M.'s favor.

The L.C. second team struggled from a 10 point deficit at the end of the first quarter to bring the score to 22 to 20 (R.M.'s favor) at the end of the third quarter. L.C. then proceeded to tie the score and move slightly ahead, but could not hang on to the lead. R.M.W.C. won 27 to 23. The game was lost from the free throw line as L.C. sank only 5 of 19 free throws.

presently studying the necessity of Saturday classes. He said that this study was much more complicated than that of the drinking rule; involved many more interrelated considerations; and consequently would take more time. To discourage false hopes, he emphasized that it may still be found that the disadvantages of eliminating Saturday classes outweigh the advantages.

Dr. Willett hinted too that we may see some type of advanced registration in the future, to eliminate some of the existing problems.

This conference will not be the students such period. As many as the students want will be scheduled, and one more date has already been set, next Monday, February 26.

Corkettes and H.O. members practice for Water Show.

Anyone interested in working on the "Rotunda" staff, please come to a meeting Tuesday, February 27 at 6:45 in Grainger 108. Reporters and an assistant business manager are particularly needed. If you cannot attend the meeting, please see Karen Maher, in Wheeler 212, or Candy Maher, in South Cunningham 212.

Miss Duncan and Mr. Pyle joined our faculty staff this semester.

Instructors Join Longwood Faculty; Pyle, Nunn, Duncan Teach Students

Longwood is fortunate to have three new professors join the faculty staff second semester. Mr. G. J. Pyle comes from Mantua, Ohio, to join the English Department. Mr. Pyle is a native of Wilmington, Delaware, but has spent most of his life in Ohio. Mr. Pyle received his A.B. degree from Princeton University and his B.S.Ed. from Kent State. After teaching high school for a year in Ohio, he went to Duke University to begin graduate work. He is now in the process of obtaining his Master's degree from Duke.

Victorian literature is the special province of Mr. Pyle, but he is now teaching one section of English 111 and two sections of English 112. Mr.

Pyle commented that he likes Longwood and is especially fascinated by the old homes and streets found in Farmville.

The Foreign Language Department welcomes Mr. Wayne K. Nunn, who is now teaching Twentieth Century French and Advanced Conversational French to Longwood students. Mr. Nunn was born in Florida, but now claims Charlottesville as his home. Mr. Nunn received his B.A. degree from Wake Forest and his M. A. degree from the University of Virginia. Special study ensued at Emory University, Middlebury College, the University of Wisconsin, and the Sorbonne in Paris. For the past four years Mr. Nunn has been teaching at the University of Virginia, and is presently receiving his Ph.D. from the University.

Mr. Nunn finds a big change in switching from all male classes to all female classes, but he finds the switch a favorable one. One of his major interests is his pet coat mundi, a South American racoon which he has had for two years. Mr. Nunn is now commuting from Charlottesville to Farmville. We hope that when he permanently resides in Farmville, his coat mundi will find the Farmville environment satisfactory.

Miss Melissa Duncan is a new and attractive addition to the Social Science Department. She comes from Union City, Tennessee, to join the Longwood staff. Miss Duncan received her B.A. degree in sociology from Lambuth College in Jackson, Tennessee, and is currently working on her thesis in sociology in order to receive her M.A. degree from the University of Mississippi. Miss Duncan is now teaching two Introductory Sociology classes, one Social Theory class, and Cultural Anthropology, which is being offered for the first time at Longwood. Cultural Anthropology is an introductory course which exposes the student to a study of societies and cultures in general, emphasizing the study and comparison of basic institutions around the world.

Miss Duncan has a broad diversity of interests. She enjoys almost all types of music, plays the piano, and has done much group singing. Miss Duncan also writes poetry and plays and takes a keen interest in interior decorating.

Miss Duncan has discovered many comparisons between Longwood and her own undergraduate school, and she finds the students of Longwood very polite and cordial. Sorority girls may be interested to know that she is an active alumna of Sigma Kappa.

Leggette, Curry Exhibit Music Skills, Perform Recitations

Phala Ann Leggette presented her senior piano recital in Jarman on February 15 at 7:30 p.m. Selections played by Miss Leggette were "Presto from Suite in D minor," "Romance and Scherzo from Viennese Mardi gras," "Variations in F minor," "Prelude," "Sonata in A Major, Op. 120," and "Nocturne from Suite 1922."

Phala is a voice major from Waynesboro, Virginia. She is recording secretary of Sigma Alpha Iota, a national professional music fraternity for women. She is also a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Music Educators National Conference, the choir, Jarman Singers, and the Baptist Student Union.

On February 18 at 3:30 p.m. Sandra Elaine Curry presented her senior recital in Jarman. Organ selections were "Messe pour les Convents," "Fugue in G Major, a la Gigue, BWV 577," "Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, BWV 582," "Piece Heroique," "Le Banquet Celeste," and "Litanies."

Sandy is a senior organ major from Staunton. She is president of Sigma Alpha Iota, Phi Mu song leader, organist for the Farmville Methodist Church, and a member of the choir and the American Guild of Organists.

May Court

Summer Program Announces Kindergarten Certification

Longwood College will offer a special five-week program leading to certification of kindergarten teachers next summer.

Announcement of the new program for kindergarten teachers, scheduled for June 17-July 19, was made by President Henry I. Willett, Jr. and Dr. Charles H. Patterson, chairman of the department of education, psychology, and philosophy.

Enrollment in the program will be limited to 30 Virginia teachers who hold the collegiate professional certificate with endorsement to teach in the elementary grades.

Teachers may register as graduate or undergraduate students and earn six semester hours of academic credit upon successful completion of the program.

Consisting of two basic courses, classroom work will require three hours of daily attendance, Monday through Friday, in subject areas entitled "Developmental Psychology of Early Childhood" and "Principles of Curriculum and Instruction in the Kindergarten."

Students seeking graduate credit at Longwood must first be admitted to the college's graduate program. Any student may receive graduate credit for transfer purposes provided he has been admitted to a graduate program at another institution.

The program is designed to meet the requirements of the Virginia State Board of Education which permit holders of the collegiate professional certificate with an elementary endorsement to be certified to teach at the kindergarten level upon completion of six semester hours of credit in early childhood education.

Development of the program at Longwood is under the direction of Robert L. Banton III, assistant professor in education, and Dr. Patterson.

Further information about the program may be obtained by writing the dean of Longwood College, in Farmville.

Honors Council Chooses Freshman As Chairman

Ann Freshman, a junior from Healing Springs, has been elected chairman of the Honors Council. She is a music major and represents Sigma Alpha Iota.

Serving with her are Marcia Mitchell, vice-chairman; Joan Tice, recording secretary; Anna Pettis, corresponding secretary; and Lynn Rachel, treasurer. Advisors to the Honors Council are Mrs. Bobbitt and Dr. Lane.

The Highty Tights from Virginia Tech will perform in Jarman Auditorium on Saturday, February 24, at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

YR's Urge Support; Senator Proposes Ballot Restrictions

Do you plan to vote while still in college? If so, the Longwood Young Republicans urge you to express your opposition to the bill introduced before the Virginia House of Delegates by Delegate Jerry H. Giesler concerning absentee ballots. Giesler's bill would restrict the use of absentee ballots to servicemen and the sick. Thus, many eligible college students (twenty-one and over), would be unable to vote. To prevent this bill from becoming law, the Y.R.'s urge you to write your representative to the Virginia House of Delegates expressing your opposition to this bill. A list of the Delegates and the areas they represent may be found on the Y-R bulletin board across from the Admissions Office.

LC Players, H-SC Jongleurs Prepare For 'The Miser'

The Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs are now preparing for production of Moliere's comedy "The Miser," on March 14, 15, and 16. Mr. Dale Meisness is directing with the assistance of Peg Thompson.

The lead role, Hargapon, will be played by Jim Rhodes who has delighted Longwood students by his past performances in "Androcles and the Lion" and other plays. Other major parts are Cleonte, by Scott Reeves; Volere by Ken Schick; Elise by Carleton Watkins; Frosine by Jettie Paschel; and Marianne by Bunny Robinson.

Martha Reynolds has the hectic job of stage manager.

Crews are busily preparing costumes, scenery, and props. One player reports that a large, round, yellow and white sofa will be used; and that the flats will be either yellow or lavender with a "see through" effects.

Costumes also promise to be rich looking. The lead character will wear a costume of blue-gray velvet imported from France. Other velvet costumes are also being made. The Players have invested in new wigs which they will use in "The Miser" and in the future.

French students will be glad to have an opportunity to see this comedy which is studied in survey courses as well as in 17th century courses. However, all students have a lot to look forward to.

Students Elect Wright Fire Warden For 1968

students on February 12, to succeed Donna Brantley as Fire Warden for 1968.

Julie will have the responsibility of planning for fire drills, and in this connection will be working with the Campus Police and Mr. Robert Wu, of the Mathematics Department.

Her other duties include emphasizing adherence to fire regulations, especially in the older dorms; and she will also serve as a representative to House Council.

As she put it, the main purpose of her job is "to try to put across the idea of safety."

Julie is an Elementary Education major, and a member of Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority. She is also a Colleague, and has served last year and this year on the Miss Longwood Pageant Committee.

Draft Deferments Only Available To Grads In Science

(ACP) - The tentative decision to offer draft deferments to graduate students in natural science, math, engineering, and health while withholding them from grad students in the humanities again shows a confusion of values among government officials in determining the nation's draft policies, comments the "University Daily" of Texas Technological College, Lubbock, Tex.

The National Security Council, headed by President Johnson himself, is expected to state that deferments will be given in virtually unlimited numbers to those studying in the sciences "vital to the national interest."

According to that criterion, history, economics, sociology, fine arts, and law are noncritical occupations and their study would be neglected, creating a future world much like Aldous Huxley's. A more immediate consideration is the effect the draft would have on teaching and studying the humanities in the future.

According to the proposed policy, special attention will be given to those who study the concepts involved in war and defense and no attention to those who study nonwar aspects of life.

Such preferential treatment can only further entrench the unfortunate attitude that a nation's strength is in its physical power, not in its people's intellect and sense of values.

Chairman, Business Manager Elected For May Day

By JANET WALSH
Marilyn Bates and Jane Edmundson were elected February 20th for the respective positions of May Day Chairman and Business Manager of May Day.

Marilyn is a first semester junior from Richmond, who is majoring in Art Education. Marilyn is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha and is currently serving as second vice-president of her sorority.

Jane Edmundson will work in coordination with Marilyn and handle all the business matters for May Day. Jane is a sophomore Business Education major from Virginia Beach. She is a member of the Activities Committee and Phi Beta Lambda. Jane served as a Colleague this year and is currently treasurer of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority.

Both girls expressed much enthusiasm over the approaching May Day activities and sincerely hope all Longwood students will be eager to pitch in and help.

Garnjost Represents LC At Conference

Mrs. Frances M. Garnjost, head of the foreign language department, represented Longwood last week end as a member of the Advisory Board of the Southern Conference on Language Teaching in New Orleans. The theme of the conference was "Motivation and Language Learning: From Theory to Classroom Practice." The keynote address was delivered by Frederick D. Eddy of the University of Colorado. The program also included such prominent speakers in the language field as Karl Pond, Patricia O'Connor, Robert L. Politzer, Jacques Hardre, and Anne Slack.

In other language news, foreign students Christy Torre, Pia Solberger, and Lus Schupplisser will travel to Georgetown University February 29 to attend a workshop sponsored by the Association of Teachers of English as a Second Language of the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs.

Plans are also being made for members of the language department to attend the State Foreign Language Conference in Natural Bridge, March 8 and 9. Dr. Waldo E. Sweet, chairman of the Department of Classical Languages, University of Michigan, and Mr. Milton Hahn, supervisor of foreign languages, Westport (Connecticut) Public Schools, will be the principal speakers.

Committee Invites Interested Students To Participate

In order to promote better sportsmanship and enable more students to be a working part of the Athletic Association, the Athletic Association has voted to open membership to the Sportsmanship Committee to any interested students. The duties include rating the various intramural, class, and color teams throughout the year, eventually choosing a team with the best sportsmanship (not the best ability) to receive the Sportsmanship Trophy given by the Slater System at the Slater picnic.

The Athletic Association encourages any student with a few extra hours each month and who is interested in maintaining good sportsmanship at Longwood College to please get in touch with Jane Tibbs - South Cunningham 313.

Freshmen Elect Counselor, Legislative Board Delegates

By FAY SHIFFLET
In last week's elections, three freshmen were elected to fill the positions of representatives to Legislative Board and Freshman Counselor. Susan Fox and Cassandra Wilkes are the rising sophomore representatives to Legislative Board and Pat Cloonan is the new Freshman Counselor.

Susan, a pre-nursing student from Richmond, wants to form a stronger tie between her class and Legislative Board. In addition to having served as freshman representative to the board, Susan is a member of the Freshman Commission and she is a member of the Baptist Student Union. She also serves as secretary of her KD pledge class.

Cassandra Wilkes, known as "Casey," is a physical education major from Ontario, Virginia. Casey views the Legislative Board as an active and important part of life at Longwood and she is anxious to serve to the best of her ability in her new position.

In a schoolwide election, Pat Cloonan was elected as Freshman Counselor. Pat serves as secretary-treasurer of the Freshman Commission and she is an active member of the YWCA. A pre-nursing student from Waynesboro, Pat is an ASA pledge. Next year Pat will be the advisor of the new Freshman Commission and help them in their projects.

Students, Assert Rights; Demand Privileges

It's election year again, and to many of us here at Longwood, it brings the long-awaited chance to cast our first Presidential ballot. But many of us will be forced to depend on absentee ballots. We should therefore be aware of the proposed bill to limit their use in the state of Virginia.

Delegate Jerry H. Giesler of Hillsville has introduced to the House Privileges and Elections Committee, a bill that would allow only servicemen and the sick to make use of absentee ballots.

The reason behind the proposal is a claim that abuses of the election system have been found to exist in three Southwestern Virginia counties.

The claim may or may not be true, but is this drastic idea the best solution? Democratic Committee members, including Chairman James M. Thomson, feel that too many honest users of the absentee ballots would be penalized by the bill, in order to eliminate abuses in one section of the state.

A large portion of the innocent bystanders who will be affected are college students. We as a group are certainly not the offenders, and yet unless we find it possible to travel home on a Tuesday in order to vote, we will not be able to exercise our voting privilege. Surely it is not the State's desire to lower the voting percentage, but this will be an inevitable result.

We suggest that the House Committee for Privileges and Elections look into other possible solutions, and not deprive us of our right to vote in this election.

The Young Republicans at Longwood have urged the students to write their State Senator or Delegate to protest the passage of the proposed restrictive bill. This is an excellent opportunity for us to show an interest in the workings of the government, and to express our disapproval of something that threatens our rights.

Marijuana Makes Headlines; Students 'Sow Wild Oats'

The use of drugs by college students, and in some cases high school students, is becoming more and more prevalent so it seems, or sounds. "Marijuana" consistently appears in the headlines of every city and campus newspaper.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch read "Dismissal of 13 Asked in Annapolis Marijuana Cases"; The University of Virginia's "Cavalier Daily" quoted: "Recent Marijuana Arrests Termed 'Indirectly' Related." Mary Washington College's "The Bulter" announces: "Attorney Drops Charges Against MWC Freshman;" an editorial that appeared in the Richmond Times-Dispatch stated: "Marijuana has dread potentialities as a wrecker of lives. It is the voice of experience speaking." (referring to Florence Fisher, a former addict to marijuana).

Certainly, the authorities have reason to be concerned. High school boys and girls in Virginia Beach were arrested for use of marijuana. College students in the RPI area of Richmond were arrested for the possession of marijuana. Smoking marijuana endangers the physical and mental well-being of the individual. Students should be encouraged to drop "the habit" or never to indulge in "pot."

However, by the very nature of being a college student and the availability of Marijuana, the number of young adults who try marijuana is likely to increase before it decreases. In all probability, the newspapers will include more and more articles on "marijuana cases." We are inclined to agree with the editorial in the UVA "Cavalier Daily" that stated: "We suspect furthermore that for many students — probably the majority — the use of marijuana is a passing fancy — a fad to be indulged in as part of sowing the proverbial wild oats; indeed, our conversations with persons professing familiarity with the drugs strengthen this suspicion."

Are You Considerate Of Others? 'Thank You' Proves Instant Success

CONSIDERATION . . . this word, although we all know its literal meaning, seems to baffle the best of us when we try to exploit kind, thoughtful behavior. How often have you thanked the hall maid for scrubbing the bath floor? You say, "It's their job," and forget to even say a cheery hello to the janitor who repairs that broken shade or fixes that lightbulb. How about the plumber? Have you thanked him for crawling around in your sink for a half-hour to discover that somebody dropped a popsicle stick down the drain?

"Willemetta Waitress" may seem to be the most unmentioned girl. She is a product of our campus' most considerate girl. To have the patience and concern over the few extra pieces of meat, bread, or potatoes that your waitress shows, an outsider would think the dining hall waitresses were splitting the profits on a thirty-five dollar-a-plate Democratic dinner! Now, if your waitress can be considerate to you, can't you show this same courtesy to her? She, too, may have a class immediately after lunch, or that class meeting after dinner. Why linger over a second cup of coffee? Consideration, again, is a major factor in better relationships.

The most irritating friend is the one who runs immediately to your room after a big weekend to see if you had a good time. Obviously, she's there to get the latest scoop, but when you've got hours of unpacking and washing and ironing, and Monday morning's homework to do, a visit from Batman couldn't be less welcomed! Why can't people who come to visit sense when they're wearing out patience? A simple solution would be to ask the party if they are being bothered. If they are frank enough to tell you the truth, then you've kept your friendship. On the other hand, if a friend comes to visit and you've got absolute loads to accomplish in three or four hours, that wasted half-hour doesn't help at all. Even with studying signs, some characters think THEIR visit is more important than your studying; consequently they pop in your room and spurt off

Marcia Mitchell Named To Y-R Board Attends Convention

Marcia Mitchell was recently appointed Fourth District Representative by the Executive Board of the Young Republican Federation of Virginia. The junior elementary major from Emporia has been an active member of Longwood's Y-R Club and is presently serving as Chairman. She will assume her duties on the Executive Board this weekend at the Y-R State Convention in Fort Monroe.

Science Classes Visit Planetarium

Dr. Jackson's elementary education science classes visited the University of North Carolina's Morehead Planetarium on February 21. Upon arrival in Chapel Hill, they entered a forty-foot high dome shaped building having seating capacity of over three hundred. Geared for grades 1-3, the program was very beneficial in understanding elementary concepts of the moon. All United States astronauts engage in preliminary training in this planetarium. After the show the girls viewed the Space Pan-O-Rama and toured the UNC campus.

Strike The Leco On The Pipe, Another Production Begins

By PEGGY THOMPSON

Strike the leco on the first pipe! Fade the House! Fly the cycl No, this is not an advanced class in karate or a doctor in a lunatic asylum for pipelets. Just some of the theater jargon you would hear if you were one of the crew members working on the current production of the Longwood Players' "The Miser."

The four to six weeks that proceed the performances are a time of continuous preparation. The set must be constructed, the lighting designed, the costumes made, make-up and stage props trained and properties gathered. The sound effects and background music must be collected and taped, the publicity prepared and printed, and the box office personnel trained. The activities of each crew are plotted on a master schedule designed to distribute the technical responsibilities over the four week period preceding the performance.

The technical director is responsible for the diverse technical duties, and understanding her responsibility provides a concise picture of life back stage in Jarman. She organizes the selected crew heads for scene construction and painting, stage properties, lighting, sound, make-up, house, and costumes. It is then the duty of each crew chief to see that her respective duties are carried out before production week.

The theater is a complex art form calling for diverse talents, with a variety of technical skills. While an audience may not be aware of it, an actor who becomes a star does so only with the diversified and talented support and cooperation of the technical crews.

Sire Spectates

The L.C. Varsity Basketball Team has 2 more away games before the regular season play is officially considered over for this year. Tomorrow night's game is at R.P.I., and next Tuesday the team will again travel to Richmond to play at Westhampton College. The L.C. team will be playing the Intramural Champions from Hampden-Sydney for the benefit of the Heart Fund. Check posters for the time and date. Also, the girls plan to have their annual game with the men faculty. No definite date has been set for this yet. Well team, what's the theme song for this week - Bottle of Wine, Little Red Riding Hood, "Theme from Cinderella", or Love Potion Number 977? Thanks to William and Mary mid-winterers, L.C. had almost as many spectators at Saturday's game as W. & M. did - maybe more. Thanks for the support gang!

Now is the time for those big rides out to the Estate. Combine exercise and fun - be sure to go out to the Estate on the Putney Street route, those hills are really "fun".

Last week one of the Health classes visited the L.C. dining hall in connection with units on safety, sanitation, and nutrition. The guide was none other than Mr. Penock. The entire class was very impressed with the neatness, cleanliness, and orderliness in our kitchen and storage rooms.

The Bowling Tournament will be coming soon, and the A.A. hopes that it will be supported by sorority and dorm competition. Watch for more on this in later issues.

Famous words for the week, "Shari it up!"

Miss Anne Huffman (Varsity Lacrosse Coach), Ginny Sire, and Jane Erdman inspect the equipment for the coming season.

Lacrosse Team Formed; Tryouts To Be March 4

Varsity Lacrosse tryouts will begin on Monday, March 4, at 4 p.m. on Her Field. Practices will be held outside on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday whenever the weather permits. This is the first year that L.C. will be represented by a Varsity team in this sport. Last spring Miss Anne Huffman, coach of this year's squad, worked with some interested students and they were able to participate in one or two games with surrounding colleges.

Miss Huffman's only requirement is "interest." She anticipates an exciting season - one that will be a learning and growing process for everyone involved. Basic skills of this game include cradling, catching, the overhead pass and the underhand or sidarm pass. Although lacrosse is an aerial game, most players find that the ability to pick the ball up from the ground is a valuable skill! But remember, no experience is necessary to try out for the team.

Miss Huffman's last comments concerned some of the lacrosse equipment. "If we don't get the regulation lacrosse goal cages soon, we may have to use bird cages, but we will have a Varsity team!" She would also like to have any lacrosse equipment which is still checked out returned as soon as possible.

Support Varsity Lacrosse by coming to the first practice on March 4. Miss Huffman would like to have enough players for a minimum; that means 24 players as two teams.

Basketball Team Wins One, Loses One To Wm. & Mary

Playing last Saturday's Varsity Basketball game in the boys' gymnasium at William & Mary College had its effect on both the L.C. and W. & M. girls. The glass backboards threw off everyone's aim, and even though the W. & M. girls had practiced under the new conditions once or twice, even they were not completely at home in the gym.

Longwood and William & Mary got off to a very slow start as the first quarter score was 6 to 4 in W. & M.'s favor, but W. & M. managed to outscore L.C. in the first and third quarters by just enough (2 points in each quarter) to end the game with a 4 point victory, 33 to 29.

Although the L.C. 11 team managed to put only 22 points through the bucket, they came out ahead of W. & M. who only came up with 15 points. High scorer for L.C. was Marcia Tench with 7 points. She was followed by Ruby Frady who scored 6 and Betty Layne with 4. Janet Harpold with 2 and Laurel Baldwin, Sandi Naylor, and Brenda Whitth with 1 each. Carolyn Cummins played a fine defensive game and ended up with nearly all the W. & M. rebounds. Margaret Harrison continually intercepted passes, screened and set up plays.

Tomorrow night L.C. travels to R.P.I. seeking a victory in revenge of an earlier loss to the R.P.I. girls when they played here.

Orchesis Attends Workshop; Plan For Spring Concert

During the past two weeks, Orchesis has made two "trips" to Richmond. The first "road" trip was on Saturday, February 10. Miss Bowman, accompanied by three members of Orchesis, drove to Richmond early Saturday morning to attend a workshop held at Richmond Professional Institute. The workshop, sponsored by the Virginia Dance Society, began with registration of the schools at 9 a.m. At 10 o'clock a Master Class was held under the direction of Mr. Don Redich of RPI. During this time Mr. Redich assisted the girls in learning new dance techniques and applying them to dance numbers. After an interval in which the girls lunched in the RPI cafeteria, Mr. Redich presented them with a lecture and demonstration in the "Glaslight Theatre." As the workshop drew to a close, several Virginia colleges presented dance numbers that they had composed.

The second trip taken by Orchesis was on Thursday night, February 15. Accompanied by Mrs. Landrum and Miss Bowman, the group boarded a chartered bus at 6:30 p.m. and headed for Richmond. This time their insatiable curiosity took them to the Mosque where they witnessed a most unusual concert presented by the "Anna Skolow Dance Company." Amid a darkened theatre, semidarkened stage, and eerie music, the Orchesis members witnessed a series of "modern dances" by professional members of the "Skolow Dance Team." The program, presented in three divisions, captivated the attention of the audience and held them spell-bound throughout the concert. The last and longest number entitled "Deserts" suggested not only the physical deserts of sand, sea, snow, outer space, and empty streets, "but also the deserts in the mind of man; it suggested not only those stripped aspects of nature that suggest bareness, aloofness, timelessness, but also that remote inner space no telescope can reach, where man is alone, a world of mystery and essential loneliness." No student who viewed this production could soon forget it.

But Orchesis has not only been busy attending workshops and concerts; the "dance club" which meets in Gym 3 the third Tuesday of every month, has already begun working on the annual "Spring Concert." A time has been set aside every Wednesday night at 7:15 p.m. for a "practice session" in Gym 3. All Orchesis members interested in being in the "Spring Concert" are required to attend a minimum of these practices to be eligible for participation.

A Medical Answer For MUSCULAR Low Back Pain

Promptly Relieves Pain
So Stiff Muscles Loosen Up and
You're Back Into Action

DOCTORS who specialize in back troubles report most aching backs are due to weak, tense muscles which can go into painful spasm as you suddenly bend, stretch or twist. To relieve such backache doctors recommend the pain-relief compound in Anacin® Analgesic Tablets. And Anacin gives you more of this medication than any other leading tablet.

Anacin is a special fortified formula. It promptly relieves pain, helps reduce swollen tissues, and so releases pressure on sensitive back nerves. Then notice how stiff muscles loosen up and you move around with greater ease.

Only Anacin has this special fortified formula. It's not found in any other product. See if Anacin's exclusive formula doesn't work better for you.

Library Committee Aids In Suggesting Books

By FAY SHIFFLET

The Library Committee, composed of faculty members, is striving to help the librarian in every possible way. Dr. Rosemary Sprague, chairman of the committee, is assisted by Mrs. Helen Savage, Mrs. Nancy Leitch, and Dr. William Sowder. Mr. Charles Butler, librarian, also serves on the committee.

The Library Committee provides valuable aid to the librarian and Mr. Butler says, "I'm glad there is a strong faculty committee because a good library committee can be very helpful to the library." Among the many duties of the committee are discussing ways to improve the library and keeping the library informed of new books needed. The committee does not order books, but it serves as an advisor to the librarian and as a means of communication between the librarian, the faculty and the students. Dr. Sprague sums up the committee's purpose by saying, "We want to make the Longwood College library as fine as it can possibly be."

In an effort to improve the collection of books, the committee would like to urge that students give the names of any books or magazines which they might need to their professors. In turn, the professors should report these requests to a committee member or to the library. The library tries to fill all requests. Request slips can be found at the circulation desk in the library.

Faculty members are also urged to make their requests known to the library. One committee member has said that the responsibility for new books lies directly on the various departments: "A library is only as good as the faculty and the faculty is only as good as the library."

In recent years the Lancaster Library has made great strides in improving its book collection. The collection now numbers at 86,000 volumes. In the five-year period from 1962 to 1967, the library added 22,000 volumes compared to only 12,000 volumes added in the preceding five years. Since the library has fared well concerning appropriations from the present state legislatures, it is expected that many more volumes will be added within the next two years.

CONSIDERATION FOR OTHERS

about the latest at the State Theater. Why should these inconsiderate people be offended when those who absolutely must study ask them to leave? After all, we're here to learn, and our rooms are the only place we can claim as our own. Tell them clearly that this time is very valuable to you, but that you'll continue this conversation at some later date. The girl who plagues everyone on your hall for a daily conversation deserves some form of "punishment". Nothing is more embarrassing than to have an unwanted friend bomb in. Your roommate has a calculus test tomorrow. You've hinted around several times for the girl to leave, and she just doesn't seem to be reading your message. Finally, your roommate, too kind to ask for quiet, is forced to study in the hall or someone else's room. Please! Have some consideration for others.

Thank your head resident for putting up your mail; thank the girl who brings around the papers; thank the girl on duty who tells you there's a call; thank the girl who answers your telephone call; and buy a Girl Scout cookie for the roommate who tells your boy friend she doesn't know where you are when you've just walked out the door with another date!

Seriously though, don't you think things would run a little smoother if we were more appreciative of others? Say "Thank You" tomorrow, and I'll guarantee instant success!

Mr. Rubley demonstrates the process used in giving a lecture by telephone.

Tele-lecture Method Used By Mr. Rubley

By LYNDIA STANLEY

Mr. Earl A. Rubley, a geography teacher here at Longwood College, is now involved with a somewhat unique method of teaching. This semester, Mr. Rubley is assisting the Assistant Dean, Mr. Woodrow Packer, of St. Paul's College in Lawrenceville, Virginia in teaching a course in World Geography using the tele-lecture method. This method involves the use of a regular telephone circuit. Mr. Rubley speaks into the telephone here, and his voice is carried to an amplifying system at St. Paul's. Then, his voice is fed through loud speakers into the auditorium where the nineteen members of the class are seated.

Mr. Rubley gives one lecture a week over this telephone system. At St. Paul's College, Mr. Packer illustrates Mr. Rubley's lecture with visual material that he sends to the class.

Another achievement worth noting is the fact that Mr. Rubley has been reappointed as State Coordinator of the National Council for Geographic Education; this is the second year that he has served as coordinator for geography in Virginia.

Spanish Club Hears Lecture Given By Arnold Del Greco

On Monday February 26 at 4:00 p.m. in the ABC room of Lankford Building, members of the Spanish Club attended a lecture given by Professor Arnold A. Del Greco, Executive Director of the Spanish Section of the Department of Romance Languages and General Linguistics at the University of Virginia. Dr. Del Greco's spoke about Ruben Dario. After his speech, there was a discussion about graduate work in Spanish at the University of Virginia and the forthcoming U. Va. Summer Institute in Salamanca, Spain.

Dr. Del Greco is the sponsor of this Second Summer Institute in Spain while students may earn six semester hours of credit.

The Sigmas would like to congratulate June Lancaster on being awarded the tri-Sigma scholarship ring for having attained a 4.0 average for over two consecutive semesters. Travis Rheinheart also made the Dean's List.

The N.P.C. for tri-Sigma, Eloise Webb, visited the Alpha chapter here last weekend. The weekend was spent in chapter activities including attending church as a chapter, going to the Stag Room for dinner, playing bridge, and generally getting acquainted with one of our national officers.

The Phi Mu's are really proud of their hard-working pledges. Since semester break the pledges have given two great parties for their sisters and had a bake sale. We are also proud of our corresponding secretary, Linda Long, who had a perfect 4.0 average last semester. Keep up the good work, girls!

The Zetas started off second semester in full swing under their new officers. Linda Bowers is serving as President, Nancy Hodnett, Vice-President, Claudia Adams and Linda McCulloch, Recording and Corresponding Secretaries respectively, Sharon Moses, Treasurer, and Emily Gillespie, Historian.

Three of our very studious sisters made Dean's List last semester: Andrea Myers, Ann Wildman, and Janie Spitzer. Zeta seniors Anne Smith, Nan Kelly, Ann Wildman, Joette Bailey, Christine Cline, Ann Saville, and Maureen Luby are off campus this block student teaching. Good luck, future teachers!

We are very proud of Nancy Dahmer, a Zeta Pledge who will be representing the Freshman class on May Court this spring.

Last week the Zetas had a very successful bake sale in the dorms.

R-MC Conducts Symposium On 'The New Morality'

Morality Involves Decisions

Says Playboy's Anson Mount

"The very concept of morality is making decisions," Mr. Anson Mount, Public Affairs Manager for Playboy Enterprises, and Religion Editor of "Playboy" magazine, emphasized this point during the Symposium on the New Morality, held at Randolph-Macon College on March 1, 2, 3.

Mr. Mount's remarks, in both his talk and the question-and-answer period, were consistent with his stated idea that immorality is that which needlessly harms another. He pointed out that this view leaves God out of the picture.

The "Playboy" representative admitted to being down on organized religion. He claimed that "our traditional morality is goofed up," and that the Christian Church has a "sick, paranoid idea of sex."

He went on to give his interpretation of the differences in viewpoint between the older and younger generations in the Church. He said, "the idea that the mind is good, and the body is bad, is schizophrenic." Yet this, he explained, is the position of the older generation, because they tend to condemn what they can no longer enjoy.

Meanwhile, the younger generation has discovered empirical thought. In other words, they are re-examining the old precepts of the Church, and realizing that a rule that is generally valid may not always be so in some situations.

Mr. Mount went on to define the moral revolution as a "transfer of power" from the organized Church to the mass media, psychiatry, and individualism. He offered an idea that human welfare and happiness is the only ultimate goal, and that whatever serves it is moral.

He pointed out, however, that it is easy to take moral freedom without responsibility - to rationalize, and that we must accept the responsibility along with our new-found freedom.

Mr. Mount accused traditional Christianity of demeaning and perverting sex. He claimed that procreation isn't its only purpose with the exclamation, "Sex is far more important than that!" He added that "it's unfortunate if it is derogated to only being fun, or to only being for procreation."

During the open forum, Mr. Mount was forced to defend the magazine he represents. One questioner accused the Playboy philosophy of appealing to man's animal instincts, while Mr. Mount had said earlier that man is more than just an animal. He responded, "There is nothing wrong with the female body being beautiful, and with our celebrating it." He added that Playboy feels that, "Anything that promotes heterosexuality is healthy."

A Priest's View Of Change

'It's Morality, Not Immorality'

Father Paul Durbin, of St. Stephen's College, Dover, Massachusetts, delivered the second address of the symposium. Father Durbin is a specialist in the field of sexual morality and ethics.

The topic of Father Durbin's lecture was, "Is the Church Ready for New Morality?" Father Durbin was speaking on the Roman Catholic view of sexual morality. He indicated that he hoped what he said could be transferred to other religions.

Commenting on the attitude of the Church toward birth control, Father Durbin stated that the position of the Church is different than it had been. Fifteen years ago the Church considered that birth control was wrong. Presently, the Church does not have a definite stand, Father Durbin asked, "Does a reversal in the one area of birth control change the issue on other fundamental moral views?" In answering the question, Father Durbin said that only if this change indicated other changes, did we have a new morality. Father seemed to suggest that this was the case.

Father Durbin continued to say that there was an indication of a shift in leadership taking place. This leader-

Rev. Donald Welch Demythologizes The New Morality

Rev. Donald Welch, Methodist clergyman, college lecturer, and Assistant Dean of the Duke University Divinity School, directed his talk during the Symposium on the matter of demythologizing. He enumerated seven false impressions that the public holds in regard to the new sexual morality.

First, many believe that sex is the greatest thing in life, the answer to all of man's needs. His opinion was that, "Sex only takes a few minutes - it's what you do with the rest of the day that counts." He challenged his audience by asking them, "Do you find meaning for all of your life in sex?"

Second, it's commonly thought that more people indulge in excessive sex than ever before. He claimed this to be false, and said that talking about it doesn't imply that everybody's doing it.

Third, it is not true that religion, particularly Christianity, has always been anti-sex. He pointed to the Old Testament as proof. He also explained that Church history reveals varying attitudes toward sex over the centuries. But he admitted, "We have preached about the rules, and let the activity go on."

The fourth myth is that situation ethics is less demanding than the legalistic system. Rev. Welch claimed that situation ethics is much more demanding

Student Exchange With H-SC Among Conference Topics

The second Presidential Press Conference was held in the Gold Room of Lankford Building on February 28.

Dr. Willett began the program on the exchange of students between Hampden-Sydney and Longwood. There are now eight girls at Hampden-Sydney taking a computer mathematics course, and two Hampden-Sydney boys taking a Literary Criticism course at Longwood. Dr. Willett said that "We're really moving in the right direction in working with the folks at Hampden-Sydney, using their facilities and our facilities."

In discussing general education, "the committee would like to bring more flexibility into the program." Dr. Willett indicated that this would mean a lessening of required subjects and a greater number of electives.

Dr. Willett progressed to the much debated issue of a five-day class schedule. The fact that Mary Washington College, George Mason College, and the University of Virginia have all abolished undergraduate classes on Saturday "adds a more positive argument to eliminate Saturday classes. However, you can't push a button and change it automatically. But every effort is being made to consider this as soon as possible."

The next topic Dr. Willett permitted was a summer program to permit students to go to Europe and earn college credits. This will not be possible until the summer of 1969 at the earliest.

After discussing these preliminaries, the students began to ask questions. Concerning the $25 fine for having an illegal car on campus, Dr. Willett announced that it would be abolished at the end of this semester.

Asked about plans for future parking lots, Dr. Willett said that "the state was opposed to using tax funds. We feel that we can provide adequate parking space by using funds from other sources."

When asked why economics was required for elementary education majors and not for secondary majors, Dr. Willett answered that the State Board of Education set up the requirement. The State Board feels that every teacher should attempt to get the basic principles of economics across to their students.

The question was raised concerning the opening of new student teaching centers. Dr. Willett stated that this could only be done with an invitation from a school system. Distance would also be a problem.

Dr. Willett concluded the conference with: "If you have any questions, please don't feel that you have to wait until another session. I'm a great believer in communications."

There will be a suggestion box placed outside of the President's office.

Dr. James Sloan Presents Lecture In Jarman Series

The Jarman Series presented Dr. James Sloan last night in Jarman Auditorium. Dr. Sloan is Chairman of the Department of History of Art and Director of the William Hayes Ackland Memorial Art Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, North Carolina. He was formerly chairman of the History of Art at Bryn Mawr College.

Dr. Sloan spoke on "David, Robespierre, and the Legend of Joseph Bara." He gave a general picture of the relation of David, a noted painter of the French Revolutionary period, to the whole revolution. He explained how David created the myth surrounding Joseph Bara.

Dr. Sloan used slides to supplement his talk which was a product of his own research and theory.

After the Jarman Series reception for Dr. Sloan was held in the Alumnae House.

LC Team Wins Bout: Madison Triumphant Over First Match

Fighting a hard battle, L.C.'s Varsity Basketball Team bowed gracefully to Madison College last Monday, February 26, by a score of 45-38.

Longwood was leading at the end of the first quarter, 10-8, but by halftime found themselves trailing by one point. In the fourth quarter Madison put on the steam and increased the score by an eight point lead by the end of the game.

Longwood's Mary Tolley with 15 points and Lynne Coleman with 14, hit double figures in scoring. Other L.C. scorers included Becky Bondurant with 3, Freda Lunsford and Janet Harpold with 2 each and Fran Anthony and Linda Atkinson with 1 each. Fran, Linda and Carolyn Thompson came down with most of the rebounds at the Madison shooting end of the court while Freda Lunsford and Becky Bondurant pulled down the rebounds at the other end and passed out to the other players in scoring position.

Longwood went all the way down to the wire with Madison in the second game of the afternoon. The winning point came in the final seconds of the game as Brenda White scored on the second of two free throw attempts to help defeat Madison, 22-21.

LC Varsity Basketball 2-Time Victor Over RPI

Last Thursday as the L.C. Varsity Basketball teams boarded the Blue and White bus for Richmond to play against R.P.I., snow flakes were falling thickly. Maybe it was just a coincidence, but when R.P.I. traveled to L.C. earlier in the season, they traveled under the same conditions and R.P.I.'s first team slid back home with a 54-38 victory. This time the situation was reversed and it was L.C. that glided back with a 49-47 win.

The Longwood players came through with a beautiful team performance in a hard-fought game as the scoring lead bounced back and forth, and the game "ended" in what was thought to be a 46-44 victory for L.C. But, the official score book had the score as 45-45, so the game went into a 3 minute overtime period. Longwood knew that the final score would probably depend on scoring the first basket, so Betty King hit the hoop to give L.C. the lead. Then R.P.I. sank a field goal and missed 2 free throws. With 7 seconds remaining on the clock, Lynne Coleman put the winning shot into the basket. Longwood had 3 players in double figures which accounted for 40 of the total 49 points. High scoring honors went to R.P.I.'s Ann Murphy with 19 points.

The L.C. second team came up with another victory over R.P.I. Longwood jumped out to a commanding lead of 19-9 at the half, only to see the scoring lead dwindle to a mere 2 points at the end of the third quarter. L.C. poured on the heat in the final period to outscore their opponents 16 to 6. The team shot 67% from the foul line and sank 17 buckets for a final score of 42-30.

Remember Varsity Lacrosse try outs this week - practices will be at 4 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Come out and help make this new Varsity sport a success!

Don't forget to sign up on the A. A. Sportsmanship committee. We need much more emphasis in this area if we are going to have a good intramural program. Intramural games should be played for fun and relaxation and the emphasis should not be on skill. Good manners are a part of good sportsmanship - give your opponents a cheer at the end of the game and thank them individually, also thank the officials, show concern for your opponents as well as your teammates, don't call the game for the officials and don't argue with them, learn to appreciate the skill of your opponents and congratulate them when they perform well. Show your sportsmanship as well as your skill, and you'll get more enjoyment and make more friends, no matter if you win or lose.

Congratulations to the Varsity Basketball Team for their victories against R.P.I. Would you believe that Freda didn't foul out this time? And, both of our guards, Linda Atkinson and Fran Anthony, scored one point each in the Madison game!

Miss Andrews really kept things 'jumping' last week - she played a tennis match against Jane Tibbs and when it was over, Miss Andrews attempted to jump the net and thank Jane for a good game. Well needless to say, the ball went flying one way and the racket the other way, and Miss Andrews ended up on the tennis court with a skinned up arm and leg. How does it feel to be co-ordinated???

This Saturday L.C. Varsity Lacrosse players will travel to West-hampton College for a Regional Play Day. Lacrosse players from surrounding colleges will participate in games as well as learning and practicing skills and techniques.

Best of Luck to the Basketball Color Teams. Check the A. A. Board for a schedule of the games and come out and support your Color. Let's see some real spirit!

Miss Bush and several L.C. students attended a Fencing Clinic last Friday at Hollins College. Fencing has become very popular at Longwood already. If fencing classes continue to be taught to the student body, perhaps an intramural fencing program could be started. Hopefully this will lead Longwood into a Varsity program in the next year or two.

Mystery of the Year: How did we end up with two ping pong tables in the Lankford Building instead of the billiard tables that were promised to us??

Sophomore Basketball Team Earns Points For Class

Victorious over the freshmen, juniors and senior teams, the sophomore class basketball team earned ten points toward this year's class cup. In a round robin tournament, each class played three games.

Members of the winning team were D. Bradley, L. Driver, C. McDonnell, K. Parker, S. Moriconi, L. Richter, B. Sellings, J. Turner, S. Turner, and D. Vaughn.

In the first games on February 27, the freshmen team with players L. Downey, B. Hall, D. Hewitt, D. Keegan, B. Jenkins, S. Posivach, J. Richardson, and T. Torregrossa, surrendered to the sophomores, as the seniors in a close contest with the juniors edged their opponents by three points.

The second set of matches saw the sophomore victorious over the seniors, while the frosh made up for their initial loss by defeating their sister class.

On February 29, the sophomores completed their conquest by beating the Juniors. The freshmen versus the seniors game scheduled for the same time was played at a later date.

The senior team was composed of S. Davis, V. Gunter, E. Jacobs, E. McClendon, C. Padera, and C. Prillaman. J. Ekdman, S. Dufoss, K. Haas, C. Jester, J. Kingsley, L. McCulloch, M. Martin, L. Rachal, and J. Tibbs represented the junior class in the tournament.

Tonight, the color teams battle in their second game. The winner of the tournament, the team victorious in two out of three games, will receive ten points towards the color cup.

A large cheering section is anticipated and hoped for at tonight's game.

Anyone planning to student teach this summer or first block of next fall, please come to a meeting with Dean Brown on Monday, March 11, at 6:45 p.m. in the Lankford ABC Room to discuss housing plans.

ANSON MOUNT

He observed that most of the people who object to "Playboy" object to the cartoons. He stated that, "Humor is pointing out the incongruities of human existence," and that if one reads a demonic meaning into their cartoons, it is a reflection on our society. He explained that it's a healthy thing to joke about something close to us, such as sex. He predicted that sex will become less funny within a few years, because it will become a less painful subject, and we have a tendency to joke about the things that are most painful to us. According to him, in the year 2000, we'll talk about sex less, and do it more.

Mr. Mount was also called upon to refute an opinion that "Playboy" dehumanizes the female. He said that his wife was his playmate, and that he believed she could be dignified, and still be a playmate. He was forced to admit, however, that she had never appeared in the magazine, but hastened to add that he would allow his daughter to do so if she wished, when she's older.

Asked about recommendations for changes in marriage and divorce laws, he suggested that divorce be made easier and marriage more difficult. He recommended a required counseling session before a couple would be allowed to marry.

their guests the Men's Glee Club of the University of Richmond. Both choruses will present a portion of the program, and will combine to sing Haydn's "Lord Nelson" Mass.

The Longwood Choir, under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar, will perform Porpora's "Magnificat." This was written for a girls' chorus of one of the orphanages in Venice famous for their music. Porpora, who was the music director of the school, was one of Haydn's voice teachers. The soloists for the number will be Jeannie Powell and Tulita Owen, sopranos, and Jacqueline White, alto. Mr. Paul Hesselink, of the music faculty, will play the organ accompaniment.

The University of Richmond Glee Club, directed by Mr. James Erb, the chairman of the music department of the University, will sing a group of numbers, made up of "We Be Three Poor Mariners," and "We Be Soldiers Three," by Ravenscroft; Po' Ol' Lazarus," arr. Work; "John Henry," arr. Brookhart; "Jerry," arr. de Paur; "Green grow the Rashies, O," arr. Shaw-Parker, and "The Old Woman," by Robertson.

The two choruses will then combine for the major work on the program, the "Mass in D Minor" by Joseph Haydn, known as the "Lord Nelson" Mass. Helen Ford, soprano, and Ann Flesham, alto, will be the soloists, and Laura Clark will play the piano accompaniment.

The program will be repeated at the University of Richmond on Sunday, March 17.

Longwood Varsity Battles HSC Team For Heart Fund

The Heart Fund basketball game will be held on Tuesday night, March 12, at 8:00 in the Armory. The admission will be $1.00 for adults and 50¢ for children which will be donated to the Heart Fund.

The game is between the intramural champions from Hampden-Sydney, and the Longwood girls' first string varsity team. They will be playing by girls rules which are not as rough as those used by the more rugged boys.

However, the Longwood Physical Education staff has gone on record against the playing of the game. Their point is that basketball is a contact sport, and since boys are naturally stronger than girls there is a certain amount of apprehension as to the possibility of injury to the girls. But the final decision was left to the girls, who decided to play.

To add a lighter note, they observed a rather humorous connection between Longwood - Heart Fund - Ham-Syd. girls vs. boys?

So everyone gather your pennies and your friends and march on over to the Armory, Tuesday night to see a great game and support a most worthy cause.

Don't forget the Wesley Coffee House, March 9, 7:30-11:30.

Dedication Of Lankford Building Highlights Founders' Day Program

The dedication of Longwood's new student activities building, named in honor of Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., will feature the college's 84th Founders' Day program on Saturday, March 16.

More than 600 alumnae and friends of Dr. and Mrs. Lankford will join with the faculty, students, and members of the Board of Visitors on Saturday in honoring the noted teacher, administrator, and author of mathematics textbooks who served as Longwood's president during 1955-1965, a 10-year period of increasing student enrollment, rapid physical expansion, and rising academic standards at the college.

Most alumnae returning to the campus this weekend are members of the 13 classes that have scheduled reunions. The classes of 1943 and 1916 will hold their 25th and 50th reunions, respectively. Other classes with reunion plans are '03, '08, '13, '23, '28, '33, '38, '48, '53, '58, and '63.

The Lankford Building will be dedicated during the Saturday morning program in Jarman Auditorium, beginning at 10:30 with an academic procession. Principal speaker at the session, over which President Henry I. Willett, Jr. will preside, will be Mr. Fred O. Wygal, former acting president of Longwood. Dedictory remarks will be made by Jacob H. Wamsley, business manager and treasurer of the college during the years when Dr. Lankford was president.

Also taking part in the Saturday morning program will be Linda Gardner, former student government president, and Mrs. Charles W. Appich, Jr., of Richmond, president of the alumnae association. The Rev. Samuel H. Zealy, pastor of Farmville Presbyterian Church, will render the invocation.

Special music will be presented by three Longwood students—Jenny Young, Kitty Wyman, and Phala Leggett. Mr. Paul S. Hesselink, instructor in music, will be at the organ for the procession and recessional.

The luncheon and business meeting of the alumnae association will take place in the main dining hall at 1 p.m. Mrs. Appich will preside over the affair at which Mrs. Elizabeth S. Jones, alumnae executive secretary, and committee chairmen will make reports. The Simoni Conference Room, 100 Grainger Building, will be dedicated at 3:15 p.m. An open house and reception will be held in the Lankford Building from 4-5 p.m.

Saturday, the Longwood alumnae chapter of Farmville will serve coffee in the Alumnae House, 9 a.m.-10:15 a.m. On both Friday and Saturday.

Have you heard rumors about the new dorm for 1969? Do you have any questions about our changing campus, such as "Will the school build parking lots for student cars?" Do you have suggestions for campus improvement?

If so, submit all suggestions and questions to "The Rotunda". We will try to find answers to your questions and make your suggestions known.

LC's History Begins In 1839; Oldest Women's College In State

By EDGAR THOMAS
Director of Public Relations

A pioneer in private and public education, Longwood is one of the oldest colleges for women in the United States. Founded on March 5, 1839, as the Farmville Female Seminary Association, the college opened its doors in an impressive brick building which now forms a part of Ruffner Hall.

In succeeding years the increasing prosperity of the Farmville Female Seminary or Female Academy, as it was sometimes called, led the stockholders to expand the seminary into a college, and the Farmville Female College was incorporated in 1860. Under private and church management the college enjoyed a long period of successful operation.

In 1870 the first State legislature to assemble after the adoption of the postbellum constitution established a system of public schools, and for more than 12 years these schools were entrusted to such teaching personnel as were found ready at hand. During this period it became evident to educational leaders, however, that some future provision must be made for the training of teachers.

To meet the demand for trained teachers, the Virginia legislature, on March 7, 1884, passed an act establishing the State Female Normal School. A month later, on April 7, 1884, the State of Virginia acquired the property of the Farmville Female College, and in October of the same year the Normal School opened with an enrollment of 110 students. This was the first State institution of higher learning for women in Virginia.

With the passage of the years the Normal School expanded its curricula and ran through a succession of names. It became the State Normal School for Women in 1914, the State Teachers College at Farmville in 1924, and Longwood College in 1949.

The college's present name was derived from the Longwood Estate, a tract of 103 acres acquired by Peter Johnston in 1765 and became the home of Peter Johnston, Jr., a lieutenant in Light Horse Harry Lee's famed legion and judge of the Circuit Court of Virginia. General Joseph E. Johnston, Confederate military figure, was born there.

Longwood was first authorized to offer four-year curricula leading to the degree of bachelor of science in education in 1916. The college was empowered to offer the degree of bachelor of arts in 1935, the degree of bachelor of science in 1938, curricula in business education the same year, and courses leading to a degree in music education in 1949. Graduate programs were authorized in 1954. Emphasis at Longwood continues to be placed on teacher training, liberal arts education, and preprofessional courses in nursing and medical and X-ray technology.

SVEA Convenes At Longwood;

Elliott Installs New Officers

Longwood College played host to about 150 members of the Student Virginia Education Association which had their convention on campus Saturday, March 9.

The major portion of the Convention's activities took place in Lankford Student Activities Building. At 9 a.m., registration began and continued until 10 o'clock; there was also a social hour at the same time. The morning general session began at 10 o'clock. Dr. Sidney E. Sandridge, President of Southern Seminary Junior College delivered the keynote address. He brought home the fact that education—the kind that teaches you to live in our world—is an absolute essential in our society today. Students must be taught where they can go instead of just how to perform some task.

After the General Session for the morning was over, the group went to Hiner where the delegates, broken down into groups, had group discussions. They were led by Dr. John E. Petty, Chairman of the Department of Education, Lynchburg College, Mr. Ralph J. Stotwell, Associate Director of VEA Field Services, Dr. John Subings, Director of Research and Publications, Alexandria Public Schools, and Dr. Henry E. York, Principal of the Frost Intermediate School, Fairfax.

Following the discussion groups, there was a luncheon in the Senior Dining Hall.

After lunch everyone went back to Lankford for the afternoon General Session. There was a panel consisting of the four group leaders who answered questions put to them by the delegates. The results of the election for

Helms Advises Congressmen; Travels Weekly To Washington

If you have ever wanted to find Mr. Helms on Monday or Tuesday afternoons, you need not bother trying, for he is in Washington, D. C. On these days Mr. Helms analyzes legislation and makes reports on it for Congressmen in the House of Representatives. He also helps draft legislation and does some case work.

All this is very beneficial to the Longwood students, for we are reaping the benefits of his teaching. From this experience in Washington, Mr. Helms is learning something about governmental processes that cannot be learned in textbooks. This helps him give a better presentation of American political processes and helps him keep abreast of matters that come before Congress. He has also been able to pick up information in Washington for students and faculty members. This has helped debates and research papers, and he has helped several Longwood girls find jobs in Washington.

Mr. Helms is also planning to do a biography of one of these important Congressmen. The information in the biography will be information from a live source which he hopes will be valuable to historians in the future, information that might otherwise be lost.

In addition to his other Washington activities, Mr. Helms annually sponsors a tour of Washington for some of his classes. This tour includes visits to both a Congressman's office and a Senator's office; seeing both Houses of Congress in session; touring the Capitol Building, the Supreme Court Building, the National Gallery of Art, the National Archives, and the Smithsonian Institution; and, as a final climax, seeing the changing of the guards at Arlington.

Who Cares?

In another part of the state, Frederick College of Nansemond County has been donated to the state. The ten year old privately owned college will be turned into a community college. The students, the last to know of the deed, picketed the State Capitol in an act of resentment. The state was triumphant, and it appears that the students will not be able to alter the situation. Students who want a degree will have to transfer to other colleges.

In contrast to the upheaval at Frederick College, this past week at Longwood has been quiet, almost uneventful. We sit securely on our plot of ground in a state of lethargy, not seeming to care about what is going on around campus. Our interests center on the weekend. The days between Sunday and Friday are only part of the ritual to prepare us for the release.

Who cares whether or not the Rotunda has been painted, Wheeler is being painted, we have a new Longwood bus, the steps in back of Lankford Building were widened for our convenience, land is being cleared in back of Cox, the mall was dug up, a few rules were changed. We placidly accept these facts as something the school owes the student body.

Who cares? Let's just sit back in our cozy part of the state and wait for the weekend. Longwood will be here forever.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Ladies,

This past weekend I was a guest on your campus for the Junior Ring Dance. It is my understanding that this is THE social event of your year. To say that my experiences at your school left me dismayed makes me guilty of under-statement.

This dance itself was a jolt to my tender system. You girls were quite lovely in long gowns. This loveliness soon disappeared amid the strains of the Jokers Wild. Something about the Shing-a-ling and the Funky Broadway seems antithetical to formal wear. I forced upon my date a hasty exit from the dance.

Please don't think I hold enmity for the Jokers Wild. Undoubtedly it is a fine combo, as rock groups do, and would prove more than satisfactory at a fraternity party or a teeny-bopper dance. But, to my mind, a formal dance should have legitimate music—not the cacophony that sounds best after several drinks.

The defense of your selection seems to rest on your inability to dance to a dance band. (If this seems a contradiction of terms, please know that it is not mine.) I maintain that good dancers can respond to almost any type of music. Surely we young people can assimilate some of the more lasting dance forms as well as the current, transient frenzy.

My complaint does go deeper, though. Your "concert" offering was the Platters. Since I chose not to attend, I surely lack justification for comment. But it is my understanding that arrangements with this act were not made until the very week of the appearance. The obvious lack of planning causes me to shudder.

Enough complaints. A few constructive suggestions are in order. For those who vibrate to strictly electrical music, couldn't there be a little affair on Friday night? For such a big weekend we gentlemen could arrange our schedules accordingly, even cutting Saturday classes where necessary. And wouldn't a nice meal before the Saturday eve dance be in order? Farmville's eating places have a certain charm, but they cannot conveniently handle overflow crowds. The idea of eating in an attractively decorated school cafeteria is not anathema to me.

I recognize that Farmville is not the hub of the Western Cultural World.

(Whether it lies anywhere on the axis is an academic argument.) But isn't a bit of decorum and, yes, dignity to be expected of an institution of higher learning?

Editor, The Rotunda:

I wish to compliment the paper on its new cartoonist, Susan Daymont. She has beautifully captured the common everyday spirit of the campus. Her cartoons apply to the students as a whole, and she seems to put into picture and caption the thoughts about life at Longwood that occur to everyone in passing—thoughts we never bother to actually notice until Susan joined your staff. She is a definite asset to "The Rotunda," and many are saying so!

FOUNDERS' DAY

day evenings at 9:30 o'clock, following performances of "The Miser" by the Longwood Players in Jarman Auditorium, there will be open house in the Alumnae House.

Members of Geist and the Granddaughters Club will assist in the observance of Founders Day. Overall plans for the occasion have been made by a faculty-staff committee, of which Mrs. Josephine H. Magnifico, assistant professor of mathematics, is chairman. Other committee members are Dr. Janet L. Binger, professor of psychology; Mrs. Kathleen C. Cover, associate professor of sociology; Mrs. Frances M. Garnett, acting chairman of department of foreign languages; Mrs. Elizabeth S. Jones, alumnae executive secretary; Miss Virginia Bedford, chairman of art department; and Edgar Thomas, director of public relations.

During the 10 years that Dr. Lankford directed the 12-year-old teacher-training institution for women Longwood's enrollment rose from 791 to 1459, faculty members increased from 62 to 100, faculty doctoral degrees more than doubled, annual operating budgets increased from $891,000 to more than $2 million, and some $5 million in new dormitories and other construction were added to the campus.

Saturday classes will be suspended at 9:30 a.m.

No date?? Oh, that's right . . . this is an IMPORTANT weekend of Hampden-Sydney . . .

Sunday Nights And Tuesday Mornings

By LIBBA BALL

What goes into publishing the "Rotunda" each week? Have you ever considered the hours outside of a normal classroom load that are spent in digging up news from week-to-week? With a limited number of reporters and a small, but hard-working staff, the "Rotunda" is issued every Wednesday at dinner. And, I wonder how many students really take the time to read the fruits of our weekly labor?

To begin with, our reporters cover various departments. Each week they confront the department heads with questions about new activities, projects, etc. Sometimes we're so swamped with news, that we just can't find the space to put all the news in. Other times, weeks go by without any new developments on our newsbeats. All the campus organizations are responsible for appointing a reporter, who in turn either gives us a suggestion for a story, or who has done the job of composing her own story and handing it in to a staff member. It isn't hard to have an article printed, and if anyone has anything interesting, please don't hesitate to submit it.

Recently we've been subject to criticism concerning misspelled names, misquotes, incorrect time and date information, and review. Unfortunately, we aren't professionals, and accidents do happen. On the other hand, we don't deliberately make an effort to make these mistakes. Certainly not! We're working as staff members because we enjoy the opportunity to work cooperatively in organizing school literary talents. Our object is to keep the student body informed. We do as well as possible under the prevailing conditions, and if you have had your name misspelled, your comments misquoted, or your plays the object of unfavorable reviews, we will cordially accept your criticisms if you are genuinely sincere. However, bear in mind that typing errors and inexperience account for a majority of these mishaps. We try our very best, and more than this, we just can't help. Please try to understand our position.

Setting up the paper is a tedious and time-consuming job, even more so than finding out facts, composing articles, or reporting information. The paper is laid out according to a certain number of inches per page. Therefore, there is a limit to the length of certain articles and often times we have to "cut" articles to less than a page's having as much different news as possible. Each story we receive must be typed and counted, so many words to the inch. This count is then used in planning the length of the number of articles and also laying-out a certain page.

The difficult and most eye-wearing job of newspaper work is that of setting up headlines. They, too, are subject to severe limits. For example, for a one-column article, the title has to be three lines long, with between 16 to 18 letters in each line. I's, T's, and it's only take up one-half typing space, where capital letters are counted as one-and-a-halves. With this in mind, the "title maker" is responsible for composing a line which is coherent and informative. Separate sheets are used in spacing and thinking up catchy, eye-appealing titles. Sometimes we work as long as a half-hour in achieving the best possible attention-getter! Then, when our editor and the immediate staff report down to the "Farmville Herald's" office building on Tuesday mornings, they are responsible for checking the final layout of Wednesday's publication. If there is more than one-quarter of an inch of empty space per page, they are responsible for either lengthening a story or finding a tidbit of news to cover the empty space.

Sororities Begin Spring Rush Parties Wednesday, Mar 20

Last year spring rush was by invitation only. This year anyone with a 2.0 cumulative average may rush. You only have to come to the ABC Room of the Lankford Building on Wednesday, March 20 at 5:15 for an informal tea and registration. Be sure to bring your $2.00 registration fee, a pen, and a small picture of yourself which will be returned after rush for the Panhellenic Rush File.

The rush period will be from March 25-29. Informal parties constitute the agenda for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; preferentials will be signed on Thursday; and pledging will take place on Thursday night. For more information concerning spring rush, be sure to listen to the wires at lunchtime during rush week, observe the Panhellenic bulletin board in the Old Smoker, and watch for related posters in smokers and on class bulletin boards. Also, Panhellenic delegates will be available before and during rush to answer your questions. Their names will be posted on the Panhellenic bulletin board.

A further reminder: Please wear a name tag to all rush functions.

The works of A. B. Jackson, a contemporary artist from Virginia, are now on display in the library exhibit room.

Or, The Life Of "The Rotunda"

The photography department also has considerable problems. Making picture assignments, arranging appointments for shots, taking time out from your math homework to get that shot of the class basketball teams... the student body has no idea how hard this part can be. What's more depressing is the fact that our staff is young, and again we aren't professional camera artists. Some of our shots are not what you'd find in a AP wirephoto, but the staff works diligently to improve their skill. Sometimes the flash won't go off, other times the batteries in the camera conk out, and then our photographer is left stranded with a list of last-minute assignments and a borrowed camera. Happy days are here again, though! We've recently purchased a new Yashica camera, and our girls are soon to be saved the embarrassment of camera difficulties. For those of you who complain, never again, we hope.

James Moses Grainger, Former LC Professor, Dies

The death of James Moses Grainger on February 28 brought to the minds of those who knew and loved him a fond remembrance of his many capabilities and accomplishments in his lifetime. For one who did so much to promote advancement in education, not only at LC, but throughout the state, we must take a backward glance at his extraordinary achievements.

From 1907 to 1910, Mr. Grainger was instructor in English at the University of North Carolina, but in September of 1910, he succeeded R. T. Kerlin as head of the Department of Literature and Reading at Longwood, which was then the State Female Normal School.

Mr. Grainger served LC for forty years. During this time, he helped formulate Children's Literature in the Training School Course of Study. He served as Chairman of the Faculty Committee on "The Focus," the school magazine, and "The Rotunda," the school newspaper.

In 1914, Mr. Grainger started the Ballad Club and in that same year was made president of the Virginia Folk Lore Society. Another valuable contribution was made by Mr. Grainger in 1914. He was Chairman and co-founder of the Virginia Association of Teachers of English and in 1915 represented Virginia as a member of the Board of National Council of Teachers of English. To list all of Mr. Grainger's achievements is impossible.

The English Honor Society, Beore Eh Thorn, was established by James Grainger in 1935 and he was responsible for bringing such writers as Robert Frost, John Erskine and Carl Sandburg to the campus.

Mr. Grainger retired to Old Buffalo Plantation, a 250 acre farm outside of Farmville, in 1959, after 40 years of dedication and service in the field of education.

Miss Bowman Travels, Continues Studying Dance

By JANET HARMON

Miss Betty Bowman, a physical education assistant professor and sponsor of Orchestras, is a native of Harrison, Tennessee, where she attended the public schools until graduation from high school. Although not actively interested in dance at this time, she participated in a number of extra-curricular activities and was a member of her high school's basketball team. Upon graduation, she entered the University of Tennessee, where her interest in dancing began to take shape. During her college career, she received her introductory training in dancing, and graduated from the U. of T. with a Liberal Arts degree, majoring in bacteriology and minoring in zoology. Miss Bowman continued her education by taking graduate courses specializing in physical education, and received her Master's Degree from the University of Tennessee. Upon leaving U.T. after six years of hard study, she went to the University of Texas where she taught and studied for three years. While at Texas, Miss Bowman taught all phases of P.E., but she was especially active in dance.

At the end of the three years, she traveled to Germany for a brief six-weeks study under a summer program, but became so interested that she remained for three more years of concentrated study at the Wigman School in Berlin, graduating with a professional teaching diploma.

Upon her return to the United States in 1957, Miss Bowman studied and worked at the Henry Street Clay House in New York City for a year, returning to the University of Tennessee where she taught for the next six years in the physical education department. Here she was in charge of the program for dance majors which was called a "dance concentrate."

Taking a leave of absence for two years, Miss Bowman studied at the University of Michigan where she worked on her doctorate degree. Returning to U.T., she taught for two more years before coming to Longwood.

Miss Bowman's interest in dancing remains, and during the summer months she does not let it lie dormant. Last summer she studied in Colorado under the direction of Haysa Holm, a noted choreographer of Broadway plays such as "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," and more recently, "Here's Where I Belong."

Longwood is indeed fortunate in having such a talented lady join our staff. On behalf of the Longwood College student body, we welcome you.

MISS BETTY BOWMAN

Fencers to Compete Against Wm. & Mary; Seven Attend Clinic

Miss Sally Bush accompanied seven L.C. students to a Fencing Clinic held at Hollins College in Roanoke. Nancy Harris, Marie Ashlock, Theresa Elder, Melinda Whitman, Judy Haynes, and Aleta Sandman had the honor of meeting and talking to Hugo Costello who is the head fencing coach at N.Y.U. Mr. Costello worked with individual members on simple attacks such as the straight thrust, lunge, and disengagement. Then he gave a mass demonstration on exercising and various techniques. The groups worked in straight lines on exercising, the lunge, on guard position, and went through drills on the lunge, advance, retreat, hand position for the parry and balastro (a jump-lunge). An intercollegiate Tournament was held the next day but the L.C. students were unable to stay for this. A tea followed the clinic and everyone had an opportunity to talk with Mr. Costello and fencing coaches from other colleges.

On March 15 at 2 p.m. two teams of three fencers each will represent Longwood as they compete with fencers from the College of William and Mary at W. & M. Students who are interested may sign up for tryouts and Miss Bush will choose the final team members. Fencing at Longwood has come a long way since January! Good luck on the 15th!

Longwood Hosts SVEA Convention On Campus

The Student Virginia Education Association held in the morning were announced, and the newly elected officers were installed by Mr. George P. Elliott, Longwood SEA sponsor. The new officers are: President, Steve Mininger, Eastern Mennonite College, Vice-President, Carolyn Kreiter, Mary Washington College, Secretary-Treasurer, Becky Riddick, Lynchburg College, and Member-at-Large, Louvenia Johnson, Virginia Union University.

Dr. Henry L. Willett, Jr. delivered the closing address. In it he urged that teachers develop a greater understanding of all people and that they emphasize the similarities among the different nations rather than the differences. Because, as Dr. Willett said, we live in a changing world, students must be taught to think and reason rather than to give back cold, hard facts. He believes this can be done.

The meeting was adjourned by the retiring President, Kyli Giannoutsos, of Old Dominion College.

Varsity Archery tryouts and practices officially began this past Monday. Anyone who is interested is urged to try out for the team. Miss "B" coaches the archers who always do a fine job of representing Longwood. A Varsity match consists of shooting one Columbia round with individual as well as team scores recorded. Three members of last year's team graduated, and Miss B needs the support of the student body if L.C. is to have a Varsity team this year. Please see Miss B whose office is located on the same level as the balcony in the OLD GYM or Jane Erdman in S.C. 312.

Don't forget that the Water Show will be coming up, March 20-24. I'm sure that the show will exceed all our expectations because the show gets better each year. Special costumes and scenery will add much to the skits and numbers created by the swimmers. If you've never seen Stephanie DiRoss perform her "Tap dance routine", you'll get your chance at the show - it's really something! Take it away, Steph!

Everyone's praying that it doesn't rain too much this spring, that is, not enough to ruin practices and matches in tennis, archery, lacrosse, and golf. Heaven help us if the March winds start to blow - we may end up with arrows on the tennis courts, tennis balls on the lacrosse field, and lacrosse balls going over the fence and into the street. Of course, knowing the typical L.C. student, like me, all of the above is par for the course whether the winds blow or not!

Be sure to enter the bowling tournament - maybe you'll be lucky and bowl a 300 score. That means the pins used in that game have to be packed up and shipped back to the company from which they came. Dream on, huh? Anyway, this bowling tournament should provide lots of fun for everyone.

Will anyone who has Lacrosse equipment checked out from Hockey Camp please return it as soon as possible. This equipment is needed by the Varsity players and will soon be needed in service classes.

Have you played any more tennis matches recently, Miss Andrews?

Biology Seminar Class Reopened For Students

Until recently, seminar classes, involving a group who undergo intensified research in their field of interest, were confined to graduate students or those who definitely planned to enter graduate school.

Biology 430, a seminar class, is a rather unusual course listed in the catalogue as "open only to a few qualified students" subject to the approval of the instructor.

Few students outside of the Biology department have heard of it because it is only offered when there is sufficient interest.

This, perhaps, accounts for the fact that Biology 430 is offered this semester for the first time in nearly two years.

Mr. Billy Batts, in charge of the class, feels that a seminar can benefit the student who intends to teach immediately after graduation as well as the graduate student. Thus, the seminar is not composed entirely of potential graduate degree candidates. He explained that while it is an accredited one hour course, offered each Monday evening at 7:00 p.m. in Stevens 112, it is open to anyone interested.

The class is operated as informally as possible with one of a group of students or professors presenting a lecture each week for the remainder of the semester.

In the case of the professors, the presentation is usually from their doctoral dissertation. Students compile their lectures from scientific publications of particular interest to them. After each presentation, which generally lasts forty-five minutes, the remainder of the group discusses the findings of the speaker as to scientific merit.

Thus, both the speaker and the listener participate in each class session.

HONORS COUNCIL

The Honors Council, made up of representatives from each honorary organization on campus, is offering again this semester a tutoring system for Longwood students. Such a system will be made available to any Longwood student desiring additional help in college work. In this program, qualified students will serve as tutors for those who need assistance. The Council feels that by instituting such a system at this point in the semester, students will avoid "Cramming" just before examinations. It is hoped that the program will encourage conscientious study throughout the term. The various department heads have been quite helpful in submitting lists of students qualified to tutor others in particular subject areas. Once requests for tutors have been received, these suggested students will be approached concerning their availability to serve as tutors.

If you feel that you need help with ANY of your college courses, you may obtain an application in the office of the Director of Admissions. These forms must be completed and returned to Emilia Bruce, CC 124, as soon as possible. The committee will then arrange for each applicant to meet with a tutor.

The Honors Council cannot overemphasize the fact that college students should recognize their need for extra help before it is too late, and they should be willing to take advantage

Dr. Logan Wilson Speaks March 19 On Issues In Education

On March 19, 1968, at 7:30 p.m., Dr. Logan Wilson, President of the American Council on Education, will speak at Longwood College. The topic will be, "Basic Issues in American Higher Education."

Dr. Logan Wilson received his Ph.D. at Harvard University. His former positions include that of President, Main University of Texas; President, University of Texas System; Professor and Head of the Sociology Department, Tulane University; and Professor and Chairman, Department of Sociology, University of Kentucky.

Dr. Wilson has participated in various professional activities and organizations among which are the Association of American Colleges, Commission on Liberal Education; the Board of Trustees, Committee for Economic Development; and the Board, Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

In addition, Dr. Wilson is the author of "The Academic Man, Sociological Analysis" (with William L. Kolb) and is the editor and contributor of several other books.

of a program offered to help them. Possibly, a few hours of tutoring early in the semester will prevent unnecessary pressure at final examination time.

Lacrosse Players Attend Workshop, Participation Needed

Westhampton College hosted a Lacrosse Clinic last Saturday from 10:30 to 4:30 p.m. Students and coaches from William and Mary, Westhampton, Longwood, and St. Catherine's were present for the day's activities which began with an introduction of the visiting coaches by Miss Caroline Hausermann of the College of William and Mary. Both visiting coaches, Miss Honeysett and Miss Morton, teach physical education in Pennsylvania. Miss Honeysett currently plays the position of Third Man on the United States Women's Lacrosse Team and Miss Morton is a former member of the All-Wealth Lacrosse Team. Work on general skills and techniques was begun immediately; this was followed by special sessions for attack, defense, and goal keeping, at 1:30 a lunch and rest break was taken. The program resumed with a film on lacrosse presented by the Women's Lacrosse Association. This film will be shown at L.C. around April 18. Following the film, each team played in two coached games, and the day was climaxed by a game between Westhampton and William and Mary Colleges. Many of the coaches participated in the game, too.

Longwood was represented by approximately 13 girls who participated in the day's activities. Everyone agreed that the program was a big success and the L.C. girls felt that they had each learned a number of valuable skills and tips on individual and team play.

Miss Huffman definitely wants two L.C. teams, but MUCH MORE student participation is necessary. Watch and listen for announcements of tryout and practice times. Support Varsity Lacrosse - WE NEED YOU!

Plans for the spring humanities symposium, EMPHASIS-1968, are being finalized by the students of Emory & Henry College. EMPHASIS-1968: "The New Morality," scheduled to take place on the campus March 23-30, is the third in a biennial series of symposia initiated and financially supported by Emory & Henry. It is termed as "the most exciting and challenging lecture series in the colleges history." ## Sprague Publishes First Biography, George Eliot, 19th Century Novelist

By FAY SHIFFLET

"George Eliot: A Biography," the twelfth book of Dr. Rosemary Sprague, professor of English at Longwood, will be published by the Chilton Book Company in the early part of April.

Until now there has been no biography of George Eliot, one of the major nineteenth century novelists, for the general reader. The book, which is largely the product of Dr. Sprague's own study and research, contains considerable critical material as well as commentary on George Eliot's novels and poems. George Eliot's main volume of work includes "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," "Silas Marner," and "Middlemarch."

Mary Ann Evans, who was known to the world as George Eliot, destroyed much of the correspondence which would have shown the world more about her life because she did not want her biography written. In her book Dr. Sprague presents an understanding and compassionate look into the life and works of this genius.

Dr. Sprague's home is in Cleveland, Ohio. She did her undergraduate work at Bryn Mawr College and her graduate work at the Western Reserve University. She studied at the Shakespeare Institute at Stratford-upon-Avon and at the University of London after receiving her doctorate. In addition she has served as a delegate to the Conference on English Literature at Oxford University in England. Dr. Sprague has also appeared professionally on stage and has lectured on Shakespeare at Stratford, Ontario.

Dr. Sprague examines the cover of her new book, "George Eliot: A Biography."

Wilson Travels To Chicago;

Confers With Counselors

By LINDA SHEPHERD

Dean Ruth B. Wilson will travel to Chicago to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors from April 3-7.

Composed of women delegates from university, college, junior college, private school, and high school guidance departments, the NAWDC meets in various cities throughout the United States each year to discuss and compare situations pertinent to young women. This year's theme is "Dissonance and the Search for Human Dignity."

From past experience with the conference, Dean Wilson feels that today's students show more interest in the administrative aspects of college than ever before. "They want to feel that they are a part of the entire college campus in that they are a voice in every facet of college life."

Also from previous experience, Dean Wilson remarks proudly, "I always come back feeling so pleased with my own girls" after hearing the problems of other institutions. As a part of the meeting, the deans confer with members of the National Panhellenic Conference. This consists of an organization of all national officers of social sororities affiliated with the centralized NPC group.

Bobby: Can He Win?

Senator Robert F. Kennedy announced Saturday his intentions to challenge Senator Eugene McCarthy and incumbent President Lyndon Johnson for the Democratic presidential nomination. The revelation has created mixed reactions and raised the inevitable question. Can he win?

The odds are against him. To begin with, his timing was disastrous. He has been accused in Washington of "ruthless opportunism," of riding in on McCarthy's victory wave in New Hampshire. Bobby claims that now that the Minnesota senator has shown that a split in party support does exist, he is justified in opposing Johnson.

Maybe so, but the fact remains that it was McCarthy who laid the groundwork; it was he who originally had the courage to challenge the President. To anti-Johnson Democrats, McCarthy is the hero.

But there is a deeper problem. Kennedy's candidacy has virtually ruined all hope of another Democrat taking the nomination from Johnson. This country definitely needs new leadership, but Bobby has killed his party's chance of providing it. A split in the anti-Johnson forces will only assure the President's renomination, even though he is likely to lose the election. America is generally discontent with the present administration, and it won't be difficult for a Republican to beat him.

Thus, Kennedy is hurting not only himself, but his party as well.

What does Bobby have going for him? He must think he has a chance to win, or he wouldn't be running. Vietnam will be a central issue in this election; his platform includes de-escalation of the war, which is what most of the American people want. But this is McCarthy's stand also.

Is he counting on his name to pull him through? To many who loved and grieved for his brother, the late President John F. Kennedy, the name Kennedy carries a lot of weight. But there are few educated Americans who are going to terminate their thinking there. Bobby will have to prove himself. In fact, his name may be more of a handicap than a help. The crime of JFK's assassination probably made him more of a hero than he would otherwise have been. Bobby's going to find it hard to come up to that image.

In short, it looks like rough going for Robert Kennedy.

The Return Of The Native!

Peter Youngblood Guest Of YWCA Speaks On Viet Nam

This past Monday night, the YWCA sponsored a talk by Peter Youngblood on Viet Nam. After two years in the United States Army, Peter has returned to Hampden-Sydney as a pre-med student.

Peter's talk covered a period of eleven months during which time his Infantry Platoon was "in the field." He was one of the "few and far between" combat medics in the First Cavalry Division. His base camp was An Khe, in the central highlands of Viet Nam. From this point, his airborne division moved to many areas, conducting patrols, ambushes, air assaults, search and destroy missions, and just about anything else that was needed. Besides aiding an average of forty men, he also helped to give medical aid to the civilians in the area.

Peter showed about sixty-five slides covering the living conditions of the people of Viet Nam, what the average draftee does in preparation for his tour of duty, the tour itself, and the return from Viet Nam. A question and answer period then followed.

Social Hour At The Library

The library is a nice place to visit but I wouldn't want to study there. Studying requires concentration, and concentration is not often achieved during a social hour.

Recently, there have been cases of students venturing to the library with the intention of studying. How naive! Who goes to the library to study? Everyone knows it is a gathering place to discuss the latest gossip, lament on the overwhelming homework assignments, and hold panel discussions on the feasibility of staying at school this weekend to catch up on the work you happen to be behind in. And, where else would the male population go to get away from the dorm if they did not go to the Longwood library? Students have to go somewhere to get out of their rooms so that their roommates can study!

Really, girls, if you want to study, find someplace else other than the library. We must be reasonable and try not to interfere with the nightly socials held in Lancaster. The science building and Kiner are usually very quiet.

'Neither A Borrower Nor Lender Be'

By LIBBA BALL

"Neither a borrower nor a lender be." These words, spoken by the well-versed Benjamin Franklin centuries ago, still prove noteworthy today, even on our own campus. Girls, always wanting to have on a new dress, a different hair-ribbon, a different styled shoe, or a more colorful piece of jewelry or matching head scarf will borrow each others' belongings. Why it is necessary to have on something new or different to impress "Mr. Wonderful" is a matter of each girl's own discretion, but the important thing to remember is that what you are wearing should be yours!

We've been warned by our mothers time and time again, "Don't borrow each others' clothes. You may not have the most attractive or expensive wardrobe in the world, but don't borrow. If you need something enough to borrow it, your father and I will buy it for you; but don't borrow."

These warnings have remained unheeded, much to our regrets. At first, when our friends borrowed our clothes, it was an occasional, "Hey, hope you don't mind if I throw on your coat!" Well, if you've already got a coat on and you really don't mind, then this approach is permissible, but the chronic borrower never asks if you'll need to wear your own coat. Even when you're not in your room, or away for a weekend, this pest will take what she wants without asking. Whether or not she thinks she doesn't need permission or whether she thinks you won't mind, the fact that she is taking your clothes without your permission remains.

Now I am not opposed to this occasional lending-borrowing exchange. However, when you lend your nice expensive sweaters, blouses, suits and shoes out, you expect to have them returned in exactly the same condition you lent them. Forget this! Personal experience has taught me the lesson all too well. Your garments, for the most part, will be returned, (sometimes weeks or even months later), soiled, wrinkled, scuffed, or marked with water (as the case with shoes), and generally in a condition that they need major repair jobs before you, the owner, can wear them. This is disgusting! Seldom do you find someone who borrows and actually has the garment cleaned or the shoes polished. When this rare "happening" does occur, you can be certain that the girl is responsible and has taken the same meticulous care of your clothes as you do. Chances are, this won't happen, so be careful, if you do lend your things, that the girl will treat them with T.L.C.

Once I asked to borrow something. It was the first time I had asked this certain girl, and I had been lending her clothes all year. Finally I decided to "collect." I saw a dress which I simply fell in love with, and asked if I might wear it to church the following Sunday. Her reply, if not honest, at least quenched my appetite. "No, I'm sorry, I'm planning to wear it this weekend myself!" I thought this was such a clever way to get out of lending something, that I suggest those who're constantly "hit" adopt this line, too. It may not be true, but in any case, the girl who comes to borrow will get the hint and stop asking to borrow your things.

The best policy is not to borrow. If you don't borrow, then you won't feel obligated to lend your things. If you don't lend your things, you will feel more satisfied with your belongings and you won't go around campus complaining about your thoughtless "friends." You should level with your friends and tell them exactly how you feel about their using your things. That way, there are no hard feelings, and if they do ask to wear your things again, they will know what you expect in the way of proper treatment, and good luck!

of the planning of the concert. Janet Williams and Linda Hudson are to be commended for their planning and hard work since the summer of 1967. Through no fault of theirs Jr. Walker and the All-Stars did not fulfill their obligation. If Mr. Blackwell had ever worked with such groups before, he, too, would realize the responsibility of many entertainers toward contracts.

If he wouldn't even stay for Saturday night's event, what assurance do we have that he would come on Friday? Also, he calls himself a "gentleman", yet he "forced" . . . a hasty exit from the dance" upon his date. Surely he wasn't very considerate of her wishes.

All those who ate in the dining hall on Saturday evening found the meal attractive, enjoyable, and delicious. Nothing stopped the guests from eating in our dining hall except their own choices.

We as Juniors enjoyed our Ring Dance, and we thank all those who made this memorable occasion possible.

Sincerely,
Margi Lantz
Linda Fletcher

Students:

I would like to take this opportunity to welcome you to our City and sincerely hope that your stay will be a pleasant and memorable experience.

In order that neither you nor the City incur any unpleasantness, the following suggestions and policies have been instituted and will be adhered to unequivocally.

1. Do not come to Fort Lauderdale unless you definitely have a confirmed housing reservation. Our policies and ordinances prohibit sleeping in cars and/or sleeping in the open. Campers or trailers are not permitted to park on the beach. If this type vehicle is to be used as living quarters it must be parked in a trailer park specifically licensed for this purpose.

2. All the laws that govern the conduct of the individual will be enforced. A person must be 21 years of age in order to purchase or consume alcohol. Persons guilty of intoxication, (it should be noted that drinking in the open is not permitted) narcotics, use of false identification, creating unnecessary noise or any other form of disorderly conduct and any other unlawful act will be arrested and prosecuted. Violations of the traffic code will result in apprehension and prosecution of the offender.

3. Parents and school officials of any and all students arrested during this period will be officially notified. Students should be aware of the fact that persons who are arrested and convicted on any charge will have established a permanent, and sometimes criminal, record against themselves which could have a detrimental influence later in life.

It is the feeling of the City Commission, this office and all of the City departments involved, that if your conduct while in Fort Lauderdale follows your personal guidelines while on campus, that your vacation will indeed be a pleasant and memorable experience.

Cordially,
R. H. Buber,
City Manager, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Dear Editor,

I would like to say a few words in response to William Blackwell's letter concerning the Ring Dance. Being a junior, I took his letter as an insult.

It seems that "Mr." Blackwell had no idea how much time and trouble went into that weekend. The stat, nent he made about the concert was really too much. No one informed him that Linda Hudson and Janet Williams worked frantically to book a group, ANY group, up until the last week before the dance. At one time we almost did not have a concert because different performers had backed out on us. This was the fault of the performers themselves, not poor planning! Also, if William Blackwell wants to donate the funds necessary for a "little affair on Friday night" and a Saturday light banquet, then he's more than welcome. Until then, I fear that no future junior class will be able to afford such luxuries.

Sharon Curling

Friday night, March 22, from 8:30-11:00 p.m., girls will be able to eat and relax at the snack bar in Lankford to the tune of "The Soul Masters." The YWCA is sponsoring this upcoming group of talented high school students from the Farmville area who will play free of charge for the enjoyment of all those who wish to listen.

Turnverein Becomes Member Of National, Delta Psi Kappa

Turnverein, Longwood's local honorary physical education fraternity, has recently been accepted for membership in Delta Psi Kappa, national honorary fraternity for women in physical education. The Longwood group was notified on February 26, 1968, that it was to be recognized as Beta Lambda chapter of the fraternity.

Mrs. Eleanor Bobbitt, faculty sponsor, and the members of the group were thrilled at the news. Efforts have been under way since 1963 to reach this goal.

Officers of Beta Lambda chapter are Anna Pettis, President; Maywood Martin, Vice-President and Historian; and Pat Halstead, Secretary and Treasurer. Senior members are Donna Trelby, Carol Blythe, Pat Ingram, Ellen McClelland, Joan West, Jean Hendricks, Betty Patterson, and Angie Smith. Cathy Hass is a junior member and Mary Tolley and Carole Anson are newly initiated members.

On Saturday, March 23, a formal initiation will be held to install the members as Beta Lambda chapter. An installing officer from the national organization will be present for the initiation, a reception, and meetings with the new officers.

Longwood College is the first college in Virginia or any of the nine surrounding southern states to have a national honorary chapter of this nature.

Longwood Creates New Economics, Government Majors

By PAT LUCAS

Next year Longwood students will have the opportunity of majoring in two new fields, economics and government.

Economics is planned to meet the needs of those students desiring specific endorsements to teach economics and accounting. It is designed to prepare them for entrance into a career of business management or for admission to graduate school to study business or economics.

Government is now a required subject in most high schools. Dr. Lane stated that the addition of this major will enable interested students to enter schools and teach this subject. It will also offer opportunities to do graduate work and to hold government positions.

LC Fencers Bow To Wm. & Mary But Gain Valuable Experience

On Friday, March 15, Longwood had a fencing match at the College of William and Mary. The match was quite an exciting experience for our 10 L.C. representatives. Among their comments were, "It was really different from the fencing that we've been doing in class", and "We all had a great time and hope that we can have some more matches." "I was completely exhausted after fencing three bouts," was Linda Atkinson's statement.

The match began at 2 p.m. on Friday with one of the William and Mary professors acting as director. Students who participated in the match served as judges and timers when they were not in competition. L.C.'s first group lost to W. & M., 8 to 1, the second group put up a good fight but lost 5 to 4, and the third group also lost by the same score. There were three members from each college in each group and a round robin tournament was played within each group, so that each person fenced in 2 or 3 bouts. The limit was 5 minutes or 4 points.

William and Mary's fencers have been fencing since November and are members of the W. & M. Varsity team. Following the two hour match, a tea was held for all participants. Some of the Longwood representatives have expressed their hopes for another match with W. & M. as well as for matches with Westhampton and Randolph-Macon Women's College. L.C.'s representatives included Nancy Harris, Ellen Hodnette, Anna Pettis, Eve Oxman, Melinda Whitman, Theresa Elder, Linda Atkinson, Aleta Sandman, Penny Eberly, and Judy Haynes; they were accompanied by Miss Sally Bush, fencing instructor.

H2O, Corkettes Give Water Show, "A Child's World"

The Corkettes and H2O Club have been practicing for the water show which opens tonight, Wednesday, March 20, at the pool. Admission is 35¢ per person, and all are invited to attend. This year's annual show is promising with costumes and props for the first time. The swimmers will present "It's a Child's World", in a series of numbers depicting children's fondest memories: the beach, winter, toys, trains, Indians, and fairies. The water show will run through March 23. Wednesday and Thursday nights, it will be presented at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday nights, it will begin at 8 o'clock.

Sire Spectates

You can still come out for Varsity Lacrosse and Varsity Archery. Practices are held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 4 p.m. for Archery, and at 4 and 5 p.m. on the same days for Lacrosse. Both sports require more participation from the student body.

Last Tuesday night the Longwood Varsity Basketball team played against the Hampden-Sydney Intramural champions at the Farmville Armory. The game proceeds were given to the Heart Fund. Attendance was not up to par due to rainy weather, but those who were there saw a good game. The boys played according to girls' basketball rules and a few extra restrictions; they were not allowed to shoot from inside the key and they could not go up for rebounds. At the end of the regular period of play, the score was tied and the game was extended for 3 minutes of overtime. Oddly enough, at the end of the overtime period the score was again tied, so 3 more minutes were played. This time Hampden-Sydney came up with enough points to give them a 69-67 win over our Varsity team. All participants enjoyed the game which was taken just seriously enough to make it a good game. I'll refrain from making any further comments about the game - you can ask the girls themselves if they enjoyed it!

Well, let's hear it for Jinx - who else could throw a lacrosse ball over the fence and manage to hit the car of the House Association sponsor???

Remember, you can check out tennis rackets and balls and golf clubs in the Old Gym locker room from 9 to 5 p.m. during the week. This equipment can be checked out for the week end, too. Get in some extra practice for your classes!

Miss Bush, where is the steak house at the Plaza? Hope you've gotten your directions straight for next time.

Approximately 80 participants signed up for Badminton this year which is twice the number of last year. The program has been going well and everyone has been having a great time, thanks to Shorty Marconi, Kathy Parker, and the sponsor, Mrs. Harris.

See y'all at the Watershow!!

Exciting Season Opens Badminton Intramurals

By CAROL YOUNG

The opening of Badminton Intramurals on Tuesday night, March 12, was the first step in what appears to be a very exciting season. This year the participation is at an all time high with 76 people which is one-third more than last year. Also, this year, there will be a double elimination tournament which provides an opportunity for all participants to play more than once.

With the goal of five class points and one individual point for participating, the reason for its success is self-evident. In the words of Kathy Parker, "It seems the Red 'n Whites realize they need these points, while the Green 'n Whites want to make sure they don't get a thing."

Practices are held at 7:00-8:00 and 10:00-11:00, in the New Gym, providing a good break from studying. Under the guidance of managers "Shorty" Moriconi and Kathy Parker and faculty advisor Mrs. Phyllis Harris, the season should end as it began - most exciting and very successful.

LC Students Attend Mock UN; Represent Nigerian Delegation

By SUE SLATE

Longwood sent four representatives to the Middle South Model United Nations convention at Chapel Hill, N.C., last week. The convention was actually a mock U.N. sponsored by the Council for International Relations and UN Affairs, a nationwide organization. This was the tenth Middle South mock UN held by CIRUNA.

Around 46 colleges sent delegates and each college represented a country. Longwood's delegates Lavonia Dixon, Betty Mayton, Lynne Rachal and Diane Ritchie acted as the Nigerian delegation. They had to study the history of Nigeria and how it would vote on UN resolutions before they left. The colleges represented 74 UN members.

The delegates were divided into four committees: special political, political, economic and financial, and cultural. These committees discussed the resolutions presented to them. On Friday and Saturday the General Assembly met and the resolutions were discussed and voted on. Several resolutions which passed were: the economic development of underdeveloped nations, UN help for the Middle Eastern and South East Asian war refugees and a nonproliferation treaty now under consideration in the UN.

There were also numerous speakers including the Ambassador of Indonesia and the African Peace Corps Director.

The overall purpose of the mock UN is to explain the need and use of the United Nations in today's world.

John Haines Coffey, Wesley Lecturer, Speaks On Lent

Mr. John Haines Coffey, Director of Campus Ministry for the Virginia Conference of the Methodist Church, will be the speaker for the Wesley Foundation on Sunday evening, March 24, at 6:30 p.m. in the Methodist Student Center.

Mr. Coffey will present a lecture entitled "The Boo-Hoo Stages A Laugh-In." The lecture on the Lent season should prove interesting and valuable.

Mr. Coffey is a graduate of Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea, Ohio and received his Bachelor of Divinity at Duke University Divinity School. He has served as the Association Minister of the Washington Street Methodist Church, Alexandria, Virginia; the Associate Director, Wesley Foundation, University of Alabama; Director of the Wesley Foundation, Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Wilson Attends Conference

This year, Dean Wilson expects to be particularly active in this phase of the meeting. For the first time in eight years, she will be meeting with NPC sorority delegates interested in possible colonization on Longwood's campus. Longwood plans to invite two additional sororities to colonize in the spring of 1969, bringing the total of national sororities to eleven.

Colonization is the first step toward the formation of an active sorority on a college campus.

Longwood goes co-ed as two Hampden-Sydney students take a Literary Criticism class.

LC, H-SC Cooperate To Set Mutual Exchange Courses

By FAY SHIFFLET

A program of exchange of students has been started between Longwood and Hampden-Sydney whereby students who need to take courses not offered at their school can take the course at the other college.

Presently, there are some Longwood students taking a course in computer math at Hampden-Sydney and some Hampden-Sydney students are enrolled in advanced English courses and an education class here. Next year there are plans to expand the program into other areas.

Since the program has just begun plans are still being worked out. In an effort to make the exchange easier, the calendars of the two colleges are now being worked out to coincide in opening date, vacations, and closing date next year.

Dr. Willett has stressed that the program concerns only those classes which the students cannot take at their own school. The program will include mostly electives in the student's major field.

In addition to cooperation in classes the two colleges are also working together in other ways. Hampden-Sydney students often come to Longwood's placement office for interviews with representatives from various school systems. Hampden-Sydney students also make use of the Longwood library.

VOL. XLVII

Longwood College, Farmville, Va., March 27, 1968

No. 16

As Longwood expands, new buildings go up. The ten story dorms are scheduled for 1969 and 1970, and the Science Building will be completed June, 1968.

State Appropriates Funds For Varied Expansion Projects

Listed below are the capital outlay projects for biennia 1966-68 and 1968-70, as presented by Col. Carr.

Three new all-weather tennis courts were completed and accepted from the contractor in October, 1967. A new athletic field is presently under construction and will be completed by June 23, 1968.

Construction was initiated in May, 1967, for a one-story addition to the rear of the Stevens Science Building and an octagonal lecture hall on the side of the building. Construction should be completed in June, 1968, and the building equipped for use in September, 1968.

The architect is nearing completion of his preliminary drawings for a one million dollar Fine Arts Complex which will be located in the block south of the present Lankford Student Activities Building. This complex will consist of two buildings initially, a music department building and an art department building. It is anticipated that construction on these buildings will be initiated July 1, 1968, and completed in the summer of 1969.

A few years ago the lower level of the old laundry building was converted into a dance studio. Two new improvements, which will be initiated in June, 1968, will provide for an inside stairway to the upper level and renovation of the upper level into physical education department faculty offices. It is anticipated that this project will be completed by September, 1968.

The Post Office Building will be renovated in the summer of 1968. The basement level upon completion will provide space for our automatic data processing center, a service center with duplicating and mailing capability, and office space for the Director of the Physical Plant and part of his staff. The first floor will be renovated so that it can be used as a language department for the 1968-69 academic year and be converted in the summer of 1969 for the offices of the Business Manager and Treasurer.

The first and second floors of Student Building will be renovated beginning in June, 1969, to convert the organization meeting rooms into dormitory rooms for additional students. All student organizations have been provided with meeting rooms in the new Lankford Student Activities Building.

The architect is currently preparing the working drawings for a ten-story dormitory which will house approximately 400 students. This dormitory will be located on South Main Street. The land for the dormitory site has been acquired, and the dwellings are being razed to make way for an expected construction date of June, 1968. Occupancy date for this dormitory is September, 1969.

A twin dormitory to the 1969 Dormitory will be constructed for occupancy in September, 1970. These two dormitories will be connected by a beautiful one-story Commons Rooms.

The students who are presently housed on the second and third floors of Ruffner will be displaced to the 1969 Dormitory. In the summer of 1969 the first and second floors of Ruffner will be renovated to house the increased administrative offices. The third floor will be renovated for the foreign language department, classrooms and faculty office space.

Preliminary plans for construction of an east entrance to the dining hall have been approved by the Governor's Office; and when funds become available in the new fiscal year, the architect will start preparation of the working drawings in hopes that the construction may be initiated in the summer of 1969. At the present time there is an enclosed entrance and waiting room on the west side of the dining hall, and the new plans call for a like entrance and waiting room on the east side of the dining hall.

Funds were provided by the 1966 General Assembly for construction of a laboratory school. During the basic planning stages it was determined that the available funds were not sufficient to construct the facility that was required. The 1968 General Assembly has approved a request for an increase in the funds, and when they become available the architect will begin his planning. It is envisioned that planning and construction can be accomplished for a school opening in September, 1970. Present plans indicate that the school will provide facilities for kindergarten through grade 7.

An architect has been employed to prepare plans for the renovation of Longwood House. It is anticipated that the renovation would start in the summer of 1968, and be completed by Christmas. When the President's Home on High Street is vacated, the College will perform necessary repairs so that the Alumnae Association can move from its present house by Founder's Day, 1969. The state architect and engineers have cited a renovation cost in the vicinity of $150,000 for the present Alumnae House. In addition, they have cited that some areas of the house are a safety hazard. The Governor's Art Commission has stipulated that the Alumnae House must be removed as it detracts from the surrounding buildings.

Showboat Of Beauty Themes '68 Pageant For Miss Longwood

The 1968 Miss Longwood Pageant presents its "Showboat of Beauty" in Jarman Auditorium on April 20 at 8:00 p.m.

In keeping with the theme of the production, the setting will be a Mississippi Riverboat. Each of this year's fifteen contestants will board the riverboat wearing Sunday attire. Once aboard, they will also model swimsuits and evening attire. In addition, each will make a talent presentation.

On the basis of their performance in these categories, five finalists will be selected. These five will answer two written questions orally as they are submitted to the master of ceremonies by the panel of five judges. The judges will be announced at a later date.

Besides the honor of representing Longwood in the Miss Virginia Pageant in Roanoke, there are scholarship awards. The first place winner receives $200, the first runner up $100, and the second runner up $75. The Pepsi Cola Company contributes $150 toward this fund.

Contestants in the pageant are: Val Brockwell, Beverly Colgate, Susan Dupriest, Janet Gordon, Sandra Hitt, June Langston, Ellen Lyon, Chris McDonnell, Joann Melchor, Sybil Prouse, Doris Richards, Monke Schools, Maria Suter, and Marsha Trenary.

Master of Ceremonies will be Mr. Richard Barnes of Portsmouth. During costume changes and judging, the Villagers, a singing group of nine girls and eight boys will perform.

The Miss Longwood Pageant is directly affiliated with the Miss Virginia Pageant held in Roanoke each year and in turn, with the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, New Jersey. Last year's Miss Longwood, Rita Matthews, presently a sophomore, went on to Roanoke to be voted Miss Congeniality by the other contestants from throughout the state.

The college pageant is sponsored by the Miss Longwood Pageant Productions, a campus organization formed last year and sponsored by Mr. Noone, a member of the math department.

London Graphica Arts Exhibits Original Prints On LC Campus

A quality exhibition of original graphic art comprising etchings, lithographs, woodcuts and silkscreens of important and outstanding artists were on view and for sale in the Main Lobby of Lancaster Library, Longwood College, on Wednesday, March 27, 1968.

For over a year now, London Graphica Arts has been visiting universities and colleges throughout America and England, mounting exhibitions of original prints of a range and quality usually seen only in major galleries. The enthusiastic response has fully justified its aim of bringing fine graphic work to a nationwide audience. Students and faculty, especially, appreciate the opportunity to view a comprehensive selection of original works.

The exhibition includes every form of printmaking from hand-printed manuscript pages and music sheets, 18th and 19th century prints from Europe, and a comprehensive selection of 20th century artists. Selections include such artists as Renoir, Degas, Manet, Toulouse-Lautrec, Picasso, Chagall, Vasarely and Giacometti, not to mention the more esoteric but equally important masters of printmaking. Rouault's "Miserere," Picasso's "Villard Suite" and Chagall's "Daphnis and Chloe" are all represented.

Finally, there is an exciting selection of colorful work by young contemporaries to attract those adventurous enough to patronize artists whose prices have not yet become inflated by fame and demand. The prices range from $10 to several thousand for the rarer examples.

The current boom in prints has aroused enormous interest both in the art world and the press, and many artists today are turning to printmaking, both to reach a wider audience and to answer the challenge of a fresh medium in which many new techniques have recently been developed.

For the discriminating collector, who aspires to something better than a reproduction, there are sound aesthetic and commercial reasons for buying original prints. It is possible to acquire a good example of the graphic work of major artists such as Picasso or Chagall for a fraction of the price charged for their paintings. One should beware of buying art purely as an investment, as there is no guarantee that prices will rise. Nevertheless, important Picasso etchings that could be bought for under $100 ten years ago, are now selling for $1,000.

London Graphica Arts with galleries in Detroit, Michigan, New York and London, aims to show the best graphics available at any time as well as provide a succinct history of the development of the graphic arts.

LE DIVAN JAPONAIS

Mr. Longwood-A New Tradition

Dr. Robert Brumfield summed it up nicely when he praised the "first annual" Mr. Longwood Contest as a true display of congeniality and cooperation between students and faculty.

It was that and more. The faculty members who participated are to be commended for their sportsmanship, courage, and interest. Their willingness to put aside the "professor image" temporarily, and in general "ham it up," was enthusiastically received by the audience.

But the bulk of the credit belongs, of course, to the Sophomore Class. The show was excellently presented, revealing that a lot of hard work and planning went into it. In particular, they exhibited superb creativity in conceiving the original idea, and in carrying it out.

Student support, too, was tremendous. The audience was not only large, but also enthusiastic and appreciative.

In short, the "Mr. Longwood" idea was a terrific one. The students enjoyed it, and apparently so did the teachers. The first Mr. Longwood Contest went over big, and we'd like to see it locked back upon as the "first annual" contest. Anything that can exhibit such good will between faculty and student body deserves to be carried on as an honored tradition. — M. A. M.

Avoid Spring Fever

Do not let Spring fake you out! (Hopefully you have not contracted Spring Fever yet!) Spring is only temporary, then Summer overpowers it. You only need stamina to survive Spring Fever.

Statistics prove that 99.44/100% of all students flunk out of college due to Spring! Spring seems to affect the brain, causing boredom. If the student has an overdose of Spring, brain damage results. The student forgets that he has twelve tests yet to take, four term papers to turn in, three projects to present, classes to attend, and exams to live through. Oh, disastrous Spring!

What is the solution to this problem? Avoid the roof, do not go out in the sunshine, stay in your room with the shades drawn and the door shut, and take vitamin pills. Spring is contagious, so avoid all persons who seem to have it!

Spring is only temporary. If you can live until Summer, you have overcome the main obstacle in collegiate life. — M. K. M.

Letter To The Editor

Editor, The Rotunda:

With the arrival of sunny days more and more girls have settled on the roof in bathing suits to try to get a deep tan. Unfortunately, many of us do not consider the permanent danger that can be done to our skin by overexposure to the sun.

The sun rays striking the roof cause a chemical reaction with the roof surface and the blankets which may permanently damage the skin. The skin is often baked and the pigment which can never be replaced may be burned out. In addition to being painful, burned pigment is also extremely unattractive. Many girls have been to the infirmary in the last week with severe sunburn and rashes from being out on the roof too long. There have been instances on campus of girls who have to wear long-sleeved blouses to cover their skin to prevent sun poisoning after overexposure.

It seems that there could be a better place to sun bathe than the roof. In all the improvements being made on campus, an enclosed garage area for sunbathing could be constructed. Our nurses and doctors have said that this area would be much healthier since it would prevent the chemical reaction with the roof and there would be greater circulation of air which is now blocked off by the walls of the roof. There could even be plans for an outdoor swimming pool as the school grows larger, and more improvements are made. An outdoor pool would give a better area for sun bathing as well as provide for outdoor recreation. It is up to the students to demand a better place for lying in the sun than the roof. If we do not care about our health, it is rather silly to expect anyone else to.

It seems surprising that girls who are considered to be adults would show such poor judgment concerning their health as some Longwood girls do. Going up on the roof for three hours on the first day is not a very intelligent way to get tanned. The most sensible thing to do is to go out for a short time on the first day and to increase the time each day. Due to lack of judgment in sun bathing, many girls will never be able to get in the sun again.

Editor, The Rotunda:

I wish to thank Ida Simmons for her kind letter which appeared in the Rotunda two weeks ago. I want to acknowledge, however, that I do not deserve all the credit that she has given me for the cartoons. Most of the ideas for the ones I have drawn thus far have been those of friends who have been kind enough to help me out. Henceforth I will give these people the credit they deserve.

Again, many thanks to Ida. I am glad she has liked my cartoons. I hope that I can live up to the compliment she paid me.

Sincerely,
Susan Davenport

Will The Real Girl Who Had Tests All Week Please Stand Up?

Spring Draws Students Outdoors, Campus Beautification In Progress

By LIBBA BALL

Our first full week of spring is coming to a close. Looking back over the past winter months, we can see a remarkable difference in campus "life," not only in the students, but also in the look of Longwood's landscape.

This needs full explanation. The girls seem more "alive," in the same respect as the grass, trees, and shrubs begin to break through winter's mask with lively blossoms and fragrances. A walk from Cox to Stevens marks the advent of discovering several cardinals flitting from tree-top to window sill. As you walk toward North Cunningham, you may notice the mockingbird imitating friendly chirps to his "on-the-move-to-class" audiences.

Have you noticed the number of sunburned faces and arms? Along with spring's return, we've been blessed with unusually warm temperatures — just perfect for that pre-Easter tan. For those of us who are planning trips to the beach over spring vacation, this weather will give us a head-start on a summer tan. Presently, the roof tops have had more girls between the 11-12 p.m. class period than the professors. One teacher, on a particularly bright afternoon, remarked to his 1,000 class, "Sorry to have interrupted your sun bath; girls, but..."

Have you noticed the increasingly small number of girls coming to the dining hall for lunch? This, too is a direct result of spring's arrival. With the return of the sunshine and high hopes for that trip to the beach, last year's bathing suit seems a little too tight for comfort; and begins the "daily-diet-watchers' crew! These girls rush for the diet-colas, diet pills, Metrolac (wafers and milkshakes), and a number of other weight-losing aids. Then, besides skipping two to three meals a day (Hal), the really eager beaver buys a quick salad, and finishes off her meal with ten laps in the swimming pool or a run on the hockey field. Yes, this is the season for activity!

The jumpsuits are back; "P.F. Flyers" have zoomed their way back to popularity, and sleeveless dresses from last summer have been rehomed two to three inches to take on the '68 mini-look. One consolation about that weight you put on over the winter; at least you won't have to take your hems up! Now for the girl who can't squeeze into last summer's shorts... well... just throw on your old Mum-Mum or shift.

Bare feet have sped into hasty popularity as girls walk softly on the velvet grass. Last week we had our first cutting of the season. I had my window open when the mower passed, and the wind whirled in the smell of newly-trimmed greenery. It was so invigorating! I keep thinking of how "invigorating" it will seem to this summer when we'll have to do our own cutting!

Those mosquitoes haven't forgotten what season it is, either. Not only do they swarm around in the goodie outdoors, but a few lucky fellows managed to escape into the dorms at night and take toll on unwary sleepers. One such victim recently complained of fourteen mosquito bites, (surely the work of more than one hearty "skeeter") If you've readopted the

Students Attend Press Convention In New York City

Longwood was represented by three delegates at the 44th annual Columbia Scholastic Press Association Convention at Columbia University in New York City on March 14-16. Brenda Holly represented the "Gyre," and Jill Randolph and Sharon Brown were delegates from the "Virginian." The convention, which was the largest convention of editors in the world, was attended by over 5,000 students from throughout the eastern United States. Professional journalists and outstanding members of the publication field were the featured speakers at the general meetings and at the concluding CSFA luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria Grand Ballroom.

All phases of writing, editing and publishing of student publications were covered in the convention, which had as its overall theme, "Effective Writing — Key to Good Publications." More than 150 meetings, conferences, and discussions were offered during the three-day period for student editors of newspapers, yearbooks, and literary magazines. Authorities in the school newspaper and magazine field conducted clinics and answered questions concerning the strong and weak points of student journalism. Special forums and round-table discussions were held on the latest trends and best ways for improving student publications.

habit of wearing sandals, beware of those between-toes blisters that form after the first few wearings. Perhaps you could tape cotton to the thong for the first week or so to prevent irritation.

As we walk beside the forsythia hedge, now in full bloom, we can anticipate the beauty of the soon to blossom cherry tree and campus crabapple. (Not a teacher!) Over spring break, notice the camellias, azaleas, dogwood, and daffodils at home or in your community. Wouldn't a few of these help make our campus even more beautiful for spring visitors? Natural beauty plays an important role in America, and with the recent "White House Emphasis" on beautification.

Let's like to see Longwood's campus join in our national effort. Plans are already underway for planting greenery in front of Cox dorm. Let's spring into action, and make March 21st through June 21st the most prosperous time of our year!

Civil Service Exam Will Be Given Saturday, April 20

Longwood College seniors will have an opportunity to compete in the very popular Federal Service Entrance Examination when it is administered on campus Saturday, April 20. Complete details and application forms are now available at the Placement Office.

During the past twelve years, more than 30,000 young men and women have used the Federal Service Entrance Examination as a pathway to rewarding careers in Government. Over 6,500 recent college graduates were hired from the FSEE during the six-month period from January through June 1967 alone. Known as the FSEE, this examination is unquestionably the most popular employment program ever devised.

FSEE was designed with the college student in mind. The test covers only verbal abilities and quantitative reasoning, no specific subject matter knowledge is required to qualify. One test, taken one time in one place opens the door to approximately 60 different career fields in as many Federal agencies at locations all over the country.

Open to seniors and graduates in any major, the program is as appropriate for students in all curricula except engineering, the Physical sciences, accounting and a limited number of other technical fields. (Other avenues of employment are available for students majoring in specific professional areas.)

Longwood Sponsors Bowling Tournament For First Time

On March 23, 1968 the First Bowling Tournament held at Longwood College began. Anyone who was interested could participate, bowling at their own convenience for qualifying rounds. The tournament was divided into three periods of competition, beginning with qualifying rounds, then proceeding to class competition, and finally on to color competition.

The first period was held for three days, March 23-25. The scores from these qualifying rounds were turned into the office in the bowling alley, and the top five members from each class were chosen to bowl tonight, March 27, at 6:45 p.m. Everyone is invited to come and cheer their class representatives on to victory.

From these scores will be chosen the five top Green 'n Whites and the five top Red 'n Whites who will comprise the color teams. Finally, on Thursday night, March 28, these two teams will compete for points toward the Color Cup.

Both the managers, Marcia Tench and Carol Prillaman, and their advisor, Miss Huffman, are to be congratulated for organizing this event. Needless to say, many hope this will become an annual occurrence at Longwood.

Mrs. Bobbitt, sponsor of Delta Psi Kappa, President Willet, and Dean Wilson socialize with new members following the initiation.

Delta Psi Kappa Honorary Initiates PE Majors, March 23

By GINNY SIRC
"I believe in the ideals of Delta Psi Kappa," were the words spoken by the members of Longwood's Beta Lambda Chapter of the national honorary fraternity for women in physical education, Delta Psi Kappa. On Saturday, March 23, formal initiation was held in the Lankford Building. Pledging and initiation made up the morning activities and were followed by lunch at the Sag Room. Mrs. Ann Volo, past president of the Philadelphia Alumnae Chapter of Delta Psi Kappa, and Mrs. Davies Bahr, Eastern Province Chairman, were present to install the chapter and the officers. This was followed by a tea in the Student Lounge.

Qualifications for membership in Delta Psi Kappa include: an accumulative average of 2.4, a professional average of 3.0, a minimum of 2 semesters on campus, and 60 semester hours. Longwood had thirteen charter members initiated: Donna Tribby, Jean Hendricks, Carol Blythe, Pat Ingram, Ellen McClendon, Angie Smith, Pat Brown, Dianne Davis, Pat Halstead, Anna Pettis, Cathy Hiss, Maywood Martin, and Joan West. The above girls' names were listed on the original petition presented to Delta Psi Kappa. Initiated as members were Mary Tolley and Carol Anson, who were recently taken into Turnverein which was Longwood's local honorary physical education fraternity. Mrs. Agnes, Miss Andrews, Mrs. Bobbitt, Miss Bush, Miss Brockenbrough, Miss Iler, Dr. Heintz, Mrs. Harriss, Miss Huffman, Dr. O'Neil, and Mrs. Landrum were initiated as Associate members.

Serving as sponsor of Delta Psi Kappa is Mrs. Eleanor Bobbitt; officers are Anna Pettis - President, Maywood Martin - Vice-President and Historian, and Pat Halstead - Secretary and Treasurer. Longwood College is setting an example by being the first college in Virginia or any of the nine surrounding southern states to have a national honorary fraternity for women in Physical Education. The purpose of the fraternity is to recognize, encourage, and maintain the highest possible standards of scholarship and professional ethics for women in this field.

Sire Spectates

My apologies to the Red & Whites for not writing an article for the paper on their victory over the Green & Whites in Color Basketball. Both games were close and well-played ones but the Red & Whites came up with just enough extra points to win the first two games in the two out of three play-offs. Congratulations!

Well, it seems that Miss Andrews is up to her old tricks again - 'jumping' over the tennis net wasn't enough for her - this time she tried to climb over a barbed fence and caught her shorts on it. Heard you had to get a tetanus shot, too!

Congratulations to members of Delta Psi Kappa. What were those white socks for??? Carole Anson will be attending the National Delta Psi Kappa Convention this week in St. Louis, Mo.

The Water Show was really great last week - the costumes and skits added much to the fine swimming of the H2O members and the Corkettes. The girls really put a lot of time on the show, even more than usual because the costumes were hand made by the girls. The use of leotards added much color to the numbers and the choice of music was great.

Lots of activities will be coming up after spring break with Varsity games and matches in the spring sports and the class and color contests. Don't forget that the A. A. Song Contest will be coming up too, so let's all get to work and come up with some really spectacular Blue & White songs.

Also, the block courses will be coming up and archery and lacrosse will be taking the place of badminton, gymnastics, and volleyball. The tennis courts and golf course should begin to get a real workout, too.

See y'all in April!

Synchronized Swimming Describes Water Show

By JANET HARMON

Those of you who viewed the production of "It's A Child's World" presented by the H2O Club and Corkettes last week could not have been disappointed. The girls did a splendid job and amazed many spectators with their accomplished feats in the water. Saturday night the spectators' side was packed as students, faculty, administration, parents, and friends turned out to witness the event.

Before each number began, the lights were dimmed and a narrator introduced the number with a brief explanation and list of the names of the participants. As the lights came on the music began, the swimmers, all decked out in colorful costume, assumed position, and with amazing agility and endurance executed their number in perfect time with the music. Their vivacious smiles and synchronized strokes thrilled and awed the audience. It was quite evident that a lot of practicing and hard work had gone into the planning of this year's annual water show.

Elinor Umbdenstock and Stephanie DuRoss are to be commended for their hard work as co-chairmen of the show. Also, Miss Sally Bush, who sponsored the event.

Perhaps the girls' greatest satisfaction, however, was the receiving of a letter from CHI, congratulating them and commending them for a job "well done!"

Doctors who specialize in back troubles report most aching backs are due to weak, tense muscles which can go into painful spasm as you suddenly bend, stretch or twist. To relieve such backache doctors recommend the pain-relief compound in Anacin® Analgesic Tablets. And Anacin gives you more of this medication than any other leading tablet.

Anacin is a special fortified formula. It promptly relieves pain, helps reduce swollen tissues, and so releases pressure on sensitive back nerves. Then notice how stiff muscles loosen up and you move around with greater ease.

Only Anacin has this special fortified formula. It's not found in any other product. See if Anacin's exclusive formula doesn't work better for you.

The Warren County Madrigal Singers are a group of twenty high school students under the direction of Miss Madeline MacNeil, a graduate of Longwood. This program is sponsored by the Music Educator's National Conference (MENC).

The Sigmas would like to extend their sincere appreciation for the enthusiastic response on the part of the Longwood student body in participating in our drive to send CARE packages to Vietnam. We collected sixteen shoe boxes of "goodies" of all descriptions to make Easter a little nicer for American soldiers. We thank you on their part for your generosity.

Five-Day Week Approved By Faculty

The end of the current school year will bring an end to Saturday classes, as a new five-day week will become effective in September.

On Monday, April 8, the faculty approved the proposed schedule, which was presented by a faculty committee. Final approval came from the college President, Dr. Henry I. Willett, Jr.

Mr. Harold K. Magnusson, Registrar, headed the special committee appointed to study the possibility of eliminating Saturday classes. Other members included Dr. Charles Patterson, Department of Education; Mr. Billy Batts, Science; Mrs. Eleanor Bobbitt, Physical Education; Mr. Foster Gresham, English; Mr. Walter Hathaway, Art; and Mr. Robert Wu, Mathematics.

Mr. Magnusson collected several alternate schedules, which were distributed to the committee members before they met on Wednesday, March 27. The Registrar also traveled to Mary Washington College to discuss their schedule with the Assistant Dean there. The plans of the University of Virginia, George Mason College, and Lynchburg College were also studied.

The committee discussed first the pros and cons of adopting a five-day week, and then decided upon what they considered to be the best way of putting it into effect at Longwood.

Reasons for the change were given as follows:

1. The new plan may prove to be an aid in faculty recruitment. It is hoped that Longwood will now be in a better position to attract qualified teachers.

2. A realistic view noted that Saturday attendance is at best poor. It has been estimated that 30% absenteeism can be expected on Saturday mornings. By abolishing these classes, the administration hopes that total weekly cuts will decrease.

3. From the start, the faculty was overwhelmingly in favor of the change. They, too, enjoy having their Saturdays free, not only for travel, but also for attending professional meetings.

4. A five-day week is in keeping with a normal work schedule, in which most Longwood graduates will be working.

There was only one major objection to eliminating Saturday classes. Some feared a trend toward more class-cutting on Fridays. Mr. Magnusson, however, expressed confidence in the students. He believes them to be mature enough not to take advantage of the situation.

It was therefore decided that a new plan should be adopted. Several were studied, but the one approved by the faculty last Monday is believed to be the one most appropriate for the college. It is a modification of a schedule submitted by Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, of the Department of Natural Sciences. It was chosen to bring the least amount of disruption to the present schedule.

The basic ideas for the new schedule, as released by the committee, are as follows:

1. MWF classes will not be affected; they will remain as at present.

2. All classes scheduled for 8-8:50 TT will pick up the third 50-minute period at 1 p.m. on Tuesday.

3. All classes scheduled for 9-9:50 TT will pick up the third 50-minute period at 1 p.m. on Thursday.

4. All classes scheduled for 10-10:50 TT will pick up the third 50-minute period at 2 p.m. on Tuesday.

5. All classes scheduled for 11-11:50 TT will pick up the third 50-minute period at 2 p.m. on Thursday.

6. This will leave the hours of 3-3:50, 4-4:50, 5-5:50 TT open for two hour courses, art labs, and science labs.

7. Instructors may schedule 1-hour 15-minute classes on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons as at present if they so desire, although these classes should be in the 300, 400 range.

8. The evening hours from 7 p.m. on may also be utilized for classes if instructors so desire, but these classes should be confined to Tuesday and Thursday evenings to allow open times for Artist Series, plays, and other assemblies. It should be noted that the usual assembly hour of 1 p.m. on Tuesday will no longer be left open, and that assemblies will henceforth be held in the evenings.

9. The above procedure will tend to continue our present schedule in most cases, although some adjustments will be required in Tuesday and Thursday afternoon scheduling.

10. For those classes now scheduled for three 50-minute periods on MWF and for additional 50-minute periods on Tuesday and Thursday, but at different times from the MWF series, the schedule will be for five days at the same time. This will tend to eliminate scheduling difficulties.

11. For multi-section scheduling, classes will be distributed throughout the entire possible range on an equal basis so as to give flexibility in eliminating conflicts.

The preregistration held last week was a necessity dictated by the new schedule. It is expected to facilitate the different job of rescheduling.

Dr. Willett will hold a press conference on Tuesday, April 23, to answer any questions that the students may have concerning the change.

Fourteen Seek Miss Longwood Title; Five Distinguished Virginians Judge

by LINDA SHEPHERD

Fourteen of Longwood's most outstanding girls will gather in Jarman Saturday night at 8:00 to compete for the title of Miss Longwood 1968.

In addition to beauty, poise, and character, the girls must display a talent.

Val Brockwell, Pat Perry, Sybil Prouse, Doris Richards, and Monke Schoels will perform varied dance routines.

Singing a variety of songs will be June Langston, Ellen Lyon, and Janet Gordon who will accompany herself on the guitar.

Susan DuPriest, Chris McDonnell, and Maria Suter have planned monologues. Piano arrangements will be presented by Joanne Melchor and Marsha Trenary. Sandra Hitt will exhibit original paintings and drawings.

Judging the various phases of competition will be five distinguished and qualified Virginians.

Dr. William Whitehurst, Dean of Students at Old Dominion College and of late a political contender in Tidewater, will travel from Norfolk. From Roanoke, home of the Miss Virginia Pageant, comes Mrs. Fae Christiansen, a teacher, who has worked with the Miss Roanoke Valley as well as the Miss Virginia Pageants.

A professional photographer, John Kelley, who has been connected with the Miss Virginia Pageant for fourteen years is also a judge.

Also judging is Mrs. Florence Haga of Chase City, who has directed the South-Central Fair Beauty Pageant for 10 years and worked as a pageant hostess in the Miss Virginia Pageant.

And from Roanoke, comes George Chernauff, Vice-President of WLSL radio and television in the city. He is a former chairman of the judges' committee of the Miss Virginia Pageant. He has judged several other pageants in Virginia and North Carolina. For five years, he was a judge in the Miss North Carolina Pageant and in 1966, judged the Miss Georgia Pageant.

Relating each phase of the competition will be Mr. Richard Barnes who has directed several musicals in the Tidewater area including "Bells are Ringing" for the Norfolk Little Theatre, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" for the Cavalier Dinner Theatre, and "Gypsy" for the Portsmouth Little Theatre. He is a Tidewater native and is currently choral director at Churchland High School in Portsmouth.

Barnes will be assisted in the entertainment by the Village Singers, a group well known throughout the state.

Choice 68 Invites Students To Vote In National Poll

Today's college student differs greatly from the student of the fifties. The student of those bygone days was running from the war, depression, and a whole array of personal and world problems.

However, the student of the 1960's appears to be a new breed; he has begun to answer the challenges facing him. His voice and opinions have been heard and have become a force in society; they have produced a noticeable effect on the American people.

On April 24, the voices of thousands of students will be heard again as the results of the nation's first National Collegiate Presidential Primary are tabulated. These results will influence the nation's thinking and the national candidates.

Choice '68, as the program is called, was inspired by students, is financed by "Time" magazine, and will be conducted by students on 1500 college campuses across the country. In this area, Longwood and Hampden-Sydney will be participating.

Campus coordinators, Mary Masse and Marcia Mitchell, Y-D and Y-R chairmen respectively, are making final arrangements for the primary at Longwood. They urge each student to study the ballot, to carefully consider her choice, and to vote in this primary on April 24. All information and results will have national coverage by "Time" and will be available to all media, both local and national.

Father Burghardt To Return To LC In Jarman Series

What is woman? The question was the topic on which Father Walter J. Burghardt spoke last year at Longwood. Tuesday, April 23, he is returning in popular request to give another speech continuing along similar lines. He will speak in Jarman Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. after returning from San Francisco. A native New Yorker, Father Burghardt was ordained at Woodstock College in 1941 where he received M.A. and Ph.D. degrees.

Presently he is a professor of patrology and patristic theology at Woodstock College. He has been managing editor of "Theological Studies"

Five-Day Week Implies Harsher Cut Policy

The students and faculty alike are elated by the announcement of the five-day class system. This system implies a longer weekend and greater responsibility.

The plan involves the same number of hours as the six-day week, but the hours will be crammed into a shorter span of time. The schedule will be tight, compact, and full. There must be as much work encompassed in five days that originally was stretched out over a six-day period. This places a heavier burden on students and faculty.

Likewise, the studying hours will, of necessity, be more time consuming and the cut policy will be harsher. The students will be required to exert self-discipline. The faculty is justified in expecting all students to attend all classes unless cutting is an absolute necessity. Cutting Friday classes to leave on Thursday will be frowned on by the administration. It is hoped that the students are mature enough not to take undue advantage of the situation.

It is difficult to revise an old system to accommodate new procedures, but it would take only one word to abandon the five-day week and go back to having Saturday classes. If students do not cooperate with the administration to make the five-day week successful, the plan will be crushed and the six-day week re-inaugurated.

— M. K. M.

Willett Favors Change To Five-Day Schedule

There are several factors that were considered in arriving at the decision to move to a five-day week. One of the lesser known factors is the influence that the five-day week has in the recruitment of faculty. In almost every instance of recent faculty recruitment, prospective faculty members have raised the question as to whether or not the College operated on a five-day or six-day basis.

Among the other factors considered in adopting the five-day schedule is the idea that it is more in keeping with the general pattern of American life as it now exists. Eighty-five per cent of our graduates go on into teaching and we feel that the five-day week more nearly corresponds to the time frame within which they will work after graduation.

The only reservation that I personally had in moving to the five-day week was the question of developing a sound academic schedule within this period. I believe that the committee, headed by Mr. Magnusson, has developed such a schedule. Considering this and the strong faculty and student sentiment for the five-day week schedule, I feel that it is in Longwood's best interest that this change be made.

Dear Editor:

We think that Mr. Gilbert Wood of Lankford Building should be thanked for his cooperation with the student body.

Wednesday night was a fine example of his cooperation. Mr. Wood went to the trouble of splitting wires so that two of the TV sets could be placed in positions that would enable more students to watch the Academy Awards. He was also on hand to adjust the TV sets for the best pictures.

Thank you, Mr. Wood for your help and cooperation.

Sincerely,

Anguished LC Collegian Cries:

"Big Ben, We Need Your Help!"

By LIBBA BALL

Does anybody have the time?

This question, familiar to every collegian, has probably been asked more at Longwood this week than on any other college campus! Talk about time "flying"—our time is really for the birds!

Since our return from spring break, we've found dorm clocks, classroom clocks, and dining room clocks to read different times. We can depend only on the school bell as a time guide. Unfortunately, by the time you've waited for the eighth ding, you're late for class. Or, to cite another example, you may miss the first ding and after having heard only seven, you may kick yourself for waking so early, and as a consequence, miss your class. On the other hand, a student reported waking one morning at what she thought was 7:30 but found it to be only 5:30 a.m.

But more troubles arise as a result of not knowing the exact time. Professors, too, use the hall and classroom clocks as a time guide. They may go by the Grainger time and be five minutes late for a lecture in Hiner; and if the Hiner professor's lecture is held overtime, the Grainger professor is disturbed by student tardiness.

Meetings may be scheduled for certain times and we may be five to twenty minutes late, and unaware of our lateness. For three days, one dorm clock has read 9:00. (Whether or not it is 9:00 a.m. or 9:00 p.m. seems a matter of little concern.) The Stevens clock (usually five minutes fast, anyway), has been twenty minutes fast, and the Cunningham clocks vary every hour. In less than three minutes, I witnessed a certain clock change from 7 o'clock to 11 o'clock, and it was just 3:00 p.m.—I think.

Signing out may have its perils as long as incorrect time continues. A girl, leaving on a date at 7:30 (E.S.T.) may accidentally use her hall clock time—say 7:15. She may forget and set her wrist watch by the same time, and consequently be campused for fifteen minute lateness. Even when our clocks were nearer correct time, the dorm clocks were two minutes faster than the bell. This has been the cause of several previous two-minute latenesses.

Big Ben—we need you! What can be done to synchronize our campus clocks? Definitely we've been faced with endless problems and are expressing our concern, but who is responsible for keeping the clocks on time? One thing is certain, however—there are 24 hours in a day, 7 days in a week, 52 weeks in a year, and 366 days in 1968—but what time is it now?

Home Ec Majors Model Wardrobes, "The Senior Year"

By JANET WALSH

The Home Economics Spring Fashion Show was held April 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Gold Room of the Lankford Building. Fifty girls from the Home Economics department informally modeled the clothes they had made. The girls made an entrance from the balcony to appear before the audience gathered in the Gold Room. "The Senior Year" was the theme of the fashion show which emphasized the wardrobe needs of the senior years. Clothes that were modeled included apparel needed in every senior girl's agenda for interviews, teas, and those special occasions. Bright colors described the sport clothes and casual attire needed for current spring weekends. Four senior girls narrated the program. They were Lillian Virotek, Susan Farris, Martha Lee, and Betty Steward Haley. Following the fashion show, refreshments were served in the A room and a clothing exhibit was on display in the B room.

Present at the fashion show were several judges to select the six best garments. According to Sheila Newsome and Mary Brauer, co-chairmen of the fashion show, the six best garments will be modeled on television in Roanoke. Mrs. Thornton of Roanoke invited the girls to appear on television but as yet no date has been scheduled.

State FBLA Names Joyce Temple As Recipient Of Title

Joyce Temple, a Longwood College sophomore from Disputanta, has been named "Miss Future Business Teacher" of Virginia. She succeeds Rose Mary Street, a 1967 Longwood graduate who won the national title of "Miss Future Business Teacher of America" last year.

Selected in recent state-wide competition held in Richmond, Miss Temple will represent the state at the national convention of Phi Beta Lambda, national organization for college business majors, to be held in Washington, D.C., June 8-10.

The honor came to Miss Temple on the basis of her score on the national business entrance test and interviews with a panel of judges.

Active in the Y.W.C.A. and Phi Beta Lambda, she is business manager of the "Virginian," the college's annual.

Linda Hudson, a sophomore business major from Virgilina, has been elected treasurer of the state chapter of Phi Beta Lambda.

The group's Longwood chapter was named one of four honor chapters for the current year. Since the fraternity inaugurated its state awards program in 1957, a Longwood business education major on many occasions has been selected for the state title of "Miss Future Business Executive" or "Miss Future Business Teacher." Longwood's business education majors have won state first-place honors 10 times and first-place national honors three times.

Mrs. Frances N. Hamlett, instructor in business education, is sponsor of the Longwood chapter.

IAWS Conference

On Thursday, March 28, Ann Ailor and Sally Heilman attended the Region III Intercollegiate Association of Women Students (I.A.W.S.) Ann is the Vice Chairman of the Legislative Board and Sally is the Vice Chairman of the Judicial Board. Both girls are junior elementary education majors with Ann hailing from Hampton and Sally from Charlottesville.

The I.A.W.S. Conference was held at Dallas, Texas at the Hilton Inn and Southern Methodist University. The conference was held there because this year the National I.A.W.S. President from Region III which includes most of the southern states, Tennessee, Missouri, Kentucky, and Arkansas. There are only two colleges other than Longwood that are in the I.A.W.S. from Virginia—Hampton and Westhampton. The theme of this year's conference was "Age of the Individual."

On Thursday night at SMU the Attorney General of Texas, Waggoner Carr, spoke on "The Critical Age." His main point was that to be an individual in this critical age, one needs to be alert, aware, and take action.

On Friday morning Alpha Lambda Delta had a breakfast for all the girls in the sorority, and the different chapters had an opportunity to exchange ideas. That afternoon Fortuna Calvo, woman journalist from Argentina who had been a war correspondent for the Dominican Republic conflict, spoke on "Vision of the Time—Challenge to Action." Also that day, there were business meetings, and the officers were elected for the next two years. Some resolutions were also made, to be sent to Congress, schools, or the state legislature to which they pertain. One resolution was not to have restrictions on foreign travel for students. Another was not drafting graduate students. They also decided on a reevaluation of campus regulations, such as sign-out and curfews. Friday night the various dorms at SMU gave coffee hours for the states.

On Saturday Neiman-Marcus, the big Dallas department store, presented a fashion show with lunch at their store. About thirty outfits were modeled. That afternoon a psychology professor, an attorney, and a professor of education spoke on the educated woman's role in society today in a speech entitled "SUPER-COLLEGE: TALENT-LACKING-GOSH-IS-IT-ATROCIOUS."

Tennis, Lacrosse Seasons Begin Today; Both Matches Away

Marcia Franklin will be playing number one singles position; Lynn Coleman, number two; and Laura Baldwin, number three. Anna Pettis and Jean Hendricks will play in the first doubles position while Jane Tibbs and Lynda Driver will play number two doubles. Mrs. Harris confidently commented, "The girls have worked hard and I feel that they are ready for the tennis season."

Faculty Victorious Over LC Team In Basketball

Finding little difficulty in adapting their techniques to the restricting rules of girls' basketball, Longwood's male professors defeated the L.C. varsity basketball team by a score of 42-31. The student-faculty competition drew a large crowd to the Old Gym on March 26 and through spectator contributions about sixty dollars was raised for the Heart Fund.

In a successful attempt to demonstrate their faculty and male superiority, Mr. Randall Webb and Mr. Joseph Scolnick copied 19 and 10 points, respectively. Dr. Henry I. Willett, Jr., proved to be very popular with the spectators and he popped in 6 points. Also adding to the faculty scoring and skill were Mr. James Gussert, Mr. Robert Wu, Mr. Robert Stauffer, and Mr. George Bristol.

Though unsuccessful in outscoring their superiors, the varsity team came within 11 points of their opponents.

AA Field Day Events To Be Held, Apr. 18; Participation Urged

This year's Field Day will be held Thursday, April 18, from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. The field events planned for the day will include a powder puff football game, a three legged race, a potato sack race, a peanut race, a relay race, a spoon and egg race, and a tug of war. For each event the winner will receive points for her class color. The class which has the highest total of points when the competition is completed will win a prize. The prize will be presented Thursday night at the song contest. It is hoped that the color competitions will help to increase spirit for the song contest.

Anyone who would like to represent her class in the field events should sign up on the A.A. bulletin board.

Thursday while these field events are being held there will be booths open for the sale of hot dogs, cokes, and cotton candy.

Besides sponsoring the field events, the Athletic Association will be selling Bermuda tickets which will enable the buyer to wear bermudas to classes. These tickets will be selling for twenty-five cents before and after lunch and supper Monday through Wednesday nights.

Freda Lunsford with 7 points, Lynne Coleman with 6 and Brenda White with 4 boosted the scoring effort of the student squad. Marcia Tench added 3 points from the foul line. Other student players included Laurel Baldwin, Jane McCaffrey, Becky Bondurant, Linda Atkinson, Mary Tolley, Sherry Williams, Betty Layne, Janet Harpold, Betty King, Fran Anthony, and Carolyn Thompson.

The faculty had 1 team foul called against them for an illegal substitution as Dr. O'Neill and Dr. Heintz of the Physical Education Department officiated the game.

Badminton Finals Won By Jrs., Gain 5 Points

As Intramural and Class Badminton came to a close, the Junior Class participants discovered there would be 5 Class points added to the Juniors' total one way or the other. One way was if Mary Tolley and Becky Bondurant won the final match, and the other way was if Cathy Hass and Ginny Sirc could beat Mary and Becky. The realization that the Juniors had 5 points either way took a little of the pressure off the players, but both sets of partners wanted good competition and good games and that's exactly what they got.

The match consisted of two out of three 15 point games. Cathy and Ginny took the first game in a close hard-fought battle, and Mary and Becky came back to win the second game with expertly placed shots. After the 5 minute rest, the final game began, and the pressure was on all players. The third game seemed endless as the score bounced back and forth but ended with Cathy and Ginny getting the game and match point.

Kathy Parker and Sherry Marconi did a fine job of handling the whole tournament, along with the sponsor, Mrs. Harris. Many thanks to "Miss Ingram" who directed the final match.

Sire Spectates

Congratulations to the Varsity Golf team on their 13-2 win over Lynchburg College last Saturday. The match, played on the Longwood golf course, was the first one of the season. Tomorrow the team will travel to Staunton to play against Mary Baldwin and Madison. Bring back another victory!

Intramural softball practices have just started and there is still time to get in the required number of practices, so come out and support your class. Check the A.A. board or see Vannie Gunter or Betty Layne for practice times.

Bicycles may now be checked out in the Lankford building. They are no longer under lock and key, but the student who checks the bike out will be held responsible should the bicycle be damaged in any way.

A quick run down of class points toward the Class Cup shows that the Juniors lead with 25 points for winning Bowling, Badminton, and Volleyball. The Sophomores are next with 15 points for winning Basketball and tieing for first place with the Freshmen in Hockey. The Freshmen are in third place with a total of 10 points for tennis doubles and tieing with the Sophomores in Hockey. The Seniors are last with no points. (The 10 points awarded for class hockey was split with the Fr. and Soph. each getting 5 points). Class tennis singles, archery, golf, and softball will be the deciding factors for the awarding of the Class Cup, so the competition should be at its best!

Color Cup points have the Green & Whites in the lead with 30 points for taking Color Bowling, Volleyball, and Hockey. The Red & Whites have 10 points for Color Basketball. Again, the Color Cup could go either way, as golf, archery, and softball each carry 10 points. The Red & Whites must win two of the three sports to come up with a tie. Let's come out and really support our Colors as the race for Color Cup comes down to the wire!

Number Drawing For Rooms To Be April 25 For All Classes

All classes will draw numbers for rooms at the same time on Thursday, April 25, 1968, at 8:45 p.m.

Each student will draw according to her class status in September 1968. Each number will be registered against the name of the student as drawn. There will be no trading of numbers at any time.

Only those who have paid the $10 room deposit may draw.

If a current student is unable to be present for the drawing, she may authorize by written note another student to draw for her. No new student (not currently on the campus) may have a number, but such a new or returning student whose $10 has been paid may be put down as a roommate or a substitute when the blanks for this purpose are being filled out for the actual assignment to rooms.

Actual assignment to rooms will take place as follows: Rising Seniors - Monday, April 29, 7:00-9:00 p.m., Lankford Building, ABC Rooms; Rising Juniors - Wednesday, May 1, 7:00-10:00 p.m., Lankford Building, ABC Rooms; Rising Sophomores - Monday, May 6, 7:00-10:00 p.m., Lankford Building, ABC Rooms.

For those who will be student teaching, all four blocks for the year must be filled in.

Rising Seniors: Remember that most of you will have to triple both November-January and April-June. Get this all worked out before April 29 and down in black and white on the blanks you bring that night.

Rising Sophomores: Since you may have to do some tripling, I shall be glad to have any groups of five of you who wish to be together sign up for five-girl suites. Juniors may do this, too, if they wish.

If your suite is composed of girls from different classes, the highest in rank carries the lower classmen in on her number.

As soon as rising seniors are placed, I will post on the current sophomores bulletin board floor plans indicating what places are available for rising juniors.

As soon as rising juniors are placed, I will post on the current freshman bulletin board floor plans indicating what places are available for rising sophomores.

Rooms will be assigned by the lowest number in the suits regardless of how many are in the suite. Rooms will be assigned in numerical order from low on up; therefore, the person signing for the suite must be there when the suite's number is called.

Sophomore Road Show Travels To Presbyterian Home

On Thursday, April 11, the sophomore class presented their Road Show to the Presbyterian Home in Lynchburg. The show which consisted of the red and white circus skit was enthusiastically received by the children in the home. After the show two clowns from the class served refreshments to the children and other Longwood girls led the children in a song contest.

Pat Quinn, chairman of the show, said the circus skit was selected because of the availability of costumes. In the garden in the skit, there were girls as corn, carrots, potatoes, lettuce, turnips, tomatoes, watermelons, snaps, beets, and radishes. There were also crows, a scarecrow, a piano, a worm, a rooster, and clowns. In the period that followed the show several of the children tried on the costumes and the girls in the skit allowed them to keep them.

Pat said that she thought the cast received as much enjoyment from the performance as the children did. Indicating the skit was aided by assistant chairman, Debbie Denver.

The Sophomore Road Show is an annual event put on by the sophomore class. The girls in the class decide what the skit is and where they present it. This is the first time that a show has been presented at the Presbyterian Home.

Registration for Student Teachers of the First Block, September through November, 1968 will be held on May 2, (Thursday) at 4 P.M. First Floor, Hiner Building.

This registration is limited to First Block Student Teachers. No others need to appear.

Student Teachers For Fall, Summer To Visit Centers

Danville - April 24
Henrico - May 9
Local - April 25
Lynchburg - April 29
Richmond - May 8

The purpose of these visits are to acquaint the girls with new principals and their supervising teachers and to familiarize them with the individual school policies.

One hundred and sixty-five girls have been assigned to teach first block. There are nineteen at Colonial Heights, eighteen at Danville, forty-one in Henrico, eight locally, twenty at Lynchburg, twenty-one in Richmond, and thirty-eight in Roanoke.

This summer, fourteen girls will complete their student teaching assignments, ten in Roanoke and four in Mecklenburg County.

Dr. Lane is in charge of revising the organization's booklet which has the same name.

Four Students Attend Conflict 68 Seminar At VPI; Journalists, Professors, Senator Lead Discussions

By EVE OXMAN

On March 3-4 four students from Longwood College attended the CONFLICT '68 seminars presented at Virginia Polytechnic Institute by the YMCA. These students were Wanda Spicer, Leslie Nuttall, Trish Spillan, and Eve Oxman.

CONFLICT was created with the idea that though students at Virginia Tech and guests are receiving a good education, a purely academic view of life does not give the student substantial insight into the social problems that exist in the world.

Lectures were given at 4:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. respectively on Wednesday by William A. Rusher, publisher of the National Review, chief advocate of conservative views in America and a noted debator; and Dr. Carl Oglesby, professor of humanities at Antioch College, a former president of the Students for Democratic Society, and classified as a "leftist." The topic of the discussions was "Evolution or Revolution in Our National Life" as seen by today's student.

After Mr. Rusher and Dr. Oglesby presented their speeches, they appeared on the same platform to answer questions from the audience. When asked who they believed would be the most likely candidate to win the election for presidency, Mr. Rusher said that the main contest for the GOP would be between Reagan and Richard Nixon. Reagan had "more fresh appeal" than Nixon and the future "will find Governor Reagan more active" in seeking the nomination.

Thursday Harry Golden, author and newspaper editor of the "Carolina Israelite", and Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina examined the theme focusing on the role of the South in the nation's destiny. Harry Golden said that the New South is booming because "The money is rolling in." This is the reason for the end of segregation in cities like Atlanta, Charleston, Richmond. He attributed the civil rights drive to television which allowed the Negroes to see what the whites were doing. Harry Golden also supported President Johnson's policies in Vietnam and the student protest movements, for "It's in the American tradition - dissent."

Senator Strom Thurmond, a hard core conservative and famous for his record 24 hour and 18 minute filibuster in 1954, demonstrated his strong adherence to constitutional principles as well as a strong support of military preparedness. He expressed disapproval of Johnson's present domestic policies, and whereas Golden felt Senator Robert Kennedy would win the '68 Democratic nomination, Thurmond felt Nixon had the best chances to win the GOP nomination.

Pat Perry Selected Miss Longwood, Ellen Lyon Named Miss Congeniality

By LINDA SHEPHERD

A near capacity crowd watched in Jorman Saturday night as a Mississippi Showboat supplied the backdrop for the long awaited moment when thirteen equally qualified girls "stepped to the rear and let a winner," named Pat Perry, "lead the way" as Miss Longwood 1968.

Pat's crowning marked the climax of a full year's preparation by the Patient Committee, which had intensified last week to the point of rehearsals until midnight several nights.

Pat is a 19-year-old freshman Elementary Major from Danville. She was recently pledged to Phi Mu sorority, is active in modern dance groups on campus, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Perry.

Diane "Monkey" Schools, a junior Physical Education major from Richmond, who sang and toe-danced to the song "I Can't Say No," was first runner-up.

Second runner-up was Janet Gordon, a sophomore nursing major also from Richmond, who accompanied herself on the guitar as she sang an original composition, "Behind Your Eyes."

Each of the fourteen contestants appeared in several stages of competition. Pat first appeared in blue Sunday attire with blue and white accessories.

Next she appeared in the swimsuit competition wearing a white sheath bathing suit.

Mr. Richard Barnes, master of ceremonies, announced the talents and hobbies of each girl at this point. Pat is interested in piano and dance, which she carried into the next phase of the contest as she presented an interpretive modern dance to the music of "The Lonely Bull."

As in previous appearances, she wore her rich long brown hair down. Over the standard black leotard and tights, she wore a flowing deep pink chiffon drape.

Finally, she met the audience and judges wearing a white chiffon gown with empire lines and a beaded bodice.

The five judges were formally introduced by Dr. Willett. The four previously announced were: John Kelley, head judge, Dr. William Whitehurst, Mrs. Florence Hays, and Mrs. Fae Christiansen. Also judging was Thomas McCallie, assistant Administrator of the Community Hospital of Roanoke Valley.

These judges had personal interviews with the girls throughout the day before the actual contest and during the competition, scored each girl.

As the judges were making their choice of five finalists, Mr. Barnes announced that Ellen Lyon, a freshman Elementary major from Vinton, had been voted Miss Congeniality by the other contestants.

Following this announcement, the five finalists were presented. They were: June Langston, a freshman Mu-

Freshman Class Elects Ellen Lyon As Head Colleague

Ellen Lyon has been elected by the Freshman class to serve as Head Colleague next year.

When asked how she felt about receiving this honor, she responded, "I just can't describe it. It's the most wonderful thing that's ever happened to me, but I think with the support of such a great class, the colleagues can do a lot for Longwood."

An elementary education major from Vinton, Ellen represented Ruffner Dorm in the Best Dressed College Girl Contest. Sponsored by the Freshman class, she was a contestant in the Miss Longwood Pageant.

Ellen plans to teach the fifth grade. This summer she will be working with underprivileged children as a summer missionary because, as she puts it, "I love children."

Nationwide Collegiate Primary Invites Students To Participate

Today, Wednesday, April 24 Longwood College is participating in a nationwide collegiate presidential primary. Each student is urged to carefully consider her choice and to vote. At 7:30 tonight the Longwood Forum presents a panel discussion on the issues of today with Forum members Dr. Helms, Dr. Snellner, Mr. Scolnick, and Mr. Hevener in the ABC room of Lanford Building. Then at 11:00 voting will be conducted in every dorm. All students enrolled in this college are eligible to vote. Your participation is necessary in this effort to determine the voting preferences of an entire group of the U.S. population. The UNIVAC Division of Sperry-Rand Corporation will process the ballots and the results will be published in the "Rotunda" and in "Time Magazine" the first week in May.

Unpredictable events have characterized this political year. The course of action in Vietnam has taken a new turn. These changes were unforeseen by the CHOICE '68 Board of Directors. Romney's withdrawal came early enough to remove his name from the ballot, but these more recent events were too late. The line on the ballot marked "OTHER" will accommodate these changes, but write-ins may only be used for the first choice.

Also there seems to be some inconsistency concerning the alternatives on the Vietnam referendum, "Temporary suspension of bombing" will be interpreted as a temporary suspension of all bombing. "Maintain current level of bombing" will be interpreted as maintaining the present level of limited bombing.

We can not turn away from the issues of today. This poll will give the college students a chance to voice their opinion. What are the feelings of the potential candidates concerning the referendums on the CHOICE '68 ballot?

WHAT COURSE OF MILITARY AC-

TION SHOULD THE U.S. PURSUE IN VIETNAM?

Kennedy, Democrat: "We pursued a strictly military policy in Vietnam. Hundreds of thousands of lives have been lost in vain. I can only hope that we and our adversaries can now find it within ourselves to make the mutual concessions that can bring an end to this terrible war."

McCarthy, Democrat: "I believe that the only solution is to reverse the process of military and political escalation. We must immediately halt all bombing in North Vietnam. We must halt the escalation of the ground war and begin a gradual disengagement in South Vietnam."

Nixon, Republican: "North Vietnam is the aggressor and the South the invaded territory therefore the U.S. is obligated to maintain a sufficient level of military activity to convince the enemy that he cannot win and for him to continue pursuing a military victory is not worth the cost. If support for the aggression in the South diminishes, then the bombing can diminish."

Reagan, Republican: "We should close Haiphong's harbor thus cutting off 85% of the supplies that make the war possible. We should pose a threat of invasion of North Vietnam to the point where they will have to pin down some of their forces on a defensive basis."

IN CONFRONTING THE "URBAN CRISIS" WHICH SHOULD RECEIVE HIGHEST PRIORITY IN GOVERNMENT SPENDING?

Kennedy: "In my judgment, jobs and job training are the key to solving the urban crisis. In America you are what you do, and every man deserves a chance to hold down a job and support his family with dignity and satisfaction."

McCarthy: "We must move on to establish a whole new set of civil rights. Basic among these must be the right to a decent job, a job which becomes the dignity of man, which returns him satisfaction as an intelligent and creative person, and which allows him at the same time to support his family decently and respectfully."

Nixon: "Earnings from a job would provide the urban poor with the dignity that no income subsidy will ever provide. It would also provide both social mobility and the opportunity for the poor to either improve their own housing, or move to new housing. The strongest chains holding the urban poor to the ghetto today are neither legal nor racial but economic."

Reagan: "I hate to start out by using the word 'morality.' I'd rather use the word 'morality.' This involves not only the misdeeds in high office, but crime in the streets. We've turned to a kind of permissive attitude - a softness on the part of our society, an unwillingness to fix blame and individual responsibility. We must make it perfectly plain that there will be no toleration of law-breaking of any kind, that we will meet, with whatever force or power necessary, those who do take the law into their own hands."

CHOICE '68 enables the largely disfranchised college student to make an impact with his views on the issues and the candidates. President Johnson has expressed his support of this project. "I hope the public service time is performing will really be one - because if there is one thing disappointing to me about young people, it is that they don't use all the opportunities available to them to make their government a better government." As young people we are concerned with the future and it is proper that we are for we will spend more time there than the older voting popu-

Looking To November, What's Your Choice '68?

Choice 68. What does it mean to you? Today is our chance to express our opinions on current issues and candidates in the first National Collegiate Presidential Primary. Specifically, this is how we may define Choice 68.

But on a broader scale, we may look ahead to November. There our choice will directly affect the future of our nation. A large percentage of us will be voting in this 1968 presidential election. It's an exciting thought, but it's also a challenge and a responsibility.

We can't go blindly into the voting booth this fall. We must choose the man that we honestly believe can best do the job. This means we must know all the facts. Becoming thoroughly acquainted with the candidates and their platforms, and with the major issues, is a must. And it's not as difficult as it may seem.

The job of the mass media is to inform the public. Newsmen follow all the candidates, and all we have to do is sit back and read a newspaper or watch a TV broadcast to hear what each of them has to say. There is no excuse for ignorance of the issues.

As college students voting for the first time, we should feel this responsibility to be informed keenly. We should realize the importance of each vote, and of the final outcome.

Your vote does matter, and it shouldn't be taken lightly. Make it a point to find out all you can about the candidates. Read and listen to facts and opinions and then make up your own mind. It is your responsibility as a citizen to make what you believe to be the best possible choice. This is your Choice 68. — M. A. M.

Amy Vanderbilt Referees, Pass The Peas, Hike!

By LIBBA BALL

"Pass the peas, . pass the potatoes, . pass the corn, . hike!"

Sounds like the calls in a football game, but in actuality, the scene is typical of the every-day manners in our dining hall. Have you taken the time to notice your own behavior or the behavior of those at your table during a meal? It can prove quite shocking when you think of college girls plowing in the bread basket for the freshest slice or grabbing that piece of chicken before the blessing.

Truly these are some of the more radical examples, but have you ever been guilty of taking that last tomato before the others have been served? B.L.T.'s are supposed to have "tomatoes" too, but if there aren't any more, somebody's left with a bacon and lettuce sandwich — m-m-in tasty! Think of the girl who sits at your table when hers is closed. Do you treat her coldly? Have you "shoved" a dish at someone regardless of her full hands, and impatiently dropped the dish in her plate? Did you take time to introduce her to the others at the table, or were you so concerned in making sure you sent back for the third helping of French fries that you didn't notice her?

Did you take half the tartar sauce before anyone else had any, or are you the type who pours out most of the cream with your coffee? Remember the bread pudding? I bet you did since you used all the sauce; and the piece of strawberry cake with the most strawberries — you're eating it! So that's why you decided this was your night to serve dessert! Amy Vanderbilt, if only you were here, . . .

Anyone who openly complains to these offenders is considered a true rat funk — so meet "R.F. #1" while I attempt to make us see ourselves as others see us. Would you eat like this at home? Certainly not! By the time we're eight or nine years old our parents have trained us to eat civily — you know, pass all the food quietly in one direction, take your share and only a second serving if everyone else has had a first, and never to eat during the blessing. Why can't we practice these same rules at school? Are we representative of our homes and families while at school? You don't want others to think your family eats this way, do you? When you go out to eat, suppose you find yourself behaving as you do here. Wouldn't you be embarrassed?

It is an unwritten "law" that those at a table take turns pouring the tea, stacking, and serving the dessert, but all too often, the same girls do the same chores. This really is unfair. Try to be a little more considerate of these girls and do your part in helping make the meal as pleasant as possible.

Let's make an effort to tolerate these things called "good manners." Don't sneak food before the blessing, don't pass the food like a football, don't take your share and everyone else's, and greet your guests cordially, and you will find meal time to be a pleasure.

"Please pass the peas, . thank you."

Dr. Henry Willett, President of Longwood, Mr. E. Angus Powell, rector of the Board of Visitors, and Mr. L. Marshall Hall, commencement chairman of the faculty committee will meet with all Seniors in Jarman Auditorium, Tuesday, April 30 at 5:00 p.m. to discuss the commencement exercises.

All questions and details concerning commencement will be finalized at this time. Also, Mr. Powell has several important matters to discuss with the graduating class.

It is important that all Seniors attend this meeting.

Education Teachers Travel To Boston To IRA Convention

Miss Beatrice Bland and Miss Kate Trent, of the Education Department, will attend the thirteenth annual International Reading Association Convention in Boston, Massachusetts, April 24-27.

The theme of the convention, "Reading in the Total School Curriculum," will be interwoven in various symposia, seminars, and general sessions. Some of the topics to be discussed are the role of preschool instruction, reading for the gifted, and the role of linguistics.

The major speakers for the convention are national authorities in aspects of reading. These speakers include Nila Banton Smith, author of several textbooks, Donald D. Durrell, famed for his outstanding testing of reading ability, and Nancy Larrick, an international authority on children's literature.

The purposes of the convention are to give educators the opportunity to hear national authorities, to discuss the newest trends in reading, and to examine new reading materials.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor,

Recently the administration decided it would be a nice idea to participate in the nationwide presidential primary CHOICE '68. Apparently the Student Government agreed and was asked to handle the arrangements.

Attempts by the political organizations to carry out campaigns for their party's candidates has been almostal. I hope that a large voter turn out tonight will prove that the apathy apparently existing in our campus leaders is not a correct indication of the feelings of this campus. We are the ones with the most at stake for we will live the longest and be the most affected by this government. Let's get out and show that we really do care.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Cummins

YWCA Plans Mixer Saturday, April 27; Ten Schools Invited

For the second time this year Longwood will be invaded en masse by the surrounding boys' colleges. The YWCA has planned a Mixer for April 27 from 8:00 until midnight with music by the Townsmen.

Jane Edwards, who is in charge of the Mixer, says that ten boys' colleges have been invited: Hampden-Sydney, Randolph-Macon, Richmond, Virginia, WMI, RPI, and W and L. Also three North Carolina colleges have been invited: Duke, NC State, and UNC. The colleges are expected to respond this week with the number of boys they intend to bring.

The charge for the Mixer will be 50¢ and school attire will be worn. This time the Mixer will be held in the Senior Dining Hall and free cokes will be provided.

As before, a girl may bring her own date if she chooses. Last semester over 200 Virginia gentlemen came from two colleges.

Teams Break Rope, Tie For Field Day; Sophs' Song Wins

"A great success" and "barrels of fun" are the two phrases which best describe the A. A. Field Day held last Thursday on the Mall. Competition between the Reds and the Greens was again at its best; the Green and Whites took first place in the three-legged race, the Crab relay, and the powderpuff football game, while the Red and Whites captured first places in the Potato sack race, the Peanut race, and the Lifesaver relay. Determined that the competition should not end in a tie, the A. A. provided a rope for a Tug of War. Needless to say, the rope broke under the tension of all the Reds and Greens.

Cokes and hot dogs were sold by the A. A. and the Colleagues sold cotton candy. Dillard Vaughan, co-ordinator of the activities, and Suzanne Turner, mistress of ceremonies, should be congratulated for a job well done — just ask anyone who participated!

The climax of the Field Day was the song contest, held that night in Jarman. Congratulations to the Sophomores on their winning song, and to the Seniors who were the runners-up. With the additional gain of 5 points for their song, the Sophomores now have 20 points toward Class Cup.

The Patrick Henry High School Choir from Roanoke, Virginia will present a concert in the ABC Room of Lankford Building at 5:00, Tuesday, April 30, 1968.

The choir is presently on tour of Virginia high schools and Longwood. Their program consists of folk songs, classics, and pop tunes.

LC Netters Score First Win Defeat Old Dominion By 5-0

By YVONNE LESTER

Winning its first match of the season, the Varsity Tennis Team went all the way out Saturday to defeat Old Dominion College, 5-0.

Marsha Franklin, playing number one singles position, enthusiastically outwitted her opponent, Sheryl Chubb, and won 6-4, 6-4. Seeing more action than the other players, Anna Pettis, no. 2 singles, remained determined to win and came out victorious over Rob-Whitten with the score of 6-3, 9-7. Lynn Coleman found no difficulty in winning the no. 3 singles game as she victoriously conquered Becky Jennings, 6-0, 6-0.

Longwood's two doubles teams also came out on the bright side. Suzanne Turner and Debbie Haller placed ahead of D. Ellen and E. Yamada by winning the match 6-0, 7-5. Jane McCaffrey and Betty Lane defeated Old Dominion's number 2 doubles team with ease and confidence. The score of their match was 6-3, 6-3.

All the students and faculty who attended the match were elated to see Longwood triumph over Old Dominion since Longwood was defeated last Wednesday by Mary Washington. Anna Pettis and Jean Hendricks playing number one doubles were the only winning Longwood players.

Sire Spectates

I've noticed that since the bicycles have been moved to the Lankford Building, they've been getting a real work out. Thanks to the A.A. for seeing the need to have them made more available to the student body.

Congratulations to the Tennis and Golf teams on their victories last week. The tennis team has a match scheduled this Friday with Madison College. The Varsity Archery team will be shooting against Madison at the same time as the tennis match. This will be the first Archery match of the season. Also, on Saturday the Tennis team will host Bridgewater College in an afternoon match. Bridgewater will be bringing its Lacrosse team, too, so there should be plenty of action in the area of Barlow courts and field on Friday and Saturday. Come out and support our varsity teams. I'm sure that Mrs. Harriss and Miss B need people to serve as scorers and linesmen. If you'd like to help out, be sure to contact either one of them. It's a great way to get a 'front row seat'.

Perhaps if you went to the Faculty

Follies you saw three charming Ladies from the Physical Education staff — or maybe you didn't recognize them! Let's hear it for 'Scarlet' Andrews, 'Dolly' Harriss, and 'Bonnie' Huffman!

Watch out on those tennis courts — Susan Davis is turning pro, sock it to 'em, Sallie!!

Softball practices are coming along fine, but there are a couple of classes that need more players in order to have a team. Check with Vannie Ginter and Betty Layne for practice and game schedules. Remember, it could make a difference in the Class Cup competition!

Congratulations to the Sophomores and Seniors for taking first and second place, respectively, in the song contest. Be sure to check the A.A. showcase in the Lankford Building to see the Blue and White Bunny decorated in Red and Green.

Did I hear someone say they hoped it would rain — it couldn't be any of the Varsity Tennis players; they only had 4 matches scheduled for this week!

Golf Team Wins Two Matches; Prepares For Tournament UNC

The Longwood golf team's first victory of the season ended with a 13 to 2 score over Lynchburg College as the teams played at Longwood Estate. Becky Bondurant, Margaret Harrison, Linda Walsh, Brenda White, Dian Turner, and Monika Ferguson played for L.C. Becky defeated her opponent, Millie Packard, by a score of 84 to Millie's 91, and Margaret Harrison led her opponent, Robin McGinn at the end of 16 holes (due to lack of time they were unable to play 18 holes.) Margaret had a 70 to Robin's 90. Brenda White won with a 56 for 9 holes to her opponent's 77. Dian Turner had a 58 to her opponent's 59, and Monika had a 71 to her opponent's 84. Dr. O'Neill and Miss Bowman played Miss Murphy and Miss Brown (Lynchburg's coaches).

Last Thursday, L.C. played a tri-match with Mary Baldwin and Madison Colleges at Mary Baldwin. Again L.C. came home with a victory by defeating both of the other teams. The team is now preparing for the tournament at U.N.C. on April 27. Best of luck — show those Tarheels who's tops in Virginia!

A Medical Answer For MUSCULAR Low Back Pain

Promptly Relieves Pain
So Stiff Muscles Loosen Up and
You're Back Into Action

DOCTORS who specialize in back troubles report most aching backs are due to weak, tense muscles which can go into painful spasm as you suddenly bend, stretch or twist. To relieve such backache doctors recommend the pain-relief compound in Anacin® Analgesic Tablets. And Anacin gives you more of this medication than any other leading tablet.

Anacin is a special fortified formula. It promptly relieves pain, helps reduce swollen tissues, and so releases pressure on sensitive back nerves. Then notice how stiff muscles loosen up and you move around with greater ease.

Only Anacin has this special fortified formula. It's not found in any other product. See if Anacin's exclusive formula doesn't work better for you.

Geist Conference Planned For April 24; Everyone Invited

The Geist Leadership Conference will be held on Wednesday, April 24. The first part of the conference will take place at 5:00. At this time Dr. Willett will talk on the values of participating in extracurricular activities. Everyone is invited to this conference, and it is especially hoped that anyone who finds no value in clubs and other activities will come to this. A question and answer period will follow Dr. Willett's speech. At 7:00, until 8:00, there will be eleven small discussion groups according to the types of clubs. These will be led by a member of Geist and will be grouped according to: language, publications, honoraries, Greek organizations, fine arts, classes, athletics, departmental, religious, political, and student government organizations. There will be a secretary in each group who will take notes and have them mimeographed so that each person attending will have a copy for future reference. The purpose of these small discussion groups is to have the organizations discuss their common problems and try to find solutions to them. Everyone is invited to this conference, and each organization is asked to send two representatives.

Dr. John P. Wynne Honored At Banquet; Dr. Willett To Speak

On Friday evening, April 26, at 7:00 p.m., Kappa Delta Pi, a national honor society in education, and the Student Education Association will jointly sponsor a banquet in honor of Dr. John P. Wynne, a former member of the Education Department of Longwood. Members of both of these organizations and faculty members from the Education Department will be attending the banquet. Dr. Willett will deliver the main address.

Philaklia, the art society at Longwood, is holding their annual Student Exhibit and Sale in the Exhibition Room in the library. The exhibit will last until Sunday, April 28. Categories included in the exhibit are paintings (oil, acrylic, and watercolor), drawings, prints, crafts, and sculpture. Up until Thursday night students will be asked to vote for one work of art which they consider to be the best in the show. This will be announced Thursday night and a $5 cash award will go to the winner. Other cash awards and ribbons will be given in each category. All students are invited to attend the exhibit.

Panhellenic Officers To Be Installed At Banquet

The annual Panhellenic Banquet will be held Wednesday, May 1, at 7:00 p.m. in the senior dining hall. This banquet is open to any interested sorority girl.

Carolyn Key, Chairman of Greek Week says of the banquet, "Participation at this year's banquet promises to be as successful last year's."

Westhampton Defeats LC In First Lacrosse Game

The Longwood Lacrosse teams traveled to Richmond last Wednesday to participate in the first inter-collegiate lacrosse game on the L.C. Varsity level. The first stop was at St. Catherine's where the L.C. II team played a 15 minute game which ended with a 0-0 score. Although the game was a short one, the players began to work as a team and really got the feel of the competition and skill involved.

Hurriedly the team boarded the bus for a short ride to Westhampton College. L.C. made a good showing in their first real game, but Westhampton emerged as the victors. Westhampton scored the first two goals, and then Longwood bounced back to take a three to two lead. Westhampton scored another one as the lead changed hands again. Near the end of the 25 minute first half, center, Jane Erdman, crashed through three defensive players to score L.C.'s fifth goal. On the play Jane was accidentally injured and was unable to play the remainder of the game. Longwood pulled through with lots of teamwork which enabled Barbara Snellings and Marcia Tench to do most of L.C.'s scoring. Linda Southworth was sent in to take Jane's place as center in the second half. The interception of passes proved to be the downfall of Longwood in the rest of the game. The ball often got bottled up and the defense could not get it past mid-field, so L.C. was limited to only one goal while Westhampton took full advantage and came out the winners by a 16 to 6 score.

Throughout the Pageant, the audience was thoroughly delighted by the performance of the Village Singers, a group of young people from Churchland High School in Portsmouth, directed by Mr. Barnes.

Between competition, they sang medleys from Broadway plays, the award winning song "Born Free," and "Thoroughly Modern Millie."

May Day '68 A Success

In spite of the difficulties of moving the May Day Activities to Jarman because of a rain threat, May Day was a success. Marilyn Bates and her various committees should be commended for their various parts in coordinating May Day and producing such a fine May Day program.

The thirty-minute May Day program is a light way of terminating school activities for the year. It draws together faculty members, students, and parents. This year May Day was attended by a large group of parents, students, and faculty. Jarman Auditorium was almost filled to capacity. The day was brought to a culmination with a dance on Saturday night.

May Day has something to offer everyone. It is a wonderful way of completing the school year. There are many Longwood traditions that the school could do without, but let us hope that May Day will continue to be an annual event here, an important Longwood tradition.

Does She Or Doesn't She?

Are some of your friends blonde by preference? Have you noticed a 'Brownette' turn into a blonde in three easy applications? Or have you ever seen the campus hairdresser who streaks and tips others' hair with an old shower or bathing cap? How about that permanent that was given in Post Office bathroom that was so stifling that no one else could bear to enter. . . . Maybe Curl Free does the job better than U.N.C.U.R.L., but neither application aids those with weak lungs. Disregarding the side effects caused by those treatments, it is important to realize that damage is done to the hair whenever an alcohol or bleaching compound is applied.

Just as a great number of girls bask in the sun for hours to get that "all-healthy tan," even at the expense of harmful blisters and painful burns, so, too, girls mistreat their hair. Whether "blondes have more fun" is a question debated recently on a television special, to which all brunettes promptly answered, "Have more fun than what?" How can we be sure that we attract more attention as a blonde? Simple scientific application proves that light colors (white) reflect more light while dark colors absorb more light. Unless we want to be classed as "absorbing brunettes," we get out our Light and Bright and start to work on transforming our coloring.

After several "in-lightening" weeks, browns become platinum or honey blondes at the expense of their hair texture. Often over-bleaching causes the strands to dry out and become brittle from lack of natural oils. This causes splitting and unnecessary broken ends. Look carefully at the next "bottle blonde" and notice the results of a social faux pas. Why can't we be content with our hair as it is naturally? Do we feel compelled to change its color?

Then, too, the girl who streaks her hair runs into nearly as much trouble as the peroxide blonde because the streaking must be repeated every four or five weeks if the highlighting is to be effective. Not only is this a time-consuming process requiring at least two people, but also it runs into quite an expense. Consider your pocketbook before going blonde because it's a certainty that a minimum of $5.00 a month will be spent on hair color upkeep.

For the girl who is tired of her streaked hair, there is a "reversed frosting" procedure designed to give color to the previously bleached portions. This process is expensive, but for the girls who yearn to return to their original color and spare the expense of constant frosting treatments, reverse frosting is the answer. If she decides to become a blonde again, her chances for natural looking hair "survival" are lessened. If your mother's lines can't stand several bleaching treatments, how can you expect your hair to stay in peak condition?

There is a paradox with girls' hair styles. Those who have straight hair want curls, and those with naturally curly curls want straight hair. Why? I guess the problem is as psychological as that of brunettes wanting to be blondes and blondes wishing they had raven-black hair. But these whims are satisfied with permanents and hair relaxers. Both products are effective not only in doing the job they advertise, but in ruining hair textures. Hair straighteners are particularly harmful. If you don't follow the instructions exactly, you may end up with six months' growth of unmanageable hair. Sometimes hair that has been relaxed is brittle and breaks off to the scalp. Professional beauticians should straighten hair; the home straighteners are often ineffective and more damaging. (Besides, if your hair is still curly, you can always go back to your hairdresser and have it re-straightened free of charge.)

But, the fact remains — we just are not happy with what we already have and with what we are. A person who finds peace and contentment doing the simple tasks (like homework. . . .) may have her natural hair coloring, straight or curly; or she may find these colorings and straighteners helpful for her. Nevertheless, changing your hair style and color won't change the real you. Let's put our stock in more intrinsic, not materialistic values. This summer, disregard the "does she or doesn't she," and think in terms of self-satisfaction — "Is she, or isn't she a genuine person?"

Survey Shows Low Drug Usage, Relatively Few Illegal Drugs

ITHACA, N.Y. — (I.P.) — In a determined effort to clearly identify students' attitudes and experiences toward the use of illegal drugs, Ithaca College recently completed a survey of its student body. The four-page written survey was conducted under the auspices of the Illegal Drugs Control Committee, a student-faculty-administration body started last spring to prevent drug usage among students by educating them about the dangers involved.

Results of the survey were "gratifying . . . revealing a much lower drug usage than estimated" according to two faculty members who conducted the survey, Dr. J. David Hammond, administrative officer of the college's Health Center, and Martin Rand, assistant professor of psychology and author of the survey.

It is estimated that only eight per cent of Ithaca College students are currently involved in the regular use of any type of illegal drugs. The two men labeled the survey unique. "We believe it to be the most extensive of its kind — possibly the first — yet conducted on an American college campus," said Dr. Hammond.

Slightly more than 2,000 of the college's 3,300 students completed the survey. Also identified in the survey was the sex, class standing and academic curriculum of the respondents.

Marijuana emerged as the principal drug used by students. Survey statistics indicate that approximately 22 per cent of the student body have tried marijuana, either during high school or after becoming a college student. Only 15 per cent have used marijuana on more than two occasions.

Dissatisfaction with marijuana after use was shown in another way by the survey. Of the 22 per cent of users, only one quarter of them said they have tried the drug in the past three months.

"This limited usage — one or two times — indicates that such students wished to satisfy their curiosity," explained Dr. Hammond. "They apparently found their contact with it unsatisfying and may well have no further association with marijuana."

Survey figures indicated that relatively few illegal drugs other than marijuana are used on this campus. Only three per cent of the 2,000 students said they had ever used psychedelic drugs.

Several popular conceptions about what students think of drug usage were shaken by the survey. For one, the survey indicated that a vote among students on this campus to legalize the use of marijuana would be defeated. Fifteen per cent of the user group feel marijuana should not be legalized. A full 66 per cent of the nonuser group echo these sentiments. Second, the college campus atmosphere is not solely responsible for students using drugs. Many college users began taking illegal drugs before their freshman year.

Third, rebellion is not the sole criterion for students using illegal drugs. Followers, or those who do what the leader in their peer group does, begin using drugs simply to "belong." Sometimes being "with" their group means drinking; other times it means using drugs.

Finally, the popular conception that "wide spread usage" of drugs exists among college students may well be erroneous. "Very few colleges have taken the steps necessary to attain relatively accurate statistics," points out Rand. He explained that students who use drugs naturally tend to associate with other users. These users can honestly say that "nearly all the students I know use drugs," and therefore expand this to the belief that the majority of all college students do so.

Rand also pointed out that drug-using students tend to believe that "most other students use drugs too" as a way of rationalizing their own nonconformity.

These two factors — both of which add up to incomplete data — must be kept in mind when trying to determine how serious a drug problem a campus may have, he said.

The Third Spring Concert presented by the Longwood College Concert Choir, directed by Dr. Molnar, will be on Monday, May 20, at 8:00 p.m., in Jarman Auditorium.

All students are invited to attend. Musical selections will be varied.

Lambda Iota Tau Sponsors Mr. Short Author Of 'Peanuts'

Robert Short, the well-known author of "The Gospel According to Peanuts," will speak at Longwood on Tuesday, May 14, at 1:00 in Jarman Auditorium. Mr. Short, who has lectured all over the country, is being jointly sponsored by Lambda Iota Tau, the English and Foreign Language Honorary, and the Jarman Series. Mr. Short's visit is largely due to the efforts of Dr. Herbert Blackwell, who has had to give up the sponsorship of Lambda Iota Tau since his appointment as Dean of the college.

The new sponsor of the society is Miss Gail V. Okawa. The entire student body is invited to hear Mr. Short speak about his Biblical and moral interpretations of the comic strip "Peanuts."

GWYN MUSE

Gwyn Muse Chosen Publication Chairman For The Coming Year

Gwyn A. Muse, a Junior English major, has been selected as the Publication Board Chairman for 1968-69. The Publication Board Chairman coordinates all the publications and presides at sessions to solve difficulties that the publications may encounter.

The Publication Board Chairman must have an average of 2.5 and have served on a publication for at least a year.

Gwyn has served on the Rotunda for three years, and was previously the Managing Editor of the Rotunda. She is also a member of Pi Delta Epsilon journalism fraternity and Lambda Iota Tau honorary literary fraternity.

The Production was written and will be presented by the freshman class. It is hoped that the student body will support the freshman class by attending their Production tonight.

Students, Mrs. Cover Attend Student Day; Discuss Social Work

Eleven girls and Mrs. Cover represented Longwood on Student Day of the Annual Meeting of the Virginia Council on Social Welfare at the Golden Triangle in Norfolk on May 2. Brenda Akers, Nancy Britton, Donna Brodie, Sarah Gibbons, Vannie Gunter, Rosalind Hammond, Kathleen Kain, George Anne King, Margaret Lantz, Sheila Murry, and Pamela Wayne were the girls who went.

The morning General Session consisted of the film, "The Social Worker" and a panel discussion on the Public Social Service, Voluntary Agencies, and Preparation for Social Work. Following the general assembly, the group was broken down into ten smaller groups for discussion.

After lunch Mrs. W. Richard Lawrence and Mr. Otis L. Brown spoke on "The Virginia Merit System" and "Considering a Career in Human Services" respectively. There were also discussion groups following the main speakers as in the morning session.

Mr. Land demonstrates the ability that helped the faculty members defeat the Longwood softball team last Thursday.

Strindberg's "Ghost Sonata"

Ends Play Production Season

By JANET WALSH

A rewarding and enjoyable season for the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs came to a successful close with the production of "Ghost Sonata," by August Strindberg.

Jim Rhodes' forceful acting ability dominated the stage for his first entrance to his final exit. The statuesque actors in the background, and the excellent props and lighting were effective in achieving Strindberg's desired mood of mystery and the supernatural. Into this compelling atmosphere Jim Rhodes as Mr. Hummel intrigues and fascinates the audience, luring them towards a revelation of the progressing suspense.

Warren Fulton and Frank Faust must be commended upon their good performances in the dinner scene. Suspense and eerie tension was sustained by the methodical and stiff actions of the dinner guests. Pat Holmes makes a startling impression in the dinner scene.

The scene between Arkenholtz and the Young Lady, portrayed by Neil Aird and Marilyn Greene, respectively, was the culmination of the anguish and mystery which occurred throughout the play. Neil Aird was very eloquent in the closing scene and the impact of "The Ghost Sonata" lingered long after the curtains were drawn.

It was generally agreed that "The Ghost Sonata" was a thought-provoking play which could be interpreted on many levels. Dr. Lockwood should be recognized for his effective directorship of such an enigmatic contemporary play. It was a confusing play, to follow for those who had not read "The Ghost Sonata." However, the production was well-presented and left the audience with a stirred-up imagination.

Archers Succumb To Westhampton; Meet R-MC Here

The Varsity Archery Team traveled to Westhampton College last Wednesday for a meet with the Westhampton archers. The L.C. team had some trouble adjusting to the range and targets as was evident at the end of the match. Jane Erdman, captain of the Longwood team, was high for L.C. with a score of 451. Jane placed second in the match, and Carol Reese of Westhampton came in first with a 463. The opposing team also took third place with a score of 444 shot by Pat Smith. Other scores for Longwood were: Ginny Sirc - 411, Donna Tribby - 319, Frances Sale - 298, and Arlene Cundiff - 257.

The overall match score was Westhampton 2,099 and Longwood 1,736. Longwood lost its first match to Madison College by a mere 15 points. The team has one more home match scheduled for the 15th with Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

Swimmers Compete At ECU; Netters Attend MWC Tourney

Four members of the Longwood H20 Club participated in a six-way synchronized swimming meet at East Carolina University in Greenville, North Carolina, on Saturday, May 4. The other schools participating were Converse, Agnes Scott, Winthrop, Old Dominion, and East Carolina.

Elinor Umbdenstock placed second in the stunt competition. She and Stephanie DuRoss placed third with their duet, "Trois" taken from the water show. The team number, "Candy" from the water show, also placed third. Swimming in this number were Barbara Carr, Stephanie DuRoss, Anne Crigler, and Elinor Umbdenstock. Anne Crigler placed fifth with her solo, "The Sound of Music." Longwood placed fourth over all - First Place: Converse; Second: East Carolina; Third: Agnes Scott; Fourth: Longwood; Fifth: Winthrop; Sixth: Old Dominion.

Some of the twenty-one schools attending the tournament were Florida State University, Bridgewater, Radford, Madison, Mary Washington, Mary Baldwin, Westhampton, Richmond Professional Institute, and Mississippi State College for Women. The girls representing Longwood were Laurel Baldwin, Lynne Coleman, Marcia Franklin, and Anna Pettis. Mississippi State won first, second, and third places in the singles competition.

Lynne and Laurel, both Freshmen, were eliminated in the first round, while Marcia, a sophomore, continued until the second round. Anna, who is a junior, met defeat in the third round by the defending champion from Mississippi State, Andrea Martin. The Longwood doubles team, Marcia and Anna, were defeated by Hollins College.

Frieda, a Home Economics major, is from Portsmouth. She is presently a committee chairman for the Wesley Foundation, a member of Kappa Omicron Phi and SEA, and Vice President of the Home Economics Club. Frieda was co-chairman of the costume committee for the Green and White skit in the Geist Festival.

Jessie came to Longwood this year from Stratford College in Danville. She is a Physical Education major from Alexandria and was on the varsity hockey team.

Linda is an Elementary Education major from Newport News. She is a BSU committee chairman and works on the "Rotunda" staff. Linda was on the Geist Festival committee in her Freshman year and this year on the class song committee.

Concerning her term of office, Patty commented, "I am looking forward to working closely with the class and am already making preparations for the coming year by attending meetings of the present senior class. With the same cooperation from the class as we have had in the past, I think we will have a successful and memorable senior year."

Staff Retires After 153 Years Service

By LIBBA BALL

Five members of Longwood's staff are retiring this year. Dr. George W. Jeffers, Mrs. Mildred Davis, Miss Mary Pomeroy Nichols, Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, and Mrs. Virginia Lindsey were honored Monday night at the "Old Timers' Club" banquet, an organization of local Farmville old timers who have served as members of Longwood's faculty or staff for 20 years or more. The club has no officers or constitution, and only meets to have a banquet in honor of those who are retiring from Longwood's services.

Dr. George W. Jeffers, one-time head of the biology department, heads those retiring. During his 42 year stay on Longwood's campus, Dr. Jeffers has won outstanding recognition on the state, as well as the national level. During 1940-41, he headed the National Association of Biology Teachers. Later he was president of the Virginia Acadmy of Science. From 1943-45, Dr. Jeffers was selected as director of a special study of the Chesapeake Bay Fisheries Commission, financed by the Rockefeller Foundation.

A native of Newfoundland, Dr. Jeffers was once a professional fisherman, following his father's occupation. At 22, he entered as a freshman at Boston University where he later did his graduate work. He received his doctorate in 1931 from the University of Toronto.

What made Dr. Jeffers go to school? "I was off the coast of Newfoundland fishing," he began, "and I was hungry. It was then that I decided to earn enough money so I wouldn't have to be hungry again! I couldn't depend on fishing for three meals a day - so I decided to go to college."

Dr. Jeffers took his post on Longwood's campus in 1926. "At the time I needed a job," he admitted, "I didn't choose Longwood, she chose me!" Dr. Jeffers has had two interests - "women and fish." While here, he had kept a log book entitled "Biology At Longwood" which dates back to the founding of our college in 1884. In this book, Dr. Jeffers has included the student government president, the heads of the biology department and the staff and also the lab assistants. He also has a record of all the biology majors and minors.

Asked why he was retiring, Dr. Jeffers answered mildly, "Well, I was born in 1897, and you can't work past 70." After retirement, he plans to "find somebody with a boat and go back to fishing!"

Mrs. Mildred Davis, the former Miss Mildred Dickinson from Hampden-Sydney, began her stay at Longwood as a boarding student her last two years of high school. She graduated here in 1922 and received her masters degree at U. Va. In English. She has completed summer studies at U. N. C., Cornell University, and Bread Loaf School of English in Middlebury, Vermont.

She taught English and history in Puerto Rico for two years and completed 12 years' teaching in Virginia public high schools. During her 24 year career at Longwood, she has been acting head of the English department twice, in 1950 and 1953. The following year, Mrs. Davis was president of the Virginia Association of Teachers of English. She has headed Kappa Delta Pi, Boerc Eh Thorn, and Lambda Iota Tau.

She has been to South America and has traveled extensively in Europe twice. After retirement she plans to see more of her two grandsons and take a Mediterranean cruise and see the Greek Isles. "I've talked and thought about Greece for so long in the 'Odyssey' now I'll get to go there."

Asked why she retired, Mrs. Davis thoughtfully replied - "I promised myself that when I began to feel that I wasn't as effective a teacher and that I could not change my way of teaching, it was time to quit. If I have any criticism of Longwood girls today," she added, "it's that you don't seem to have enough intellectual curiosity - you just don't disagree with the professors as you once did. However, the greatest difficulty a college professor has to meet is that we are dealing with young people at a time in their lives when we have to compete with biology. Perhaps under the circumstances we do very well!"

Miss Mary Pomeroy Nichols from Petersburg is also a Longwood graduate. A member of the class of 1923, she boasts that during the time she was here, she attended State Normal School,

State Teachers' College and, finally, Longwood. Although she has taught 45 years, she holds a 39 year Longwood service record during which time she has been in three different departments: Modern Languages, History and Social Science and English.

Miss Nichols gave instruction in Spanish while enrolled as an undergraduate and also attended the Middlebury School of Spanish as a language student. In 1928 she received her master's at U. Va. She has done graduate work at Columbia, University of Colorado, Ohio State, Duke University and Oxford University.

Miss Nichols has traveled extensively around the world and in the United States.

C. G. Gordon Moss (named Charles George Gordon by his father after an English general killed in Egypt in the 1880's) is a native of Lynchburg who did undergraduate work at Washington and Lee and received his doctorate at Yale. Dr. Moss has been in teaching since 1921 and from 1947-1960 he headed Longwood's department of History and Social Sciences. He was dean of the college from 1960-1964, and has served twice as the faculty advisor for Judicial Board.

After teaching at Episcopal High School and a stay of 12 years at Mary Washington College, he returned to Longwood's campus. After retiring, Dr. Moss plans to continue "my work with the Prince Edward Community Action Program and the Prince Edward Council on Human Relations - people are my hobby," he explained.

Mrs. Virginia Lindsey, laundry manager since November, 1941, is retiring after 27 years' service. Mrs. Lindsey graduated in 1925 as a chemistry major and a minor in home economics. She "attended" Longwood most of her life. "From the time I was three years old, I took kindergarten courses in West Wing. My elementary and my high school days were spent on Long-wood's campus, too - it was called a 'training school' at the time."

After graduation, Mrs. Lindsey helped with the family laundry business until her appointment here.

Heading a staff of 17 until her official retirement in November, Mrs. Lindsey plans to move to Florida to be near her daughter. Anyone who has met Mrs. Lindsey will appreciate her clever wit and undaunted humor.

Nineteen Faculty Members Join Longwood's Staff

Dr. Willett, Dean Blackwell Preside First Term

There are 19 newcomers to Longwood College faculty, making a total of 126 faculty members who will serve during the 1968-1969 academic year. It is announced by President Henry I. Willett, Jr.

In addition to the 19 new faculty members, there are a number of new staff members, two of whom are Frank R. Williams, assistant business manager and treasurer, and Joanne Holt, assistant dean of students.

The top ranking new member of the faculty is Dr. William L. Frank, professor of English and chairman of the English department. Holder of the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Northwestern University, he is also the recipient of the B.A. and M.A. in education degrees from University of Southern Mississippi.

He has taught at Northwestern University, Delta State College, and Southeast Missouri State College. While at Southeast Missouri State College he was director of freshman English and was chairman-designate of the department at the time of his appointment to Longwood. A former executive-director of the Mississippi Association of Teachers of English, he has published articles on American literature and the teaching of English, and currently is in the process of writing a book.

The two other holders of doctoral degrees who have recently joined the faculty are Dr. David A. Breil, associate professor of biology, and Dr. George H. Buteau, Jr., assistant professor of biology.

The department of education added two new members to its faculty. T. C. (Culley) Dalton, assistant professor of education with administrative responsibilities as director of special services, is a former elementary school principal. Mrs. Maurice P. Sneller, Jr., is an instructor in education who taught several years in the public schools of Roanoke County.

In addition to Dr. Frank, the English department added four new members to its faculty. They are: Carolyn M. Craft and Susan May, both assistant professors of English; and Carol Jean Drowota and Fred P. Herndon, instructors.

Two part-time faculty members were added to the foreign language department. Mrs. Maria H. Koonce, instructor in foreign languages, received her M.A. degree from East Carolina University. A former bilingual secretary for Dupont in Winston, N.C., she hopes to begin work on her doctoral degree in September. Mrs. Diana A. Saunders, assistant professor of foreign languages, received the M.A. from West Virginia University.

Thomas P. Burke, Jr., assistant professor of history, fills the vacancy created by Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss' retirement from the department of history and social sciences. Another member of Longwood's department of history and social sciences is John M. McCrimmon, who has been appointed instructor in sociology.

An assistant professor and an instructor were added to the mathematics department. Mrs. Sandra A. Bollinger, instructor, is a 1964 graduate from Longwood with a B.A. degree in mathematics. In English. An assistant professor of mathematics, Mrs. Cade R. Parrish comes to Longwood from Morris Harvey College.

Miss Pauline V. Boehm, assistant professor of music, received her bachelor's degree from Iowa State Teachers College and the M.M. degree from Northwestern University. Prior to coming to Longwood she was assistant professor of music education at Muskingum College, in New Concord, Ohio. In addition to Dr. Breil and Dr. (Continued on Page 4)

MISS JOANNE HOLT

LC Welcomes Miss Holt, Asst. Dean Of Students

By PAT LUCAS

Longwood College welcomes the new Assistant Dean of Students, Miss Joanne Holt. Dean Holt taught at Oak Park Elementary school in Oak Park, Illinois and, prior to accepting her new post, was a counselor at Cambridge High School in Cambridge, Ohio. She holds a B.A. degree from the University of Illinois and a M.A. degree from Northwestern University.

When asked her first impression of Longwood, Dean Holt replied, "Friendly." She went on to say that perhaps a deeper meaning would be sincere honesty and mutual trust.

Thus far, her duties have included arranging freshman rooming and assisting Dean Brown with upper classman rooming. Dean Wilson has revealed that Dean Holt will act as a liaison between the housekeeping department and the head residents concerning physical aspects of the dormitories. She will also be doing personal advising and later will be working with House Council.

Dean Holt says that improvements in housing will be made only in so far as funds are available. This year there are 63 floaters compared with 75 last year. Although it is not preferable to have triple rooms, the only way to avoid this is to raise the room fee, which few students would favor.

Of course the newest developments in housing are the two ten-story high-rise dormitories. The first of these is scheduled to be ready for use the fall semester of 1969 with a capacity of 386 students.

The new dormitory will have a head resident and an assistant head resident with student counselors on each floor.

The second and third floors will be sorority floors and will be occupied either by two of the present sororities if any express a desire to move from Stubbs or by the two new sororities which will be colonizing on our campus in February.

The fall 1969 session will see an increase of approximately 200 new students. At this time students in Ruffner and South Ruffner will be housed elsewhere as these rooms will be converted to offices and classrooms.

With the second dormitory which will house 396, enrollment will increase by only an additional 200. This will cut down on tripling in many rooms.

Exchange Program Broadens Range Of Course Offerings

In order to broaden the range of course offerings at both Longwood College and Hampden-Sydney College, a cooperative exchange program has been set up.

The statement issued by the Academic Policies Committee on September 16, 1968, announcing the new program, reads as follows:

"The variety of courses available to Longwood students has been increased by a cooperative arrangement with Hampden-Sydney College. Under the terms of the arrangement, full-time students at either institution may enroll for courses at the other institution without added expense.

"Students desiring to take advantage of this program must secure approval from the Dean of the College.

"Longwood College students may find these academic areas of particular interest: Bible and Religion, Classical languages, and Computer mathematics."

According to Dr. Herbert R. Blackwell, Dean of the College, all courses that are offered at Hampden-Sydney, but not at Longwood, will be available to LC students under this program. It may also provide opportunities to resolve irreconcilable conflicts in a student's class schedule. Dean Blackwell expressed hope that many students from both campuses would take advantage of the new policy, especially to increase their selection of courses in major fields and in electives.

Where necessary, transportation to Hampden-Sydney, for students making use of this program, will be provided by Longwood College.

"Americans from Africa," a one credit-hour course, offered jointly by Longwood and Hampden-Sydney Colleges, will meet for the first time tonight at 7. The class will combine TV and live lectures, and will be taught by Dr. Toppin of VSU, and Mr. Heinemann of Hampden-Sydney. The class is open only to seniors and juniors on an elective basis, although others may audit the TV lectures. Anyone interested in the course should attend the first meeting tonight, and then complete registration in the Registrar's office. The class will meet every Wednesday night from 7:00 until 8:30 or 9:00.

Artist Series Begins Opera Performance Premieres At 8 P.M.

Wednesday, September 25, is the date of this term's first Artist Series, the production of Mozart's three-act opera, "The Abduction from the Seraglio." The opera will be performed by the Turnau Opera Players in Jarman at 8:00 p.m. The music will be provided by the Richmond Little Symphony conducted by Edgar Sehenkman.

The Turnau Opera Players, a national group composed of eight singers, a musical director-accompanist, and two stage technicians, came into being thirteen years ago. Since their conception, they have staged over 750 performances of sixty-five operas, including seven premieres of contemporary works. The 1968-69 season marks their tenth national tour.

Student Officers, Faculty Attend Luncheon

By Camera Artist

The first in a series of monthly luncheon meetings scheduled by Dr. Henry I. Willett, Jr., President of Longwood, met Thursday, September 19. This meeting was attended by the officers of the five major organizations on campus, representative members of the student body, and members of the faculty and administrative staff.

In a letter issued to members of the faculty, administrative staff, and student body, Dr. Willett stated that these meetings are planned "in order to provide an opportunity for members of the student body to communicate with the faculty and administrative staff."

In addition to the luncheons involving students and faculty, Dr. Willett has also scheduled meetings to be attended by faculty and administration. These groups will also meet on a monthly basis in order to "provide a forum for more effective communication in the exchange of information and ideas."

ROTUNDA Waves New Flag

Change of policy or a change from a previous procedure is often symbolic of a new vitality, a regeneration of the old life. It means reawakening, discovering fresh ideas, beginning anew.

Change is not a condemnation of the old, the traditional. It is the recognition that one is in a rut, that one has come to rely too heavily on the past. It is an extension, another link in the chain of progress.

With this in mind and in an effort to keep in step with Longwood's advancement during the past year the ROTUNDA has adopted a new banner. Thanks to Susan Davenport's creativity we are able to present it to you in the first issue of the 1968-1969 ROTUNDA. As a result of this change we are able to give the student body five more inches of space on the front page along with an attractive flag. Five inches is not a great deal, but it is a beginning.

Your student newspaper is ready to serve you. The ROTUNDA begins another year.

— M. K. M.

Jarman Only Half-Filled

Jarman auditorium was only half-filled, and yet we complain that there is nothing to do on the Longwood campus.

The Colleagues, after many headaches, after much consternation, and after the exertion of a lot of effort, managed to engage the Showmen in concert for the entertainment of the student body. Yet, Jarman was only half-filled.

Students have demanded more dances, more concerts, more entertainment here on campus. Yet, Jarman was only half-filled.

Are we to ascertain from the small number in attendance at Saturday's concert that Longwood ladies are no longer interested in bringing outside entertainment to their campus? If this is the case, we can save other planning committees the troubles and expenses of contracting such groups. It will save Longwood from future embarrassment.

— M. K. M.

Schedules Cause Confusion;

Sacrifice For Free Saturdays

By LIBBABALL

"But, I've got to have this course."
"I'm sorry, young lady; we just don't have room in here for you."

Are many of you disappointed about your schedules this semester? Have you found that sacrificing Saturday classes and adding two hours of daily class time to your schedule is more of a burden than a week-end relief?

Considering some alternative arguments:

Do you prefer daily 8 o'clocks to the previous set-up of a possible 10 o'clock Saturday class? Are you finding any study time between the first and second sessions of a class on certain days?

Have you realized that the courses that meet for nearly two hours twice a week, tend to leave us bored, exhausted, and suffering from unnecessary back pains?

What we won't do for a free week-end!

Many of us have classes on some days from 8 until 4, with only the 45 minute lunch break. Our spare time during the week has to be spent on concentrated study of day-to-day assignments. Little has been gained by freeing us from campus on Saturdays, since any research work on projects must be completed on the supposedly "free" day.

Schedule conflicts, too, present their continual problem. Four-year planned courses of study have been mapped out for those of us who have chosen our majors. This eliminates a student's taking unrelated courses; however, a large percentage of girls are unable to gain admittance into these classes. Our classrooms are too small, or we don't have enough teachers. Whatever the problem is, something should be resolved.

A music course, recently convened. Since the students were prospective teachers and had plans to student teach the following year, their music requirements had to be completed this year. Unfortunately, there aren't enough pianos. Their instruction is being hampered by three girls on a piano.

Other schedule changes we feel are unfair include the higher course tuition and the two dollars add-drop charge. Why should a student, on a loan or scholarship, be penalized $30.00 if she is taking nineteen hours in order to accelerate? Advisors are supposed to help their advisees determine their courses of study. Fine! But, why shouldn't they be fined part of the $2.00 add-drop charge? After all, the student is following his advisor's recommendations.

For those whose classes last until the late afternoon on Fridays, what chance do you have of finding a ride home? The Washington-Arlington people, especially, have a disadvantage with the buses. Unless they can eliminate late afternoon classes, they are "doomed" to stay in Farmville until Saturday. Richmonders, also, are at a disadvantage. Unless they have early afternoon classes, they won't arrive in town until after ten. Those seniors who do have cars, are either student teaching, or neglect to invite riders.

The majority of us didn't want to attend Saturday classes, and now we're suffering the consequences. Should we reverse our decision or content ourselves with the newest privilege?

Letter To The Editor

Whenever color spirit is at a peak, or whenever Longwood girls just feel like singing, they gather in the Rotunda. Each class and each color has spirited songs which are sung with great enthusiasm. And learning to sing these songs has for many years been one of the ways by which each one of us has felt that she has become a part of Longwood.

Recently there have been several ostentatious displays of rudeness during activities involving the Red and Whites and the Green and Whites. Such behavior is not in keeping with the sincere Blue and White spirit which has previously united us.

Exhibiting disrespect for another's spirit, whether red or green, does not add to class or color spirit, nor does it win Gelst Festival skills, or add points toward Color Cup; it only displays our lack of consideration for others.

If each class and color maintains a degree of consideration for others, the result will be a sincere spirit deserving of respect. It is this consideration for one another that overshadows both the spirit of Red and White and Green and White, and strengthens our Blue and White Foundation.

Sincerely,
SM
DB

"The Showmen" perform at Longwood to help the Colleagues welcome the freshmen and transfer students.

"39-21-40 SHAPE" Appears At LC., "The Showmen" Perform In Concert

By FRANCES KIMBLE

The Colleagues sponsored a concert Saturday, September 21, in honor of the freshmen and transfer students. The concert featured The Showmen with the Satisfactions as the back-up band.

The Showmen got their start 15 years ago in Norfolk while the members were still in junior high and high school. They called themselves the Humdingers and were managed by a friend, Noah Biggs. In the group's early years they appeared in teen hops and nonbeer clubs.

In 1961 the group changed their name to The Showmen and recorded "39-21-40 Shape" and "It Will Stand." As a result of the recording "It Will Stand" the group received national publicity and was featured in Life Magazine in 1963.

In the fall of 1966 The Showmen gave a concert at the University of North Carolina for a crowd of 4,500. This was their first experience in front of a large crowd. Since this time The Showmen have been full-time singers with 99% of their engagements in colleges or predominately college clubs. They have appeared in all the major colleges and universities in the South.

The five-member group works out of Norfolk, Virginia. Leslie Felton, Milton Wells, Gene Knight, and Dorsey

Knight are the original members from Norfolk. Donnie Ray Boone from Kingston, North Carolina, recently replaced General Norman Johnson. They range in age from 21 to 26.

Friday night The Showmen had appeared in Raleigh. Following the Longwood Concert, the Showmen traveled to Salisbury, North Carolina, for a concert that night. Their next engagement in this area will be October 26 when they will give an early concert at VMI and a late concert at Washington and Lee. They will give a concert at VPI November 9 and at UVA November 17.

Bill Kennedy, the manager of The Showmen, said, "an interesting aspect of the group is that their popularity and demand is based largely on their shows rather than a long repertoire of strong hits."

Last week the group released a new recording, "Action," on Bell Labels. The first indication showed this would be a big record for the group.

The future is looking even stronger for the Showmen now that they have concerts scheduled in the North such as in Philadelphia, Baltimore, and cities in Ohio.

H. R. Parker, back-up band director for the Showmen, said, "we love working for all girls any day and are looking forward to coming back in the future."

The back-up band, The Satisfactions, are a seven-member group with members from Danville, Richmond, Farmville, and Crewe. The group has been together for two years and has released two records, "Girl With the Mini Skirt On" and "You Don't Know Like I Know." They will make another recording on October 5.

The group has backed up singers Joe Simon, Stevie Wonder, and Eddie Floyd. They presently work in six states and have played in major southern universities and colleges.

The Virginia Museum's Artmobile, featuring rare Byzantine Treasures, will be at Longwood from September 23-27.

The Museum's collection of Byzantine art was assembled by Brian Ross, the Museum's advisor on Medieval and Byzantine art.

The works in this exhibit range in date from the fourth to twelfth century. The jewelry represents the most important group in the exhibit according to the curator of the Virginia Museum. Earrings, bracelets, brooches, and rings, many made of gold and silver and decorated with jewels, are displayed in the Artmobile.

AA Presents Sports Activities

During Annual Demonstration

Hockey, swimming, fencing, basketball, or lacrosse, what is your game? This question was posed to the new freshman class, Thursday, September 19, at the Athletic Association Demonstration. The demonstration, which began at 4:15 p.m. on Barlow Field, presented exhibitions of various sports in order to create interest in our new and old students for intramural and varsity sports, whether as players or spectators.

In Barlow Gymnasium, a series of talks and demonstrations took place. A talk on basketball by Lynn Coleman was followed by a brief game between the Green and Whites and Red and Whites. Volleyball was explained by Beth Rice; badminton by Shorty Mariconi; and fencing by Anna Pettis. Several members of Orchestris presented a dance number from last year's pageant, following a talk by Doris Richards.

Meanwhile a water show was given in the pool by members of the varsity swim team, the H2O Club, and the Corkettes. Each number was explained by Stephanie DuRoss. Two solo interpretations, a dual synchronized number, and a water relay were presented.

In Tabb Circle, more of Longwood's sports were represented: bowling, by Janet Harpold; table tennis, by Debbie Remsburg; golf, by Jo Newberry; bicycles, by Chris McDonnell; and tennis, by Betty Jane Rogers.

When all three groups had seen the various demonstrations, they returned to Barlow Field to watch several Longwood hockey players in action and a game of lacrosse, another of Longwood's varsity sports.

Athletes Vie For Places On Varsity Hockey Team

Ground-sticks, ground-sticks, ground-sticks - smash! That's the familiar sound heard out on Barlow Field every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday after 4 o'clock. Miss Andrews and Miss Brockenbrough are holding varsity hockey tryouts for those girls interested through next week. At present close to forty girls are losing weight running up and down the hockey field.

The girls are working hard to form two victorious teams. Their season begins with a game with Old Dominion College on October 5.

Seniors Receive Blazers; Honored At Banquet

Eleven seniors received their Athletic Association blazers September 19 at the annual AA banquet. Those girls getting white blazers were Anna Pettis, Becky Bondurant, Linda Atkinson, Cathy Hass, Jane Tibbs, and Ginny Sirc. Receiving blue blazers were Jane Erdman, Peggy Shultz, Stephanie du Ross, and Linda Martin.

To receive a white blazer students must collect at least 45 points by their senior year and to earn a blue blazer students must earn at least 35 points. Points may be earned by participating in varsity sports, intramural class and color teams, and by serving on the board of officers and committees.

"This year for the first time transfer students may earn points through their senior year," said Jane Tibbs, president of the Athletic Association. "These blazers will be presented at the picnic later in the spring."

Also new to the club this year is Miss Callaway. She will advise the group and coordinate the intramural program.

Intramural Tennis Doubles; Activities Begin September 23

Fault! Double Fault!
If you know enough about tennis to understand what has just been said, then last Monday should have been the beginning of a good experience for you. Monday was the first day of matches in the Class Tennis Doubles Competition. Any two members of the same class are eligible to play. The tournament is played by single elimination rules, in which partners remain in competition until they lose a match. The winners receive points toward the class cup.

Last year, the finals were composed of two teams of freshmen. The winners played Dr. Heintz and Dr. O'Neill as a finale to the tournament and impressively, the "more experienced" players won. This year, the winners will again make their debut against Dr. Heintz and Dr. O'Neill. Maybe the "younger set" can pull through this time!

Although tennis doubles are held in the fall, the singles competition is held in the spring. The tournament is run in the same manner as to entries and elimination, with the winner also receiving points toward class cup. Be sure and check the boards as to time and day and support your class and friends in their matches!

Mac's Facts

Last Thursday's AA Demonstration was well-organized and gave a well-rounded view of Longwood's expanding athletic activities. Too bad so few freshmen decided to take advantage of the interesting afternoon.

Judy Turner had quite a hard time last week, along with a few others, maintaining her balance in the old gym.

Hearty congratulations to all those people who were awarded blazers at the AA banquet.

Alma, was it really that warm at the Physical Education majors get-together?

Barbara Jenkins is in fine shape for powder puff football should a team be formed. Her favorite tackle dummy is "nightie watch," and Dillard can vouch for that.

Tricia and Donna have started attending burnings early and have found that alcohol burns better than cardboard boxes.

Administrators Meet To Discuss School Programs, Issues

Area school superintendents met at Longwood College on Saturday, September 21. Attending the meeting were Longwood administrators and their wives: Dr. and Mrs. Henry Willett, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Blackwell, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Patterson, and Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Dalton. Area superintendents and their wives included Mr. and Mrs. G. Hunter Jones of Campbell, Mr. L. O. McGhee of Charlotte, Mr. and Mrs. E. Armstrong Smith of Cumberland, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Hodge of Dinwiddie, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chaffin, Jr. of Halifax-South Boston, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Thweatt of Lunenburg, Mr. and Mrs. Blanton of Nottoway, and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Caldwell of Powhatan. Also attending the meeting were Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson, Jr., principal of Central High in Buckingham, and Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Payne, director of instruction in Mecklenburg.

Following registration in the ABC Room, Mrs. Willett took the ladies on a bus tour of the campus and the estates. The superintendents met in the ABC Room to discuss the program in the school. Some of the topics included the Graduate program at Longwood, the bond referendum, the Longwood College Forensic Tournament for Southside Virginia high schools, and the Virginia Association of Student Government meeting to be held here in October.

After the discussion, the superintendents and administrators had lunch in the dining hall and later attended the Hampden-Sydney football game.

Sing Out South Group Sings For World Peace

The Richmond, Virginia, cast of "Sing Out South" entertained in Jarman Auditorium on Friday, September 20, at 8 o'clock p.m. in honor of the freshmen and transfer students. "Sing Out South" is a regional development of the international movement "Up With the People" which seeks to emphasize the positive aspect of this country and the world. Through songs this group of high school and college students wants to show that the youth of the country are not apathetic; that they are not all hippies; that they want our world to be a peaceful one and that they are willing to pay the price for freedom. They want to put freedom on the move in every country and to offer a positive alternative to violence and anarchy.

The titles of some of their songs show the spirit and purpose of "Sing Out": "Don't Stand Still," "Life Is Getting Better Every Day," "What Color Is God's Skin?" "Can't You Hear America Calling?" and "The World Is Your Home Town."

The real desire behind "Sing Out" can perhaps be best explained with words from the theme song, "Up With People":

"If more people were for people,
All people everywhere
There'd be a lot less people to worry about
And a lot more people who care."

Fried Chicken, Pizzas Newest On Rec Menu

A proposed pizza and fried chicken call-in service, special prices on particular items during certain periods, and new menu items, such as banana splits, are among the recent ideas for service changes in the Slater Snack Bar in the Lankford Activities Building.

According to Vera Boggs, manager of the Snack Bar, such changes are badly needed to meet the needs of the students. "We want this to be their place, with their ideas," she said. She welcomes all reasonable suggestions for further changes.

Fried chicken and pizza will be added to the menu in the near future. Details have not yet been completely worked out, and prices must be approved by the college. Once the plan is ready, however, students may be able to order these items by phone, and then pick them up when they're ready.

Another innovation is the idea of "specials." On certain nights, for periods of from one and a half to two hours, the management may offer free cokes, reduce prices on onion rings, or turn the juke box on free. These are only a few possibilities.

Frequently requested items are also being added to the menu. Banana splits are the first of these.

The management is also looking for ideas for special events on big weekends; something to please the girls, and to fit in with the date situation.

Improved service through a faster check-out system. Other possibilities being discussed include a card tournament, sing-alongs, and decorative posters.

Panhellenic Council Welcomes Sororities Open Rush In Spring

By PATTY KINGSLEY

Representatives from three sororities will be at Longwood during the week of the 22nd to hold meetings with various officials of the college. Each visiting sorority will have three meetings with the members of the administration, Panhellenic officers, and sorority advisors. Meeting sessions will be held for Alpha Delta Pi on Monday, September 23, and for Alpha Omicron Pi on Wednesday, September 25. Alpha Phi will come on Thursday, September 26.

Two out of the three visiting sororities will be chosen to become new chapters on the Longwood campus by a vote of each of the nine existing sororities on October 1. The two chosen sororities will hold their rush in Lankford Building on February 23, 24, and 25, at which time representatives from other chapters of the two sororities will be on campus to help.

After rush their chapter meetings will be held in Lankford Building until the new High Rise Dorm is completed. Chapter Rooms will be provided in the new dorm for these selected sororities.

Art Work Exhibit By Tom Green Opens In Library

An exhibition of the art work of Tom Green, of the University of Maryland, opened officially Sunday. The exhibit will remain in the library throughout the month of October.

In response to questions, Mr. Green has said: "Concerning my work, I can say only this: that these paintings and objects have emerged from a need to create an ordered, visual experience independent of illusion, 'meaning,' and other associative references; that they project, quite simply, their own reality as physical presences; that the viewer accept them as such, deriving pleasure from their color and form, and most importantly: avoiding the impulse to demand that they be something that they aren't."

Mr. Green is presently a graduate teaching assistant in design at the University of Maryland, College Park, Md. He is working on a M. A. Degree in painting. He received his B.A. in Art from the University of Maryland in 1967.

His previous exhibitions have included: a two-man show at the RStreet Gallery, Washington, D. C., in 1965; the Corcoran Area Exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery, Washington, D. C., in 1965; the Maryland Artists Exhibition, at the Baltimore Museum, Baltimore, Md., in 1966; the Maryland Regional Exhibition, at the Baltimore Museum, Baltimore, Md., in 1967; Eight Young Washington Painters, at the Jewish Community Center, Washington, D. C., in 1968; a two-man show at the Hinckley-Brodel Gallery, Washington, D. C., in 1968; and a three-man show, at the Northern Virginia Fine Arts Association Museum, Alexandria, Va., in 1968.

Linda Dexter, sophomore class chairman for this year's Geist Festival, Janet Sufley, senior chairman, and Patricia Necessary, freshman chairman, look over the Green and Whites Festival notebook.

Sally Heilman Chosen Geist Festival Chairman; Usherettes, Theme To Be Announced At Assembly

Sally Heilman has been appointed Geist Festival Chairman by Geist Leadership honorary society. Sally, Vice-chairman of Judicial Board, is a Senior member of Geist. As Festival Chairman she will serve as the coordinator of the entire Festival Weekend which is October 25-27 this year.

Class Festival chairmen will work with Sally to organize all activities involving color competition during the weekend. Janet Sufley, senior chairman, and Linda Dexter, sophomore chairman, will work with the Green and Whites, while Cherie Weeks, junior chairman, and Patricia Necessary, freshman chairman, will work with the Red and Whites.

There will be a new theme for the Geist Festival Weekend that will be revealed at the Geist Assembly October 9. Geist has expressed the wish that this theme be adopted and made one of Longwood's traditions. At this time

Geist will also announce the 1968 Usherettes. Geist selects two girls from each class for this honor. They are chosen on the basis of their spirit and the contributions they have made to their class and school.

Regarding the 1968 Geist Festival, Sally has emphasized the fact that "since last May Geist has been working on several new additions to the Geist Festival Weekend - additions which we hope will make the weekend better than ever. Geist is excited about its new ideas and about the work the class Festival chairmen are already doing! Spirit is in the air as all the classes combine forces to make their plans for their part in the weekend. I encourage everyone to participate in the weekend for this is a time of year when spirit is felt by all - Find what you can do to help and become a real part of the Festival spirit."

The weekend events will begin with a 13 unit parade on Friday afternoon at 5:30. The parade will include three floats, one for each of the colors and a Geist float. The first presentation of the color skits will be at 7:30 that night.

Saturday's activities include a banquet luncheon, a concert by the Fort Lee band at 1:15, the midway from 2:00 to 5:30, the alumni hockey game at 3:30, color rush during half-time of the hockey game, an art exhibit, the second presentation of the color skits at 7:30, the cake cutting by the Usherettes after the skits, and the walk of old Chi.

Committee Formed For Discussion On Dining Hall

A dining hall committee has been formed under the auspices of House Council. This committee consists of Dean Wilson, Mr. Martin, manager of the Slater System, and Evelyn Blackman, Vice-President of House Council, and a representative from each of the classes. The senior representative is Kathy Grizzard with Beth Rice as alternate. The junior representative is Barbara Houkema and the sophomore representative is Sherry Grigg. The freshman representative will be chosen at a later date.

The purpose of this committee is to discuss dining hall problems. Students are urged to take all suggestions relating to the dining hall to the class representatives. In turn, the representatives will bring information back to the classes and present it during class meetings.

Something New In Orientation: The Playboy Forum

By JUDY OLD

The Orientation Program for Freshmen and Transfers was expanded this year to include a new type of meeting, The Playboy Forum. The Forum, sponsored by the Student Government Association, was held last Thursday evening in Jarman. The informal discussion gave Freshmen and other interested Upperclassmen an opportunity to hear five Hampden-Sydney students express their candid opinions and give advice about social life, education and various other topics. Members of the panel, introduced by Jackie White, were Dave Stradinger, a senior from Rockville, Maryland; Walley Nunley, a senior from Clifton Forge, Virginia; Greg Forman, a sophomore from Richmond, Virginia; Eddie Eckert, a senior from Charleston, West Virginia; and Fred McNeer, a senior from Huntington, West Virginia. Shorty Marconi was moderator.

The first question, "What qualities do you look for in a good date?", brought the usual responses. Being attractive and have a tremendous personality rated high. A date should be a good conversationalist and be able to have a good time.

After arriving on the college scene some girls feel compelled to drink and smoke. The panel was asked their views on this. Two said they did not particularly like a girl to smoke. Dave Stradinger added, "If a girl wants to smoke, well, o.k., but it sure doesn't add anything." None of the panel like their date to drink excessively. Walley Nunley brought out the point that a girl does not have to drink to be accepted. A girl that gets drunk on a guy is bad news.

With Homecoming close at hand, the question about "imporation goods" for big weekends was brought up. Fred McNeer pointed out that "imporation" can work both ways. It's only natural to invite your girl from home for a weekend. "Imporation" occurs at girls' schools, too.

It was agreed that the general relationship between Hampden-Sydney and Longwood students could be improved. Mixers and a combined Greek Week were mentioned as ways to promote a better relationship.

Asked to comment on the importance of education for a girl, Greg Foreman noted that it is important, but since the male is the breadwinner, education is more important for him. Others mentioned that maturity and an awareness of current affairs that may be gained through a college education are just as important as book knowledge. Although not a requirement, many boys feel they will marry a girl with a college education.

One of the last questions was concerned with the male opinion of today's fashion trends. Generally, boys want a girl "to act like a girl and dress like a girl." A girl should show originality and keep away from a completely traditional wardrobe. Perhaps girls are too label conscious?

After formal questioning ended, Freshmen and Upperclassmen were given a chance to write down their own questions. Several of these were read for quick, candid response.

It is hoped that those who attended gained something from the discussion. Perhaps the Class of '72 will have an advantage over previous freshmen classes.

Panel members from Hampden-Sydney for the "Playboy Forum": Eddie Eckert, Walley Nunley, Fred

McNeer, and Dave Stradinger ponder an answer to a question posed by a Longwood lady.

YWCA Travel Board Located In Smoker

A new YWCA Travel Board has been placed in the New Smoker for the convenience of girls wanting rides or riders to other cities. Girls are asked to fill out one of the white cards hanging on the board if they want riders and one of the blue cards if they need a ride. Hooks are provided for the cities of Richmond, Norfolk, Roanoke, Charlottesville, Lexington, Winchester, and the D. C. area. There is also a space to put cards for cities other than these. Cards should be filled out early in the week for the convenience of girls concerned.

Up With People

The words of the song go something like this:

"If more people were for people,
All people everywhere
There'd be a lot less people to worry about.
And a lot more people who care."

These words belong to the theme song of the "Sing Out South" group, and also of their sister Sing Out groups, and of their leader, the famous "Up With People" group. Another "Sing Out," comprised of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students, is in the making here. The ideas are catching on.

The groups sing mainly to get across the ideas of peace and freedom, to a world experiencing anarchy and violence. They advocate friendship and love for one's fellow man.

By the students at Longwood, the ideas of "Up With People" can be put into daily practice now through consideration for others in our close community. But we must also think of the future.

Within two years, the college's enrollment is expected to increase by approximately 400 students. Fear has been expressed by some that the addition will cost Longwood its friendliness and closeness. But must this necessarily be so?

"If more people were for people," then the additional students would be cheerfully welcomed as new friends. There is no reason why the spirit of the college cannot cover two thousand, or more, students.

To be considered also is the fact that Longwood is expanding not only physically, but also socially and academically. To keep up with the pace, we the students must also progress in our attitudes and what better way than to proclaim "Up With People!" — M. A. M.

Why Close Tables?

Have you found that you spend your mealtime griping about the number of tables that are closed? Did you ever think that perhaps there might be a reason for this seeming inconvenience.

The management in the dining hall is not able to accurately predict the number of girls who will not be at a specific meal, particularly on weekends. Although the dining hall tries to obtain an accurate count of the number of girls who will be eating in the dining hall it is almost impossible to do so. Slater System must depend on the pink sign-out slips that the girls are supposed to have filled out by Thursday. However, there is no way to check on the number of guests, the number of girls who will not be on campus for meals during big weekends at Hampden-Sydney, or the number of girls who will spend mealtimes on the roof during the warmer Spring days.

Slater tries to be fair about which tables are closed and which tables are reserved for guests. A rotation system is used.

Why does the dining hall management close tables at all? This is done to keep the cost of boarding rates down. It would be far too expensive to supply food for every table at every meal, only to throw most of it away at the end of the meal.

Although closed tables are sometimes an inconvenience for individual students and the situation cannot be remedied by always keeping all tables open, the students can help alleviate the situation by being courteous to each other. If there are vacant seats at your table, ask students who are looking for a place to eat to sit at your table. Do not serve and eat if there are only two people at a table. This food can be used for seconds at another table. Do not invite guests to special dinners. They will deprive a student of her place in the dining hall. — M. K. M.

Letters To Editor

Dean Blackwell Explains New Registration Fees

Dear Karen:

I want to congratulate you on your first issue of "The Rotunda." A campus newspaper can be very valuable in disseminating information to the student body. I would like to use your columns, if I may, to comment on some statements made by Libba Ball in her editorial. I appreciate Libba's role in bringing to my attention some of the problems that have bothered students as a result of registration. We have tried to make clear that we shall be happy to answer student queries whenever we can, and to resolve those problems which we are capable of resolving.

The first point that Libba raised concerned the matter of schedule conflicts. I feel that her column somewhat overstates the case. I wish I could say that there were no such conflicts but, of course, we all know that in trying to fit the exact number of classes to the demands of 1,700 students there do have to be some adjustments. However, to the best of my knowledge, no student has been unable to complete her scheduled four-year required program because of schedule conflicts, and there are no seniors who have been unable to get into the courses which they need to complete their degree requirements. It is possible that a sophomore may have to delay until her junior year a course which she would normally like to take as a sophomore, but no one will be kept out of a course that is a prerequisite to a higher level offering.

The $2.00 add-drop charge is not, as Libba's editorial indicated, assessed where the student is not at fault. If any students feel that they have been unjustly charged, they can take the matter up with Mr. Magnusson or with me. In general, we have tried to give every student the benefit of the doubt in this question. The problem that they were confronted with was that many students were making changes after they had already enrolled in classes because they wanted a more favorable hour, because they did not like the instructor, or because the course seemed too hard. The chaos that results because these students did not plan their courses more carefully at the time of registering causes an added expense to the College and we feel that this expense should be borne by the students who are involved, rather than to assess the entire student body for it. As I indicated, whenever a schedule has to be changed because of some adjustment required by the faculty or administration, then this change is being made without any charge to the students.

The third point Libba's column raises is the additional assessment for course overloads. As you know, students pay in their tuition charges only a fraction of the total cost of their education. The course schedule is so set up that, to meet the necessary 126-hour requirement, a student should take something less than 16 hours each semester. However, we permit 17 hours as a normal full load. A student who takes a full 17-hour load for each semester will obviously have more hours than necessary for graduation. When a student goes beyond the 17-hour requirement, she places a financial burden on the College to provide an instructor to teach these extra hours. Assuming that every student at this college took one extra hour of classes, this would mean that 1,700 class hours would have to be met by instructors who would have to be paid for their extra assignments. Seventeen hundred class hours is the equivalent of 20 extra class sections or 5 extra instructors. We do not mind offering these overloads, but we also feel that those students who take loads beyond normal should pay for the privilege rather than to make a general assessment on all students, including those who wish to confine themselves to the routine academic hour requirements. The cost to the student, even with the $15.00 fee is, like the $2.00 add-drop charge, less than the actual cost involved, and the difference is borne by the generosity of the taxpayer.

I am sure Dr. Willett will be willing to expand on these remarks of mine at his next general conference for students, and I shall be happy to answer any further questions which students may have about these matters or any others concerning their academic programs.

Yours sincerely,
Herbert R. Blackwell

Dear Editor:

America is engaged in a great test. We are torn apart by racial conflict, lawlessness, war, and economic strife. The people have lost faith in our government. So the question is: Are we to continue with what we have been doing for the past eight years or shall we seek a new leadership? Our votes this November will do the answering.

As young people you and I are very concerned about the future for we will spend more time there than most. Our votes can make the difference in this election. We can add a whole new dimension to American politics. The problems we have cannot be met by rhetoric, fantasies, demagoguery or fatalism. Intelligence and realism must have a place in our politics. Each of us can make our personal commitment to help give America what she so desperately needs by joining the College Young Democrats or Young Republicans. We must campaign to elect a responsible government. Silence is not golden!

Sincerely,
Carolyn Cummins

President's Wife Organizes Picnic For Faculty, Staff

By KATHY ATKINSON

Faculty and their wives may find themselves well engulged in the rustic harvest season this Friday at the Faculty-Staff Outing to be held at Longwood Estate.

Accenting the mood will be a big pot of Brunswick stew over a fire, along with a barrel of apples. The traditional harvest cornstaks and pumpkins are to comprise the decor.

Mrs. Willett, with the assistance of Mr. Martin of the Slater management, organized the outing. She hopes the venture will better acquaint the faculty with one another and get that Longwood spirit going!

Wesley Center will sponsor the Cactus Inn Coffee House at the Methodist Student Center this Friday night, October 4, from 7:30 until 11:30 p.m.

The performers for Friday night will include local Longwood talent Linda Pelkin; Bev Thomas, Andee Maddox and her group, and Pat Quinn. If anyone would like to sing or play a guitar at the Cactus Inn, please contact Melinda Ayres at the Student Center or Penny Smith in Wheeler 304.

Freshmen Review Orientation Week Discuss Advantages, Disadvantages

By LIBBA BALL

Freshmen Orientation plays a major role on campus each year. Colleagues, Sophomore Assistants, spirit leaders, and heads of numerous campus activities, convene a week prior to the regular school session in order to welcome incoming freshmen. A rigorous schedule is set up wherein the newest "Longwood Ladies" learn the how and why of campus life. The week classes begin, the freshmen take an orientation test and then discard their beanies.

Is this week's orientation necessary? Should the activities that are cramped in a 7-day period be spread out over a 2-week period? A recent survey of freshmen attitudes and opinions concerning this fall's orientation proved that the majority of those interviewed were opposed to the program.

One girl began, "I feel an orientation program is a good thing because it is necessary for us to become acquainted with school policies and leaders. But," she continued, "to begin classes when we're so exhausted is really to our disadvantage."

Another girl felt that she couldn't find time to be alone. This is a positive point for our program because we don't give the freshmen time to get homesick. One fresh remarked, "I was all right until my daddy called and asked how I was. It wasn't until then that I even shed a tear!"

Many opposed the length of the program. Some felt that it should be either shortened, covering only the essential information, or lengthened, covering the same information as this year, only in more time.

"I rarely had time to return to my room and get into something comfortable before I had to hurry and dress for something else. Lots of the meetings were purposeless and a real waste of time. Much of the material we covered in orientation groups, we should be expected to review outside of the sessions. Sometimes the groups meetings were really poorly organized. We had so many people to turn to for help and so many people to know immediately . . . I think the committees demanded too much from us at first," argued one student.

"I got tired of continuously going over to Jarman. By the end of the program, I hated going to assemblies. Couldn't the leaders leave us slips in our mail announcing some of that stuff?" one girl pleaded.

However, there were those who enjoyed the crammed schedule and introductions.

"I met some of the nicest people," confided one fresh. "I'm so glad to really be a part of Longwood. I feel orientation helped me prepare for the times ahead. I know it's not going to be easy, and that I'll be expected to sacrifice some to the time! I normally spend watching television on studies. To me, the orientation program is a beginning toward making this adjustment."

For the freshmen who attended summer school, orientation was considered, "a real waste of time!" These girls had to attend all the sessions, re-take the test, and run to all the sings, demonstrations and speakers' presentations.

One summer student debated, "Why couldn't those of us who have been through this before be exempt for a few days? I felt that having to be here along with the girls who were perfect strangers to campus life only made me feel homesick again!"

An informal discussion followed the routine questioning. Some of the freshmen decided they would like to make suggestions for next year's orientation:

"Let's see," one began, "If I had my way, there would be fewer meetings to attend, fewer leaders to report to, and fewer assemblies. On the other

Gymnasts Organize, Plan Future Meets; Fath Sponsors Club

One of the most rapidly rising sports in our country today is gymnastics, and finally Longwood has begun to show interest in it. Miss Fath, a recent addition to the Physical Education staff, called a meeting for anyone interested in gymnastics. The turnout was very good, twenty-six girls signed up. These were for the large part Freshmen and Sophomores. Practice sessions are Tuesday and Wednesday nights from 7 to 8 in Barlow Gym. Anyone interested is invited to attend. Each session will consist of instruction with tumbling, and the remainder of the time is spent in trying the various apparatus. All of the girls are asked to at least try every apparatus, including uneven parallel bars, balance beam, vaulting horse, and free exercise.

Miss Fath said, "We will only be a club this year but I hope to compete in meets later this year." There was even a suggestion that a clinic be held at Longwood, organized by the Sophomores involved in the club.

The exercise club, which is sponsored by the Athletic Association, is also a new addition to our campus. The club will be held three times a week for a half hour each session. Exercises to records will be led by alternating A. A. board members. The girls participating will keep a daily weight and measurement record. All in all, this promises to be a very active year at Longwood.

Music Department Presents Sophomore And Junior Pianists

The Longwood College Department of Music will present Sophomore and Junior pianists in recital Thursday evening, October 3, at 7:30 in Jarman Auditorium.

The program includes selections from Haydn, Chopin, Beethoven, Debussy, Handel, and Bach.

Students participating in the recital are Bonnie Ferguson, Marianne McCaul, Cindy Sasser, Tulita Owen, and Pat Wormon. Also participating are Vivian Blanton, Marie Ashlock, Marsha Trenary, Betsy Hammann, Mary Anne Rozier, and Jo Ann Melchor.

hand, how could we learn as much as we have without these sessions?"

After much debate, the general consensus was to wait until the end of the year and then evaluate the program in perspective.

South African hockey coach Mrs. Ursella Fairbairn instructs a hockey class.

South African Hockey Coach Instructs Longwood Classes

Longwood is honored this week to host Ursella Fairbairn, former coach for the United States Field Hockey Association. Mrs. Fairbairn was captain of the South African Hockey Team, a member of the United States Team in 1963, and a member of three other conference teams. A resident of New York City, Mrs. Fairbairn, a native South African, has been traveling throughout the Southeastern portion of the United States visiting colleges and giving hockey instruction.

Prior to advising at Longwood, she attended a hockey clinic held in Richmond. Mrs. Fairbairn was at Longwood from September 29 to October 3, and then continued to Westhampton. While at Longwood, she instructed in Freshmen hockey classes, physical education major hockey techniques classes, and the Varsity Hockey Team. Longwood was indeed fortunate to have the opportunity of this superior coach.

Hockey Clinic Visited Tryouts Continue Throughout Week

Hockey tryouts were continued through last week in spite of the 85 degree weather. The girls continued to wear themselves out trying to look good, and all the while Miss Brockenbrough and Miss Andrews were calling five minute rest periods because even they were hot just watching.

The girls took a bus trip to Richmond on Saturday, September 28, for a Hockey Clinic. The girls were instructed in hockey skills by various team coaches from around the area.

This week the team will be chosen and will have the opportunity to work together for one week before their first game Saturday at 2:00 with Old Dominion College.

Mac's Facts

Congratulations to the new varsity swimming team. Everyone wishes you luck in a successful season.

Chee, are there seven, ten or fourteen of you?

The real life guard has taken to wearing informal attire and is prepared at all times, even on the hockey field.

Fleet-footed Anna found out that staying in the alley has its ups and downs.

The few that remain on campus next weekend may be interested to know that Longwood has its first hockey game this Saturday afternoon against Old Dominion.

Jinx and Evelyn, do House Council rules allow you to be on the tennis courts at six?

There seems to have been quite a turn-out for the A.A.'s exercise clinic. Jane, you are leading that, aren't you?

All A. A. meetings are opened to students on campus. Take the opportunity to participate in the meetings and present new ideas.

Some members of the Varsity Swim Team relax after practice.

Varsity Swimmers Posted; Team Begins New Schedule

By LYNNE COLEMAN

The Longwood Swimming Team is off to an excellent and exciting start. The largest turn-out for the team in years made the choosing of members very difficult. Tryouts were held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of last week with practices held at such times as 1:00 in the afternoon. Tryouts consisted of mostly timed trials on the swimmers' individual strokes.

Under the coaching of Miss Sally Bush and her new assistant, Miss Anne Calloway, this year's team should prove to be Longwood's most successful. The team's first meet will be away on October 26, against Old Dominion. With the team consisting of fourteen members, five of which are Freshmen, Longwood should have experience and potential.

The team consists of senior, Stephanie DuRoss, a physical education major, diving and swimming the back stroke. Juniors: Frances Sale, biology major, diving; and Suzanne Turner, chemistry major; swimming freestyle and butterfly. Sophomores: Judy Dowd, elementary major, diving; JoAnne May, elementary major, swimming freestyle, breaststroke, and butterfly; Carol Umbdenstock, undecided, swimming backstroke, freestyle, and butterfly; Helen Beamer, physical education major, swimming breaststroke, freestyle, and backstroke; and Betsy Llewellyn, elementary major, diving. Freshmen: Ellen Cahill, elementary major, swimming freestyle, breaststroke, and butterfly; Katherine Hipskind, elementary major, diving; Patti Coogan, Physical education major, swimming freestyle, backstroke, and butterfly; Lois Hrubik, swimming backstroke, freestyle, and butterfly; and Janet Hirschman, swimming breaststroke and freestyle.

Automobile Committee: Miss Austin, Miss Didawick, Calendar Committee: Miss Jamison, Marilyn Taylor, Miss Tibbs. Honors Council (faculty committee): Miss Cloonan. Library Committee: Miss Parsons.

Scholarships and Financial Assistance Committee: Miss Melchor, Miss Mitchell. Sponsor Board: Miss Jamison, Miss Thomas, Miss Brown. Student Activities Evaluation Board: Miss Blackman, Miss Weeks, Miss Wilkes. Supplementary Reading Committee: Miss Torrence, and the president of the incoming freshman class. Evaluation of Teaching Committee: Miss Ailor, Miss Tice, Presidential Inauguration Committee: Miss Jamison, Miss Kingsley.

Dr. Helms Speaks To YR-s, Tells Of Miami Convention

The Longwood College Young Republicans held their annual Open House Tuesday, September 24. James M. Helms, of the History Department, was their speaker. He gave a day-to-day account of some of his experiences as an alternate delegate from Virginia to the Miami convention, and he called for everyone to unite behind Nixon and Agnew.

Dr. Helms also explained that the most "in" thing was to be a part of the Stassen movement. "The only thing that was more 'in' was to wear a 'Stop Stassen' button." For some the entire Stassen movement was a joke, but to Dr. Helms it had a different meaning. "Where else but in America, where else in America but in the Republican Party could a man who wanted to offer his services to his country have the opportunity to be nominated for President?"

Attendance of more than a hundred students proved that political activism is far from dead on this campus. The YR's offer many opportunities to constructively work to change America. Many Longwood students are working with Farmville Republicans in preparing the Nixon-Agnew Headquarters on Main Street for its grand opening on October 3. Others have volunteered to help operate headquarters and to campaign door to door for Nixon and Agnew.

This weekend the YR's went to Charlottesville to campaign with the UVA YR Club. On October 10, Sam Carpenter, the chairman of the Republican Party of Virginia, and Bill Wright, chairman of the College Republicans, will speak at 7:00 in the ABC Room on the role of students in politics and analyze the forthcoming election. These are a few of the activities the YR-s do to help us learn how our political system works and how to become better informed citizens.

Players Open Fall Season

With 'Taming Of The Shrew'

By PEGGY THOMPSON

The Longwood Players season began with an Open House scheduled as part of Freshman Orientation. With two large cast plays this semester, "Taming of the Shrew" by William Shakespeare on Oct. 17, 18, and 19, and "The King and I" by Rodgers and Hammerstein on Nov. 21, 22, and 23, the Players are working under a compressed schedule.

Tryouts were scheduled for the first two days of school with the rehearsal for the "Taming of the Shrew" beginning on Sunday, Sept. 22, at 7:30 p.m. Immediately following the final tryouts in Johns Auditorium at Hampden-Sydney College the Executive Committee of the Longwood Players met and after vigorous and extended discussions announced the cast decisions.

The lead actors and actresses of the "Taming of the Shrew" are Sandy Ellis as Kate, Bonnie Ellis as Bianca, Jim Rhodes portraying Petruchio and Lucentio played by Randy Hallman.

The principle cast of "The King and I" consists of Dale Grigg as Anna, Ellen Lyon as Tuptim, and Rachael Paschall portraying Lady Thiang. The King will be portrayed by Gene Hickock and Ken Shlick as Luntha.

Y To Hold Mixer; Lynchburg Lancers To Provide Music

Among those schools invited are Washington and Lee, VPI, University of Virginia, Randolph-Macon, University of Richmond, and Hampden-Sydney. It is reported that approximately 100 cadets from VMI will attend.

Lychnos Sponsors Dr. J. Townsend, Speaker On Genes

Dr. J. Ives Townsend will speak at seven o'clock in the ABC Room of Lankford Building on Tuesday, October 8, on the topic, "Genes and Human Diseases."

Dr. Townsend is an Associate Professor in the Department of Biology and Genetics at the Medical College of Virginia. He has been asked to speak to interested faculty and members of the student body by the Lychnos Society, the math and science honorary at Longwood. Students from Hampden-Sydney have also been invited to attend.

A reception will follow the talk to allow the students to meet Dr. Townsend and to ask him any questions that they may have. In particular, freshmen and transfers planning a major in math or science will have an opportunity to become better acquainted with faculty members of their major fields.

Dr. Hooker Delivers Talks To State English Teachers

By DARLENE ALMOND

Dr. Charlotte S. Hooker, Associate Professor of English, spoke on "The Secondary English Program: A View From the College Level" at the annual meeting of the Virginia Association of Teachers of English. The meeting, held in Roanoke September 30, was attended by 300 high school English teachers from the Roanoke area.

On October 4, Dr. Hooker will again speak on the same topic at the Fourth Annual Conference of State Supervisors. This conference will be sponsored by the VATE at the Hotel Chamberlin in Hampton. Dr. Foster Gresham, Executive Secretary of VATE, will also attend. Dr. Hooker will speak to the North Carolina-Virginia College English Association at Madison College on October 26.

Dr. Hooker is the chairman of the Liaison Committee for the North Carolina-Virginia College Association, the Virginia Association of Teachers, and also serves on the Advisory Board of the College English Association. The purpose of the Liaison Committee is to try to work out a consolidation of the English curriculum of Virginia high schools and colleges in the state to find out the courses provided by their English department.

The talks Dr. Hooker presents on September 30 and October 4 and 26 will be a report of the results from the 500 questionnaires. The results will be used to help evaluate the high school's curriculum and a chance for recommendations to be given the high schools for improvements. This study is also planned to create better relations between Longwood and the high schools so that Longwood can train the best qualified teachers.

On Wednesday, October 2, at 7:30 p.m., Dr. Willett will address the Junior Class in Jeffers Auditorium (in the new science addition). He will discuss topics of interest in relation to the college. Dr. Willett will speak to the Senior Class at the time of Senior Capting, to the Sophomore Class on February 11, and to the Freshman Class on March 6.

Festmeister, Mittenmeister, Usherettes Named For Oktoberfest

Geist revealed the Festmeister, the Mittenmeister, the eight Usherettes, and the new theme, Oktoberfest, in Jarman tonight at the annual Geist Festival assembly.

Festmeister for the 1968 Oktoberfest is Dillard Vaughan, a junior. Festmeister, formerly called Mistress of Ceremonies in previous Geist Festivals, is the highest recognition that Geist gives a member of the Junior Class.

Dillard, an art major from Richmond, is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and the Athletic Association. She is also a Scribe for her sorority and was a Sophomore and Junior Representative to the Athletic Association.

The 1968 Mittenmeister is Pat Cloonan, a Sophomore. This title was previously Midway Marshal. This again is the recognition of the sophomore who has contributed to class and school activities. Pat, a nursing major from Waynesboro, is a Colleague and a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority. She was President of Alpha Lambda Delta freshman honorary society, a member of the Freshman Commission, and played class hockey.

The eight usherettes, two selected from each class, are: Ann Ailor and Tricia Bates, seniors; Susan Davenport and Shorti Marconi, juniors; Cindy Jamison and Sybil Prouse, sophomores; and Ann Bristow and Mary Elizabeth Richardson, freshmen.

Ann Ailor is an elementary education major. She is Vice-President of Legislative Board, Vice-President of Honors Council, and she was in charge of Freshman Orientation. She is also a member of Sigma Kappa sorority and Kappa Delta Pi honorary. She previously served as president of Alpha Lambda Delta.

Tricia Bates, an English major, has been vice-chairman and chairman of the Elections Committee. She was an Orientation Leader, is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, is class and color manager of AA Hockey in 1968, and a Colleague in 1966. She has played intramural badminton, basketball, and volleyball.

Susan Davenport is an Art major. She is a member of Phi Kappa, Junior representative to Judicial Board, and the cartoonist for the Rotunda. She is also a student assistant.

Shorti Marconi is an English major. She is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. She played Freshman Basketball, Class and Color Basketball, Varsity Hockey, and participated in Freshman Production.

Cindy Jamison, a Business Education major, is a Colleague and a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha. She was a member of Freshman Commission and chairman of Freshman Production.

Sybil Prouse is a Math major. She plays Varsity Tennis and is a Rotunda reporter, a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, a Colleague, and a past Miss Longwood contestant.

Ann Bristow and Merb Richardson are two freshmen who have already exhibited their class and school spirit. Ann is from Richmond. Presently she is undecided on her major. Merb, also from Richmond, has expressed an interest in directing Christian Education.

Geist selected the theme Oktoberfest from a festival of the same name held annually in Germany at this time of year. This festival will be held yearly at Longwood beginning this year when the Oktoberfest will be held October 25-26.

Juniors Sponsor Spizzwinks During Group's Virginia Tour

By LINDA SHEPHERD

The Spizzwinks, Yale University's traditional group of eleven male singers, will appear in Jarman at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, October 13.

Since its organization in 1914, the group has become a tradition at Yale, and because of its yearly tours, has gained recognition at many east coast colleges from Maine to Florida.

In the past, the Spizzwinks have appeared before groups at Vassar, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Sarah Lawrence, and Harvard.

The fall tour in Virginia will bring them to Mary Washington, Sweet Briar, Hollins, the University of Virginia, and Longwood.

Originally, the Spizzwinks were strictly a campus group, staging mid-week shows at local coffee houses, with an occasional 3:00 a.m. concert in a deserted gas station or a serenade beneath a girl's dormitory window at a more acceptable hour.

Last year, some girls in Cox and Wheeler were somewhat startled to be introduced to this custom of Spizzwink serenading when the group visited Longwood's campus in the spring.

The Spizzwink style consists of traditional songs of the past updated and rearranged by the members themselves, and then presented a cappella, without musical accompaniment.

Each year as the group adds and loses members, the repertoire changes, new songs being added and others being dropped. Since the early shows, however, the first song of a Spizzwink show is always "Blue Skies."

This year's Spizzwink Concert is being sponsored by the Junior Class. The admission price is $5.00.

Support Class and color Hockey! Intramural practices begin 4:00 October 9, on Barlow Field.

Changes In General Education Requirements Allow Greater Flexibility In Individual Programs

Changes in the plan of General Education requirements for all students have been approved by a faculty vote of 2 to 1. These changes, designed to give greater flexibility in individual programs, will go into effect in September, 1969.

Following the revision of the State Certification Requirements for teachers, which became effective July 1, 1968, the administration appointed, in March, 1967, a faculty committee to suggest possible changes in the General Education curriculum.

Members of the General Education Committee were Merry Lewis Allen, assistant professor of Mathematics; JoAnn M. Fritsch, instructor in English; E. Lee Land, assistant professor of Education; Helen Barnes Savage, assistant professor of Philosophy; Joseph M. Scolinick, Jr., assistant professor of Political Science; Dr. Marvin W. Scott, associate professor of Biology; and Edwin H. Vassar, associate professor of Education.

After over a year's deliberation by this committee, and spirited discussion by the faculty, the following changes were approved:

"Humanities: 18 semester hours. Six hours in Art, Music, and Dramatic Arts. This work may be in any courses within the student's competency. Three hours in English Composition. In addition, the student must pass a proficiency examination. Six hours in Literature. This includes literature in foreign languages. Three hours in Literature or Philosophy, excluding Philosophy 460.

"Social Sciences: 12 semester hours. Three hours in American History. Nine hours in courses in at least two of the following areas: Economics, Geography, Government, History, Sociology, and Anthropology.

"Natural Sciences: 8 semester hours. One four-hour laboratory course in each of two of the following sciences: Biology, Chemistry, Geology, Physics, and Physical Science. Natural Sciences requirements for elementary education majors meet this requirement. Physical education majors will take prescribed courses in Physiology and Anatomy in addition to a basic four-hour course in General Biology.

"Mathematics: 6 semester hours. Mathematics 123, 124 are required for elementary education majors. Students in other curricula will take Mathematics 261, 262; Mathematics 161, 162; or Mathematics 111, 112.

"Health and Physical Education: 4 semester hours.

"Departures from the general education program may be made in exceptional cases. Each program must have the approval of the Dean of the College and a faculty committee appointed by the President."

It can be noted that, under these changes, two years of history courses will no longer satisfy the Social Science requirement. The student must take at least one course in some other area of social science.

Also, the six hours required in art, music, or dramatic arts may be split up. It will no longer be necessary for all six of these hours to be in one of these fields.

There is a major change in the Natural Science department. Students will be required to have a semester course in each of two different sciences.

There is a reduction in the total number of required hours in Health and Physical Education. Health Education courses are still required.

Dr. William L. Frank, chairman of the Department of English, will head a committee to recommend the details of the proficiency examination for English Composition.

The new General Education requirements constitute the first step in major curriculum changes which will be taking place within the college. The next step is within the individual departments of instruction. Heads and members of the departments will review their major requirements for the possibility of changes therein. Nothing in the current changes affects any major requirement of any department or the requirements for the sequence of courses in teacher education.

The whole matter of curriculum is currently under review, according to Dr. Herbert R. Blackwell, Dean. He stated two reasons for this: a desire to reflect the changes made by the State Board of Education in the State Certification Requirements; and a belief that it is healthy for a college often to take a close look at its curriculum.

The only class unaffected by these changes will be the present senior class. All "old students" returning next September will be able to choose which set of General Education requirements can best be adapted into their schedules. This policy is clarified on page 64 of the 1968-1969 catalogue. New students will be required to meet the new set of requirements.

The COLLEAGUES want to congratulate the chosen usherettes for Geist - especially the Freshmen.

Fate Of The Bond

The editors of the Rotunda are concerned about the fate of the Bond Referendum in the November 5 elections. We realize the necessity of having this referendum approved in order to advance higher education in Virginia. We would like to think that Virginia students are receiving as high a quality of education as any students in the United States. We should also like to think that our facilities are equal to those anywhere in the world. However, we would only be fooling ourselves if we thought that our colleges and state-supported institutions could keep pace with those in other states unless the present educational facilities are supplemented. We need passage of the bond referendum.

During the past few weeks we have become aware that many students, including those of voting age, are totally unaware of the upcoming bond referendum. Many on campus have no idea how this vote will affect them. Indeed, very few students are aware of the specific ways in which Longwood College will benefit from the passage of the bond issue.

In an effort to correct this situation, we shall devote a portion of the October 16 issue of the Rotunda to the Bond Referendum, with special attention to what passage of Chapter 17, as supplemented by Chapter 805, will mean to Longwood's immediate future, and to the development of community colleges throughout Virginia.

— M. K. M.

Are You Informed?

Certainly there are very few people on the Longwood campus who couldn't tell you that Tuesday, November 5 is election day, and name the three presidential candidates. And most of them could probably also name the three running-mates.

But suppose we make the questions a little more challenging. How do the candidates stand on Viet Nam, law and order, and the other issues? Is there also a Congressional race in your district next month? If so, who are the candidates? Is liquor-by-the-drink on the ballot in your county? How does a bond issue raise money?

These questions are all of vital importance, and all should meet with a ready response from educated collegians. Certainly, for those who have reached twenty-one, the reason is obvious. An educated electorate is a necessary prerequisite to good government.

Of course, a majority of the students at Longwood are not of voting age. But this is no excuse for ignorance of the issues in this election. The learning and understanding of current events is an important part of becoming fully educated.

Daily national and local news is easily accessible. It requires little time and effort to scan a newspaper, or watch or listen to a TV or radio news broadcast. And the time invested is never wasted.

It isn't necessary to be a registered voter to be an informed citizen. All it takes is interest in the fate of our nation, our state, and our communities.

— M. A. M.

Gresham Speaks On English

At Massachusetts Institute

Foster B. Gresham, associate professor of English at Longwood College, spoke at the final session of an invitational leadership training conference conducted by the National Council of Teachers of English in Springfield, Massachusetts, on October 4 and 5.

Approximately forty representatives from state and regional English organizations in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, the New England states, and Quebec, as well as representatives from state departments of education in the New England states will be attending the conference.

Currently serving as executive secretary of the Virginia Association of Teachers, Gresham spoke on "Common English Association Problems and Solutions." Other speakers at the conference will be Dr. Alfred Gromm, Stanford University, and Dr. Geraldine LaRogue, Teachers College of Columbia University.

Having served as president of the Virginia association during 1951, Gresham began his executive secretariat work the following year when the membership of this state organization numbered 148; the 1968 membership closed at 2,465.

Gresham edited the "Virginia English Bulletin," from 1951 to 1960. In 1955 his "Teaching of English in the Virginia High Schools" was published by the association and given wide distribution throughout the state.

Having served as acting chairman of Longwood's department of English for the past three years, Gresham teaches children's literature and methods of teaching English, and is director of the adult reading improvement program. He, also, visits public schools to observe Longwood English majors who are practice teachers.

The conference in Springfield is one of a series conducted by NCTE throughout the nation over a three-year period to strengthen the work in state and local professional organizations in English. The conferences are strictly invitational in each region in which they are held.

Sister Students Tell Experiences Of Traveling Throughout Europe, U.S.

By LIBBA BALL

Two sisters teamed up and decided to come to Longwood. One is now a junior, the other a freshman. The two girls, Julie and Camille Primm, have lived all over Europe and the United States. Their father, a Navy captain, has been stationed in Stuttgart, Germany, for two years. Prior to that, the girls lived in Paris for eight months.

This summer, Julie, a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, worked in Stuttgart.

"I worked in a German IBM office translating and typing letters in English. Funny thing, though, I was only paid 84¢ an hour!"

The girls accompanied their parents and two brothers on a two week camping excursion.

"We camp somewhere every weekend," they admitted. "Daddy's V.W. camper has really been great for travel."

During the trip, they stayed in Calais, France; took a ferry to Dover, England; camped in southern England and Wales; ferried from Wales to the free state of Ireland; visited Edinburgh, Scotland; toured London; and then returned to Germany.

"While in London," Julie began, "we saw Big Ben, Westminster Cathedral, visited Parliament, Hyde Park and London Bridge; rode on the underground 'tube,' walked inside the Tower of London, toured the Old Curiosity Shop, saw Madame Tussaud's crown jewels, shopped at Piccadilly Circus, window - shopped on Carnaby Street saw a portion of the changing of the guards, viewed historic Trafalgar Square, and," she paused, "the most novel sight was Elizabeth Taylor's sea yacht. Every time she and Burton do a movie, she insists her poodles come along. Customs prevent the dogs entering the London port, so the yacht is anchored in the harbor with the dogs aboard during their visit. We even saw a couple!"

In Scotland, they saw the "piping in of the Scottish regiment." "The men wore kilts and played their bagpipes," Camille explained.

"One of our most exciting experiences occurred on the way into Ireland," Julie related. "There was an epidemic of hoof and mouth disease. All tourists were ordered to leave all foods, fruits, and vegetables behind, or we couldn't go into the country. They made us turn in all our foods, even the canned fruits and meats imported from America. We really ate out a lot after that!"

"Even worse than that," Camille said, "our V.W. had to be 'craned' onto the ferry. The trip was from 2 a.m. until 5 a.m., and we were all seasick. There was an incident where an old man was attacked by two young Irish 'tough guys' . . . adding up to a pretty exciting ferry boat ride. We just didn't think we should have lost all our food, risked having the bus craned, and been exposed to the ferry ride; but our father insisted on seeing Ireland. I'm glad, too, because it was one of the most scenic countries we saw!"

Dr. Robert Banton Receives Doctorate In Education. U. Va.

Congratulations to Dr. Banton of the Education Department for obtaining his doctorate this summer.

Dr. Banton graduated from Randolph - Macon College with a B.A. in developmental psychology and received his master's from the University of Virginia in elementary education and elementary school administration. He obtained his doctorate also from the University of Virginia in elementary curriculum and instruction in education.

Dr. Banton has taught grades 3-8, served as an assistant principal, and taught at the University of Virginia. In the summer of 1966 he was a visiting instructor here at Longwood and then returned in the fall of 1967 as a full time assistant professor. Now, as an associate professor, he teaches principles of elementary education courses, language arts courses, and early childhood education courses.

Also this summer Dr. Banton conducted a kindergarten institute to help the local schools acquire teachers. This was the first time in many years that Longwood has had a program for the training of kindergarten teachers. Another institute is planned for next year.

Monaco, Switzerland, and Berlin.

"Last August we rode on a military train, which runs at night, to East Berlin. We took a bus tour in East Berlin and were shown what the Russians do. The whole area looked sad. The people who waved to us seemed very unhappy. We were really upset."

"Checkpoint Charlie is something else," they said. "The guards keep a close eye on all tourists, carefully checking passport pictures with your face. One guard has a pole with a mirror attached to its end. He runs this pole under the bus to check if any of the people are trying to escape into the free country. There are television cameras on everyone there and the monitors are viewing every move you make."

Both girls have trinket charm bracelets with items from nearly every country they've visited. One charm is the Leaning Tower of Pisa in Italy, another shows Denmark, and still others remind them of areas in the U.S. they've seen.

The girls modeled a kilt outfit that, Julie explained, "is the dress kilt for the Stuart clan." Camille sports a pair of German knickers. "They're quite the thing in Germany today, especially stylish with desert boots."

Longwood Wins Impressively; Old Dominion Goes Down 7-0

By LYNNE COLEMAN

In new, pleated navy blue kilts and white blouses, the varsity hockey team whished to an impressive victory over Old Dominion Saturday, October 5. The "Longwood Ladies" showed off their uniforms in style with the first win of the season.

The game consisted of two twenty-five minute halves with a five minute break between them. The game began with an exchange of the ball as both teams carried the ball to the opposing striking circle but could not score. Finally Jane Tibbs, L.C.'s own "Hockey Queen" successfully completed a push for the first score. Longwood then took the initiative and continued the drive. Beautiful saves by Anna Pettis, well hit corners by Phyllis Carter, and good offensive back-ups by the halfbacks dominated the second half play. The final touches were added as Jane Tibbs scored three additional goals. Becky Bondurant, two, and center forward Barbara Snellings, one.

Old Dominion attempted to reach the striking circle, but failed to do so after the first five minutes of play. This depended greatly on Longwood's defense and fantastic efforts by two fullbacks, Cathy Hass and Jane Richardson.

Hockey Team Chosen; Hass, Pettis Co-Captains

Two weeks of hard work finally paid off for the 27 girls who are the new members of Longwood's 1968 Hockey team. Of these 27, there are 7 seniors, 9 juniors, 7 sophomores, and 4 freshmen.

The seniors, Cathy Hass and Anna Pettis (co-captains), Sally Heilman, Jane Tibbs, Becky Bondurant, Jane Erdman, and Leslie Sedgwick are all returning from last year's team.

The juniors put their best foot forward and gave us Fran Anthony, Phyllis Carter, Betty King, Betty Layne, Chris McDonnell, Jo Newberry, Kathy Parker, Barbara Snellings, and Judy Turner, all of whom are on the team last year or played class hockey. The sophomores did not do so badly with Janet Harpold, Kathy Long, Freda Lunsford, Jane McCaffrey, Sandi Naylor, (a last year's veteran), Jane Richardson, and Maxine Stone. Last, let us congratulate the four freshmen, Ellen Dunn, Debbie Ellenbrand, Nancy Fowlkes, and Susan Stutz.

Ruffner, Tabb-French Elect

New Dormitory Presidents

Small in stature, but a powerhouse in her own right, Anna Etheridge came out on top in the Freshman dorm election for Tabb and French halls. Anna, from Portsmouth, Va., is an education major. She hopes to teach either art or one of the social sciences to high school or junior high school students.

An avid sports fan, Anna has already exhibited her prowess at being a good sport. She emerged from her cold water baptism smiling.

Cassie Ann (alias Tinker) Habel from Burkeville, Va., captured the presidency of Ruffner dorm. She is in pre-pharmacy and hopes to transfer to the Medical College of Virginia, now part of Virginia Commonwealth University.

Tinker has had a double introduction to Longwood. With both her mother and sister as alumnae, she is already a member of the Granddaughter's Club. She also attended Longwood's summer session this past summer. In short, she knows all the ropes.

People say that our hockey field is smooth — so what was your excuse this week, Alma?

Fifi found that "Waltzing" had its advantages and disadvantages; especially with a stick in one hand!

Tibbs, are you sure those tennis shoes weren't in that bathtub?

LC Joins "Up With People"; Selects Sheila O'Neill Leader

By MARY ALICE CARMODY

Sheila O'Neill, who transferred here in her junior year from Averett, is head of the "Up With People" group at Longwood. Sheila is a senior elementary education major from Roanoke and will do her student teaching there next block.

So far the group, with Mr. Rubley as advisor, has about seventy members including a drummer from Longwood, guitarists from Hampden-Sydney, and a banjo-playing professor from Longwood. ## ARA Plans Survey; Urges Co-operation To Determine Menu

ARA Slater Food Service and the Dining Hall Committee plan to conduct a Food Preference Survey next week in order to determine your food likes and dislikes. After studying the results of this survey they will be better able to plan menus that will appeal to the majority of the students.

Each Hall President will distribute questionnaires on Monday, October 16. These should be filled out carefully and completely with a soft lead pencil. The survey sheets are not to be folded. The results will be compiled by computer and published as soon as they are available.

The Slater Food Service wants to provide Longwood with the finest in food service. Students can help by cooperating with the survey. Mr. Martin, emphasizing the need for every student to complete and return a questionnaire, said, "A successful survey depends on each girl's participation and cooperation."

Geist Presents Oktoberfest First Time Skits, Midway Highlight Ceremonies

Next weekend, October 25-27, a bit of Germany will envelop Longwood. Through the ingenuity and hard work of the members of Geist, this weekend will be Oktoberfest, carrying out the German name Geist which means spirit and intellect.

Modeled after the German festival of about the same time, Oktoberfest will open with a parade Friday afternoon at 5:00 beginning at Longwood and going through the upper part of Main Street. The parade will be composed of fifteen units all from this campus. The floats will be judged on the basis of craftsmanship and theme communication modeled after the skits.

Saturday at 1:15 the 392nd Army Band from Fort Lee, Virginia, will present a concert. Also during the weekend Sing Out Students, the newly organized group on campus, will favor us with their first performance.

From 2:00 to 5:00 the Midway will be open. The General Midway consisting of twenty-four booths will be located behind the dining hall with the theme Midway made up of seven booths around Tabb Circle.

At 3:30 the attention will be centered on the hockey game between the alumnae and the varsity team.

Color skits will be featured Friday and Saturday nights with the judging Saturday night. The judges will select the winner on the basis of costumes, songs, dances, stunts, and script effectiveness. Following this, the overall winner for the weekend will be named. The categories of competition include best float, best booth, color rush, and best skit.

The newly named Usherettes, Festmeister, and Mittenmeister will be quite busy with Oktoberfest too. The eight Usherettes, Ann Allor, Tricia Bates, Susan Davenport, Shorti Marconi, Cindy Jamison, Sybil Prouse, Ann Bristow, and Merb Richardson, will be in the parade Friday and serve as ushers at the skits. Their costumes will be blue dirndl skirts and white blouses patterned after German garb, and before the skits begin, they will perform the shoe clap, an authentic German dance. The Usherettes will be responsible for the cake cutting in Lankford Building in addition to managing the Geist booth on the Midway.

The Mittenmeister, Pat Cloonan, will lead the parade and on the Midway she will be found in the information booth. She will also announce the winners at the skits on Saturday night. Dillard Vaughan, Festmeister, will be featured on the Geist float and will sign over the skits as Mistress of Ceremonies. Both Pat's and Dillard's attire will be authentically German.

The walk of old Chi Saturday night will culminate the day's activities.

Sunday afternoon at 1:00 the Young Republicans will sponsor a powder puff football game on Wheeler Mall.

In attempts to make Oktoberfest genuinely German, Geist is receiving much help from faculty members. Dr. Wells has attended the Oktoberfest celebration in Germany, as have Mr. and Mrs. Sandighe and Miss Bowman. Also instrumental in fostering the authenticity is Hanna Braun, our German foreign exchange student.

Sally Heilman, chairman of Oktoberfest, commented, "Student enthusiasm for the weekend is tremendous, and everyone is anxious to see what will happen."

An industrious Green and White works on flowers for the color float.

Red and Whites practice their skit for the Oktoberfest.

ACP Poll Of College Editors Indicates 91% Support Nixon

(ACP) Richard Nixon will be the next president of the United States according to 91 percent of the nation's college newspaper editors.

The opinion survey conducted by Associated Collegiate Press was based on a representative mail poll of 7 percent of college editors selected by the research division of the school of journalism and mass communication at the University of Minnesota. Criteria included regional location, circulation and frequency of publication.

Editors classified themselves as 46 percent independent, 30 percent Republican and 24 percent Democrat.

If the election had been held during the second week of October, 50 percent indicated they would vote for Nixon, 37 percent for Hubert Humphrey, 1-1/2 percent each for George Wallace and Dick Gregory and 10 percent undecided.

Only 7 percent expect Humphrey to be elected.

Based on individual party affiliation the survey indicated the following results:

If the presidential election were held today, students would vote for: 30% of the students, who were Republicans, said: Nixon, 85%; Humphrey, 6%; Wallace, 4%; Gregory, 0%; Undecided, 7%.

Twenty-four percent of the students, who were Democrats, said: Nixon 20%; Humphrey, 64%; Wallace, 0%; Gregory, 8%; Undecided, 8%.

Independent students stated that they would vote this: Nixon, 45%; Humphrey, 30%; Wallace, 4%; Gregory, 2%; Undecided, 17%; No one, 4%.

The overall results were: Nixon, 50%; Humphrey, 37%; Wallace, 1.5%; Gregory, 1.5%; Undecided or no one, 10%.

College students believe the following man will be elected president: Nixon, 91%; Humphrey, 7%; Undecided, 2%.

President Willett congratulates Stacy Dodge and Patti Pawl on being named to 'Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.'

Twenty-Eight Seniors Named To 'Who's Who'

President Henry I. Willett, Jr., announced Monday night that twenty-eight seniors from Longwood had been elected to 'Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.'

The students selected were Claudia Adams, Ann Allor, Carol Anthony, Becky Bartholomew, Evelyn Blackman, Emilia Bruce, Stacy Dodge, Ann Fleschman, Kay Hall, Cathy Hass, Sally Heilman, Brenda Holly, Linda Hudson, Candy Jamison, Terry Knight, Karen Maher, Marcia Mitchell, Patti Pawl, Anna Pettis, Meg Pherson, Lynne Rachal, Susan Ross, Peggy Schults, Janet Sofley, Jane Tribbs, Joan Tice, Cam Thomas, and Jinx Washington.

Each student is elected on the basis of her academic average which must be at least 2.5, her participation and leadership in academic and extracurricular activities, and her citizenship and service to the school and her promise of future usefulness.

There are two nominating committees from Longwood. Each senior member of Geist nominates students from the senior class as do the following members of the administration and faculty: the advisor to the Student Government, the head of the Athletic Association, the advisor to the YWCA, the advisor to Geist, the senior class sponsor, and departmental chairmen. A third committee consisting of Dr. H. I. Willett, Jr., President; Dr. Herbert Blackwell, Dean of the College; Dr. Ruth B. Wilson, Dean of Women; Harold Magnuson, Registrar; and Mr. T. C. Dalton, Director of Special Services, elect the members to 'Who's Who' from the list of candidates submitted by the two nominating committees.

Hubert Humphrey

In 20 years as a U. S. senator and as Vice-President, Hubert H. Humphrey has compiled a liberal, creative public record. He has pioneered, or vigorously championed, bold programs in virtually every legislative sphere — social security and medicare, the war on poverty at home and abroad, federal aids to education, jobs and manpower training, world peace, and disarmament. It has been said, indeed, that nearly every piece of progressive legislation enacted over the past 20 years bears the Humphrey imprint.

Mr. Humphrey believes it possible for the United States to begin withdrawing our troops from Vietnam as the South Vietnamese are proving themselves capable of defending their country alone. Also, he feels a new government by the process of free elections is needed in South Vietnam. He has spoken about the necessity for a broad and intensive program of land reform so that the people of Vietnam have a greater stake in their government.

Born in a South Dakota village, Mr. Humphrey is closest to rural America. He has devoted much of his public career to improving the lot of American farmers and related food industries. He also, understands the problems of the working men and women of America. Mr. Humphrey has gained much labor support because of his ready sympathy and keen understanding of the problems plaguing labor.

A believer in human rights, Mr. Humphrey wants all men, black and white, rich and poor, to be considered equally in America. He has always been an advocate of civil rights and individual pride in America; and, he promises to remain so by helping to further these causes.

Because he has such pride in America, he advocates conservation of America's resources. He wants to create Regional Pollution Authorities which would be funded by the states and localities covered and which would be authorized to receive and administer federal antipollution funds. He also believes that efficient pollution control, in order to be effective, should be part of our daily lives.

Finally, Mr. Humphrey believes in lowering the voting age to 18. He feels that today's youth is very important to the future as well as the present.

If you would be interested in finding out more about Mr. Hubert Humphrey and his campaign, we invite you to attend the next meeting of the Young Democrats.

Richard Nixon

Last spring the student body at Longwood voted overwhelmingly for Richard Nixon in Choice '68, Time's national collegiate presidential poll. Could this be an indication that Mr. Nixon's views on key issues more nearly reflect the attitudes and thinking of Longwood ladies?

Like Mr. Nixon, does not Longwood give the Viet Nam War top priority in the area of foreign policy? We all want a swift and honorable end to the war. Mr. Nixon advocates a policy of de-Americanization of the military effort — giving more responsibility to the South Vietnamese and gradually withdrawing American troops.

None of us can dispute the inequities of the present system of Army induction. Upon de-escalation of the war, Mr. Nixon proposes the creation of an all-volunteer army. Future wars will require a smaller number of soldiers more highly trained in the use of nuclear weapons or in the area of guerrilla warfare. The draft would supplement these forces in time of an emergency.

Like Mr. Nixon, in the area of domestic policy, Longwood gives first priority to the question of law and order (in Choice '68 poll). We have seen a growth in crime with the continual weakening of peace forces. Mr. Nixon urges that the balance between peace forces and criminal forces be restored. Crime, riots, and civil disorders will decline only after there is a change of attitude among the American people — and only after there is increased respect for the law and its enforcement by the administration.

A Nixon-Agrew Administration would be conservative in nature. It would seek Republican solutions to Democratic dilemmas. Existing programs would be improved upon or abolished. Laws in existence would be enforced or changed constitutionally. Private enterprise would play a major role in solving unemployment and urban problems. Finally, power would be transferred from the Washington bureaucracy to the states where it belongs.

Could a "Nixon's the One" button or an "I'm for Milhou's" button be considered part of a Longwood lady's standard dress? Hopefully this will prove true in next week's mock election.

George Wallace

George C. Wallace is the candidate with the courage to speak the truth. He does not avoid the issue.

Wallace has stated that he "will give moral support to the policemen of this country and to the firemen of the country." He will stand behind them because they are "the thin line between complete anarchy in the streets and the physical safety of our person."

Wallace supports the theory of states rights and local government. He emphasized the fact that he "recommends that the states of the Union continue to determine the policies of their domestic institutions themselves."

On the Viet Nam situation Wallace has stated that he is willing to stay in Viet Nam and win, but this victory should be with the conventional weapons of warfare. Wallace also remarked that "these few people today who are advocating sedition and raising money and clothes and supplies for the Viet Cong ... ought to be dealt with, as traitors."

Wallace is well-qualified to lead the American people. Between 1945 and 1968 Wallace has served as an assistant Alabama Attorney General, a member of the State Legislature, a Circuit Judge, and Governor. He has put Alabama on a firm financial basis and developed a surplus in the state treasury. He has created a new university, fourteen junior colleges, fifteen trade schools, and raised teachers' salaries in Alabama.

Wallace will lead America forward. America needs courage. America needs George C. Wallace.

Geist Week - From Varying Points Of View

Lynne Rachal Represents LC In Harvest Bowl; Travels To Roanoke For Festivities, Fun

By PATTY KINGSLEY

At the annual Harvest Bowl festivities, held on Friday, October 11, Lynne Rachal represented Longwood College as one of the eight princesses.

The court is composed of princesses from eight women's colleges in Virginia, a maid of honor, and the Harvest Bowl queen. The eight girls' schools from which the princesses are chosen include Longwood, Madison, Radford, Mary Baldwin, Randolph-Macon, Sweetbriar, Hollins, and Roanoke Woman's College. As Virginia Military Institute played the University of West Virginia this year in the Harvest Bowl game, the Maid of Honor represented UWV. The Queen of the Harvest Bowl was Miss Virginia, Miss Cherie Suzanne Davis.

Lynne was selected to represent Longwood by a faculty committee, on the basis of scholarship, participation in school activities, and appearance. Lynne, who hails from Richmond, is an active, congenial senior who has shown a sincere interest in many of Longwood's activities, while maintaining a high scholastic average. A member of Geist, she is also treasurer of Panhellenic Council, first vice-president of ASA sorority, treasurer of Honors' Council, and a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, Pi Gamma Mu, and Kappa Delta Pi.

All of the preparations, made by the Junior League of Roanoke who sponsored the Harvest Bowl, culminated in a full day of activities for the Harvest Bowl Court on October 11. They attended a luncheon in the Miller and Rhoads Tearoom in Roanoke where the girls met their escorts, cadets from VMI. The court also had the pleasure of meeting the star of the television program, "Gentle Ben," Miss Beth Brickell.

After the relaxing and enjoyable luncheon, the girls and their escorts went out to the football stadium to practice for the half-time activities of the game, to be held that night.

In past years, the Harvest Bowl Parade has been held on Saturday afternoon, but since the festivities were scheduled for Friday, this year, the parade was a pregame activity, which circled around the stadium.

At the half-time of the game, the red carpet was rolled out for the ten lovely members of the court who wore long white gowns. As the colors for the Harvest Bowl this year were red, white, and blue, the princesses wore red capes, the maid of honor wore a blue cape, and the queen wore silver. Besides the introduction of the Harvest Bowl Court, other half-time activities included entertainment by the University of West Virginia band, in addition to a fireworks display.

The game ended, with UWV the victors, the court proceeded with their escorts to a midnight supper party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Fishman, of Peakwood. The girls mixed company with such dignitaries as Lt. Governor Pollard, and the mayor of Roanoke.

Even now, Lynne still speaks of the Harvest Bowl with much enthusiasm, "I wish everybody could have gone — it was a ball. The princesses weren't competing against each other — it was just fun for all of us."

Lynne Rachal, Longwood's Harvest Bowl Princess, reflects on the Festival Weekend.

Petruchio (Jim Rhodes) quiets the shrew Katherina (Sandy Ellis) for a few moments.

... Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign, one that cares for thee ...

Martha Drummond applies eye make-up to Sandy Ellis preceding the play.

... I pray, sir, tell me, is it possible
That love should of a sudden take such hold?

Kathy Goodwyn exhibits back stage skill with the lighting of the stage.

... Thou hast tamed a curst shrew.
Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tamed so.

Blanca (Bonnie Ellis) and Tranio (Sam Dawson) watch the progress of rehearsal backstage.

"The Taming Of The Shrew" Success Martha Drummond Directs Play

The many hours of preparation were clearly seen in the production of Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew," presented here at Longwood on October 17, 18, 19.

Katherina, the eldest daughter of Baptista, a rich gentleman of Padua, was considered to be mean, hateful, and cursed, in other words, a shrew. Bianca, Katherina's younger sister, on the other hand, was very beautiful and had many suitors. Since Katherina was not married, Bianca was forced to remain unwed until a mate for her sister could be found.

Bianca's suitors therefore took it upon themselves to find a suitable husband. Finally, Petruchio, a gentleman of Verona, realizing the wealth of Katherina's father and the money he would receive, agreed to take Katherina off her father's hands and thus free Bianca.

The main action is centered around Katherina and her husband Petruchio. How could anyone possibly live with such a cruel, hateful, unloving woman like Katherina? In this play, one sees how Petruchio is able to "tame the shrew."

The two main character parts were played exceptionally well, although Katherina did not seem to be as shrewish as she should have been. Her final speech had a falseness about it, mainly because her performance earlier in the play didn't emphasize enough her shrewish qualities. In addition, it was quite evident that some of the minor characters were miscast. Instead of giving a supporting performance, they tended to let their parts drag. However, such characters as Hortensio and Tranio helped to keep the tone of the play light and comical by their excellent portrayals.

Bianca failed in the attempt to depict a sweet and lovable character. A major fault in the play lay in the fact that much of the humor contained in this Shakespearean drama was lost entirely. Whether this was because of poor acting, or just a bad audience is not clear.

There were, however, some good points to be recognized. None of the players seemed to have any trouble remembering their lines, and this was very praiseworthy. The props and scenery were quite adaptable to each scene of the play while the costumes were original and suitable for the time the play depicted.

The production of "The Taming of the Shrew" proved to be very enjoyable evening entertainment.

Honore Holten makes some last minute repairs on costumes.

Peggy Thompson and Pat Lucas take a break during the rehearsal of "Taming of the Shrew."

Technicolor Bowling Comes To Longwood, Free Cokes Given

Technicolor bowling came to Longwood Saturday night.

Bowlers were trying for red-and-green spares, purple-orange-and-blue strikes and just about everything else in between, as Log-Pins had their campus premiere in the Langford Building bowling alley.

Free cokes were offered to those who scored better than 148 in the new bowling game, played with colored ten pins. One bowler, Kay Harvey, scored better than 148 twice, and there were four other winners, according to Vince Rickman, assistant recreation area manager.

Bowling with Log-Pins is harder than bowling with regulation white pins, says recreation area manager Don Sequin. According to Mr. Sequin, who introduced Longwood bowlers to the new game, colored pins impair the bowler's ability to judge pin distances. When a new deck of pins sets down, he adds, it tends to unsettle the bowler's nerves when he or she sees the colors rearranged.

Mr. Sequin hopes to offer Log-Pin bowling as a regular activities building feature, but free cokes may not be given away every week.

Bowling winners cokes Saturday were: Kay Harvey, scoring 155 and 152; Joan Lawter, scoring 148; Janis McMahon, with 150; Judy Old, 150; and Sandy Harris, 164.

Tibbs, Sedgewick, Pettis, Chosen For Allied Team

Last weekend several girls were selected from Longwood's varsity hockey team to go to Richmond and play with teams composed of players from all over the Tidewater region. They played two games and were judged by national hockey officials on their present playing ability and their past hockey records. From these girls three teams were chosen. The first team is the Allied team which will play the Netherlands Team today. Three Longwood players, Leslie Sedgewick, Jane Tibbs, and Anna Pettis, were chosen for this team. They will play the Netherlands team Wednesday, October 23, at 4 p.m. at William and Mary College in Williamsburg. There was also an exhibition game Sunday at Sidewell Friends in Baltimore, in which the Allied team played Washington teams I and II. This was meant as a tune up game for the Dutch. The Allied team will be wearing purple and yellow blouses while the Dutch team wears blue kilts and orange blouses.

Two temporary teams were also chosen last weekend, Tidewater I and II. On October 26, the Tidewater I and II teams will play the Washington I and II teams, while the Netherlands team plays the U.S. Reserves team. The two Tidewater teams are subject to change later in the season. However, the present members of the Allied team are permanent for the remainder of the year.

Heintz, Calloway Supervise Varsity Basketball Try-Outs

Varsity basketball try-outs got underway Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in Iler Gymnasium. It was the beginning of a long string of training sessions and practices before the varsity team has its first game on December 7.

This year's basketball coaches are Dr. Mary A. Heintz and Miss Carolyn Calloway. They have already begun "pushing" as, Tuesday night, they had the girls running time tests around chairs, shooting a number of goals-per-minute tests, and working on set shots. The first practice was warm-up and sample of some of the skills tests which will be put before the girls. The players will be selected from those who score highest on the tests in such things as ball handling, footwork, speed, agility, and accuracy.

Tuesday night came through with a large turn-out of girls and the coaches hope to see more participation. The greater the potential, the better the team.

Next training sessions will be Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights, Oct. 21-23 at 7.

Interested students are urged to attend.

Varsity Hockey Team Downs Richmond Team In Rain

Although hampered by a muddy field, the varsity hockey team defeated Richmond Club Saturday 3-0.

Junior Betty Layne did a good job at right wing replacing Jane Tibbs who was in Richmond taking tests.

The Longwood ladies scored early in the first half and controlled the ball most of the game. Center forward Barbara Snellings scored in the first goal after a short corner taken by wing Phyllis Carter. Later in the first half, center half back Betty King drove hard through the middle and when a defensive player tried to clear the ball out, it went over for Longwood's second score. Barbara again scored in the second half by taking a pass from half back Sandi Naylor who brought the ball down the field.

This victory was Longwood's third straight and they have not been scored on due to the outstanding defensive play of the backfield, Cathy Hass, Jane Richardson, Sandi Naylor, Jane Erdman, and Betty King.

Corkette Team Announced Plans Show For Oktoberfest

After weeks of exhausting practices, the new Corkettes were announced. They are Ann Weisiger, Judy Donohoe, Linda Overstreet, Janet Harmon, Bonnie Walton, Marilyn Chapman, Linda Ahern, Kathy Wilson, Bonnie Jewel, and Lois Hrubik. These girls help compose the synchronized water ballet team when they present shows for various events at Longwood. The former members are still in the club if they have not been taken into the H2O club. Several members of the team will present an exhibition during Oktoberfest. Group one includes Dale Grigg, Sandy Allen, Ann Weisiger, and Linda Ahern. Kathy Wilson, Ann Bishop, Page Nance, and Bonnie Walton are in Group Two. Group Three is composed of Candy Dickman, Ann Bishop, Marilyn Chapman, Bonnie Jewel, Page Nance, Dale Grigg, Lois Hrubik, and Linda Overstreet.

U. Of Michigan Researchers Survey Undergrad Study Units

(I.P.)—Two University of Michigan professors have been awarded a grant of $46,075 by the Carnegie Corp. of New York for inter-university research on residential undergraduate study units.

The project's co-directors, Theodore M. Newcomb, professor of sociology and associate director of the University's Residential College, and Donald R. Brown, professor of psychology and research associate at the U-M Center for Research on Learning and Teaching, have already collaborated with researchers and officials at several universities which have launched residential colleges.

"The larger universities are concerned about impersonality, academic anonymity, and alienation on the part of students, and, in general, about the bureaucratic effects of rapid growth and enormous size," Newcomb and Brown said. "In common with some small colleges, they have caught a glimpse of the possibilities of educational innovation and experimentation that are opened up by the creation of new and semi-autonomous units within a centrally administered unit."

Five schools are now participating in the study, although it is hoped that as many as 10 others will eventually join. The original five include Michigan, the University of Kansas, the State University of Florida, and the University of California at San Diego and Santa Cruz.

During the first year of the five-year program, data from the five schools will be processed at the U-M's Center for Research on Learning and Teaching. This information concerns the number of students in each university's program, their physical "isolation" from the rest of the university, and the autonomy of the administration as well as facts about the curricula and faculty. Raw summaries of the processed data will be sent to the five institutions.

"We are interested not only in information about the individual residential colleges," Brown said, "but also in comparisons. In order to understand the effects upon the students of residentially based programs, we need to know what those programs and their university settings are like."

After the raw summaries have been distributed, a more detailed analysis of the data will begin. This will involve comparisons within each school and between schools. In addition, information will be collected from and about students entering the colleges in the fall of the current academic year, 1968-69.

The next three years of the research program, Brown said, would be devoted to collecting and analyzing data on the individual student's values, expectations, and experience between entrance and departure from the residential college.

Special attention will be given to freshman-senior changes as related to experiences in college, and as compared both with nonresidential students and with students in other units of the same universities.

The final year of the program, 1971-72, is to be devoted exclusively to analysis, in the case of the five originally participating universities, and to final data-gathering in the other universities.

Dean Wilson Faces Mystery Player In Pool Tournament

A mystery pool player will face Dean Ruth B. Wilson at 2 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 9, when Round One of the 1968-69 Faculty-Student Pool Tournament gets underway in the Lankford Building recreation area.

Dean Wilson will play the mystery "hustler" in an exhibition match preceding the official beginning of the tournament. Also scheduled for an exhibition match are Don Sequin and Marshall Hall. At the conclusion of these matches, official tournament play will get underway between faculty and students.

The tournament, sponsored by the Lankford Building staff, will go on for the rest of the year with monthly contests to determine monthly champions. These six champions will vie for the tourney championship in the first week of May.

All Longwood students and faculty members are eligible to enter by signing up with Mr. Sequin or Vince Rickman, members of the Lankford staff.

Rules for the contest are as follows: In the monthly contests - Rounds 1 through 6 - participants may play rotation, eight-ball or straight pool. For any two opponents, the winner is whoever wins two out of three games of rotation or eight ball, or whoever first reaches the score of 30 in straight pool.

Eliminations will proceed by pairs until the champion of the month has been decided.

In all games there is a half-hour time limit. If no one has won when the time is up, the person who has the most points will be declared the winner by tournament officials.

The tournament champion, faculty or student, will have his or her name engraved on a tournament plaque which will remain in the Lankford rec area.

Among the November contestants are Dr. Mary Heintz, Kathy Long, Becky Bondurant, Chief Neil Smith, Betty Layne, Dr. Shirley O'Neil, Earl Rubley, Jettie Paschall and others.

David Stradinger, Jane Tibbs, John Ellis, Lynne Rachal, Carol Menefee, and Danny Rowle compose the panel that answered questions from high school students about college life. Typical of the questions were: "Can a student with low college board scores get into col-

Dining Hall Committee Explains Lack Of Desserts; Serve As Bridge Between Students And Slater

Have you missed your blueberries lately? Do you wonder about the cherry pies that used to be there? There's a reasonable explanation for the disappearance of these desserts.

The newly formed dining hall committee, serving as a bridge between Slater and the suggestions of the student body, discussed these and other issues at their first meeting on Oct. 14. Did you realize that the blueberry crop was ruined this year and that there is a shortage of cherries? The committee also uncovered another startling fact. The individual student pays $9.51 per month for meals. This includes waitresses' salaries and averages out to $0.43 per meal. This can be explained by the fact that many girls don't come to meals for which they have already paid their $0.43. Thus their money helps to pay for the meals of those that are present. These were the results of the first meeting of the committee. Before the next meeting on Nov. 4, please bring your suggestions to any member of the dining hall committee to help them better present your point of view. The members are:

Evelyn Blackman, 326 South Cunningham; Kathy Grizzard, 326 South Cunningham; Barbara Roukema, 206 South Cunningham; Sherry Grigg, 175 North Cunningham.

HONORS COUNCIL

Happy Birthday to Delta Psi Kappa! This national fraternity for women in physical education was founded fifty-two years ago today, October 23. Today Delta Psi Kappa has approximately 8,000 members with thirty-five active chapters and eleven alumnae chapters.

Longwood's chapter, Delta Lambda, was established March 23, 1968. Shortly after this installation Delta Psi Kappa sponsored a clinic on recreational therapy.

In order to be eligible for membership a student must have completed sixty semester hours. She must have a 3.0 professional average and a 2.4 accumulative average.

Serving as president this year is Anna Pettis. Assisting her are Maywood Katt, vice-president, Pat Halstead, secretary-treasurer, Mary Tolley, chaplain, and Cathy Hass, sergeant-at-arms. The faculty advisor is Dr. Mary Heintz.

Fun, games, costumes, free cider and guest appearances by well-known campus goblins will highlight the Lankford Building Halloween Party, beginning at 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 31, in the ABC Room.

Other party activities will include apple-toboggan, dart throwing and an obstacle course through a tunnel.

Attendance in costume is invited but not required.

Anyone interested in adding attractions to the party may see or call Mr. Don Sequin, Lankford Building recreation area manager.

Staff Of Lankford Building Sponsors Cartoon Contest

"Politics can be funnier than reality."

So says the name of a political cartoon contest now getting underway on the Longwood and Hampden-Sydney campuses.

The contest, open to all Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students, is being co-sponsored by the Lankford Building staff, and the editors of The Rotunda, The Virginia and The Gyre.

All politically-oriented cartoons or caricatures entered in the contest will be displayed in the Gold Room, Lankford Building, on election night, when the winners will be announced.

Contest winners will fall into two categories: the best Hampden-Sydney entry, and the best Longwood entry. Both winning entries will be published in "The Rotunda" the following week.

Deadline for entries is 2 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 5. Entries should be carried or mailed, in protective envelopes, to "Mr. Gilbert Wood, Lankford Building, Longwood."

In conjunction with the contest, Lankford Building will be open until the election results appear decisive.

One, or more, TVs will be placed in the Gold Room for the occasion and other election-night activities are being planned, according to Mr. Wood, Lankford Building director.

Contest judges are Karen Maher, Jill Randolph and Brenda Holly.

Joanne Chuchek Names Painting, Wins Prize

Joanne Chuchek won the Lankford Building Name-The-Painting Contest, Saturday night, Oct. 12, and received the two-volume encyclopedia of poetry offered as a prize.

Joanne was one of more than 40 students who named an illuminated painting displayed in the A Room of Lankford, which had been darkened for a weekend dance.

Couples and singles, from as far away as Charlottesville, titled the painting and tried to win the Viking Book of Poetry of the English-Speaking World, but Joanne's title "Dragon Feast" was declared the winner by contest judges.

Joanne is a sophomore elementary education major from Appomattox. She is active in the Baptist Student Union.

"Y" Presidential Candidates

Cite Interest, Experience

How can a girl not interested in an organization lead that organization or guide it to success?

CANDEE DICKENMAN

Of course the answer is that she cannot. An officer of any organization must be interested and have had ample previous participation to prepare herself for the role of an officer. The candidate should have sufficient knowledge of how the organization has run in the past, and should have worked closely with the organization. The officer also must be able to give extensive time and often forego her own plans for the good of her organization.

As a candidate for the office of president of the Y.W.C.A. I feel that I have the two most important qualities of an officer, interest and a knowledge of how the organization runs. I have been active in the "Y" since my freshman year when I was on the Freshman Commission. This past year I was treasurer of the "Y" and learned a great deal of how a campus organization runs. I've worked closely with many of our programs and know what it is to give up time, and know the necessity of being able to work compatibly with people.

I would very much like to be President of the Y.W.C.A. and if elected will continue to devote as much time and interest necessary to keep the "Y" a respected and worthwhile organization at Longwood.

LESLIE NUTTALL

A candidate should have a sincere interest in and knowledge of the activities of the YWCA. She should desire to promote these activities so that the YWCA is an essential and

Newberry, Turner Seek AA Presidency; Propose To Boost Sports Participation

What could you do to increase the participation in the activities offered by the A.A. to the students at Longwood?

JO NEWBERRY

Only through student participation can the Athletic Association function properly and serve the best interests

Suzanne Turner and Jo Newberry are Athletic Association nominees for president.

Legislative Board Candidates for the Presidency are: Janice Austin, Mary Alice Elwang, and Sandy Petersen.

Aspirants To Legislative Board Express Concern For Student Welfare

MARY ALICE ELWANG

In your opinion, what are the purposes of the Legislative Board? In what specific area would you like to see the Board work next year?

The purpose of our Legislative Board is to oversee all phases of student life at Longwood. Its representatives formulate all regulations concerning student activities and discuss key problems involving the overall welfare of the student body. Through nine appointed committees which function under the Legislative Board, it strives to generate awareness of campus activities, to utilize student opinion, and to act as a liaison among the students, faculty, and administration. The Legislative Board also has the power to interpret the constitution of our Student Government Association.

In my opinion, the Legislative Board is designed to serve all students of varied backgrounds, beliefs, and ideas by giving them as much freedom of choice and individual responsibility as is possible in a campus situation. This includes consideration of the needs and wishes of the students as individuals and as a majority in trying to make regulations and act on them in such a way that the students as a unit will be served.

In order to serve as the one organization which represents the entire student body in the best way possible, I would like to see the Board work on a change in our representative policy. I suggest that we have elected dormitory representatives rather than (or possibly along with) elected class representatives on each board of the student government. Since our school has grown to such a size that girls no longer live in a dorm made up of only their own class members (as the previous "Senior Dorm") but now live in a dorm consisting of members of all four classes, I think that a system of dormitory representatives on the boards would be a more effective means of government. Plus, I feel that having a representative in each dormitory would promote better and more personal relationships between members of the student body and the boards, thus enhancing the Longwood spirit.

Also, I recommend an evaluation of the functions and procedures of the nine committees under the Legislative Board. We need to recognize their contributions to the student body and to improve their purposes and activities.

Another suggestion is that there be regular sessions (possibly one every two months) involving chairmen and vice-chairmen of major organizations and set up similar to "press conferences" where students may ask questions and discuss regulations, policies, activities, etc. in order to promote awareness of general trends of student thought on our campus.

JANICE AUSTIN

The purpose of Legislative Board as compared with the other two branches of the Student Government Association is to make student rules and regulations. Equally important is striving to solve problems that affect the student body. Close contact with both the students and the administration is of prime importance in solving these problems.

There are several specific areas in which I feel the board should concentrate its efforts in the coming year. I strongly feel that the completion of an effective and flexible constitution is of utmost importance. A good constitution is the basis of an organization. A committee has been formed to work on the constitution. We hope to have it completed in the spring.

I would also like to see the board work even more closely with the state and national organizations to which we belong: Virginia Association of Students Governments (VASG) and Intercollegiate Association of Women Students (IAWS). Many ideas such as our recent High School Orientation Program and several activities used in Fall orientation were gained from our association with them.

I have high hopes for the coming year, and with these ideas in mind, I believe it can be a very productive one.

SANDY PETERSEN

The purposes of the Legislative Board are divided in the nine areas of their committees, but each of these committees has for its goal—the fulfillment of the needs of the students. It is therefore necessary that the Legislative Board concern itself with the student and her relationship to those activities of the college, of the community, and of the world around her. These three divisions of social structure are the component parts of each student on the Longwood Campus, and each part is of vital interest to the Legislative Board.

Communication is always a problem when a large number of people are in personal contact. Although the lines of communication have been strengthened through the use of various means for representation, it is in this area that I am vitally interested because it is so easy to separate the individual person from the community, faculty, and student, to make more of the needs and desires of each other. The communication cannot help but lead to better understanding of all ideas, understanding, which will promote understanding, in the sense that it will be the desire to understand each other, to have a common effort to solve problems, to have a common goal, for the benefit of all.

Pass-Fail System

In recent years colleges have emphasized elective courses in the college curriculum. Administrators deem electives as necessary for a student to obtain the fullest benefit from higher education. In line with this educational philosophy many colleges have initiated a pass-fail grading system.

This pass-fail grading is usually limited to elective courses taken by juniors and seniors. The student earns hours toward graduation requirements, but he does not receive quality points.

The pass-fail method expands the field of electives that a student would tend to take. Students are more willing to sample courses entirely foreign to their major if they are assured that it will not lower their average. For Longwood especially, the number of electives that students take would be broadened.

The pass-fail system is one that more progressive schools are adopting. These schools are slowly advancing toward the ideal theory behind education, the theory that students learn for their own benefit.

The pass-fail system is worth considering. Longwood could benefit from it.

— M. K. M.

Election Support Is Urged

Major elections will take place here at Longwood on Monday, November 6. Candidates from the Junior class are running for the presidencies of five leading campus organizations: Legislative Board, Judicial Board, House Association, Young Women's Christian Association, and the Athletic Association.

These girls are showing a sincere interest in their school and its government. The five victors will commit themselves to a year of hard work and service; yet they are sure to find it rewarding.

The student body in general is not asked to make such a commitment to show its interest in school government. All that is asked is that each student take a few minutes to vote. Good leadership is the responsibility of the electorate. And a good turnout of voters on November 6 is the best way the students of Longwood can express their gratitude to the candidates for their offering of service.

Snoopy, Paulsen, Neuman

Compete For U.S. Presidency

By LIBB A. BALL

In any election, the voters must be thoroughly acquainted with the candidates running for each office. This week, we are introduced to those girls running for major campus positions. Early next week, America's voting populace will make a choice which may continue to downgrade or begin to upgrade present federal policies.

The three major presidential candidates, Nixon, Wallace, and Humphrey, stand opposed by three lesser characters. These men are "well-read," "experienced," and make H.H.H.'s humor lack originality. Each man has a well-established reputation, worn with time and praise. Never have these men contributed to undemocratic behavior, participated in disorganized rioting, or spoken out against the American government. Never have these three balked increasing taxes or expressed dissatisfaction over Supreme Court decisions.

These three candidates have not condemned escalation in Vietnam. They are candidates of American spirit and inventiveness. As a matter of fact, their viewpoints have remained sincere throughout their extensive campaigns.

Candidate number one is Snoopy. Friendly beagle dog, estimated 15 years old (loads of experience). Has attended school periodically, receives daily national news coverage. Pilots a Sopwith Camel over Germany. Often heard muttering, "Curse the Red Baron." One of a litter from Daisy Hill Puppy Farm. Imaginative mind, characterized as only beagle who plays baseball for Charlie Brown. Often referred to incorrectly as "the kid with the big nose." Campaign slogan: "Dog-Gone - Elect A New President."

Candidate Number Two is Pat Paulsen. Paulsen has appeared on national television throughout the year of his vigorous campaign. Shows subdued, but painful, expressive concern for fellow Americans. Pat has a record album out now - we hope it attempts to explain his stand on politics. All summer we've been listening for a clue...

Late forties, slender man with highly aristocratic features. Physique indicates Paulsen has been an active, exhausted candidate. When was his last meal? A midsummer Smothers' survey indicated that 2% of the citizens interviewed about Paulsen replied "ou yey," whatever that means.

Expresses self well. Minimizes replies, use of vocal chords, lungs, teeth, tongue, and any other necessary speech organs. Citizens feel Paulsen should continue current federal policies. That bad, huh?

Our third candidate, we've all read about. His posters and stickers were purchased in a summer issue of a popular, intellectually-oriented magazine. Yes! Our favorite Alfred E. Neuman is trying in this election, just as he did in 1960 and 1964. Chronologically, Neuman should be twenty or so, but citizens see him as a clean-cut, all-American, teenage candidate with a missing front tooth. If elected, he promises to see a dentist, dermatologist.

President Willett Urges Suggestions, Student Problems

Dr. Willett has again urged that students submit any suggestions they may have to him. He stressed the fact that the suggestions do not have to be signed, but if a student does sign his suggestion, Dr. Willett can go to the person for further information, can discuss the suggestion with the individual, and, therefore, will do a better job of correcting the situation. Again, however, the suggestion need not be signed. Dr. Willett will react to the suggestion whether it is signed or not.

In submitting suggestions, be specific. A general statement about a grievance is difficult to act upon.

If the student has a suggestion and she does not know who to submit it to, place it in the suggestion box. Anything that affects a particular department or person is referred to that person. Otherwise, the suggestions are handled directly by Dr. Willett.

Dr. Willett has been pleased with the quality of suggestions that have been turned in so far. He expressed the hope that students continue to use the suggestion box. He emphasized the fact that he cannot solve a problem until he knows that the problem exists.

Cahoots members conduct a fruit sale to raise money for the prizes to be given Thursday in their Halloween Costume Contest.

Halloween Costume Contest, Freeze-In On Cahoots Spirit Promoting Agenda

By PATTY KINGSLEY

Everyone on campus has noticed the members of Cahoots, with their red and green banners, singing "Salvation Army," their theme song, but many students have asked, "What is Cahoots?"

Cahoots is the formal name of a group of girls whose purpose is to promote spirit on the Longwood campus.

Last year at the Senior Assembly, the members of Cahoots tapped members of the junior class to carry on with their many (?) activities during the year, 1968-69. Because no list was left of the new members, Cahoots had a meeting on October 20 to discover "who its members are."

On October 22, Cahoots tapped two junior members, called Li'l Hoots, in the dining hall at dinner. They are Janice Hudgins and Mary Cam Butterworth.

The organization has planned many activities for the year under the leadership of Maywood Martin. While Maywood is student-teaching, Becky Barnard is the acting president.

Cahoots is organizing their big event of the year for next Thursday, October 31. This is the Halloween costume contest, in which girls on campus dress up in their most original costumes. The judges for last year included Mr. Pennock, Alonzo Hicks, the head chef of Slater, and other dignitaries, but the judges for this year's contest have not yet been selected. There will be several prizes for the winners with the most original and colorful costumes. First prize is five dollars; second prize is a chauffered dinner for two at Dean's; and third prize is 50 coke bottles to be deposited at Dean's.

To finance these prizes, Cahoots held a fruit sale on October 24, which was a big success.

Cahoots will soon have a freeze-in, which is a take-off on the Chi Burning. At the freeze-in, Cahoots will freeze several personalities on campus who may have done some Commendable (?) deed.

Watch out for Cahoo-o-ots!

Alumnae Defeated By Hockey Team; Greens Win Rush

A fast, hard fighting game was given Saturday afternoon, as a climax to the Midway. The Longwood alumnae team played the present second varsity team.

Since some of the Alumnae team were old varsity players the going was a little rough. A lot of credit goes to the forward line for the 3-1 victory. The ball stayed at the alumnae goal a greater portion of the time, but the ex-Longwood Ladies put up a stunning defense although not quite up to the hard playing varsity offense.

After the game the color rush winners racked up five points toward color cup for the Green and Whites. The Green and White winners were Anna Pettis, Margaret Harrison, Lynn Coleman, Sandi Naylor, and Janet Harpole, while the Red and White winners were Pat Brady, Betty King, Phyllis Carter, and Jane Crumley.

The Longwood Varsity battled Madison in a home hockey game last Tuesday. Longwood's first team was victorious by a score of 1-0.

Madison Downed By LC First Team, Second Teams Battle And End In Tie

By JUDI GUIDICE

Longwood dominated the play in the first half, but had trouble stopping the fast playing of Madison's forward line. Our only good clears were out to the wings.

The fullbacks and halves were kept busy. There were too many close calls. The forward line even played defensively in many plays.

Anna Pettis made a nice carry of the ball for a rush for goal but their goalie was very aware and prevented it — though the play by Barbara Snellings, Becky Boudurant and Anna Pettis to bring the ball down was beautiful and the reverse sticks was helpful — ever so helpful. Betty King played well at center half. Many saves were accredited to her in the circle.

At one time, Madison drew Leslie out of the cage and Jane Richardson made a beautiful clear of the ball going for a goal.

Another close attempt for Madison scoring was beautifully blocked by Jane Erdman, right half, and carried down by Phyllis Carter, right wing. Longwood ran into trouble but recovered the ball, as Anna and Tibbs controlled the ball in the circle. Anna reversed her stick on the ball and scooped it in for a goal.

After that, the game picked up more speed to the half.

Second half: The beginning was fearfully started with Madison at our goal — saves were accredited to Kathy Hass and Betty King.

At first our attempts at the goal were not strong enough and Madison seemed to gain control of the ball and take it back down field. Madison was quite able to stop many of our clearing passes. The bulk of the second half was spent at our goals with Madison taking corner after corner. Some of the best saves were made by Kathy Hass, Betty King, Sandi Naylor, and Jane Richardson. At one time, Jane Tibbs had a bad fall on her way down the field with the ball.

The last minute saves seemed crucial — though we did manage to carry the ball down to the goal more often. We had the ball the last two minutes, with the ending score 1-0, Longwood.

The real action of the second game began by Madison taking a corner while goalie Jane MacCaffrey stopped the drive for the goal, though Madison gained control of the ball. In their second successive corner Madison's drive for the goal was successful, making the score 1-0 in Madison's favor.

In one of Madison's attempts down the field, special recognition is given to Ellen Dunn's extraordinary reverse stick stop!

Again, Madison's forward line is giving Longwood backfield a lot of work, even Jane MacCaffrey had some knee bending practice for saves!

After one of the long travels down the field by Madison, Jane was pulled out of the cage yet recovered beautifully to stop a drive for a score.

Kathy Parker made several nice carries downfield and working with Jo Newberry made many attempts at a score, though unsuccessful.

Kathy Long was successful in backing up Jane MacCaffrey on one of Madison's drives for a goal, while Jane not ten seconds after clasped with the wall in saving another! The half ended 1-0 in favor of Madison.

In the second half we seemed to have the ball a little more, continuing to push for a goal. Even the halfbacks tried. Some of the best backfield saves were made by Freda Lunsford.

The many attempts for scoring by Debbie Ellenbrand, Janet Harpole and Betty Layne usually ended in a corner or free hit out.

Chris McDonnell made a nice attempt for a goal. Though unsuccessful, it was a good play.

With eight minutes to play, Sally Helman scored, tying the game.

Judy Turner and Freda Lunsford were successful in keeping the ball away from our goal for the last five minutes, and many thanks to Jane MacCaffrey's saves.

useful part of campus life. The candidate should be able to plan and lead the activities which strengthen the spiritual life on campus as well as interest the students.

For the past three years I have worked with the YWCA and desire to promote its purpose of finding a "full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God and unselfish service to others." As vice-president of the Wesley Foundation I have had experience in planning activities for and in leading a campus organization. Also I have formulated ideas for activities which will open the Y.W.C.A. more to the campus.

Allied Team Crushed By Netherlands Team By Skillful Playing

The three members of the area Allied Team from Longwood joined together with their teammates from Westhampton, William and Mary, and the Richmond Club against the Netherlands Team at William and Mary College in Williamsburg last Wednesday.

Leslie Sedgwick, Anna Pettis, and Jane Tibbs along with the rest of the team did an excellent job, although the Dutch Team out-ranked them in experience and player ability. Their ball control and stick work were brilliant.

During the first half, the allied defense was a little confused but Leslie Sedgwick, as goalie, made many valuable saves. Later the defense gained efficiency and allowed the allied offense, including Jane Tibbs and Anna Pettis, a chance at taking the ball down to the Dutch goal. Jane even scored one of the allied goals.

However, the older and more efficient team ended the game 13-4 in their favor. Considering the United States Reserves were defeated by the Netherlands, 4-0, the allied offense played a winning game.

Athletic Association Candidates

ability, team work, and sportsmanship. If there is no varsity team for a sport, the sportsmanship committee along with the respective sport's manager and umpires or officials of the sport will pick the class team. Color teams will be chosen in the same manner as the class teams — each player being judged as an individual. The point system for this proposal will remain the same as the present one: one point for participation, two points total for making the class team, and three points total for making the color team.

I feel this proposal will motivate the students to participate more since the class teams will not be chosen by the eligible participants but chosen on a more objective basis.

For individual sports such as tennis, archery, badminton, and golf, awards should be given at the end of the school year in recognition of the respective winners. To augment the presentation of individual awards each class team for such sports as hockey and basketball should choose a most valuable player and an award should be presented to that player at the same time the individual awards are presented.

In conclusion, I would like to emphasize that all the programs, equipment, and facilities have for the students. Release tension, have some laughs, and meet the students through participating in the activities offered by the Athletic Association.

SUZANNE TURNER

The question of student participation is brought up every year. Naturally, it is common to any organization that the students take an active party in its functions. This is especially true for the Athletic Association. With such a varied program of sports and other activities, I feel there should be at least one area where a girl could feel needed and want to participate. Firstly, I would like to stress how important it is for girls to be on Committees. For example, the Publicity Committee and Social Committee play a very large part in the operation of the A.A. Girls who don't like intramurals or feel they just don't have the skill to play a team sport, can still actively take part by helping at teas and extending our friendship to other schools. In intramurals especially, many think that they can't play because they are unskilled or that "the same ones get chosen for the team." Naturally, with an attitude like that they won't make the team. Try coming out for a sport and really showing everyone what you can do with a hockey stick or how well you can dunk the ball! Surprisingly enough, you might make the team!

Since publicity plays such an important role, I would continue to employ methods used in the past to make all activities of the A.A. known to the student body. The Rotunda carries many articles telling of class, hockey developments or when color games will be. The use of the A.A. bulletin board to tell of coming events is also good. Announcements in the dining hall, posters announcing the start of a new season, the A.A. Demonstration — all are excellent methods of getting to the student body. Much help is needed here and any girl could take an active part. The A.A. Field Day showed that competition can be fun!

If a girl simply does not want to play a sport or do anything, there is no earthly way you can make an appeal urging her to participate. She never will participate. HOWEVER, to the shy, reluctant ones that do want to play but are afraid they aren't good enough, I would say — Come on in, the water's fine! You can lose weight, have fun, earn points, meet people — but most of all you will be showing the spirit of competition and the enthusiasm for YOUR A.A. which make Longwood College what it is.

Neuman seldom makes personal appearances, however, this smiling candidate never fails to thank those who support him. Anyone who votes for Neuman receives a free subscription to "Mad Magazine." As in his two past White House attempts, Neuman follows through with his same campaign pitch, "What, me worry?"

Class Hockey Teams Named; Sophs., Juniors Victorious

After two weeks of determined practices in the four classes, class hockey teams were announced. Since the number of those with the required seven practices was almost exactly the number required for four teams, no choosing was necessary.

This year, for the first time in years, enough seniors had seven practices to form a team. These diligent seniors are: Ann Sherman, Donna Brantly, Cam Thomas, Jane Williams, Beth Rice, Peggy Schults, Kathy Grizzard, Tricia Bates, Jim Washington, Evelyn Blackman, Linda Hudson, Sharon Yates, Karen Roundtree, and Patty Kingsley.

In the past two games between sister classes, the juniors were victorious over the frosh, while the sophomores won out over the seniors.

House Association Candidates Describe Its Campus Purpose

What do you see as the purpose of House Association on this campus?

JEANETTE BICKINGS

I believe the purpose of House Association on our campus is to make our years here as pleasant and rewarding as possible. I feel this can be done through regulations concerning conditions, dormitory life, the dining hall, and general conditions on campus. These regulations are definitely needed with the constant growth of Longwood, and without them it would be impossible for our campus to run smoothly.

House Association should strive to reflect the attitudes and desires of the student body as it makes and enforces its regulations, and only through representation and suggestion can House Association work successfully. I think that House Association should be open to suggestions from the student body and always be willing to make changes when they are needed to improve certain conditions on campus for the betterment of the entire student body.

PHYLLIS CARTER

It is my belief that House Association has two distinct purposes on campus: to make and to enforce rules through and for the student. These rules apply to all dormitory, dining hall and fire regulations which provide for the safety and the health of the student body. Fire regulations and dining hall rules are especially pertinent to the safety factor of each individual, and it is the responsibility of House Association to promote good attitude and habits concerning these rules. However, I feel that it is also the duty of House Association to establish favorable study conditions on campus especially in the dormitory. Good study habits provide the backbone for further academic achievement at Longwood, and each student should be vitally concerned about the study conditions in her own dormitory and help to improve this situation. By assisting the hall presidents and by accepting the individual responsibility of participating with strict quiet hour and phone duty assignments, the study situations can be greatly improved.

In addition, House Association attempts to promote refinement in dress and conduct among the students. The dress regulations are enforced in order to maintain high standards and public image for visitors and for visiting high school students that may be interested in enrolling at Longwood. Courtesy and respect is given to the professor when students present themselves in neat, clean school attire. Sports attire, certainly, is advantageous in maintaining a relaxed atmosphere on campus, but it should be confined to its proper places.

I firmly believe that by establishing positive attitudes among the students concerning these regulations and through strong enforcement, House Association can be strengthened. But only with student cooperation and participation can House Association successfully serve the students through its purposes, making and enforcing all dormitory, dining hall, and fire regulations.

JULIE WRIGHT

As our college grows, so do the responsibilities of the student government and the student leaders. It is the duty of these leaders and organizations to maintain and uphold the standards of Longwood College and to provide an atmosphere of student government understanding and appreciation among the students. House Association functions to serve the college through enforcement of dormitory, dining hall, and fire regulations, and to stimulate within the student body a sense of pride and respect for the rules and regulations of the campus. Therefore, the organization's aim is to serve the students which it represents and to promote ideals and standards of student government which are an integral part of college life.

JULIE WRIGHT

Judicial Board Presidential Candidates: Anne Creekmore, Carolyn Cummins, and Chris McDonnell.

Prospective Judicial Board Presidents Consider Question Of Circumstances

How much consideration should be given to individual circumstances in a case? (i.e., a girl's character, citizenship record, family situations, etc.)

ANNE CREEKMORE

Each student who enters Longwood is assumed to be a woman of high ideals and character. She assumes this high honor throughout her four years unless she proves herself otherwise.

When considering a case only the information pertinent to that case should be brought out. The student should be on trial only for her present behavior. Her past should not enter into the case unless it is felt that it is absolutely essential.

It may be necessary when considering certain cases however to have character witnesses. This would depend on the kind of trial, the person involved and other circumstances that would be considered essential to the case.

At Longwood our Honor Code serves as a means of democratic government. We make our own rules and are tried by a jury made up of our peers.

Upholding the standards of honor at Longwood is one of the most important aspects of college life. It is the Judicial Board's duty to instill in the minds of all students the meaning of our Honor Code.

CHRIS McDONNELL

Having previously served on Judicial Board, I have become more fully aware of the worth of the individual. I have put myself in the position of a girl brought before the board, and have learned the value of recognizing each girl for herself, regardless of existing or nonexistent personal relations. As a student represents herself before the board, she is to be judged unbiasedly, unrestrained from personal obligations or social contact with a member of the board, and free from previously formed detrimental opinion or rumors.

In determining cases, I feel that Judicial Board should not make special allowances to a student regardless of her character, citizenship record, or family situation, simply because in spite of who she is, the offense being committed is the fault of the individual, for which only she is responsible. Being in college, a student is assumed to be mature enough to accept responsibility and thereby pay the consequence of its abuse.

In regard to a girl's character, in deciding cases, I feel that character is the most prized possession a person can deem as her own. In such a sense it is that intangible quality which should mould an individual's life in such a way as to consider herself before she acts or commits a violation, which is an obvious reflection of lack of respect for herself. Character is seldom in question in Judicial Board cases, with the exception of unlady-like conduct in which case it is highly important. If the board feels that character is not in question, just consideration is given to each girl in spite of her character being above or below reproach, because after all, she was in the wrong. Although there are some cases in which a family situation, a girl's status on campus, or her character are very personal matters which are left to the discretion of the administration, I feel that they are not valid pleas for one's case because in spite of these the offense was committed. After all, if a girl's character is so above reproach, in my estimation the crime would not have been committed in the first place, and why should character among other virtues be a justification of one's plea after the crime was committed if it was not considered beforehand?

CAROLYN CUMMINS

In the American system of justice each individual case is considered on its own merits. The circumstances surrounding the case are thoroughly investigated. Each individual is considered innocent until proven guilty. If found guilty, sometimes evidence is uncovered that enables our courts to better understand the actions of the accused. The sentences are given according to these circumstances. First offenses are not judged as harshly as latter ones. The "book" is not usually "thrown at" someone until she becomes a chronic lawbreaker. I can conceive of no reason why these same procedures can not be adopted by Judicial Board.

House Association Reminds Students Of Special Rules

House Association would like to remind the students of the following regulations:

Chief Smith has asked that all Longwood students cooperate in enforcing the use of the crosswalks in Farmville. The town and campus police will be working together especially this week to help bring this to the attention of the public. Leaflets will be distributed and Farmville hopes to continue its observance of no pedestrian accidents. All are urged to walk on sidewalks, especially on High Street on which there is only a sidewalk on the left side of the road, because fines may be imposed upon those who jaywalk.

Monday through Thursday curfew has been changed to 11:15 in order that late permission will not be necessary for the downtown movies or TV shows in Lankford ending at 11:00 p.m.

A student on plain campus, strict campus, or room restriction will be permitted to leave campus only if permission is granted by the president of House Council.

The side door of Grainger may be used until 11:15 p.m.

Gym suits and the "blouse-that-grew" (over bermudas) are not appropriate attire for the classroom or dining hall.

The area in Ruffner near drink machines is to be quiet especially during Strict Quiet Hour.

Remember that head residents are to be answered promptly, distinctly, and with maximum dignity.

Winners Of Major Offices Announced; Tie Occurs In Athletic Assoc. Contest

Suzanne Turner
President, Athletic Association.

By MARY ALICE CARMODY
The November 6 general elections determined the presidents of the Legislative Board, Judicial Board, House, and Y.W.C.A. A tie occurred for A.A. president between Jo Newberry and Suzanne Turner. Another vote was taken on Thursday to determine the outcome of this. A total of 858 students, the largest number within the last two years, voted on Wednesday, and about 400 voted on Thursday.

Janice Austin, a music major from Portsmouth, was elected president of the Legislative Board. Janice has been red and white spirit leader, corresponding secretary of Sigma Kappa, Geist Chairman, member of Sigma Alpha Iota music fraternity, on elections committee, song chairman for the red and white skit, and treasurer of Legislative Board this past year.

Phyllis Carter, now president of House Association, is a junior physical education major from Alexandria. She is now Treasurer of House, is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta, and is playing her second year of varsity hockey. Phyllis says she is looking forward to working with the student body and that her two main objectives are to reorganize House Council and reevaluate the Handbook.

The newly elected Y.W.C.A. president Candee Dickenman is an English major from Unionville, Connecticut. She is a member of Alpha Sigma Tau sorority and in the H2O Club. Candee would like to see more communication between the Y.W.C.A. and the student body.

The A.A. presidency goes to Suzanne Turner, a chemistry major from Charlottesville. Suzanne is captain of the varsity swim team, has played class and color hockey, is presently secretary of A.A., president of Alpha Gamma Delta, and a member of Gamma Club. She hopes to keep up the activities the A.A. has started in the past, especially stressing participation by all students, not just the physical education majors.

LC Alumna, Faculty Member Exhibits Artwork In Library

The thirty-seven works in the one-man show by Barbara L. Bishop currently on campus exhibited in the gallery of the Lancaster Library until November 23, emphasize the artist's conception of the similarity between change in nature and in man.

Recently, the Longwood alumna defined this similarity saying that, "the processes of nature and individual mental processes are similar or comparable in that birth, growth, maturation, decay, death and rebirth exist in both realms."

It is this idea of perpetual evolution that has governed not only the drawings, paintings, and prints on exhibit, but also her works over the past few years which are included in private art collections in ten states. Although her works are in varied media, she feels that professionally, she is best known as a print maker. Here she finds that she is most comfortable in her artistic contrast of man and nature.

This is evidenced by the fact that many of the works on exhibit are done in intaglio, a technical term for etching. The process involves the transfer of an engraved image from a metal plate to paper, through use of a roller press and special ink.

The results can be seen in the unique black and white intricateness of design in Miss Bishop's prints.

In addition to the prints, the exhibit displays oil paintings, drawings, and mixed media. Although some of them have been borrowed from private collections, most are for sale.

Miss Bishop, a native of Roanoke, was active in student affairs while at Longwood and was selected as a member of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." In 1965, she was honored as one of the "Outstanding Young Women of America."

Miss Bishop spent last year at Teacher's College, Columbia University in New York, studying in preparation for the doctorate degree. While there, she presented a one-man show at the University.

Recently, her prints were exhibited with the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts traveling show of prints by Virginia college teachers of graphics, and the Virginia Artists Invitational at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Upon receiving a B.S. degree in secondary education from Longwood in 1960, she earned a master of fine arts degree at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, where she held a graduate assistantship.

Representatives From Publications Attend ACP Convention In New York

Representatives from THE GYRE, THE VIRGINIAN, and THE ROTUNDA flew to New York City for the forty-fourth annual conference of the Associated Collegiate Press. The convention was held October 31 through November 2 in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Joan Harrup, Nona Davis, Margaret Nuckols, Candy Maher, and Karen Maher represented Longwood.

Student yearbooks, newspapers, and magazines from more than 900 colleges and universities across the nation are judged on the basis of content, writing, and makeup in categories based on enrollment, frequency of publication, and printing.

THE GYRE literary magazine received a first place rating from the ACP critical service. THE VIRGINIAN and THE ROTUNDA both received second place awards in the competition. All three publications received an honor award certificate.

The students who represented Longwood at the convention attended conferences and meetings pertaining to their particular fields. Some of the speakers were Dr. Dario Politeila, president of the National Council of College Publications Advisers, John M. Allen, Senior Editor of Reader's Digest, and various other newspaper and magazine professionals from across the country. The college editors also previewed the movie THE FIXER for the MGM studios. They were the first audience to view the movie which has not yet been released.

Longwood received national coverage when Margaret Nuckols' picture appeared in the NEW YORK TIMES on Friday, November 1, as a young journalist from Longwood College in Farmville, Virginia.

Red Cross Bloodmobile To Visit Campus,

Seeks Quota Of 120 Pints From Longwood

The American Red Cross is again striving to meet the needs of the people. On November 18 from noon to 6 p.m. the bloodmobile will be on the Longwood campus. This is the college's first visit of the bloodmobile to the campus for the year and we hope to meet the quota of 120 pints on Monday. The unit will be set up in the ABC Room of Lankford.

Longwood has been called upon several times since this school year has begun to furnish emergency blood to the Southside Community Hospital. The blood that is given will help to replenish the dwindling supply in the blood bank when Longwood makes its quota for the year. All students and faculty members will be given free blood when needed through the Red Cross Blood Program. Longwood is also working for a silver trophy to be awarded to the college which has the greatest percentage of people giving blood.

In a recent conference with President Willett, he stated that he "hoped all students and faculty members that were able to give, would do so. The donation of a pint of blood is a very worthy, life saving cause."

All students under 21 years of age if not married will need parental permission to give blood. Forms can be found at each of the sign out desks. These forms must be brought with you when you come to give blood on November 18. If there are any questions contact Peggy Thompson, Bloodmobile Chairman, at 2-9408 or in Wheeler 217.

Longwood Needs You

Longwood has already begun the tremendous task of selecting the class of 1973. A recruitment drive is on, both within Virginia and outside the state, for a greater number of applicants will mean an intelligent, sophisticated, and cosmopolitan class.

But the administration is limited in its recruitment facilities. The students themselves are the best advertisers of the school. It is they who can best persuade the high school seniors that Longwood is worth looking into.

Some positive recommendations toward this end have been offered by Mr. T. C. Dalton, Director of Special Services.

1. Girls graduating in June in Secondary Education can help by looking for outstanding recruits for Longwood in schools they are teaching in.

2. When at home on weekends or holidays, talk to girls who you think would make good Longwood College Ladies.

3. During Christmas holidays visit your high schools and talk to girls who are interested in attending Longwood College. High school seniors can apply to Longwood as late as February 1 of their senior year.

4. If you have room for them, you might want to invite prospective students to Longwood for a weekend.

It is not difficult to see how action upon these suggestions can be extremely beneficial to the school. A little enthusiasm from the current student body can go a long way toward building interest within future students. If everyone does her share, we can all take a great personal pride in the class of 1973.

— M. A. M.

Community Closet

Mothers cry about the horrible living conditions that are forced upon their daughters as one floater grudgingly moves from one end of campus to the other. The student teachers lovingly return to their home away from home. They come laden with trunks, hair dryers, professional files, record players, radios, and all sweaters, dresses, and shoes they have hoarded over the past ten years to add to the collection already accumulated by their five roommates in their 5x8 community closet.

Living conditions are crowded. Presently there is nothing that can be done to improve the situation. STUDENTS BEFORE US HAVE MANAGED TO OVERCOME THIS INCONVENIENCE. Students after us will have to cope with the same problem. Floaters will be moved in with seniors.

As mature individuals let us strive to make living arrangements as pleasant as possible for ourselves and the floaters by making an effort to overlook the inconveniences as much as possible.

Hopefully, with the rise of new dormitories, conditions will improve in the future. Until then we are forced to shift with what we have.

— M. K. M.

Letters To The Editor

Statement From President Henry I. Willett, Jr., to Longwood Students Expressing Appreciation For Their Assistance in Behalf of Bond Referendum

Dear Editor:

The outcome of the recent Bond Referendum has been a matter of vital concern to all of us at Longwood. You can imagine how gratifying it is to our Board of Visitors, Faculty, and Staff to know that many of Longwood's hopes for the future will be realized because of the favorable bond vote.

It is a source of great satisfaction to me to realize how many of our students and other friends of the College became involved in the bond question and contributed to the success of the referendum by writing letters and contacting voters in numerous ways.

I especially appreciate the way so many students responded to the call for help from the Students Bond Committee. All of you have my personal thanks and deep gratitude for your fine efforts.

Henry I. Willett, Jr.

To THE ROTUNDA:

The 1968 election returns have created an extremely interesting national political situation and some very complex problems for President-elect Richard Nixon. The College Republican Club has asked Delegate "Pete" Giesen to analyze these results. He will speak this Thursday evening, November 14, in the ABC Room of Lankford Building at 6:45.

Mr. Giesen was the 7th District Republican Congressional candidate in this past election. He has served three terms in the Virginia House of Delegates as the representative of the Tenth legislative district. His voting record is symbolic of the new wave of American statesmen who believe that there can be no substitute for the fundamental principle of freedom of the individual. The YRs are proud to have him as our guest and we would like to invite the entire campus to our meeting this Thursday in the ABC Room at 6:45.

Senior Slave Sale Nets 59% Profits; High Bid, $6.00

Do you need your skirts hemmed, have you felt the urge to have breakfast served to you in bed, wouldn't you love to eat Banana Splits at Roses? If you have wanted any of these things done for you then you have missed your big chance, for on Wednesday November 6, 1968, the Senior Class sponsored in the senior dining hall a senior slave trading session. Those seniors who sacrificed themselves agreed, to clean rooms, paint portraits, treat at the Red Fox, sponsor picnics and to do many other such menial tasks for their lucky owner. The attending auctioneer having to sell about 20 seniors announced what each girl had to offer and then started the bidding at 45¢ to $1.00 depending on the slaves' value to those in the audience. The students were able to bid on girls who sold as singles, doubles, triples and in groups of six.

The event received a very favorable turnout and bidding was comparatively high. The highest bid went to Jane Tibbs and Cathy Hiss who agreed to do anything within reason. They sold as a pair for $6.00. It was certainly an enthusiastic crowd, and the seniors for their efforts received approximately 59% in profits.

Independents Lose Major Elections; Psychologically Affects Neuman

By LIBBA BALL
Welcome back seniors!
Welcome back eastern standard time!

But most of all, WELCOME BACK NIXON!

In our last issue of the ROTUNDA, I ran a story of the three independent candidates who were running for the presidency, Pat Paulsen, Snoopy, and Alfred E. Neuman, unfortunately, didn't quite make a dent in the popular votes. Special reports from WPI press (We wanted a President, incidentally) have interviewed these three losers and here we can see what their future plans are.

Pat Paulsen, independent candidate representing comedians in the U.S.A., has these words concerning his defeat: "Well, at least I warned my television audiences the week before the election not to worry. They know I know I thought I'd win, I knew they knew I were qualified, but I never will know if I were qualified to be able to let my voters know." This profound statement followed an interview where Paulsen made his future plans clear.

"I guess I'll just keep on the Smothers Brothers' Show as a laugh man. People will laugh more at me on TV than in the White House anyway, don't you think?"

Alfred E. Neuman accepted his defeat gracefully, just as he has done since 1956. Unfortunately, he had already had his head shaved, had made an appointment with his dermatologist, and has run up a fifty dollar bill at his dentist's for having his front tooth capped. Observers fear that Neuman may be suffering deep psychological effects as a result of his loss. They report that he keeps waiting in circles and repeats, "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, world."

Advertising agents for CRACKED magazine (MAD's counterpart) know this behavior is only an advertising stunt on the part of the editors of MAD magazine. "They do anything they want to with Alfred E. Neuman," is the complaint. Come to think of it, have you ever really seen Neuman except on the cover of MAD? If he had been elected, we'd be able to say our country had an invisible man in the House!

Our third candidate, Snoopy, took the loss more lightly than the others. "I'll just go home and look at my Van Gogh, and maybe I won't feel so bad. Besides, it's time the Red Baron showed up for Christmas."

Snoopy suffered a severe shock just prior to the election as the Great Pumpkin did not make an appearance for his friend Charlie Brown. On top of this disappointment, Snoopy is welcoming the opportunity to play spring ball with Charlie's team.

"Maybe this year we'll be better than Peppermint Patty's team," was his only statement for future plans. Shame on you for not voting independently!

Nixon Triumphs In National Elections

Nixon's greatest objective, to bring the American people together, was accomplished election night at Longwood, where students gathered in the Gold Room of Lankford to watch the national returns while munching popcorn from the State Theater. Weinburg Enterprises supplied two large screen television sets where the students learned that Humphrey will continue his commitments to peace and that Nixon, the president-elect, believes that bringing the American people together in an open administration is one which we can undertake and which will be successful.

Longwood Hockey Team Crushes VCU, 2-0, 6-0

Although it was as cold as it was on October 30, the Longwood hockey team put their best foot forward again to maintain their undefeated record by beating Virginia Commonwealth University 2-0. As the game began, there was an even domination of the ball, causing our speedy wings Anna Pettis and Phyllis Carter to exercise their legs quite a bit. Our efforts for a quick goal by our aggressive forward line were in vain—VCU had an aware, quick defense. But we didn't give in; Jane Tibbs will vouch for both teams' determination. She has a nicely bruised ankle to show! Within the last five minutes of the first half, Anna evaded her defense the length of the field. At the striking circle she drove the ball across the goal area where inner Becky Bondurant picked it up and scored. The half ended with Longwood ahead 1-0.

The second half began much as the first, though the team swears there was an invisible wall covering VCU's goal cage. Attempted goal after attempted goal only ended up in a tiring run to the other end of the field! But we also have a wall—her name is Leslie Sedgewick—goalie. Her many saves were nicely followed up by the beautiful clears of fullbacks Cathy Hass and Freda Lunsford. And did you know Freda talks to herself while playing—out loud even? Like the first half, in the last minutes of the game, a spurt of energy came from the halfbacks and was passed to the forward line with ball, and Jane Tibbs goes in for a score. The game ended as such; cold, hard, and Longwood winning 2-0.

Longwood Team II put on a one sided show against VCU Team II by defeating them 6-0. In the beginning of the game, VCU's domination to the ball and many goals attempts were thwarted by our fullbacks Kathy Long and Fran Anthony. The halfbacks, accordingly, followed up the play handing the ball over to our forward line. Inner Kathy Parker took full advantage of this situation immediately and scored the first goal. While VCU attempted to make a comeback at our goal cage, the neighbor dogs made an appearance to add confusion or take the audience's attention. In the meantime, we gained possession of the ball so Chris McDonnell could score Longwood's second goal.

Beginning the second half with Longwood leading 2-0, four attempted goals by Longwood were made in vain until the fifth was successful—thanks to center forward Sally Hellman. Two minutes later, Chris McDonnell scored her second goal. The action increased as Jo Newberry carried the ball from centerfield and in for a goal. But the game wasn't over—Janet Harpole had to put on a show too—and she did as she also stole the ball and scored ending the game happily by a score of 6-0 in favor of Longwood. One bad point though, Jane McCaffrey, goalie, complained of lack of action at her end—but that's fine with us!

First Score Made Against LC, Westhampton Defeated 2-1, 3-0

By SUSIE MARSH

Friday, November 1, the varsity hockey team went up against Westhampton and after a tense game of shuffling the ball back and forth between the goals the first team was victorious with a score of 2-1. The second team had an easier time outplaying the Westhampton II team, 3-0.

The first game consisted of our defense and the Westhampton defense shutting the ball, then Anna Pettis with exceptional stickwork set up Jane Tibbs to score the first goal of the game. Then Westhampton scored a goal, tying the game 1-1 at the end of the first half.

At the beginning of the second half Longwood was close to a second score when what seemed to be a penalty bully resulted in a 15 yard freeshot out. Jane Erdman was making beautiful interceptions which saved the L.C. team more than once.

There were three tries for a goal in the last five minutes then Betty King, halfback, scored her second goal of the season, making L.C. victorious with a 2-1 score.

The second game began with Jo Newberry taking the ball to the striking circle and Betty Lane pushing it in for a goal. The next score was made by Sally Hellman. The remainder of the second half consisted of unsuccessful attempts at the Westhampton goal while half-backs Sue Stultz, Maxine Stone, Judy Turner, and full-backs Fran Anthony and Kathy Long kept the ball safe distance from our own striking circle. The half ended as Westhampton made a beautiful goal after the whistle, so the score remained L.C. 2, Westhampton 0.

In the second half Westhampton began domination play, until Debbie Ellenbrand returned the ball to our end of the field, then we regained play. A Westhampton attempt was thwarted by the fullbacks who passed the ball to wing, Jo Newberry and Chris McDonnell scored ending the game with a score of 3-0.

Reds rally to defeat the Greens in the first color game of the season.

Sophomore Team Undefeated; First Color Game Goes To Reds

The Sophomore Class team reigned as top class, by being undefeated and never scored against, thanks to fullback Lynn Coleman and Carol Sanders, with the junior class in second place with one loss.

Following the termination of class play color teams were chosen. They are, for the Green and White team—Lynn Coleman, Peggy Shultz, Barbara Jenkins, Jane Sakshang, Pam Coleburn, Nedra Distal, Carol Sanders, Jim Washington, Sherry Williams, Beth Rice, Kathy Grizzard, with alternates Tricia Bates, Susie Marsh, and Helen Beamer.

The Red and White team is composed of Sue Wilkes, Pat Quinn, Shorti Moriconi, Linda Driver, Suzanne Morgan, Suzi Johnson, Karen Haldeman, Judy Allen, Brenda Graves, Carol Thompson, Carol Anson with alternates Marcia Tench, Kay Harvey and Patti Coogan. The color teams were chosen by rankings in ability, fouls, and sportsmanship.

The first color game was played last Wednesday after being postponed from Monday because of rain. The Red and Whites were victorious with a score of 3-2. The winner must win two out of three games, but when the other games are to be played will be determined by the weather.

LC Swim Team Downs MWC; Umbdenstock, Capt.

By HELEN BEAMER

The Longwood College swim team began their season here November 2 with a 77 to 42 victory over Mary Washington. Longwood captured five first places to Mary Washington's two, including the 50 yard backstroke by Carol Umbdenstock, the 50 yard freestyle by Suzanne Turner, the 100 yard individual medley by Lois Hrubic, the 100 yard freestyle by Carol Sanders, and the diving event by Kathy Hopkins. Second places included Patti Coogan in 50 yard backstroke, Joanne May in 50 yard freestyle, Suzanne Turner in 100 yard freestyle, Helen Beamer in 50 yard breast stroke, and Lois Hrubic in 50 yard butterfly. Judy Donohoe, Janet Hishman, and Carol Umbdenstock placed third in diving, 50 yard breast stroke, and 50 yard butterfly, respectively. Patti Coogan, Suzanne Turner, Joanne May, and Carol Sanders composed the winning freestyle relay.

The swim team is looking forward to a good season with Carol Umbdenstock as the newly elected captain.

The next home meet will be November 11 with Mary Baldwin; December 5 with Roanoke College; and December 16 with Lynchburg.

Fred Hechinger, Of New York Times, Lectures On Revolt

Fred Hechinger, education editor of the "New York Times," will speak here Wednesday, November 20 at 10 a.m. as a participant in the visiting scholars program of the University Center in Virginia. His topic is "The Student Revolt and Academic Reform."

Hechinger is the author of two books, "An Adventure in Educating," "The Big Red Schoolhouse," and "Teenage Tyranny." He has served as education editor or writer for "The Bridgeport (Conn.) Herald," "The Washington Post," "The New York Herald-Tribune," and "Parents Magazine." He is a former president of the Education Writers Association.

Congratulations to Sandy Graham, a student from Hampden-Sydney, the winner of the Lankford Building Political Cartoon Contest.

Pool Sharks, Ping-Pongers Begin Intramurals, Nov. 11

It seems the intramurals are at it again! Every time a new piece of athletic equipment is added to Longwood, the energetic students begin to test their skills in intramural competition. At least in the case of our new billiards tables in Lankford it is true.

Twenty hustlers have signed up to outshoot each other, with the preliminary games being played from November 4 on to the final match which is scheduled for December 18. Shoulder sticks! Ready! Shoot!

Along with the shuffle pool sharks, forty-eight girls have enlisted their talents in intramural ping-pong. These girls are divided into three groups with matches starting November 11. Each group will play until the number one girl has been established in each group. Then they will battle among themselves for the number 1, 2, and 3 positions.

All this only goes to show that playing intramural sports doesn't have to lead to a sprained ankle or broken finger.

Rubley Clinches First Place, Pool Tournament

Earl Rubley clinched first place Saturday afternoon in Round One of the 1968-69 Faculty-Student Pool Tournament—after 3 1/2 hours of tournament play and sinking a shot that gave him virtually a straight-in position on the eight ball.

Mr. Rubley, an associate professor in the Department of History and Social Sciences, then turned to congratulate his opponent—an apparently tired but happy Miss Jo Holt, Assistant Dean of Students and runner-up in the contest.

For winning first and second place in the first round of the Lankford Building tournament, Mr. Rubley and Dean Holt were presented large, attractively hand-lettered certificates of award, complete with the Longwood seal and signatures of congratulations from all who participated.

Free refreshments were provided for competitors, courtesy of A.R.A. Slater.

Among those participating in the contest were Stuart Windle, Barbara Rodema, Judy Turner, Twiggy Edwards, Lynn Coleman, Jettie Paschall, Dr. Mary Heintz, Dr. Shirley O'Neill, Marshall Hall and Leon Henderson.

The pool tournament began at 2 p.m., Saturday, with the arrival of a mystery "hustler," who was to pit his skills against Dean Ruth B. Wilson, in an exhibition match that would kick off the tournament. But Dean Wilson was busy pitting her skills against a mystery virus, and the mystery player faced Dean Holt, who had agreed to stand in for the Dean of Students.

The mystery "hustler" was Dr. Herbert R. Blackwell, Dean of the College. Dr. Blackwell will compete in a later round of the year-long tournament.

Major Officers Of Campus Elections

Chris McDonnell, Spanish and Biology major from Baltimore, Maryland, is chairman of the Judicial Board. Chris is a Panhellenic delegate for Alpha Gamma Delta, secretary of the Panhellenic Council, was in the red and white ski, plays varsity hockey, tennis, and lacrosse, aside from class and color sports, and was secretary of the Judicial Board and representative since her freshman year. As the new Judicial Board chairman, Chris would like to have the heads of major organizations on campus hold press conferences with the student body. She would also like to see more communication and interrelation among the three branches of student government to iron out the areas where they overlap. She feels that this may be done by joint meetings with the student government branches. Chris would also like to see the Judicial Board respected rather than feared.

Wesley Foundation To Hear R. White, LC Class Of 67

Miss Rebecca C. White, a 1967 Longwood graduate, will speak to members of the Wesley Foundation Wednesday, November 13.

Miss White, a 23 year old fourth grade teacher, traveled through Czechoslovakia this summer as Richmond's Community Ambassador to Czechoslovakia.

The topic of Miss White's discussion will be the four weeks she spent in Czechoslovakia. While in Prague Miss White lived with a Czech family. Her main mission was good will, but she also compared the Czech newspaper's coverage of news and the American coverage.

There will be a fencing clinic at Mary Baldwin on November 23 for anyone interested, experienced or inexperienced. If you would like to attend, contact Miss Bush.

Dancer Performs With Orchesis; Twenty Children Prepare For Play

Appearing with Orchesis in the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" ballet for the Longwood Players' production of "The King and I" will be Mr. Jim Woods, Jr., of New York City.

A personal friend of the director of "The King and I," Mr. Dale Melsness, Jim will arrive Nov. 17 for an intensive rehearsal period prior to the opening, Nov. 21.

Mr. Melsness met Jim Woods at the Old Brewery Summer Theatre in Montana in 1967, where he was company choreographer for "Finian's

Inauguration Approaches For Dr. Willett

Photos by Staff Photographer Carol Bruberton

Dr. Willett Inaugurates Friendly Campus Atmosphere

The atmosphere of Longwood has undergone a change during the past year. In fact, one began to notice the change on December 1, 1967. At this time Dr. Henry I. Willett, Jr., became the President of Longwood College.

From then on the students noticed a change in administrative-student relations. The students felt at ease around the new President. It was the first time since the class of 1969 enrolled at Longwood that the students of the college felt that they could actually go to the President's office and talk to him about any problem on campus. Dr. Willett was congenial enough to gain student friendship and trust, yet authoritative enough to command student respect.

The students are looking forward to participation in the Presidential Inauguration on Friday, November 22. The Rotunda staff feels that it is expressing the opinion of the entire student body when we say we are glad that Dr. Willett is a part of our college.

HONORS COUNCIL

Kappa Delta Pi, a national honor society in Education, seeks to promote a closer bond among students of Education and recognize those who have attained excellence of scholarship. Beta Epsilon, the chapter here at Longwood, was installed on May 21, 1968. It grew out of the desire of Pi Kappa Omega, a local honor society here at the time, to merge with the national honor society in Education, Kappa Delta Pi. Today there are 281 college chapters and 24 alumni chapters.

Only juniors and seniors with an intention to teach are eligible for membership. Juniors must have completed or be in the process of completing 6 semester hours of education whereas Seniors must have 12 semester hours of education. A cumulative average of 3.2 is also required.

Officers this semester are: Claudia Adams, president; Joan Tice, vice-president; Anne Adams, secretary; Emilia Bruce, treasurer; and LaVon Dixon, historian. Mrs. Helen Page of the Education Department is serving as faculty advisor for this year.

Rush Parties Begin With Tea

Rush parties begin on Thursday, Nov. 14 with a tea sponsored by the Panhellenic Council. All rushees were required to pay a two dollar rush fee and to bring a picture of themselves to the tea. Marilyn Taylor and Donna Bramlett talked to the girls about the responsibilities of rush and the upcoming rush parties. Rush Week will continue through this weekend.

December first marks the end of the first year Dr. Henry I. Willett has been President of Longwood College. The college's eighth president since its founding in 1893, Dr. Willett has been a teacher, principal, and an administrator. A 1952 graduate from Washington and Lee, Dr. Willett received his master's degree from the University of Virginia. He served as chairman of the V.E.A. International Relations Committee and is noted for having been the first Virginian to receive the Finish Engleman scholarship award by the American Association of School Administrators. Prior to his appointment to Longwood, Dr. Willett was the assistant superintendent of Chesapeake public schools.

A survey among students, faculty, and key administrators showed a genuine, hearty approval of the ideas, projects, and general improvements on campus since Dr. Willett came.

There has been a general improvement of morale, particularly between faculty and students.

"With Dr. Willett heading our school, we feel as if somebody cares." Our instructional programs have improved. There has been a strong effort to up-grade our academic curriculum. Dr. Willett seems to consider the individual needs of all those who come in contact with him.

One of Dr. Willett's key accomplishments has been increased communications. This effort to increase avenues of communication has resulted in special student-faculty luncheons, press conferences, and a suggestion box outside the President's office. With open communications, students feel freer to express their opinions.

Dr. Willett, too, believes his most important accomplishment has been "in the field of communications." He welcomes suggestions and other ideas to do "an even better job in coordinating various campus groups."

"One idea," Dr. Willett explained, "we've borrowed from the students. Now the faculty members and the administration have informal roundtable discussions regularly."

Future plans in communication include an effort to reach the community by trying to keep local citizens abreast of campus activities.

"I've been gratified with the results of increased communications; but we can't be satisfied with what we have — rather, try to improve even further."

Additional changes include the re-scheduling of our academic week to a five-day work schedule.

"The 5-day week is definitely a step in the right direction," Dr. Willett began. "But, we're not sure we have the very best arrangement. We're continuing to study and appraise our program and certain faculty members are discussing and reevaluating it."

One major improvement has been the recent evaluation and flexibility in the instructional program to increase the quality of the academic offerings.

"Although this program has not begun, the change in the general education requirements should offer students more choice for electives. We needed more flexibility in our curriculum and I'm hoping every department will study their requirements in light of the education changes."

Our campus has had an increase in the number of professors holding doctoral degrees. There has been a major increase in faculty salaries.

Presently, the new administration is intensifying efforts to improve current registration procedures. For the first time in Longwood's history, there will be an organized program abroad this summer. Students studying geography can earn six credits under the program.

Dr. Willett comments: "I'm pleased with, and hope it expands Longwood's travel abroad program. It needed to be organized — and I hope we will move in the right direction."

Several out-moded rules have been modified and liberalized in the past year. Students are now able to drink within the city limits of Farmville, a privilege never granted under any other administration.

In addition, curfew hours have been extended and students are allowed to stay where they can find a place; they no longer must have approved housing.

A recent study on academic probation is under consideration. Administrators feel that there is too much of a jump between a 1.6 freshman requirement and the 2.0 sophomore requirement. The faculty is trying to find a more appropriate academic approach.

Dr. Willett's support of the $81 million bond issue also proved successful.

"The people of Prince Edward County and Farmville endorsed and supported Longwood College. We asked for their help and they responded positively. Any time they ask our

Kappa Omicron Phi Supports Cross Nor Show School's Work

Yearly the Kappa Omicron Phi Chapter, the National Honorary Society for Home Economics students, presents a handicraft exhibit prepared by students attending the Cross Nor School in North Carolina. This school is very unique in that all the students attending are taught to be reasonably self sufficient. They are taught to grow much of their own food, and they learn to make virtually all of their own clothes. They are also extremely proficient in the art of weaving. The student body of this school is composed of only those who would not otherwise have the opportunity to attend public or private schools.

Cross Nor, then, because of the nature of its student body, is supported in part by donations, but they depend primarily on the selling success of their handicrafts. Their skills include the making of hooked rugs, towels, shawls, blankets and many other skillfully done items. Since much of their needed income comes from the profit made on these items, it is asked therefore, that Longwood help support these industrious students in North Carolina. Their handicrafts were displayed in the dining room of the Home Economics Department on Monday and Tuesday, November 18, 19, 1968.

Gilbert Wood Exhibits Paintings In First Of Series

The first in a series of art exhibitions sponsored by the Longwood division of A.R.A. Slater is scheduled to open in the Lankford Building snack bar Dec. 2.

According to Mrs. Thomas Boggs, snack bar manager and originator of the idea, the series of showings will continue indefinitely, presenting the work of students, faculty, staff and friends of the college. Each exhibit will be displayed about two weeks.

The first exhibition will display several mixed-media paintings by Gilbert Wood. Lankford Building director, Mr. Wood has been director of the student activities building since June 1967.

A native of Farmville, Mr. Wood was graduated in 1964 from the University of Virginia with a B.A. in foreign affairs. His poetry, art and cartoons have appeared in Poet and Critic, Littell and two anthologies.

Before coming to Longwood, Mr. Wood was a reporter for the Newport News Daily Press. He joined the Daily Press staff after serving with the U.S. Air Force as newspaper editor, military historian and public relations coordinator.

Inaugural Committee Announces Plans For Two-Day Program

By PAT LUCAS

Last year the Board of Visitors and the Presidential Advisory Committee under the leadership of Dr. Patterson agreed to have an Inaugural Ceremony for Dr. Willett. With Dr. Lockwood as the new Chairman of the Presidential Advisory Committee, the preliminary plans for the inauguration were made and committees appointed. Accordingly, the Inauguration of Dr. Henry I. Willett, Jr., as President of Longwood College will take place on Thursday and Friday, November 21 and 22.

Committee chairmen include: Mr. Hesselink - music, Mr. Martin - Slater Food Service, Mr. Paul - finance, Mr. Butler, artist series, Mrs. Griffin - formal receptions, Mr. Hall - academic procession, Mr. Rouillard - concurrent art exhibits, Mr. Bass - Board of Visitors, Mrs. Jones - alumnae association, Mr. Thomas - public relations, Dean Blackwell - faculty, and Candy Jamison - student body.

Thursday there will be an inaugural reception in the Gold Room of Lankford Building from 6:30 to 8:30. In order that everyone may meet Dr. Willett, the public is invited. At 8:40 the dramatics department will present the musical, The King and I, in Jarman Auditorium. Following the performance, there will be a coffee hour at the Alumnae House.

Friday delegates from other institutions will arrive with the library as the central gathering point for all who will take part in the academic procession. The academic procession will be led by the Presidential party followed by dignitaries from other schools, the Longwood faculty, and the Senior class. At 11:30 a.m. the ceremony will begin with the Rev. Everett Chapman giving the invocation. Greetings will come from Mr. Thomas Bloomfield, town manager of Farmville, Dean Blackwell representing the faculty, Candy Jamison from the student body, and Mrs. Charles W. Apple, Jr., President of the Longwood Alumnae Association. Mr. E. Angus Powell, rector of the Board of Visitors will introduce the Governor, Mills E. Godwin, Jr. who will speak. The investiture, the ceremony by which the authority of the Board of Visitors is given to the President, follows the Governor's message. Rev. Chapman will give the benediction and the ceremony will be concluded by an academic recess.

At 1:00 p.m. there will be a luncheon for the guests, and at 2:15 the Longwood concert choir will perform in Jarman. Friday, Miss Barbara Bishop's art work will be shown in the exhibit room in the library. Visitors who wish to see the dormitory rooms may do so from 3:00 to 5:00 on Friday.

Hesselink Composes Convocation Music; Choir To Perform

The Department of Music will take an active part in the Inauguration ceremonies honoring Dr. Willett on November 22. For the morning convocation, Mr. Paul L. Hesselink will play the organ, performing two original compositions of his own, "A Processional Festival" and "Here We Stand," an anthem; both will be sung by the Concert Choir under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar. Trumpets will add to the festive air of the processional. Helen Ford and Jacqueline White will sing the solo parts of the anthem. The choir will sing an obligato to the Alma Mater, written by Dr. Molnar. The Madrigal Singers, conducted by Mr. James McCombs, will sing a choral benediction.

At two-fifteen in the afternoon, the Concert Choir will present a concert in honor of Dr. Willett. The program is open to the public, and the student body is especially invited. The program will consist of "Sing, all ye Lands," by Greshamoff; "Lauda Sion Salvatorem," by Bartok; in which Jennifer Sue Boykin, Nancy Parsons, and Janice E. Brown will be soloists, and Kathleen A. Wyman and Willie Anne Voyten will play the clarinette parts. The program will continue with two di Lasso selections, "Blest is the Man," and "We shall ascend unto His Hill," followed by "Emite Spiritum tuum," by Schuetky, and "Laudate Dominum" by Mozart, in which Jeannie E. Powell will be soloist. Next will be "The Twenty-Third Psalm," Schubert; "He, Watching over Israel," from "Elijah," by Mendelssohn; "How Lovely is Thy Dwelling Place," from "The German Requiem," Brahms; "How excellent Thy Name, Hallelujah," from "Saul," Handel, and "Achieved is the glorious Work," from "The Creation," by Haydon. Janice Austin and Loretta Shelton are the accompanists for the choir.

E. Angus Powell, Rector of the Longwood College Board of Visitors, will invest the President during Friday's ceremony.

Longwood Defeats W&M In Last Game Of Season

The final game of the varsity hockey season revealed Longwood supreme over its arch rival, William and Mary College by a score of 2-1.

The first half began with even play between the teams, then Longwood gained the upper hand and made numerous attempts at the goal. Although the L.C. team succeeded in pulling the W&M, goalie from her cage many times, these usually ended in a free hit for William and Mary. Finally with the coordinated efforts of her teammates, Jane Tibbs and Betty King, Barbara Snellings successfully scored. A spectacular William and Mary attempt for a goal was thwarted by goalie Leslie Sedgwick. However they continued to try for goals the remainder of the first half but were unsuccessful.

The second half started with a run on the goal by Jane Tibbs and Becky Bondurant. Becky succeeded in pushing herself over the goal line but forgot to bring the ball. Then play was returned the Longwood goal which resulted in two short corners and our regaining the ball. Freda Lunsford was successful in putting the ball in the cage, however since she was outside the striking circle at the time, it didn't count.

After a bit of rushing confusion around the Longwood goal cage William and Mary scored against us, but Barbara Snellings, in a surge of revenge, scored her second goal of the game in the last two minutes of the game, giving the winning score of the game 2-1, and also giving Longwood an undefeated season.

Members of Longwood's Gymnastics Club attended a clinic in Richmond. The group hopes to interest other colleges in competition.

Longwood Gymnasts Attend Judging Clinic In Richmond

This past weekend, November 15-16, twelve members of the Longwood Gymnastics Club attended a gymnastics judging clinic held in Richmond. The clinic, sponsored by the D.G.W.S., was proposed to qualify more college girls as competent gymnastics judges for area meets.

Those students attending were Debbie Ellenbrand, Martha Hicks, Nedra Distel, Suzanne Morgan, Buffy Winfree, Jo Mottley, Debbie Morris, Lynda Driver, Suzi Johnson, Kay Hensley, Karen Lewis, Kathy Barclay, and Miss Fath, the club's sponsor.

The substance of the clinic was held Friday, 7:30-9:30, and Saturday, 9:00-3:30. Stunts were demonstrated by a high school student and films of various demonstrations were shown; from these important judging factors were taken. The three state compulsory routines of floor exercise, balance beam, and uneven bars were also demonstrated.

Longwood has already received responses from several other area colleges on the possibility of a gymnastics meet later this year at Longwood. The club has petitioned the Athletic Association for its members to receive points toward Athletic badges and blazer awards, and it also received the best Midway entertainment award for its enjoyable show during Oktoberfest.

1. Having cars on campus is strictly a senior privilege and violators will lose this privilege.
2. Local students living on campus cannot bring a car on campus until their senior year.
3. Do not bring a car on campus for any reason unless you obtain permission in advance. This specifically applies to the beginning and ending of the school terms and all holidays.

Longwood grasped third place in the Individual Medley with Louis

Hrubik.

Diving gave Longwood first place, Kathy Hipskind, and third place, Judy Donohoe. The next event, Freestyle 100 yards, was won by Carol Sanders with Suzanne Turner coming in second.

Helen Beamer placed third in the 50 yard Breaststroke, with Mary Baldwin gaining first and second positions. In the Butterfly event Louis Hrubik won second place and Carol Umbdenstock won third.

Geography Council Recognizes Dove

Sharon Dove, a 1968 graduate of Longwood, has been recognized by the 1968 National Council for Geographic Education Awards for Excellence in Geography to Senior Students. She was also recipient of a first place award in the college division of the geography contest with her paper entitled "A Climatic Survey of Malagasy Republic."

While here at Longwood, Sharon majored in geography and minored in German. She was president of the German Club, a member of the French Club, and a member of the Social Standards Committee. Presently she is teaching in Bonn, Germany.

Snow Hinders Games Reds Defeat Greens After Colors Tie

By LYNNE COLEMAN
Longwood's second color game proved to be a very exciting one. With a swimming meet the same day and some of the players missing, it became quite a contest. Snow a couple of days before the game made it messy and interesting. The Red 'n Whites battled to score and the Green 'n Whites did the same, both against powerful defenses and puddles of water, causing all their efforts to be in vain. The outcome of the game was 0-0, which meant the two teams would meet again.

The third and final game was played at Barlow field with piles of snow still on the ground. Fighting against the cold and sun, both teams were scoreless in the first half. As the second half opened, the Red 'n Whites scored two quick goals. The Green 'n Whites managed to score before the end of the game, but much to their dismay, the Red 'n Whites won 2-1. This has been the hardest-fought contest and the best color competition LC has had.

Mac's Facts

Congratulations Red-n-Whites on your color victories in hockey. Alumnae Pea-Pickers, the "Pea Pods" send their heartiest thanks. The "banquet" we had will become an annual event.

Miss Pitt had decided that heels are out and knee socks with boots are just the thing for fashion.

Congratulations Varsity on showing William and Mary that playing at the end of the season does not make a difference.

Freda, life is not always bitter. Congratulations to Longwood's Tidewater players. Southeast is next!

Over twenty people showed up in Lankford to learn how to make "infirmary" boots, but there was no instructor. The class will be rescheduled soon, we hope.

Thought for the week: "Success is getting what you want; happiness is wanting what you get."

Foreign Study Plan Begun For Students; Covers Eight Cities

Plans for a summer study program in Europe for Longwood College students are now being made. The program, which will begin on July 29 and run through August 19, will prove to be a very rewarding experience.

The route of the trip will cover eight European cities including London, England; Glasgow, Scotland; Amsterdam, Netherlands; Copenhagen, Denmark; Berlin, Germany; Munich, Germany; Lucerne, Switzerland; and Paris, France.

Students will be taken on tours through these cities and will visit some of the many tourist attractions in each city.

Further details are not available at this time. Information concerning expenses, credit hours, and day to day travel plans will be published in a later issue of the Rotunda. All persons interested in this program are urged to look for this article in upcoming issues.

Monday, November 4, the AST's held their Founders Day Banquet in the Tea Room. Our guests were our advisor, Mrs. Blackwell, and her husband, Dean Blackwell; a past advisor, Mrs. Binger, and Mrs. Elizabeth Jones and her daughter from the Alumnae House. Mrs. Jones was our guest speaker and she gave an interesting talk on Longwood alumnae.

Six Selected By Geist: Four Seniors, Two Juniors Recognized For Scholarship, Leadership, Service

Geist, the honorary leadership fraternity on campus, recognized four seniors and two juniors during its fall tapping last night. The seniors were Claudia Jean Adams, Martha Ann Ailor, Becky Ann Bartholomew, and Patti Lee Pawl. The new junior members are Christy Bond McDonnell, and Andrea Lynn Myers.

Geist strives to recognize and encourage quality achievement in scholarship, leadership, and service. It aims to promote college loyalty and preserve worthwhile ideals and traditions of Longwood. It also fosters understanding and cooperation between students and faculty.

Geist exists as a transitional organization from Alpha Kappa Gamma to Mortar Board. A local honor society must have been organized for five years with the consent of the administration in order to be considered for the granting of a charter of Mortar Board.

Geist members are selected from those juniors and seniors who have demonstrated outstanding achievement in scholarship, leadership, and service to Longwood College. They must receive a unanimous vote of the entire current Geist membership.

Geist sponsors varying activities throughout the year such as the Oktoberfest Weekend and the Elizabeth Burger Jackson Scholarship Award that is announced yearly at the Honor Council Assembly.

The new members and their activities are:

Claudia Adams is president of Kappa Delta Pi education honorary, a member of Zeta Tau Alpha, past treasurer of Student Education Association, and a member of Chahots. She was also named to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Ann Ailor is vice-president of Legislative Board, corresponding secretary of Sigma Kappa, Chairman of Orientation, past president of Alpha Lambda Delta, past member of House Association, past president of the Baptist Student Union, a member of Kappa Delta Pi, a Geist Usherette, and a past Colleague. Ann was also named to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Powell Invests Willett, 8th LC President

By CANDY MAHER

"We at Longwood can look forward to some measure of quantitative growth. But I would submit to you that for each quantitative step taken there must be an equal step that is qualitative in nature. It is to this quest for excellence, coupled with a preservation of the spirit that is Longwood, that I must humbly dedicate myself."

Dr. Henry I. Willett, Jr., thus concluded his Inaugural Address on Friday, November 22, after having been invested with the office of President of Longwood College by E. Angus Powell, Rector of the College's Board of Visitors.

In the course of his speech, Dr. Willett pointed to many recent developments in higher education throughout the Commonwealth. Among these were the Virginia Plan for Higher Education, the cooperation between private and public schools; progress toward better "student-faculty-administrative communication"; "the movement into innovative, imaginative, and forward-looking instructional programs"; and especially, the Bond Referendum for Higher Education, passed on November 5.

In reference to the Bond Issue, the President praised the Governor's role in its passage. He also credited the citizens of the state. "The people of Virginia, as is their custom, have responded in the affirmative to a major challenge. . . Perhaps of equal importance is the climate for progress which the bond vote projects. . . It is incumbent upon us to justify the vote of confidence expressed by the people of Virginia."

Dr. Willett enumerated these five basic groups essential to Longwood, noting their dedication and aid to the College: the town of Farmville, the Board of Visitors, the Alumnae, the student body, and the faculty.

The investiture ceremony followed an address by the Honorable Mills

E. Godwin, Jr., Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia. He opened his speech with: "I would join with you today in tribute to a man, for this is our purpose in coming here."

Continuing his praise of Dr. Willett, the Governor said: "I know you join in my delight that . . . the Board of Visitors has selected a Virginian as the best man available, a product of Virginia's schools, and a man who reflects the ability so often handed down from father to son among Virginia's distinguished families."

The Governor went on to describe the bright prospects for the future of higher education in the Commonwealth. But he warned against "neglecting the fundamentals," and reminded his audience of the important role of the teacher. "I think it is time for us to go back to the fundamentals in Virginia education. . . We can go back early and often to our belief that the school or the college is only the means; that people, truly educated people, are the end. We can, and we must, remember that education begins and ends with the classroom teacher."

Complimenting Longwood on its achievements in the field of education, Gov. Godwin said: "But I say to you that no college in Virginia has had a more profound effect upon the people of this state than Longwood College. Its graduates have shaped the attitudes and the character of generation after generation in Virginia."

ia, those who went on to higher education and those who did not."

Addressing himself to the students, he added: "If you want to become totally involved, as your generation seems to, if you want to help shape a better life with your own hands and your own minds, you can find no finer field than education in your own state."

"If you want to go where the meaningful action is, if you want to really take hold of tomorrow, then find a place in education."

"Of necessity, my generation has been absorbed in the arithmetic of education. Your generation will develop its philosophy. We have been overwhelmed with quantity. You must

Will You Be Next? Precaution Needed

It has finally touched us. We had thought perhaps that we were untouchable, that things "like that" only happen to others. But the November 20 Richmond NEWS LEADER reported that "two young women were raped while waiting for their dates on Rugby Road last weekend..." (At the University of Virginia).

The article did not state where the girls were from. It does not matter. How many girls from Longwood were at the University of Virginia that weekend? Per chance, it could have been anyone of them.

Again, we need not limit the incident to the University of Virginia. It could have happened anywhere. It could happen on the Hampden-Sydney campus, in the town of Farmville, or on the Longwood campus.

We have become careless. We have dropped our guard. Girls walk back from the bus station late at night unmindful of college rules warning them not to do this. Girls wander the campus by themselves after dark without giving the matter any thought. Girls allow their dates to go off and leave them sitting by themselves in a car, or waiting in the parking lots of fraternity houses.

Must you be reminded to take precautions regarding your personal safety? A great percentage of such cases of assault could be prevented if the coeds would be more particular about avoiding isolated areas when they are alone.

Pass-Fail Comes Up . . . Again

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Guest editorial taken from the November 8 issue of the Sweet Briar News.)

The pass-fail idea has been in the works for a few years. Each time it gets turned down by the faculty committee, the students work a little harder.

Next Thursday the student curriculum committee will meet with the faculty curriculum in their first session of the year. The main issue for discussion will be adoption of a restricted pass-fail system on a trial basis. Let's look at the student proposal.

1. Only juniors and seniors would be allowed to elect to take a course under pass-fail.
2. No more than one course in any single semester, a maximum of four during the junior and senior years, might be taken pass-fail.
3. A pass-fail course must be taken outside a student's major field, and outside a student's distribution requirements.
4. A C— or above would be P (pass); below a C— would be F (fail).
5. There would be no H (honors).
6. Professors would not know which or how many students in a class are taking the course pass-fail.
7. Grades would go to the recorder as usual, but only a P or an F would go on the student's record.

We think the students have a convincing case to present to the faculty next week, and we urge passage of the proposal. The student committee has supporting evidence that a similar system succeeds at comparable schools. They have thoroughly examined every conceivable faculty objection in preparation for the meeting.

They are only asking for a trial period of one year—what would be the harm in trying?

ONLY in a dream.

Thanksgiving Traditions Overlooked?

Thursday our nation celebrates Thanksgiving, a day commemorating the early settlers thanks to God. Thanksgiving Day brings to mind the close of harvest time, sheaves of wheat, pilgrims neatly donned with shiny shoe buckles and pressed collars and hats — and father sporting his shotgun and recently-felled goose. Imagine small children delighted at the feast as they gaze over the long table — corn, turkey, vegetables. Thanksgiving, to these people, was truly a time to thank their Creator.

But the times have changed. Instead of families enjoying a meal of thanks together, Mom and Dad have gone to a football game and the children have taken the family car. They may be home in time to grab a hamburger before their dates, but a peanut-butter and jelly sandwich will do just as well. What about attending a church service?

Many college students consider Thanksgiving only a time to "get away from it all." One student remarked, "I'm just going to rest and get ready for the tests coming up before Christmas."

Is this attitude one of complacency? Why are we content to by-pass the religious, unified aspect of Thanksgiving tradition?

One reason stems from the fact that we have let religion play a small part in our daily lives. We are not concerned with religious observances, and, as a result, Thanksgiving is regarded as just a three or four day vacation from regular class work.

Even downtown merchants advertise Halloween costumes one week and display Christmas items the entire month of November and December, absolutely overlooking Thanksgiving. True, buyers don't purchase gifts or candy at Thanksgiving, but then perhaps stores over-commercialize these holidays. Only one downtown Farmville store displayed a Thanksgiving scene.

By-passers may be reminded, at least, that the season is at hand.

What we need at Thanksgiving is more family fellowship. Take time to attend a church service and thank God for all the things you have — maybe you'll appreciate them more when you compare your life to those less fortunate. Try to see Thanksgiving through the eyes of the earlier settlers, as a day to Thank God.

Commonwealth's Atty. Discusses Drugs, Statutes Listed Concerning Lotteries

William F. Watkins, Jr., Commonwealth's Attorney, has issued a statement to inform the Longwood students of the legal aspects concerning the use of drugs.

The Virginia statutes make it illegal to sell, exchange or possess any narcotics, including marijuana. The possession of marijuana carries a punishment of a fine of $1,000.00 and from three to five years in the penitentiary on a first offense. The statutes further provide that where there is a sale, exchange or furnishing to a minor of any marijuana the offense shall be punished by a penitentiary sentence of from ten to thirty years.

The statutes further provide that where marijuana is being sold or used that that place may be declared a common nuisance.

Anyone being present where marijuana is being used might be considered to be in possession of the same and, therefore, would be subject to rather severe penalties. This would especially be so as to persons present who were aware of its use by others. Even though a person might be acquitted of a charge of possession, the mere presence would probably involve an arrest and the attendant embarrassment and cost of defense in criminal charges against them.

Also the use of any amphetamine or barbiturate (stimulant or depressant drugs) is a violation of Virginia statutes and the use thereof is not only dangerous, but also would carry with it fines and imprisonment should it be used.

Even awareness of the use, sale, etc., of these drugs and narcotics could involve an individual since knowledge of a violation of these state laws—if the individual does nothing about it—might lead to implication in a case, at the very least.

Students should also be aware of the Virginia laws concerning lotteries and raffles.

Section 18.1-340 of the Code of Virginia reads as follows:

Managing, etc., a lottery, etc., or buying, selling, etc., chances. — If any person:

(1) Set up, promote or be concerned in managing or drawing a lottery or raffle for money or other thing of value,

(2) Knowingly permit such lottery in any house under his control,

(3) Knowingly permit money or other property to be raffled for in such house, or to be won therein, by throwing or using dice, or by any other game of chance,

(4) Knowingly permit the sale in such house of any chance or ticket in, or share or a ticket in, a lottery, or any writing, certificate, bill, token or other device purporting or intended to guarantee or assure to any person, or entitle him to a prize or share of, or interest in a prize to be drawn in a lottery, or,

(5) For himself or another person buy, sell or transfer, or have in his possession for the purpose of sale or with intent to exchange, negotiate or transfer, or aid in selling, exchanging, negotiating or transferring, a chance or ticket in or share of a ticket in a lottery, or any such writing, certificate, bill, token or device,

He shall be confined in jail not exceeding one year, and fined not exceeding five hundred dollars; provided that any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section when such violation shall consist of the operation or conduct of a lottery commonly known as the numbers game or the numbers racket shall be confined in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years and fined not less than five hundred dollars, or in the discretion of the jury or the court trying the case without a jury, he shall be confined in jail not less than six months nor more than twelve months and fined not more than five hundred dollars, either or both.

O.D.C. Sinks Swim Team 62-13; Team Takes First At Tri-Meet

By JOAN LAWTER

The Longwood Swim Team was defeated, 62-13, by Old Dominion on November 16. Kathy Hipshind was the only Longwood swimmer to win a second place. Agreeing that the team was under a handicap, Miss Bush said, "With four of our top swimmers sick, we were forced to enter girls inevents they had never swam before. The girls worked hard and gained a lot of experience."

The swimming team now has a record of 4-2, and the next meet is home December 5 with Roanoke College.

In a tri-meet last Wednesday, the Longwood Varsity Swimming Team captured first place with 59 points. Westhampton was second with 42 points and Mary Washington was third with 24 points.

The Longwood team took the first event, the 200 yard medley relay. Swimming in the relay were Carol Umbdenstock, Lois Hrubek, Ellen Cahill and Joanne May. In the 50 yard freestyle Carol Sanders was first with a good time of 28.6. Jinx Washington took a fourth place in this event.

Team captain Carol Umbdenstock captured first place and Patti Coogan second in the 50 yard backstroke and Lois Hrubek was third in the 100 yard medley.

In the diving Kathy Hipshind was second and Judy Donohue was fourth, and in the 100 yard freestyle Carol Sanders took second place. With a good time, 34.5, Ellen Cahill got first place in the 50 yard butterfly.

Lois Hrubek came in second and Janet Hirschman fourth in the 50 yard breaststroke and in the final event, the 200 yard free relay, Patti Coogan, Carol Umbdenstock, Carol Sanders, and Joanne May won for Longwood College.

Anna Pettis, Leslie Sedgwick (top), and Phyllis Carter (bottom) were the three Longwood students named to the Southeast III hockey team. Now, they go to Delaware to compete.

Sedgwick, Carter, Pettis Named To S.E. Team

By SUSIE MARSH

Two weekends ago, the first Varsity Hockey Team attended the Tidewater tournament in Richmond at Westhampton College. There they were judged by their playing ability on the field and on their records from the entire season. From this data, the permanent Tidewater teams for the year were picked from Virginia and a few surrounding states.

Members of the Tidewater I from Longwood are Barbara Snellings, Anna Pettis, Jane Tibbs, Phyllis Carter, and Leslie Sedgwick, Longwood players on Tidewater II are Cathy Hass, Betty King, Sandi Naylor, and Becky Bondurant.

This past weekend these girls traveled to Williamsburg to attend the Southeast Tournament at William and Mary. The entire Tidewater team played Washington (5-0), Blue Ridge (1-0), Baltimore II, and Washington College, and Blue Ridge Club (1-0).

Three girls were chosen for the Southeast III. They are Anna Pettis, alternate, Phyllis Carter, and Leslie Sedgwick. They were judged for the games they played over the weekend.

Peace Corps Degree Improved, Extended

The officials of the Peace Corps and the State University of New York College at Brockport announced completion of arrangements for continuing and extending the unique Peace Corps/College Degree Program to admit a third group of candidates in June, 1969. The members of the first contingent completing the fifteen-month program which combines the upper division undergraduate education with Peace Corps preparation are now serving on binational educational development teams in the Dominican Republic; the second group is now in the academic year phase of this joint project and is slated for overseas assignment in Latin America in August, 1969.

The candidates will be selected from the ranks of students in good standing at an accredited college who are completing their sophomore or junior year by June 1969. Those selected will be able to earn an A.B. or B.S. degree and be eligible for a Peace Corps assignment in one academic year flanked by two summers of fully subsidized and integrated academic courses and Peace Corps training. They will be expected to major in mathematics or the sciences, those who have completed their junior year prior to entrance into the program will have the opportunity for a double-major.

At the end of the second summer armed with the degree, a teaching license, in-depth cross cultural preparation and fluency in Spanish the graduates as Peace Corps volunteers will be off on their Latin American assignment. As members of the staffs of teacher training institutions and/or consultants to secondary teachers of mathematics or science, they will be important participants in the educational development efforts of their host countries. During their two year sojourn they will have the opportunity to earn up to twelve semester hours graduate credit.

Peace Corps and college officials pointed out the several features which make this joint program unique including: academic credit for Peace Corps training, two fully subsidized summer sessions totalling thirty semester credit hours, in-depth Peace Corps training synchronized with the liberal arts and specialized professional preparation, individualized programming, opportunity for double majors and supervised overseas graduate work.

"This integrated program is based on our two fold conviction that (1) to combine the college and Peace Corps experiences is to make both more relevant and meaningful and the personal product more valuable (2) to provide much-needed skilled specialists — mathematics and science teachers — as Peace Corps volunteers in Latin America is to make a significant contribution to all concerned," said President Albert Warren Brown, of the State University College at Brockport in announcing the extension of this unique partnership.

Univ. Of Michigan Liberalizes Curfew, For Coeds Under 21

ANN ARBOR, MICH. (I.P.) — University of Michigan Regents have extended for an additional year the liberalized dormitory curfew and visiting regulations which they adopted temporarily last January.

Regents continued the lifting of curfew regulations for all women over 21 who live in residence halls and for those under 21 who have their parents' permission.

The Regents said such policies are to be established within these guidelines: "The proper balance of academic, social, and political aspects of University life; the maintenance of good taste; the meticulous safeguarding of the rights of minorities; the utilization of the experience and advice of University Housing staff."

Richard L. Cutler, outgoing vice president for student affairs, recommended that the Regents make the temporary policy permanent.

"The Board of Governors of Residence Halls and the director of University housing feel that the visitation policy has been extremely successful," Cutler told the Regents. "While a few abuses have occurred, there is no indication that these are more frequent than under a more restrictive policy."

He noted that the student-faculty Board of Governors had certain reservations about eliminating curfew altogether, but felt that "the option left open to parents and their daughters is sufficiently flexible so that individual arrangements can be made to reflect the pattern which has developed in the home."

Most of the 4,885 students and 235 staff members who completed questionnaires endorsed the idea of each residence unit's autonomy in fixing visiting policies. More than half of them took an active part in determining the policies.

Fencers Attend Clinic At MBC

Directed By Duke Univ. Coach

Four Longwood students attended a fencing clinic Saturday, November 23, at Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Virginia.

YWCA Plans Special Program

Emphasis Includes Folk Group

The YWCA is planning a special program for the student body on December 4, 1968 as part of its spiritual emphasis. Instead of a speaker, the "Y" is sponsoring a "Folk Group" composed of seven students representing four college campuses in Virginia. They sing contemporary folk music with some religious folk tunes. The concept of the group is to express through the contemporary music their own faith. The program will be at 7:30 p.m. in the ABC room of Lankford. Afterwards, refreshments will be served and those who wish to stay can talk with members of the Folk Group. All students, faculty, and administration are invited to attend.

Another "Y" project has been the Thanksgiving Food Drive which has been in progress since November 18. Under the co-chairmanship of Lois Monger and JoAnne Darby, this year's drive has had three categories of competition. The nine sororities are competing among themselves with the winner receiving a banner with its colors. The upperclassmen dorms are each competing for a blue and white banner, and the freshmen dorms are vying for a red and white banner.

The "Y" is collecting not only food, but toys and clothing as well.

Judging the boxes will be Monday afternoon. The dedication service led by the newly-elected Freshmen Commission will be Monday evening at 7:00 p.m. in the Episcopal Church. Four needy families in the Farmville community have been suggested by the Welfare Department to receive the school's donation.

Children's Theater Features Plays At Christmas

By PAT LUCAS

The Children's Theatre class will present two Christmas plays, for the entertainment of the Children of Farmville, December 13 at 10:30 in Jarman Auditorium. Cast members come from both Prince Edward Academy and Longwood. Bunny Robinson will direct "The Keeper of the Clock," with Carolyn Campbell and Maggie Parker directing "The Mouse Who Didn't Believe in Christmas."

One of the directors commented, "We have very talented casts. Children have a wonderful uninhibited quality which is to great advantage on the stage."

Committee Studies Mid-Term Grading; Students Participate

A committee chaired by Mr. Earl Rubley has been formed to look into the whole structure of mid-term evaluation.

This committee was a result of a proposal made at the last faculty meeting to study the situation. Students had complained that when mid-semester grades were due, they had two and three tests scheduled on the same day.

The Legislative Board recommended the names of two students to serve on the committee; the girls are Jeanette Bickings and Barbara Roukema.

Dr. Herbert Blackwell stated that the administration will continue to review facets of the college "to see if the present system is the best system we have."

Freshman Class Collects Over $32 In Penny Throw

One of the money making projects of the Freshman Class was the penny throw, held in the Rotunda, on Thursday, November 21.

This project was first set up by Dr. Wygal, former President of Longwood College. In this project, he agreed to match, up to $100, the amount of money that the Freshman Class made in the penny throw. The money made would go toward a scholarship for a deserving Freshman.

The Freshman Class made $32.07 on the penny throw. The scholarship will be presented in the spring to a member of the class of 1972.

Kansas City Poetry Contest Offers $1900 In Prize Money

The sixth annual Kansas City (Mo.) Poetry Contest, offering a total of $1,900 in prizes and publication of a book-length manuscript, has been announced by Hallmark Cards.

One of four sponsors, Hallmark will again offer six $100 cash awards to student writers by full time college and university students in the United States. More than 2,000 students submitted entries in the 1968 competition.

In addition, the Devins Memorial Award offers a $500 advance on royalties for a book-length poetry manuscript.

script to be published by the University of Missouri Press and the Kansas City Star offers seven $100 prizes for single poems.

The fourth sponsor is the family of H. Jay Shark, a Kansas City patron of student writing, which will award four $25 prizes for poems by high school students of Missouri and bordering states.

The deadline for submission of entries is February 1, 1969, and winners will be announced on April 24 at the closing reading of the 1968-69 American Poets Series of the Kansas City Jewish Community Center. The judges have not yet been announced but in the past have included Conrad Aiken, Luis Untermeyer, Robert Penn Warren, Philip Booth and Edwin Honig.

All entries are judged anonymously. The author's name is enclosed in a sealed envelope attached to his entry. Complete contest rules may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Kansas City Poetry Contest, 8201 Holmes Road, Kansas City, Mo. 64131.

Home Ec Bazaar Features Recipes, Handmade Items

Christmas '68 will be the theme of this year's annual Home Economics bazaar to be held Dec. 5 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the ABC Room of Lankford.

Each Home Economics major will make three items, Afghans, burlap flowers, stuffed animals and other novelties will splash the room with color. A bake sale will be featured and the corresponding old favored recipes will also be for sale. All items will be of varied prices.

Due to tremendous student support in the past, the change to Lankford has been made to better facilitate the bazaar. Christmas music will be piped in to help set the Christmas mood.

The proceeds from the bazaar will be placed in the scholarship fund for Home Economics majors.

LC Image Of Judicial Board Important To Its Candidates

What image should the Judicial Board have in the minds of the students at Longwood?

Vice-Chairman
Carolyn Cummins

If any branch of student government is to function effectively it must be respected by us. This respect must be acquired through practice and policy and not merely by insisting upon it. It includes not only respect for the Board as an institution, but also respect for its members, the rules and regulations it enforces, and the decisions it renders. Procuring respect can begin immediately through a reevaluation of our perspective—the student and her education should be our primary concern. Finally, it must always be remembered that respect is exacted, not solicited.

Susan Davenport

If the Judicial Board is to have an image in the minds of the student body, it should be that of a body of individuals whose concern is to trust and have faith in the individual as far as possible, but who cannot allow leniency or laxity to destroy the honor system or promote disregard of rules. The image that Longwood students have of the Judicial Board isn't nearly so important as the image they have of Longwood's Honor System and the Board must spare no expense of its own image in order to preserve it.

Julie Smith

Having previously served on Judicial Board I am—and have been—concerned with its image in the minds of Longwood students. Since the Judicial Board is composed of students rather than administration the upholding of its image is everyone's duty as much as the upholding of the Honor Code. We the students of Longwood respect and believe in our Honor Code. If we are to uphold this code of honor, we must uphold this image for the Judicial Board.

I believe that respect and trust are important parts of our Longwood life. It is this image which I will strive to project if I am elected to serve you as secretary of Judicial Board.

Secretary
Bonnie Bowers

An effective student government is one which strives to meet the needs of its members so that each one may be benefited as much as possible.

Dean Blackwell Announces Changes A.P., Exam, Spring Class Scheduling

Major changes in the standards for academic probation, exam scheduling, and class scheduling for the spring semester have been announced by Dr. Herbert R. Blackwell, Dean of the College.

Effective in September, 1969, the new academic standards will require a student to have a 1.8 cumulative average at the end of her freshman year, and a 2.0 at the end of her third semester. The previous rules required a 1.6 at the end of the first year, and a 2.0 at the end of the second year.

The major reason for the change is that quite frequently students finishing their freshman year with a 1.6 average, find it impossible to attain a 2.0 within the next year. Consequently, they must be dropped for a year after having been in school for two years.

"We feel that there ought to be a smaller gap between levels of performance at freshman and sophomore years and that by insisting on a 1.80 at the end of the freshman year, that those students who have academic difficulties as freshmen will have to return the summer after their first year. And there's less likelihood that they will have to drop out of college for a year," Dr. Blackwell explained.

Also, students on academic probation at the end of any school year may return during the summer session to remove themselves from probation.

In conjunction with these changes, the Academic Policies Committee considered prohibiting students, who are on academic probation during second semester, from participating in any extracurricular activities. However, the Committee felt that this was a decision that students should make for themselves. Accordingly, the Committee is sending notification of the new probationary standards to Legislative Board, asking the Board if it wishes to impose such restrictions.

The examination schedule this semester also reflects some revision. In previous years, all of the most popular class hours were first in the schedule, so that students could finish early. This year, the large class hours are scattered all the way through the entire exam period. This is to allow additional time for study, and to make it a rare occurrence for a student to have two exams on any one day.

Also this year, there is a two-day period between the end of classes and the beginning of exams.

On the original calendar for the 1968-69 school year, second semester registration was to begin January 31, and classes on February 3. This has been changed to registration on February 3, 4, and classes beginning February 5. This will allow a full week between the end of exams and the start of the new term.

The third major area of study is the process of making schedule changes for next spring. Revised schedules will soon be available to faculty advisors so that students can discuss their programs for the coming spring.

The most important of these changes is the decision to abandon the televised section of Western Civilization. Students enrolled in that course will be reassigned to smaller lecture sections by the Registrar. The course was set up on an experimental basis this fall, and it is now felt that freshmen are not generally ready for this method of instruction.

Dr. Blackwell is also looking forward to the future elimination of televised courses in psychology. Since personal contact between teacher and student is of major importance, he wants to try to avoid as much as possible the mass type of TV class.

A new course to be offered in the spring is an advanced Biology course in Bryophytes. It will be taught as a two credit-hour course, meeting for one four-hour lab field period a week. The science department is planning to offer, in September, 1969, a course in Oceanography, which will lead to certification in this area. This course will involve a team teaching approach by members of different science disciplines.

Legislative Aspirants: Gap Between Board, Students?

In your opinion, what can be done to close the gap that exists between the Legislative Board and the students?

Vice-Chairman
Andrea Myers

The gap which exists between the Legislative Board and students can be divided into four areas: communications, understanding of the board, interest, and respect for the board.

Communications can be improved by posting minutes on class bulletin boards, making representatives members of class executive committees, and requiring these representatives to attend class meetings and give legislative reports. The board must further urge students to bring opinions to their representatives or to attend legislative meetings themselves.

During orientation greater emphasis must be placed on the understanding of the structure of Legislative Board. Student Government's informative exhibit at the fall interest fair should also be available each year to both freshmen and upper classmen for a longer period of time.

Sarah Brown
"What we have here is a failure to communicate." This sentence has been quoted many times to illustrate the origin of problems, and here again it finds itself useful.

Several means of communication could be utilized to stimulate the flowing of information. For instance, dorm distribution of the minutes of each Legislative Board meeting would cause many students to stop and read what is being discussed by their Student Government, or having the names of the members of the three major Boards published weekly in "The Rotunda" would provide a "who to see" list for the student body. The January conference involving the old and new members of the three major Boards will also stimulate interest in Student Government activities and will allow students to talk with any of the members about various problems and questions.

Secretary

munication between the two.

The Legislative meetings are open to the students; the minutes of these meetings are posted; and there is a suggestion box for student requests. The problem? No enthusiastic support or participation. The solution? The time and place of the Legislative meetings and the business to be discussed should be announced. As for the minutes being posted, many students feel the Student Government bulletin board can be read only by officers and the special committee—this misconception should be cleared up, and students should be urged to keep up to date with Legislative business. The suggestion box has aroused student participation. Therefore, the Legislative Board should accent its need for requests.

How can the gap be closed? The only way is to constantly urge and reurge student participation.

Gayle Park

In my opinion, the students should be made more aware of the opportunities they have to communicate with their lawmakers. Have we forgotten the minutes of weekly meetings of the Legislative Board are posted on the Student Government Bulletin Board? Perhaps once in a while the students should be reminded of this. Our most important link, the class representative, perhaps could give a brief report of legislative meetings at class meetings.

Most important, we students should make it a point to know what's going on. Presently, our constitution is being revised by the Legislative Board and we should speak up now to our representatives if we feel a rule should be changed.

Martha Whitehurst

Decreasing the present gap which exists between the Legislative Board and the student body can best be carried out, I feel, by first improving communications between the two. There are various ways that this goal could be achieved; however, it must be realized that both parties would have to work equally in order to accomplish this. Probably the primary ways to improve communications would be to require reports at regular class meetings from their respective representatives to the board and encouraging students to read the minutes of the meetings regularly posted on the faculty bulletin board. When communications have been improved with the present student body, then the students in charge or orientation will be able to give to the new students a fuller and more complete understanding of the work of the Legislative Board—thus further decreasing the gap.

Sue Rinaldi

In order to close the gap that exists between the Legislative Board and the student body, I feel there needs to be a combined effort on the part of both the students and the Board.

There are many ways in which this effort can be effective. The representatives should be responsible for reporting in their respective class meetings all Board proceedings and decisions. There is also the responsibility of each student to become informed as to what is currently being done by the Board. Also, Legislative meetings are open to the entire student body as well as all questions and suggestions.

Another effective measure to increase student interest in Legislative progress would be an evaluation of each of the nine committees' functions and activities in order to improve them and increase student interest.

I feel that if the students and the Legislative Board work more closely together, the present gap will soon prove nonexistent.

Treasurer

Sue Anderson

The gap between the Legislative Board and the students is caused by the lack of communication. There are three plausible ways to help this situation.

First, the Legislative Board could periodically have an open meeting so that interested students could attend.

Second, if a student wanted to bring up a ruling for revision or offer an

Join Theft Revolution

Our campus has recently undergone an unofficial change in its honor system. We have been warned against lying, stealing, and cheating. But several unknown prowlers have violated the rule against stealing. The unfortunate victims have lost money, clothing, books, and even food and ice trays in refrigerators. When will these petty thefts cease? Who will unexpectedly walk into their room and discover someone digging through their closets?

These people must have a problem. In order to avoid more stealing, it is wise to remove all expensive jewelry from sight. Thefts usually occur when the thief knows people aren't likely to be in their rooms. As a precautionary measure, be certain to lock closets, safely conceal wallets, and hide any loose change before going to supper or during classes when you will be out of your room.

Remember, the Christmas holidays are approaching and there will undoubtedly be increasing thefts. Be sure to hide anything you value and check your valuables upon returning to your room. If money has been stolen, chances are that Judicial Board can't trace the source. However, if you have personal articles removed from your room, don't forget that there are such things as Judicial Board searches. Let's join in the "theft revolution" and revert back to honesty!

initial rule, that student should have the opportunity to present it to the board. In this way, there would be a more direct relationship between the board and the student.

Third, announcements could be made in the dining hall of new changes under consideration.

"Casey" Wilkes

Because the Legislative Board oversees most phases of student life, it is most important that each student be aware of the functions of this branch of student government. The answer to bridging the gap between the Legislative Board and the students can be found in creating better communications between both parties. The Legislative Board can provide up-to-date information on a bulletin board and in the school newspaper on rule changes and other information it takes up. Secondly, the class representatives could make more and better reports on what the Board is doing at class meetings. If interest can be stimulated in this way, then students will feel freer to make suggestions for improvement. Legislative is a vital part of student government and only through each individual working together can it function properly.

Melissa Howe

In my opinion, students are indif-

Univ. Of Va. DU Frats. Rolls To Longwood Storms Stag Room

By CAROL SKELLEY

A little bit of the big U rolled down to Longwood Friday night when 45 members of Virginia's DU fraternity arrived on campus.

The boys arrived with empty keg via Trailways, gathered their dates (no easy chore), and stormed the Stag Room which they had rented for the night. Music was provided by the Satisfactions and the group solved the lack of space problem by taking to tables and chairs.

And a good time was had by all. . .

ferent to the legislative board because they don't know its functions. We should encourage students to participate in activities of the legislative board by acquainting them with the functions through conferences between the student body and student government members similar to the presidential conferences at Longwood. The participation in elections could be improved if the students were more well informed of the duties of the legislative board officers and members.

Alpha Lambda Delta, Frosh Honorary, Initiates Sophs

Four sophomores were initiated into Alpha Lambda Delta, the Freshman honorary fraternity, on December 8 at 7:30 in the ABC room of Lankford. The reception took place in the Gold Room. All active and inactive members were invited along with Dr. and Mrs. Willett, Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell, the head residents of the girls initiated, and the honorary members: Dr. Binger, Dr. Sprague, and Dean Brown. Dean Wilson, Mrs. Parrish, the faculty advisor, and Pat Cloonan, the president, took part in the ceremony.

The girls initiated were: Nettie MacFarland Torrence, with a 3.64 cumulative average, is an English major from Richmond. She is a member of Kappa Delta social sorority, the Colleagues, on the Academic Affairs committee, and hall president.

Jo Anne Arvilla May is an elementary education major from Charlottesville with a 3.62 average. Jo Anne is on the swimming team and the Lankford Building Committee.

Marjorie Jeanne Woolfolk, from Louisa, is a business major with a 3.54 average. She is secretary of the sophomore class, on the Virginia Staff, a member of Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority, active in BSU, and secretary of the Granddaughters Club. Jean Dixon Waters, a physical therapy major from Chilhowie, has a 3.50 average. She plans to transfer to the Medical College of Virginia at the end of this year.

Alpha Lambda Delta will conduct another initiation in the spring for Freshmen who have at least a 3.50 average after the first semester while carrying fifteen hours.

Students Compete For Fire Warden; State Needed Changes In Drill System

What fire regulations would you like to see changed and how?

Carolyn Davenport

I can think of no significant changes that I would make in the rules concerning fire regulations. As I see it, these rules are good ones supported with sound reasons.

There is one minor addition I would make to the fire drill procedure. I agree with one of our students who suggested that various fire exits be blocked off at each drill forcing the students to quickly find other means of escape. This would better prepare the students for actual fire situations.

Loretta Childress

I would not change any of the regulations concerning fire drills because each rule is a necessary preventive measure for the safety and protection of all of us on campus. However, I do feel that more cooperation concerning regulations during fire drills is needed in order to make these regulations more effective in the event of a real fire.

For instance, rule 9c, p.68 in the Handbook which states "take coat, shoes, book, towel, and scarf" is probably the most frequently ignored regulation and yet, in a real fire, this rule in particular would apply to the individual's own safety.

Jane Sakshaug

Primarily, there should be more frequent drills in the morning, afternoon, and early evening instead of so many at night. Next, I have found that when we have drills during meals, there are not enough exits to leave by or we all go through the same one and leave others empty. Therefore, the dining hall should be sectioned so that each person knows which door to leave by. I feel that these are the major problems we have, and would be the first I would like to solve.

Frances Sodini

I think that when we have fire drills we are calm enough to gather a towel, book, scarf, shoes and raincoat. However, I realize in the case of a real fire this practice would not be observed. My idea is to simulate some of the things that could happen during an actual fire. In this way the girls would know when they reached a jammed door which exit they could reach the quickest. This would also prevent a stampede, in the case of a blocked exit, in which many people could be injured or killed.

Beth Wooding

I have no objection to any of the present regulations during fire drills, but I think students should be made aware of just how important some of the seemingly silly rules are. These rules are for the safety of Longwood students and personnel, and should not be overlooked. In case of a real fire I think a lot of confusion could evolve because so many students would panic because of their lack of sincerity in learning regulations. If elected I want to promote emphasis on safety measures, and to help Longwood to have more efficient fire drills.

Maxine Stone

Fire drills are held periodically on campus to keep the student body alert in case of an emergency. But

Madrigals Present Christmas Concert; Orchestrates Performs

By FRANCES KIMBLE

The annual Madrigal Christmas concert will be presented December 18 at 5:10 in the Gold Room of Lankford Building.

The first part of the program will feature the Madrigal group which is made up of Jeannie Powell, Helen Ford, Tullita Owen, Nancy Parsons, Jackie White, Jeannie Boykin, June Langston, Janice Brown, Claudia Cunningham, Sarah Gibbons, Sherry Foglesong and B. J. Stone. They will use as their processional "Joy to the World." Other songs in the first part of the program will be "Deck the Halls," "We Three Kings," and "Sweet Was the Song the Virgin Sang."

In the middle part of the program five members of Orchestrates will dance to the accompaniment of the Woodwind Ensemble. Dancing to "Dulce Jubilo" will be Deborah Brown, Judy Page, and Susan Talbot. Dancing to "What Child Is This" will be Carol Leacock and Suzy St. John. The Woodwind Ensemble is made up of Marianne McCaul, Willie Anne Voyten, Kathleen Wyman, Susan Thompson, and Jennifer Young.

The Madrigal Group will then finish the program with "Sing, All Men, Sing We Noel," and "Carol of the Bells." "Silent Night" will be used as the recessional.

why must the alarm be sounded in the middle of the night or the wee hours of the morning? I believe that such practices are not necessary and should only be used in case of a real fire. A drill at 7 a.m. would accomplish the same thing as a 3 a.m. drill—certainly there are people up going to breakfast, yet there are those who study all night.

I propose that glassed-in boxes containing an axe be placed near all exits, so that it will no longer be necessary to carry a book outside in order to break the door lock. Everyone knows to leave the building quickly and quietly as possible, yet most seem to take the alarm for a joke, lagging behind or not leaving the building at all, as we practice what to do over and over again. We're young adults, so let's act accordingly.

Candidates for Fire Warden are: Carolyn Davenport, Loretta Childress, Jane Sakshaug, Frances Sodini, Beth Wooding, Maxine Stone.

Dr. Celeste Ulrich, professor of health, physical education, and recreation at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, will speak at the session of the Virginia Recreation Federation For College Women on the Longwood campus, Saturday, December 14.

A.A. Candidates Discuss Problem Of Student Support In Sports

Spectators are few at sports events. How could you motivate more students to support the class teams?

Betty King

The main purpose of the Athletic Association is to offer each student a program of recreation throughout the school year. Consequently, the A.A.'s main concern is and should be with motivating students to participate on the class teams.

I feel that the problem of motivating more students to support class teams should be the concern of the class spirit committees. These committees work closely with their class during the year and can motivate more students to support their class teams.

I do feel, however, that the class representatives to the A.A. could make more of an effort to inform their class of the intramural activities at each class meeting. The class representatives could also work closely with the spirit committees keeping them informed on the intramural activities during the year.

Secretary
Susie Marsh

In order to gain spectators at intramural games it is necessary to appeal to varied groups in the student body. How do we do this? Stressing that intramurals are for the entire student body, not merely the Physical Education majors, is important. When the selection of players is taken from such a small group, because of non-major reluctance to participate, naturally the field of interested friends is limited.

Another way to increase participation is to conduct more color spirit

House Association Aspirants Answer Question On Student Regulations

What one rule concerning student regulations would you change and how?

Vice-President
Jeanette Bickings

I would like to see the regulation concerning sports attire changed. I feel proper attire should be worn in places which are stated in the handbook such as downtown Farmville, classes, and the Rotunda, but if a student feels that sports attire is called for elsewhere I think she should be allowed to decide for herself. As long as the sports attire is neat I believe a student can look as well dressed in sports clothes as in proper attire when sports clothes are called for on certain occasions.

Sallie Gibbs

One of the rules I would like to see changed is the freshmen bed check which is in effect the whole year. I feel that this rule should be completely abolished for both first and second semester. Many people say that this is often a girl's first time away from home, and she needs extra restrictions in order to make the most of her freshman year. I feel a girl of seventeen or eighteen is old enough to set up her own restrictions as to when she should be in her room. Therefore I definitely feel that the bed check should be abolished.

Secretary
Ellen Lyon

If any student has a legitimate complaint concerning a House Council rule, she not only has the right, but it is her responsibility to bring this complaint before a member of the House Association to be reviewed and changed if necessary. Concerning the types of foods which can be taken from the dining hall by students, I believe this rule could be expanded to include several other items. Designated amounts and specified meals for these food items would place appropriate limitations on this practice. I would place this suggestion before the special committee formulated for the Slater Management through my class representative.

Candy Smith

It is hard to choose one particular regulation that I would change since the handbook has recently been revised; however, I think the rule concerning sitting in parked cars with dates is outdated and unfair. There are often times when girls and their dates get back to campus a few minutes before curfew. The parlor affords no privacy whatever if the couple wishes to continue a discussion or perhaps straighten out a disagreement. This is not to say that couples should be allowed to "park" anywhere in town, but I see no reason why they should not be allowed to sit in a parked car in a well-lighted area on campus.

Kathy Noonan

The one rule that I would change is the regulation concerning slacks. This regulation has been altered somewhat to include the wearing of slacks to Saturday breakfast and lunch. To me, the change was much needed — especially since there are no more Saturday classes. However, I think that now it is time to further update the slacks' regulation to allow slacks to be worn at Friday dinner and Saturday dinner and during cold weather. Many girls go away for the weekend, and those who remain, I would prefer more casual attire permissible. But, on particular weekends when a large number of guests are expected, proper attire should be required. Also, as far as cold weather is concerned, the student should be able to leave it up to her own discretion whether or not to wear slacks.

Julie Wright

At the present, House Council is in the process of revising many rules that have existed in previous years. The reason for this is that Longwood is undergoing a change which requires newer and fresher approaches to student regulations and it is the responsibility of the Council to meet these changes and help establish them. One of the regulations now in effect is freshman bed check. It serves as a means of orienting the freshmen into college life and as a basis for developing sound dormitory and academic habits. However, I feel that bed check is not fulfilling its purpose and that the only time it is effective is during the first weeks of orientation. Therefore, I propose that the present practice of bed check be abolished and only enforced during the initial orientation period.

Ann Heely

I feel that most of the rules which come under the House regulations are necessary and therefore do not need to be changed. However, there are some rules which do not seem practical, and consequently they are not obeyed and not enforced. One such rule is the bed check rule for freshmen. It is not effective because the girls can get an unlimited number of permissions to be out of their rooms after bed-check. Also, it is inconvenient for the hall president to check every night, and after the check has been made, make sure the girls remain in their rooms.

It seems to me a more effective rule would be to have a time at night when the halls should be clear. Girls would be allowed to use the hall as a passageway, but would not be allowed to congregate in them. This rule would serve the same purpose as bed-check, but would eliminate the problems involved with it for the individuals and hall presidents.

Cindy Reed

I am concerned with the present policy regarding late permission. The current policy allows one and two o'clock permission for those girls dating at Hampden-Sydney on weekends such as homecoming, mid-winter, and several other occasions.

I propose that this policy be extended to include everyone. This would mean that when one and two o'clock permission is granted for activities at Hampden-Sydney that every student would be allowed the same late permission whether or not they are dating at Hampden-Sydney. I feel that this extension would provide a fairer policy for all students.

Virginia Robertson

The student body of Longwood has experienced an unusual amount of rule changes this year. For example, extension of curfew and liberalization of proper attire rules have greatly benefited students. After reviewing the Student Handbook and working in the House Council, I have found that these rules are both practical and reasonable. I do not disagree with any particular rule; however, I feel that problems often arise in the enforcement of these rules — particularly in the areas of phone courtesy and strict study hours. In essence, I feel that Longwood students have adequate dormitory regulations — yet the individual student should take a greater interest in practicing them.

meetings, preferably right before the beginning of each intramural sport. The spirit raised in these meetings is amazing and the students are then interested enough to support the teams.

Nedra Distel

The support of teams is evidence of an individual's interest in her class and Longwood itself. This interest can only be motivated by making her more aware of the activities taking place. This can be accomplished by putting posters and schedules in opportune places and announcing the schedules at lunch.

The real lack of interest is evident at varsity games. Publicity for varsity sports does not come under the Athletic Association, but some provision should be made for this. Also, schedules of varsity events should be placed in more opportune places, such as, in the old smoker and on the letter bulletin board, instead of just on the way to the pool and on the bulletins placed on the dining tables.

Treasurer
Laurel Baldwin

Since there is a problem with spectators on the Longwood campus, I would like to propose three suggestions that I feel would improve this situation.

First, I would like to see better publicity. This could be accomplished by having a representative from each dormitory to the A.A. who could announce daily in the dormitory the upcoming events. Also, posters with weekly or monthly events could be posted in key positions on campus.

Secondly, better attendance at activities could be accomplished with more student-faculty games.

Lastly, I would like to propose that we study the possibilities of having co-educational events with Hampden-Sydney.

I feel these suggestions will not only help the problem of spectators, but will also increase participation in our class events.

Janet Harpold

The Athletic Association's publicity committee does a good job of making and displaying posters announcing class and color games; however, this type of publicity is strictly informational rather than motivational. I feel that if there were more communication between the class teams and the classes they are representing, this would encourage more students to attend the class and color games. One effective method of achieving this would be to have members to each class team make announcements in the dormitories urging their respective classes to attend the games and give their support. I believe that this type of personal appeal from the players themselves would give the student body more desire to support their class teams.

YWCA Minor Candidates List Qualifications,

Nominees Encourage Student Participation

How could you as an officer encourage student participation, thus making the YWCA a more meaningful organization?

Vice-President
Leslie Nuttall

I think more students should become aware of the activities of the YWCA. This can be accomplished by the active students letting the other students know of the activities and by more publicity of the events. Also, the YWCA should plan activities which will interest the students and add to life on campus. In the planning and the publicizing of programs I would like to draw in those students who have interest in the program area. Thus student interest and participation in the YWCA would grow.

Secretary
Charlotte Fountain

To encourage more student participation in the YWCA, a more organized and enthusiastic membership drive is needed in the fall of the year. This drive would give many more Freshmen and upperclassmen a chance to become active in the YWCA simply by knowing when the meetings are and the various activities the YWCA engages in. It is the responsibility of the officers to make the majority of the student body conscious of the many worthwhile activities of the YWCA such as the annual food drive, the mixers, and the selection of the Madonna at Christmas. Once the students are made aware of the programs of the YWCA, their interest in joining in these programs will most certainly make a more meaningful organization to many on this campus.

Brenda Morene

Every girl on Longwood's campus is a member of the YWCA. However, as the present system stands, there is no direct communication between the individual classes and the Y, as there is with the other four major organizations on campus. I feel that

If there were perhaps two representatives from each class elected to serve with the executive committee of the Y, as the other board representatives do, this could create a new interest in the Y among the student body, and give each class a direct contact with the Y's activities.

Treasurer
Sharon Moore

The YWCA is a campus organization that serves the student in his religious and social aspects of college life. In order to make this service more beneficial, active participation from the officers and the students is necessary. As treasurer I could encourage student participation in at least one way—that I display a genuine interest in the "Y" activities. If the student can sense such an interest, he will realize the importance of the "Y" and become involved. I feel that I'm capable of presenting such an interest which will encourage student participation and make the "Y" a more meaningful organization.

Linda Snead

Since the YWCA has a campus wide membership, not only the entire club but especially the officers must work for the establishment of an effective organizational membership. The many annual activities must be acknowledged and known by all the student body. When the college year begins, the officers could publicize the regular meetings and visit the various underclassmen dormitories, describing the meaning and duties of the YWCA. Throughout the year, the officers must lead the organization in participation and strengthening of these activities, such as a more rigid idea of the Christmas Madonna, and encourage student participation in the fund raising drives. If the officers all work for the betterment of the YWCA, it will become a more meaningful organization.

Lester E. Andrews Elected Pres. Of Longwood Foundation

Lester E. Andrews, Farmville business executive, has been elected president of the Longwood College Foundation.

The educational foundation consists of a group of private citizens who organized a nonprofit corporation in 1959 for the purpose of securing private and corporate funds to supplement the financial support the college receives from state tax sources.

Andrews succeeds his business partner, Maurice R. Large of the local construction firm of Andrews Large and Whidden, Inc., of which Andrews is president.

Thomas C. Boushall, prominent Richmond banker and civic leader, helped organize the foundation, served as the board's first vice-president, later president, and was a member until 1965.

When asked to comment upon the foundation's importance to Longwood, President Henry I. Willett, Jr., said, "At a time when the foundation is playing a more active role than ever in its financial assistance to Longwood, I wish first of all to express the college's feeling of deep gratitude to Mr. Boushall, Mr. Large and other past and present members of the foundation's board of directors who provide an organizational channel through which private and corporate gifts enable the college to undertake important projects for which no state funds are available.

Since coming to Longwood, I have become increasingly aware of the contribution to campus and classroom excellence of educational foundations, not only here at Longwood but throughout the state and nation. Funds secured and contributed by foundations for educational purposes so often make the difference between average and superior learning opportunities for students in both state and private institutions," President Willett commented.

For many years a leader in the local community, Andrews is a former chairman of Prince Edward County School Board and a past president of the Rotary Club and Jaycees. Currently he is chairman of advisory board of Virginia National Bank, member of the board of directors of Southside Community Hospital, and a deacon of Farmville Baptist Church.

Other current members of the board are: C. Harrison Mann, Jr., of Arlington, foundation vice-president and member of the Virginia House of Delegates; John E. Carr, III, foundation secretary-treasurer and vice-president for administration of Longwood; Dr. Francis G. Lanford, Jr., of Charlottesville, former Longwood president and the board's first president; Dr. Henry I. Willett, Jr., Longwood professor of natural sciences at the college; and Mrs. Charles W. Appich, Jr., of Richmond, national president of the Longwood College Alumnae Association.

Also Henry G. Chesley, Jr., of Richmond, vice-rector of Longwood's board of visitors; Mrs. Raymond Brown of Hampton, Longwood alumna; W. A. Noell, of Roanoke, former vice-president of the Norfolk and Western Railroad, whose wife is an alumna of the class of 1930; Hunter C. Siedt, Jr., of Richmond, president of Taylor and Siedt, Inc., whose wife is an alumna of the class of 1948; Raymond T. Keister, of Alexandria, president of Academic Media Services, Inc., whose wife is an alumna of the class of 1952; and Judge Rayner V. Sneed, of Northern Neck.

Brenda Holly, 1968 Madonna for the YWCA Christmas Pageant was chosen by students as representing Christian ideals.

Brenda Holly Chosen Y Madonna Pageant Features 'Littlest Angel'

Brenda Holly has been selected by the student body to be the Madonna in the YWCA's annual Christmas Pageant, "The Littlest Angel." The pageant will be held in Jarman auditorium tonight at 7:30.

The student body was faced with the decision of electing the Madonna last Wednesday. The election is sponsored by the YWCA. The Madonna is chosen each year on the basis of high Christian character. Each voter was asked to vote for the girl she felt best exemplified her idea of the Madonna.

Brenda is a senior English major from Richmond. Presently, she is the editor of the GYRE literary magazine. She is also secretary of Geist, and treasurer of Pi Delta Epsilon. She is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Lambda Iota Tau, and the Student Education Association.

Susan Fox will play the Littlest angel in the pageant. Fay Shifflet will narrate the skit. The skit, which is light and funny, ends with the presentation of the Madonna. Frances Kimble is the Gatekeeper, Pat Lucas is the Understanding Angel, and Catalina Fardool is Gabriel. The angels are Linda Bullock, Amelia Nespoli, and Brenda Morene. Sharon Moore is Joseph. The Shepherds are Wanda Spicer, Bonnie Moseley, and Anna Lineweaver. The Wise Men are Leslie Nuttall, Pieter Landoun, and Kay Burcher.

At the end of the pageant the various organizations will present their gifts for the White Christmas. The money will be used for dental work for children in this area.

The Freshman Commission will lead Christmas Carols before the pageant.

Les Francophiles Announce Plans For French Tour

Les Francophiles is pleased to announce that the tentative plans for a summer tour in France have materialized. This tour will be open to all present or former French students with just a minimal knowledge of the French language. Our travel-study program will extend over an approximate six-week period with a four-week course at Tours, situated below Paris in the Loire valley. Each student may enroll, according to his ability, in either the beginning, intermediate, or advanced levels of available courses stressing French language and culture. Frequent excursions throughout France and to neighboring countries and much leisure time are an integral part of the program.

The entire trip will cost no more than $800 with a down payment no higher than $100. The rest may be paid in small monthly installments over a two-year period. Through your continued support of the French Club sponsored films, scheduled for second semester, we plan to offer two scholarships of $100 each to cover the down payment for two students interested in such a tour.

Current Art Show Features Prints By Robert Kroutel

The current art show in the exhibition gallery of the Lancaster library on the Longwood College campus presents the works of an established artist who has received recognition in numerous exhibitions throughout the United States.

Featuring prints and drawings by Ronald H. Kroutel, the current exhibit will end on December 21, at 5 p.m. The public is cordially invited to visit the exhibition. According to Paul G. Rouillard, instructor in the art department at Longwood, purchases may be made from the exhibition.

Kroutel is not only a versatile artist who works successfully in varied media, but he has a wide background of teaching art at some of the leading colleges and universities in the country.

Currently he is assistant professor of drawing and design at Ohio University. Prior to his present position he was a graphics instructor for the Society of Arts and Crafts in Detroit where he taught woodcut, lithography, intaglio, and organized a lithography shop.

His experience also includes serving as art instructor at Marygrove College where he taught oil and water color painting, graphics, design, and drawing. He served as lecturer on art appreciation and held numerous teaching fellowships at the University of Michigan.

A 33-year-old native of Illinois, Kroutel received the bachelor of arts education degree as a graduate of the cooperative art program sponsored by The School of the Art Institute of Chicago, and the University of Chicago. He holds the master of fine arts degree from the University of Michigan. Other formal training includes attendance at Wayne State University and graduate study at The School of the Art Institute of Chicago.

An articulate spokesman in his field, a portion of Kroutel's description of his current exhibit at Longwood gives some idea as to his areas of interest and objectives as an artist in the following comment:

"This group of drawings and prints includes six series of related images. They represent the systematic exploration of a specific set of symbols. The primary aim is to find an increasingly systematized working process which would suggest a less arbitrary selection of form and a greater sense of authenticity in the image."

Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Phi Sororities To Colonize At Longwood In February

In February, 1969, Longwood College will welcome for colonization two well known national social sororities—Alpha Delta Pi and Alpha Phi.

Representatives of these groups came to the campus in September for conferences with the Panhellenic Council, the sorority advisors and members of the administration. The result of the conferences was that the Panhellenic Council invited Alpha Delta Pi and Alpha Phi to colonize and each accepted. The addition of these groups increases to eleven the number of social sororities at Longwood, all of which are members of the National Panhellenic Conference.

ALPHA DELTA PI is the oldest secret society in the world for college women. It was founded on May 15, 1851 at Wesleyan College in Macon, Georgia, and in the 117 years since then has grown to an organization of 70,000 college women. Wesleyan College, birthplace of this oldest National Panhellenic Conference sorority, was the first college in the world to grant academic degrees to women students.

Two undergraduate members from other campuses will transfer to Longwood for the spring semester for the express purpose of colonizing the new chapter. They will be assisted by representatives from the National and by Mrs. Arthur Neira of Richmond, Alpha Delta Pi State Chairman and President of the Richmond Panhellenic Association; and by Mrs. Jackson T. Ward of Mechanicsville, a former Province President of the sorority.

Alpha Delta Pi was one of the first national sororities to establish its own national headquarters building. This is located in Atlanta, Georgia. A restoration of the original chapter room, known as the Adelphean Room, is located in Macon, Georgia in the "Canon Ball House" owned by Sidney Lanier Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy. This latter building also houses the restored chapter room of Phi Mu sorority.

Philanthropy projects center around work with handicapped children and purchase of medical equipment needed for children's clinics, hospitals, Easter Seal Society units and the like. Actual service is encouraged as well as fund raising through special Penny-A-Day Banks. The sorority also maintains loan funds for its members, scholarship grants in both graduate and undergraduate work, and through a Foundation makes annual scholarships available to nonmembers as well as Alpha Delta Pi's. A number of Alpha Delta Pi chapters have been cited for their work with the Armed Services and Vietnam, and various projects to help underprivileged children of all races.

In the fall of 1969 members of Alpha Delta Pi will be housed in the new highrise dormitory.

ALPHA PHI, founded at Syracuse (N.Y.) University in 1872, is the third oldest women's Greek-letter group in the United States. It has chapters in forty-four states and three Canadian provinces, with approximately 50,000 initiated members. This will be the second chapter in Virginia, the other being at Roanoke College in Salem.

Mrs. Fred Hutton of Kansas City, Mo., is the National president.

The new chapter, to be known as

Epsilon Delta, will represent a North American organization that has pioneered several traditions in the fraternity world. Alpha Phi called the first intersorority conference now known as the National Panhellenic Conference, in 1902. It was the first women's fraternity in America to build and occupy a chapter house, and it was the first to have a visiting delegate, the forerunner of today's district governor and field secretary.

Besides the promotion of scholarship, character and the best traditions and ideals of college life, Alpha Phi devotes much of its attention to Cardiac Aid, a national philanthropy that won it the Heart and Torch award of the American Heart Association in 1966 for contributions nearing one million dollars. This award was given only twice before to any organization.

Glamour Features Top Ten College Girl Contest

Glamour's 1969 Top Ten College Girl Contest will be held Saturday, January 11, 1969, at 7:30 p.m. in the ABC Room of Lankford. The Contest, sponsored by Pi Delta Epsilon, will select a winner who is both a leader in fashion and in campus activities. Everyone is invited and admission is free.

Another Year Ends

With mixed feelings I write my last editorial for the ROTUNDA. It has been a short but hectic year. There have been good times, there have been bad times. I can truthfully say that I have enjoyed the good and learned from the bad.

In speaking for the entire ROTUNDA staff, I would like to thank the student body for co-operating with us in editing the ROTUNDA. For myself, I would like to gratefully thank the ROTUNDA staff for its hard work and enthusiasm week after week. I would like to particularly thank Candy Maher, Lynda Davis, Libba Ball, Susie Marsh, Carol Brotherton, and Carol Johnson. Without these girls there would have been no ROTUNDA. My special appreciation goes to Mr. Warren Eyster, the ROTUNDA'S adviser.

I am sad that my year as editor is completed. Yet, I am happy that I am able to turn the ROTUNDA over to the capable 1969 staff. I have much confidence in the ability of these girls to uphold the standards of the ROTUNDA. I would like to remind them that there will be good times, but there will also be bad times. Take them as the come and do not become discouraged. The good far outnumbers the bad.

I would like to extend my best wishes for a successful year to the 1969 ROTUNDA staff.

Farmville Resident Protests

(EDITORS NOTE: We received this letter, unsigned, from a local businessman; we thought it would be of some interest to the students.)

AN OPEN LETTER TO STUDENTS, ADMINISTRATION AND THE PRESIDENT OF LONGWOOD COLLEGE

In the midst of student riots and protests, we the residents and business people of Farmville should like to protest-Not riot, Not march, Not demonstrate, just protest.

No citizen of Farmville, white or colored did any unlawful things when many homes were taken by Longwood College many ancestral homes that tore at the heart-strings as well as the daily routine.

Many Farmvillians find the attached "Fund Drive" rather ironical in face of the recent bond-issue and its questionable politicking by many school administrators-who perhaps could better serve in the capacities for which they were appointed. But more especially we find it ironical in view of the Longwood students' attitudes toward Farmville, its residents, its business-people even the town itself separately and as a whole.

Many Longwood students admittedly spend many spare hours making derogatory remarks about All Farmville, who they do not bother to try to know.

Many Longwood students in the down-town areas are rude, crass, gross, pseudo-snobbish (how does one really get snobbish to someone she does not know).

Some students are dressed - bordering on the indecent - If this drive is to succeed - someone should ask Longwood students to "mend their manners," their dress, their behavior in public, including private driveways and certain bachelor apartments on week-ends.

This is from a business man who has four generations of Longwood graduates in his family tree - and who for the first time is beginning to be ashamed to say so.

And who would really like to attach his name or make a speech to this effect in the public square.

Editors Defend LC

In reference to the letter to the editor from a citizen of Farmville we, the editors, would like to take a stand in defense of Longwood.

1. The funds from this drive will be used for such things as merit scholarships and faculty benefits that the bond money will not provide for, but which Longwood urgently needs!
2. Students attitudes toward Farmville may be bad, but often we feel that the Farmville attitude towards Longwood is hostile. Perhaps both students and towns people could benefit by taking a closer look at their personal attitudes;
3. The author of the letter asks why the students make no effort to know the people of Farmville. A more apt question would be why the people of Farmville make no effort to know us. However, it should be noted that the Longwood students willingly give their time to tutor at the public schools of Farmville, donate blood for the Southside hospital, conduct a Thanksgiving food drive for needy families in Farmville, donate money for needed dental work, and invite the townspeople to various Longwood functions. What does the town offer us?
4. Regarding the general accusations as to dress and behavior, we believe that the girls fitting these descriptions are the exceptions rather than the rule. There are bound to be such exceptions in a large group of girls;
5. Since the author is involved in the business community he should realize that Longwood spends approximately three and one-half million dollars a year downtown.

However, since the author of this letter did not sign his name, we feel that his attitude toward Longwood is the exception rather than the rule.

HONORS COUNCIL

HONORS COUNCIL

If you have a 4.0 average, don't read this!

Now that mid-term estimates have been distributed, the Honors Council wishes to remind all students of the tutoring program that has been made available for them. Several students have already taken advantage of the plan and are receiving qualified help with the subject in which they are weak.

The various department heads have been quite helpful in submitting lists of students qualified to tutor others in particular subject areas. Once requests for tutors have been received, these suggested students will be approached concerning their availability to serve as tutors.

If you feel that you need help with any of your college courses, you may obtain an application in the office of the Director of Admissions. These forms must be completed and returned to Emilia Bruce, Cox 217, as soon as possible. The committee will then arrange for each applicant to meet with a tutor.

The Honors Council cannot over-emphasize the fact that college students should be able to recognize their need for extra help and seek assistance before it is too late.

Dieters Resolve To Walk, Not Roll From Dinner Table

By KAREN MAHER

Have you noticed that extra three you are carrying around lately? Did you take a pre-Christmas inventory and decide you were a little overweight? Or, do you have that annual Christmas fervor and spirit to lose five pounds before buying that new dress? Dieters, let us now unite in an all out effort to flatten that tire!

Well, there is not doubt in my mind, after talking to Mr. Martin, that we could afford to reduce our daily intake of food - gradually, of course! (that is the safest way).

After making an estimation of the consumption of food for the week of November 16-23, the figures (ours definitely prove this) say that we eat: 2,476 pounds of meat; 1,764 pounds of poultry; 230 pounds of fish; 210 gallons of soup; 2,800 pounds of potatoes; 469 pounds of french fries; 3,730 pounds of vegetables; plus, we eat 13,378 portions of dessert and 2,348 servings of ice cream; not to mention 440 pounds of bananas, 450 pounds of apples, 8 crates of grape fruit, 6 crates of oranges, and 100 pounds of grapes. We also drink 2,640 quarts of milk and 24 gallons of skim milk.

Hopefully, for those of us who need an incentive of diet, these estimates will help. Tonight, let us dieters resolve to walk away from the table instead of roll.

Lynchburg Downs First Team; L.C. Second Team Wins

The Longwood basketball team faced its second game of the season Friday night against the Lynchburg College team. Even though Lynchburg was closed last week because of flu, their basketball team made a very healthy showing. The Lynchburg players were proficient in their ball handling and organization, and although the Longwood team was playing well, they came out second best. The fast moving game continued at a breakneck pace with cheers coming from the enthusiastic crowd in the balcony, but Longwood just couldn't seem to get their close shots through the rim. Fran Anthony, Lynn Coleman and Freda Lunsford connected some shots, but the Lynchburg team was too far ahead. The game ended with Lynchburg 40 and Longwood 20.

The second game started out better, with the second team redeeming itself after their Bridgewater game. They played exceptionally well and made shots that were destined for the basket, while the Lynchburg team just couldn't quite make it. Their rebounds were well taken from the opponents and the crowd cheered on with the Longwood Sweetheart cheerleaders leading them. Some of the passes were a little off, but Longwood made up for it with fast moving lay-ups. The first half ended with Longwood leading 16-13.

The third quarter was slow, with neither team doing much passing and few scores. In the fourth quarter, the pace quickened and baskets were made by both teams. Finally in the last five seconds Lynchburg tied it up with a score of 22 all.

Betty King dominated the overtime with a beautiful underhand lay-up and four successive foul shots. Lynchburg came through with two good foul shots and the game ended with Longwood victorious 28-24.

Varsity Basketball Team Crushes Bridgewater College, 36-32

By SUSIE MARSH

The Longwood Varsity Basketball team began the season with a victory over Bridgewater College 36-32 in Barlow Gym, Nov. 7. The second team struggled mightily but was defeated.

The first half was a beautiful example of coordinated team work, with exceptional ball handling and good positioning on the part of the Longwood players. The first team consisted of Betty King, Barbara Snellings, Judy Turner, Freda Lunsford, Lynn Coleman, Becky Bondurant, Linda Atkinson, Fran Anthony, and Mary Tolley.

Their offensive maneuvers were synchronized and skillfully played while the defense was alert and picking up a good number of rebounds. The first half ended with Longwood leading 28-15.

In the second half, the Bridgewater team began to pick up and show their skill, while the Longwood team had become excited and a little careless. Their passes were off and receptions were fumbled a lot. So Bridgewater began edging up and disposing of Longwood's gapping lead, however, time ran out before they could be successful and the game ended in Longwood's favor, 36-32, with our team scoring only four goals in the last half.

The high scorer of the game was Bridgewater's Nancy Billar, number 35, with 20 points. The high score for Longwood was tied with Barbara Snellings and Freda Lunsford, both scoring 11 points.

The second game began with Bridgewater galloping into the lead, however, by the half, the Longwood players had narrowed the gap considerably.

The second team was made up of Jane McCaffrey, Renee Harrison, Margaret Harrison, Marcia Tench, Lucy Gilbert, Margaret Pulley, Ellen Dunn, Janet Harpole, and Bobbi Thurston. They picked up substantially, however, it wasn't quite enough to pull them through and they were defeated.

All of the players then attended a tea held in the Honors Council Room in Lankford, sponsored by the Athletic Association social committee headed by Beth Rice.

Recreation Asso. Meets At LC; Dr. Ulrich Lectures

By MARY FRANCES BALDWIN

An all-day annual session of the Virginia Recreation Federation for College Women was held on the Longwood campus on Saturday, December 14. The Federation is an organization of college students whose primary concern is the encouragement of participation in intramural sports.

The principal speaker was Dr. Celeste Ulrich, professor of health, physical education, and recreation at the University of North Carolina, Greensboro. A native of Baltimore, Dr. Ulrich received the bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina and the master's degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She received her doctoral degree from the University of Southern California, Los Angeles.

The following are among the colleges and universities at which she has taught: Madison College, and the Universities of Southern California, Washington, Oregon, Illinois, and Michigan.

She is author of numerous research and professional articles on education and physical education, also of several books, the most recent of which are "The Growing Years—Adolescence," "Challenge to Excellence," and "The Social Matrix of Physical Education."

The local group is sponsored by the college Athletic Association, of which Jane Tibbos is president. Peggy Shultz is vice-president, Suzanne Turner is secretary, and Jo Newberry is treasurer. Longwood students who were in charge of the session were Becky Bondurant, who presided at the sessions, and Lynne Rachal.

Registration began at 9:00 Saturday morning, with Dr. Ulrich's lecture at 9:30 in Jeffers Auditorium. Later, a coffee hour was held in the Gold Room of Lankford Building, followed by general meetings of federation representatives and a luncheon. After the luncheon, officers were elected.

Longwood Through The Lens

The human eye can only enjoy each second as it occurs, but a camera can transform that brief second into something lasting. The images it produces can change in our eyes each time we look at them. We see subtleties we had not noticed before, such as the trees framing a group of girls in friendly conversation, and the detailed beauty of the first snow of the year. The camera gives us a tangible, permanent view of the life around us.

Alpha Delta Pi and Alpha Phi Representatives Review Rush program with Mrs. Woodburn. Longwood's Panhellenic sponsor and Mary Lou Whitehead, head of LC's Panhel.

Alpha Phi, Alpha Delta Pi Initiate Rush, Registration Tea Held In Lankford

Founder's Day for the Longwood chapters of Alpha Delta Pi and Alpha Phi sororities is not far off.

The tentative schedule for the special sorority rush is as follows:

Wednesday, February 19, 4:00-6:00, Registration tea in Lankford;

Friday, February 21, 7:00-9:00, Open House in French YWCA room—Alpha Delta Pi, Games room—Alpha Phi;

Saturday, February 22, 10:00-12:00, Parties;

Sunday, February 23, 2:00-3:00, 3:15-4:15, Preferential Parties;

Monday, February 24, Noon, Preferential signing with Mrs. Woodburn, 5:00, Bids given out, and 7:00, Pledging.

The two representatives of Alpha Delta Pi on campus are Emily Callahan and Nancy Roach, both sophomore transfers from Queens College in North Carolina for this semester.

They will be aided during their parties in the old YWCA room by chapters from Queens College, East Carolina, West Liberty, and North Carolina. When asked for comment on their stay at Longwood, both Nancy, an English major from North Carolina, and Emily, a history major from South Carolina, agreed they wanted to take the opportunity to thank everyone for their hospitality and the friendly welcome which they received.

At the other end of first floor Stubbs are the representatives of Alpha Phi sorority, Shelly Sutherland, a graduate student from the University of Oklahoma, and Margaret Berger, a transfer student from Roanoke College for this semester. The Alpha Phi representatives will receive help during their parties in the old Games room in French from alumnae from all over Virginia, plus chapters from the University of Maryland and Roanoke College.

Shelly and Margaret said they were thoroughly impressed by the friendliness and sisterly atmosphere they had felt at Longwood. Shelly, who is a field secretary for Alpha Phi from Dallas, commented, "It seems as though everyone on campus feels a special sorority bond to each other with the Honor Code signing as an initiation."

Approximately fifty girls have pre-registered so far and the representatives are looking forward to a very good rush. Although upper classmen are needed for this rush to become charter members, both sororities will rush again in April along with the other nine sororities for charter pledges. The two new sororities will be housed in Stubbs next year in place of the two sororities which will move into the new dorm.

Longwood's Contestant in the National GLAMOUR Best-Dress Competition is sponsored by the freshman class.

Freshman Donna Gleason Named Glamour's Best Dressed At L.C.

The title of Longwood's Miss Glamour 1969 was won by Miss Donna Blake Gleason, sponsored by the Freshman class. The 19 year old member of the freshman class is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Gleason of Jackson Farm Road in Hopewell, Virginia. While attending Hopewell High School, she was Homecoming Queen and a Junior Miss contestant.

Donna is an Art major and plans to teach after graduation. Her side interests include any form of art work, riding horses, and a special interest in guitar and folk music.

Marcia Mitchell has been chosen to represent Longwood in the 42nd Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester May 1, 2, and 3. More than 150,000 people from everywhere flock to the "Apple Capital" each spring for this event when the vast orchards of the region are pink and white against the new green of the hills and the Shenandoah Valley is at its loveliest.

Marcia, along with princesses from colleges and universities in Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Washington, D.C., and Virginia, will participate in this annual festival, which this year features Ed McMahon of the Johnny Carson Show as Grand Marshall. The first event is the Coronation of Queen Shenandoah the 42nd. This will take place Thursday, May 1, at 2 p.m., and will be preceded by a musical program and the Pageant of Springtime entitled "Happy Holidays." Later the Queen and her court will review the Fireman's Parade, and, after a dinner for the court, they will attend the Queen's Ball.

Friday afternoon the princesses will ride in the Grand Feature Parade which boasts 60 floats and 90 bands. Another dance is scheduled for the princesses Friday night following a special dinner given them by the parents of the maids of honor of the court.

In addition there will be concerts, tours, exhibits, the Apple Blossom Twirling event, the Antique Car Meet, and the Shenandoah County Music Jubilee.

A committee of faculty, administration, and student representatives selected three nominees for this honor. They were chosen on the basis of their academic standing, their contributions to Longwood, and their attractiveness. These names were submitted to the officials of the Apple Blossom Festival and the final selection was made by a committee on which there was student representation.

Marcia, an elementary education major from Emporia, is presently student teaching in Colonial Heights. She is serving as president of Geist this year, vice-chairman of the Honors Council and is a member of the Academic Affairs Committee. She was named to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities earlier this year. Marcia also claims membership in Kappa Delta Pi, Alpha Psi Omega, the Young Republicans, the Student Education Association, and the Longwood Players.

Laboratory School At Longwood Will Be Third In The State

In September 1970, Longwood College will become the third college in the state of Virginia to institute a Laboratory School in order to improve the calibre of its future teachers.

The future laboratory school was formally authorized by the last General Assembly. The plans were then submitted to a vote in the state bond referendum of last fall and were consequently passed.

The new building, expected to cost around $630,000, is to be built near the top of South Main and Race Streets. The building is going to be equipped with many of the newest ideas in education. The ideas in the planning include a closed circuit television system and a one-way viewer which will enable Longwood students to observe teaching methods without disturbing classroom activities. The school is being designed to hold about 200 students, ranging in grades from kindergarten through the seventh grade.

Mr. E. Lee Land, a member of the Department of Education, Psychology, and Philosophy has been named director of Longwood's future laboratory school. Mr. Land is very enthusiastic and optimistic about the future addition to Longwood. He says, "It is anticipated that the Laboratory School will become an integral part of the college, and make vital contributions to many areas of its academic program. Mr. Land also stated "that in order for the Laboratory School and the college to benefit from each other, much planning and evaluation on the part of the faculty will be necessary."

Better Relations?

One week ago tonight, a large number of Longwood students boarded the college bus, bound to a mixer at our neighboring, male establishment for higher learning. We were invited to enjoy the "freer" spirits, and were informed that the boys were "really psyched up" over a mid-week gathering with girls.

Let's face it. There are approximately three Longwood girls to every Hampden-Sydney boy. Consequently, at a mixer, the law of averages predicts a similar turn-out. For those who were disappointed over the small male turn-out, remember — those gentlemen knew there would not be free set-ups. Too bad so many girls were "mysteriously" misinformed!

Although a college atmosphere permits both academic and social growth, it has been suggested that another such mixer with Hampden-Sydney should be more organized — with an estimated, equal number participants from each school. — E. C. B.

The Best Plans Of College Students Often Go Astray

By Linda Shepherd

For those of you who are counting, there are exactly 27 days until Spring Break. That's not including weekends, of course, but who's counting them these days anyway?

Thought about where you're going yet? Now if you're a freshman, there's no need to explain. You're going home, of course, Sophomores? After three days at home last Spring Break, remember how you swore that you'd head anywhere but home next year? You know, the Bahamas, Dillwyn — anywhere!

Juniors. . . Ah yes, last year's bout with the hotel manager, the police, and your blind date "from Harvard," renewed your dying love for home sweet home. What could a senior returning from student teaching possibly do for excitement? Move enough essentials back to Longwood for eight more weeks, naturally. Besides, after they've moved in, they'll have the run of the dorms to work off that post student teaching — pre-dorm tension. By some chance, you may not have even thought about what to do during Spring Break, or as they say at M.T.T., "intercession." If you think it's too early to start planning for the warm sands, you're in danger of losing your blanket pass.

It seems that Fort Lauderdale's city manager would like to take this opportunity to remind you that he's already making plans for you, even if you're not.

Ft. Lauderdale officials have devised the perfect formula for a pleasant Florida spring vacation. Unfortunately for some hopefuls, these suggestions don't exactly jive with the "Beach Party" movie vision of sleeping on the beach with a bottle in each hand.

Actually these rules are not unusually harsh, but they are very specific. Those of you who plan to go to Ft. Lauderdale for some innocent fun, here is a checklist:

- 1) Make sure you have a housing reservation. There will be no sleeping on the beaches and camping is restricted to trailer parks.
- 2) All laws concerning those under 21 still apply. Drinking in the open is prohibited and anyone found intoxicated, using narcotics, using false identification, making unnecessary noise, or guilty of disorderly conduct will be arrested and prosecuted.
- 3) Parents and school officials of all students arrested will be officially notified.

Now, about the rest of you, those who are looking for fun, (not necessarily innocent), the city manager reminds you that conviction on any charge will establish a permanent police record of your actions.

If you are concerned by the limitations of these guidelines, remember, sun bathers will not be prosecuted. You'd better make sure that your suntan oil has a low alcohol content, though, or else avoid using it in the open.

Also, in keeping with the city father's desire that everyone, including the policemen, have a pleasant vacation, swimming will be permitted, and all public beaches will be kept open.

Could it be that those carrying student identification cards will not be allowed in restaurants or grocery stores? I wouldn't worry. After all, even college students have to eat.

If you're too broke for the Bahamas and too leery of Ft. Lauderdale, remember, Virginia Beach is only 150 miles away. The climate's not as nice in early April as points farther South, but it is the world's largest resort and let's face it, it may be your last one!

H-SC Stages 'Fringe,' Presenting Satires On Society, Politics

Wednesday and Thursday nights the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs succeeds fully tonight "Beyond the Fringe" in Jarman Auditorium. Undoubtedly, the Jongleurs should be commended for undertaking such a demanding project.

This production was not like the normal two or three act plays we usually expect to see. It consisted of sketches, each with its own critical and satirical comments on society, politics or religion.

John Adams, Warren Fulton, Randy Hallman, and Jim Rhodes were at their best. Each exhibited a versatility in changing character from one skit to another. In the plotline of the group, intermittently entertained, thus providing a pleasant transition. The informal relationship between the actors and the audience greatly added to the atmosphere enveloping the performance.

The set, like the actors, proved quite adaptable to the necessary quick changes.

The actors' confidence and enthusiasm plus the directing of Frank Faust combined to provide a most entertaining evening.

Hathaway And Rouillard Exhibition Reflects Feelings Of Time And Place

Now, through the end of February in the Library Exhibit Room is an interesting exhibit of paintings done by Walter Hathaway and Paul Rouillard, both members of the art department.

Mr. Hathaway's work is mainly done in oils with some in oil crayon or ink. One of the most interesting paintings in Hathaway's exhibit is an oil entitled "March III", done in various shades of green, orange, and blue. The technique used makes the viewer look twice to confirm the fact that he has done the painting in this, not oil crayon. Another picture, this one really done in oil crayon, is "February III", appropriate for this month. It has the pleasing effect of soft tones of pink, violet, orange, blue, silver, and gold.

Mr. Hathaway says of his work: "The drawings and paintings which I have chosen to exhibit reflect my feelings regarding the times and places around me. Most of the compositions do not refer specifically, but generally to months or seasons of the year, the countryside between Scottsville and Charlottesville, and local phenomena. None of the compositions depict recognizable images; some viewers will see forms that suggest rocks and boulders and some will see textures that remind them of ice, bark, leaves and sand."

"I have used colors, textures, lines, and masses which give aesthetic form to October, March, February and other months. I have not tried to be honest, rather I have tried to be obscure and sensitive in my work."

Contrasting with Mr. Hathaway's depiction of months and places is Mr. Rouillard's commercial paintings. One example is his "Descent from the Cross" with "New York Times Extra Edition" written on it and the headline, "Jesus Murdered." Nothing needed is lacking, even the 10¢ cost of the "Times" is included. Another of his paintings on the same theme is an oil and acrylic painted in silver, yellow, and blue with a woman weeping over a dead man done in pencil and the sign above, "Bath House Closes 7 P.M." It is "Pieta, 1969." Aside from the religious theme is his brightly painted "Air Mail" in reds, yellows, and blues. The postmark is Manchester, N. H., where Mr. Rouillard was born. This acrylic painting even includes a postage due of 10¢.

Mr. Rouillard states: "At this time, I am interested in an unreflected reflection of our environment. I consider it as a breath of fresh air to be able to compose a classic theme like, for instance, 'A Pieta' as a new humanism with bold commercial colors, giant scale and a detachment from moral values or accepted channels. And yet it implies a determined optimism, an optimism against odds, an optimism with our fabulous twentieth century."

Mr. Hathaway, born in Norfolk, received the B.F.A. in Art Education from Virginia Commonwealth University and the M.S. in Art Education from Florida State University, Tallahassee. He has taught at Azalea Junior High School, Norfolk, and Lake City Junior College, Lake City, Florida, before coming to Longwood as Assistant Professor of Art.

He has had one-man exhibitions at Virginia Commonwealth University, Barksdale Theater, Thomasville Arts Guild, Thomasville, Ga., and Lake City Junior College.

Mr. Rouillard has studied at the Manchester Institute of Arts and Sciences, Manchester, N. H., and Boston College. He received his B.A. degree from St. Ann's College, Manchester, and his M.F.A. from the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C.

While working for his M.F.A. degree, Mr. Rouillard accepted a career conditional appointment at the Smith-

New Dept. Heads: Dr. Scott, Science; Mr. Nunn, Language

Two changes in department chairmen were announced last week by Dean Blackwell.

Dr. Brumfield, who has served as head of the Department of Natural Sciences for many years, has asked to be relieved of his duties. Dr. Brumfield wishes to devote more time to his research and to teaching. Concerning the change in department heads, Dean Blackwell stated, "In a survey last year, our graduating seniors voted that the science department was the best department on campus. This is a great tribute to Dr. Brumfield's ability. Under his leadership the Natural Sciences has become one of the strongest in the college."

Dean Blackwell also announced that Dr. Marvin Scott has been appointed acting chairman of the Department of Natural Sciences.

Another change in department chairmen has been made in the language department. Because of sickness, Mrs. Garjost has asked for a leave of absence for this semester and Mr. Nunn has assumed the administrative duties in her absence.

Midterm Estimates To Be Discontinued By Faculty Action

Mid-semester estimates are now a thing of the past — that is, if you are an upperclassman in good standing.

On recommendation of a student-faculty committee, the faculty has voted a change in the system of mid-semester estimates that will be effective this semester.

In the past, estimates were given to all students; in the future they will be given to freshmen and students on academic probation. The committee also added that an upperclassman making a D or an F at mid-semester will be notified. The committee said that the main reason for changing the present system was to relieve the "exam week"; that has preceded the distribution of mid-semester grades. They believed that this added to the work schedule of both students and faculty.

The recommendation to continue giving estimates to freshmen was made, because it was felt that they needed to be tested and informed periodically as to their progress. The change from high school to college study schedules is a major step, and the committee and the faculty agreed that freshmen need to be given semester estimates. The new system, which was presented by a student committee of Jeanette Bickings and Barbara Roukema and headed by Mr. Rubley, will be effective this semester.

sonian Institution as an exhibits specialist and later designer. In 1962 he was an illustrator for the Agency for International Development, State Department. Prior to coming to Longwood, he was art instructor at Marygrove College, Detroit, and served as chairman of the art department of Southern Seminary Junior College.

Mr. Rouillard has exhibited his work in New England, Michigan, and Washington, D. C.

French Films Here Provide Support For Summer Study

A series of French films are being brought here for the enjoyment of all, "Les Francophiles" of Longwood College are sponsoring these to provide scholarships for the summer study program in France which will be led by Mr. Wayne K. Nunn of our Foreign Language department.

Most of these French films will have English subtitles. All are being shown at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffers Auditorium at a nominal admission fee. Their excellence has been praised by "Time" and "The New Yorker." To date, only two have been shown: "The Red Balloon," a colorful children's fantasy, and more recently "Le Rouge et le Noir" (The Red and the Black) by the famous Stenhal. This is the story of an opportunist's career and also the story of class society in nineteenth century France which offers the individual little opportunity to rise above his background.

The first of the coming attractions, "Compartment-Tuer" (The Sleeping Car Murder), a "whodunit" murder mystery, will appear March 12, 13, and 14. On March 19 and 20, two films will be shown, "Bulles de Savon" (Soap Bubbles) satirizes Hitler and the "Versailles" economic illusions fostered by the Nazi regime. The second is "Desastres de la Guerre" (Disasters of War), a collection of Goyd's etchings.

April 23 and 24 will bring "French Film History." An informal discussion has been planned to accompany the "Année" economic illustrations fostered by the Nazi regime. The second is "Desastres de la Guerre" (Disasters of War), a collection of Goyd's etchings.

Finally, on May 20, 21, and 22, the last of the exciting series will be a "potpourri" of documentary and art films. Patronize these excellent films and support the summer study program abroad.

Gymnastics Team Resumes

Practice; Attends Clinic

The gymnastics club has resumed its practice this semester with new interests. The girls are working harder, and hurrying more, since practice is now three nights a week starting at 7 p.m. Practices generally consist of 15 students, and anyone interested in practicing, exercising, and learning is welcome to come.

At present, the girls are working diligently on routines on the various apparatus in preparation for their first meet. The meet will be held here at Longwood on March 8 with Startford College of Danville.

This is the first year Longwood has had a gymnastic team and the coach, Miss Fath, is overwhelmingly pleased with the response and the team's progress. "The girls we have are working hard. Ability is not as important as interest and willingness to try," she states.

The girls have also been investigating the judging techniques of gymnastics. They have been attending various meets to observe, and some have even participated in judging. Jo Mottley and Debbie Ellenbrand attended an AAU gymnastic meet in Richmond where they both judged various events. Eight others: Maxine Stone, Jo Mottley, Nedra Distel, Susie Marsh, Debbie Morris, Pam Harrison, Debbie Ellenbrand and Nancy Fowkes, are preparing themselves to judge events at the State Regional Meet in Arlington on March 15. There was a judging clinic the week end of February 15 in Newport News that the girls attended to obtain further techniques and practice in judging gymnastic events.

The girls have shown great interest, enthusiasm and progress and Longwood is proud to have these girls represent her as a gymnastic club. So please don't forget to put March 8 on your calendar and come see your first gymnastic team in competition. The girls with all their bumps and bruises would greatly appreciate your support.

Longwood Stomps R-M Down MWC, Sweet Briar

During the lapse of time since the last issue of "The Rotunda," the Longwood Varsity Basketball team has been hard at work racking up honors for L.C. In the three past games, (Sweet Briar College in Amherst, Randolph-Macon Women's College in Lynchburg, and Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg), Longwood downed all opponents soundly with a high leading score.

Lynn Coleman, a sophomore physical education major, was high scorer in all three games.

Longwood met with its third win of the season Saturday, February 8, as the varsity basketball teams I and II downed Sweet Briar College. Playing at 10:00, in the morning didn't seem to bother the "Big Blue and White" as the first team took its victory. The game was slow-moving at times, but Longwood's fast breaks and Sweet Briar's fouls put the points on the score board. At half time, Longwood's first team led 21-16. The final score was 49-36. Lynn Coleman scored 22, Freda Lunsford, 9.

The second team rolled to an impressive, but easy, 48-22 victory. Judy Turner led the team with fast breaking and expert lay-ups. Her driving and shooting gave her 11 points.

Mary Tolley scored high with 18 points. On the home court Tuesday night, Longwood's basketball team defeated Randolph-Macon's Woman's College 50-31.

Lynn Coleman led all scorers with 16 points. Teammates Betty King, Judy Turner, and Freda Lunsford had 11, 9, and 7 points respectively. High scorer for Randolph-Macon was Faith Davidson with 9 points.

Due to the defensive play of Linda "Moose" Atkinson and Carolyn Thompson, Randolph-Macon was held to only 13 points the first half.

In the second game, Longwood defeated Randolph-Macon 39-31. Barbara Snellings had 10 points and Anne Poust led Randolph-Macon with a total of 12 points.

Humiliating Mary Washington College 66-30, the Longwood basketball team won its fifth straight game Saturday. Lynn Coleman was, again, high scorer for the "Blue and Whites."

Freda Lunsford had 16 points for Longwood, while Kay Thiel had 15 for the visitors.

In the second game, the Longwood team lost. After a hard-fought game by the score 34-32.

Barbara Snellings had 14 points for Longwood, and Sue Cross had 15 points for Mary Washington.

Longwood Assistant Professor

Quoted In Chemical Journal

In the January issue of Journal of Chemical Education "Nuclear Isomers produced by Cobalt-60 Irradiation," an article written by Joseph Law, Assistant Professor of Chemistry, was published. This article, based on Law's research supported jointly by the National Science Foundation and U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, tells how the nuclear excited states are formed by photon scattering. In the article a new gamma-ray scintillation spectrum is shown and the applications of the radioactivity of the metastable isomers are discussed.

Another publication entitled "The Silver Nitrate Dosimeter," of the chemistry professor, is now in press and will appear in Health Physics, the official journal of the Health Physics Society. This paper, based on his research done in Oak Ridge National Laboratory last summer, will describe how silver and its compounds may be used as a novel device, by means of nuclear photoeffect, to measure the high intensity radiation fields, which can not be determined successfully by other chemical methods.

During his stay in Oak Ridge last summer Law also participated in the Neutron Activation Analysis course at Oak Ridge Associated Universities. His participation was supported by the Longwood College Faculty Grant. Active in other professional affairs, he is a visiting scientist of the Virginia Academy of Science and spoke on "Radioisotope Applications" and "Neutron Activation Analysis" to the students of Crewe High School in December. He attended the International Meeting of the American Nuclear Society held recently in Washington, D.C. He has been an external abstractor for the Chemical Abstracts service of the American Chemical Society since 1964.

Longwood Fencers

Attend Tournament,

Schedule Meets

The Longwood Fencing Club and their advisor, Miss Sally Bush, will attend the 1969 Fencing Tournament at Mary Washington College on March 7 and 8.

Two of America's distinguished fencers from New Jersey, Miss Evelyn "Terry" Terhune and Miss Madeline Miyamoto, will work with the fencers in a clinic on March 7. On March 8, the traditional tournament will take place, and later in the day, a special individual First Team "round robin" will be held.

The fencing team started practice sessions last week and they plan to practice three nights a week. In March and April, they will have meets with Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg College, Mary Baldwin College, William and Mary, and other schools.

Anyone interested in either the fencing club or team should see Miss Bush.

"Many girls have shown enthusiasm in the team," Miss Bush comments, "and we hope that any other interested girls will come by to see me."

Coleman, Guidice

Reign Victorious In

Ping-Pong, Billiards

Longwood ping-pong and billiards intramurals were completed after Christmas with a good showing from the student body. They all turned out in rare and sometimes unique form to do their very best. Of these girls, the emerging victors included:

Lynn Coleman was winner over 25 other girls in ping pong intramural competition, while Jude Guidice won pool over 35 opponents.

The double elimination tournaments took place at the same time and students were able to compete in both if they wished.

Coe College Begins

New Program Of ### Independent Studies

CEDAR RAPIDS, IA, (I.P.) - "I wouldn't think of cutting this class. . . " "I like the way the class relates to the present. . . " These are comments Coe College students are making about the new program in Freshman Studies.

Amid the proliferation of independent study programs being launched in American colleges, Coe's new Freshman Studies course is distinctive in that it is required of all entering freshmen and that it replaces the former required courses in Freshman Literature and Composition.

Built around the central theme of "The Individual and Society," the two-term course is intended to introduce each student to the important responsibility for self-education at the very beginning of his college career, according to the published course syllabus.

In its present form, the course is really a kind of guided independent study, with instructors from six different academic areas and two administrators.

Class size is small, varying from 16 to 18 students, with the instructors acting as moderators - not lecturers or "experts" - for the regular informal discussions of wide social, ethical, and philosophical questions arising from both the common reading which all students are doing and the particular reading which each student does on his own.

A few instructors have tried to solve this problem for their own classes by dividing the sections into two or three smaller groups for regular self-directed discussion sessions held at a time and place of the students' own choosing for perhaps two of the four class meetings during a given week.

However, "The response of the students and their originality more than made up for the difficulties I've found in teaching the course," one professor concludes.

There is a student-faculty Basketball game scheduled for March 19 at 7:30.

Rumor Spreads About Increase, Present Tuition Rate Explained

Have you heard the rumor that fees for next year are being raised to a fabulous sum? If you have, don't worry because it is just a rumor. A report from the business office shows that in a comparative breakdown, the cost of living for Longwood students is rising $55 for the '69-'70 school session. When comparing the costs for the '68-

'69 session to those for next year the figures for in-state students are as follows:

	'68-'69	'69-'70
Tuition	$340	$340
Post Office Fee	1	1
Dining Fee	360	370
Dormitory Fee	311	356
Laundry Fee	40	40
Infirmary Fee	33	33
Construction Fee	30	30
Activities Fee	30	30

TOTAL $1145 $1200

It is apparent by the chart that the rumor is true in the fact that the cost of living in the dormitory will be higher next year. The increase is due to the construction of the high-rise dorm that will open next fall, and it has become a fact of life that we must pay more for better living conditions.

Any student who wishes to know how this increase will affect the cost of summer school may obtain information from the business office.

Summer Sessions Offered Abroad: Graduates Of '69

A number of British universities have combined since 1948 to arrange annually a special program of summer schools providing primarily for the needs of graduate students from the universities of America, Europe and the British Commonwealth.

For 1969 summer schools are offered under a joint program at Oxford, Stratford-upon-Avon, and at the two capital cities of London and Edinburgh. Shakespeare and Elizabethan drama will be studied in Stratford-upon-Avon; the history, literature, and the arts of seventeenth-century England will be the subject of the Oxford school; at Edinburgh, four Scottish universities will jointly present a study of the history, literature and philosophy of eighteenth-century Britain, and the theme of the London school will be English literature from the end of the first world war to the present.

The courses are designed for graduate students, including teachers in universities and schools and for undergraduate students who will have completed their degrees by June, 1969. For more information, check the Day Students' bulletin board.

University Center Speaker-Artist Due Prof. At Carnegie

Balcomb Greene, artist, will lecture on "The Effect of Publicity on Art" at 1:00 Friday, February 21, in the ABC Room of Lankford.

Balcomb Greene, a former professor at Carnegie Institute of Technology (now Carnegie-Mellon University) and Dartmouth College, is lecturing under the sponsorship of the University Center in Virginia. Mr. Greene has had one-man shows at the Arts and Crafts Center, Pittsburgh, the Bertha Schaefer Gallery, American University, the American Embassy in Paris, the Whitney Museum, Sidenberg Gallery, Felngarten Gallery, and others. He has paintings in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum, Guggenheim Museum, and the Metropolitan Museum. He is a member of the American Federation of Arts.

Teachers' Art Work Display Circulates Via Services Dept.

The Art Department of Longwood College is presently featuring an exhibition, in Granger, by the Virginia Museum of "Art by Virginia Teachers." The Museum hopes that this circulating exhibitions will enable the citizens of Virginia to have a greater appreciation for and knowledge of art.

This circulating program was initiated two years ago and includes selected works produced by faculty members of colleges and universities within the state. Thirteen artists from seven colleges are represented in this particular exhibition, including Miss Barbara Bishop and Mrs. Janice Lemen of Longwood College.

"Art by Virginia Teachers" is one of 90 such exhibitions circulated by the state's Services Department of the Virginia Museum. In addition to original paintings, prints, and sculptures, filmstrips on various aspects of art are available in the Museum's effort to provide art for Virginians.

Tams In Concert Sell-Out Expected Juniors Sell Tickets

"The Days of Wine and Roses" is the theme of this year's Junior Ring Dance, to be held March 1 in the Gold Room of Lankford from 8:00 until midnight. The tickets for the dance are $1 per couple. Music will be provided by the Centaurs. Pictures will be taken at the dance. Cost is $3.75 for the color pictures (two 5" x 7" and four wallet size).

The Alpha Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha recently held an installation service to install the new officers for 1969. Zeta Tau Alpha congratulates its new officers, who are, Ann Sprint, President; Libby Nicar, Vice-President; Ginny King, Recording Secretary; Bev Cook, Corresponding Secretary; Susan DuPriest, Treasurer, and Janie Spitzer, Historian.

The Kappa Delta chapter is pleased to congratulate Patsy Peach, the newly elected STUDENT HANDBOOK editor and Brenda Moore, YWCA secretary.

The following girls were welcomed as pledges in Kappa Delta Sorority the first of December: Jana Brubaker, Candy Cassey, Mary King Coleman, Cary Cooley, Jane Eddy, Sandy Gannaway, Donna Gleason, Sharon Jefferson, Shelley Moore, Roxan Pollard, LaDonna Rasnick, Laura Trimble, Medie Wood, Mini Woolsey, and Cy Young.

Snack Bar Time; Later On Saturdays Low Sales In AM

The Snack Bar in the Lankford Building will have a new opening time that started Saturday, February 15. Instead of opening at 9 o'clock on Saturday mornings, it now opens at 10. The change is due to the fact that sales during the extra morning hour have averaged only $3.00. So, if you are going to sleep through breakfast, and eat at the Snack Bar on Saturdays, remember to sleep until 10 o'clock!

Freshman Numbers, Increase, Largely Composed Of Women

Dr. Garland G. Parker, the nationally-recognized authority on college statistics, recently released returns from 1100 four-year accredited colleges and universities.

The survey showed an enrollment of 5,201,889 and an increase of 6.2 per cent. Freshmen lengthened their statistical gains this year as 962,036 entered 984 comparably reporting institutions. This is an increase of 4.9 per cent.

"Since there was a population gain of about 8000 18-year-olds in the country this year," Dr. Parker said, "the percentage rise in freshmen is significant."

Later he commented, "Consistent with the trend of recent years, women again showed higher freshman percentage than men, 5.8 to 4.2 per cent, and now total 44 per cent of all freshmen."

Legislative, Judicial, House Association, A.A Minor Offices, Fire Warden Elected

Minor elections for vice-chairman, secretary, and treasurer of the Legislative Board, Judicial Board, House Association, Athletic Association, YWCA, and a Fire Warden were held earlier this semester.

Graduate Degree? Pay Increases; Thesis Remains

So, you're graduating early, are you? Well, what does the next six weeks hold for you? A part-time job until September as a sales clerk, secretary, etc., or are you just loafing? It may be a well-deserved rest, after all, you want to get out of school as early as possible. No more teachers, "no more books," and all that stuff. What possible difference could a few more hours make, anyway?

Those few hours spent in college your last semester could mean a lot in terms of money for the future. If you spend them in courses that could apply to your major, you could earn enough or almost enough hours to receive your Master's degree. So what difference does a Master's degree make? It is shown best in facts and figures which may amaze you.

In some counties and cities in Virginia, the initial pay increase may range from $500 to $945. Just in case you are interested, the generous school system that offers the $945.00 increase is Alexandria. However, other school systems offer increments almost as large, such as:

Arlington	$930
Covington	$900
Clarke	$800
Fredericksburg	$800
Winchester	$800

These beginning jumps in salary are not only beneficial in Master's training. The school systems of Charlottesville, Fairfax County, Falls Church, Green, Hampton, and Harrisonburg, offer pay increases that add on to an already increased scale and make the total salary increment up to $950, after the required number of years in the teaching system.

Colleges also employ teachers with Master's degrees and most teachers find it more enjoyable to teach to students who are earnestly interested in the subject matter.

Sizing up all the benefits, lucrative and otherwise, the extra hours required for a Master's degree are well worth giving up sixteen weeks of loafing.

Outside Patio Planned Air Conditioned Dorm

Several new policies have recently been announced by Dr. Willett concerning the new dormitory. The state department has given the final okay, and our new dorm, due to be completed in September, will be fully air-conditioned.

For those of us who are still uncertain about Spring Vacation, Dr. Willett reports that we will be dismissed at noon on Friday, March 28, and classes aren't scheduled to resume until Tuesday, April 8.

Y.R.'s Convention Delegates Debate Holton As Gov.

Young Republicans rallied at the State Young Republican's Convention held last Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the John Marshall Hotel in Richmond.

Representing Longwood were 15 delegates and four alternates, including senior Cathy Jester, chairman of Longwood's Young Republicans. The delegates were elected from a slate presented by the club. A substantial increase in club membership accounts for the increase in Longwood's allotted delegate spaces from 11 last year to 15 this year.

Platform debates and discussions occupied much of the time, however, delegates also debated issues in the Credentials, Awards and Rules, and Resolution committees. Election of state and district officials also was held, followed by a banquet Saturday night. Guest speaker at the banquet was Linwood Holton, probable Republican candidate for the governorship.

The platform and decisions reached at the convention will be turned over to the Republican Party for examination and study.

The Senior class is delighted to announce that their first choice for a speaker at commencement, Dr. G. W. Whitehurst, has accepted, Dr. Whitehurst, a congressman from the second district's current legislature, was the former Dean of Students at Old Dominion College. Dr. Whitehurst, a resident of Tidewater, Virginia, was a judge in last year's Miss Longwood pageant, and is scheduled to judge again this spring.

If you've been wondering about what construction is taking place behind Lankford Activities Building, wait until two warm days, and you'll witness the laying of cement for our own patio! Mr. Bristol, in charge of the physical plant, has submitted a selection of patio furniture to be approved by Legislative Board. The patio will be an extension of the rec and will be referred to as an outside snack bar, to be used during spring and summer sessions.

Dr. Blackwell has selected a student committee to offer suggestions for improving our current registration procedures. Legislative Board will choose the members of the committee who will be responsible for proposing a variety of suggestions.

Since more and more students are entering the acceleration program, Dr. Willett suggests that the girls begin working, that second semester, on their graduate degrees. Rather than waiting an additional year, if the girls begin the program that semester, they can take a normal load of 12 hours in the spring and 12 hours in the summer, and they'd only have either six hours or a thesis left to complete graduate study in any program we offer at Longwood. The possibilities of completing a graduate degree on our campus are encouraging, and some areas in Virginia offer as much as an eight-hundred dollar annual pay increase with Masters' Degrees.

Princeton Biology Professor Speaks Thursday, March 6

J. T. Bonner, professor of biology at Princeton University, will address students at six Virginia colleges this week. His visit is sponsored by the University Center in Virginia.

Bonner, whose studies are concerned with algae, fungi, invertebrates and cellular slime molds, was the 1955 recipient of the Selman A. Waksman award of the Theobald Smith Society for his contributions in the field of microbiology.

He is the author of "Morphogenesis: An Essay on Development," "Cells and Societies," "Evolution of Development," "The Cellular Slime Molds," and "The Scale of Nature."

His professional activities and organizations include the Guggenheim Fellowship; and membership in the Society of Growth and Development, the Society of General Physiologists, the American Society of Naturalists, the Mycological Society of America, and the Editorial Board of Princeton University Press. He is also the recipient of a postdoctoral National Science Foundation Senior Fellowship.

Dr. Bonner's schedule in Virginia will be:

Wednesday, March 5 - Radford College, 11:00 a.m. and Virginia Military Institute, 8:00 p.m.

Thursday, March 6 - Longwood College, 2:00 p.m. and Hampden-Sydney College, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, March 7 - Virginia State College, 4:00 p.m. and Saint Paul's College, 7:30 p.m.

Family Searching for Tomorrow in the Guiding Light to find Love of Life," is the title of the class of '72's Freshman Production. This take-off on the daily soap operas will be presented Thursday, February 27 at 7:30 p.m. in Jarman. Admission is 25c.

"On the Edge . . ." is a melodramatic soap opera story concerning Mrs. Strive, played by Beth Dale. It seems that Mrs. Strive's husband has just died, and the vulturous relatives are ready to cash in on the inheritance. The only drawback, though, is that Mr. Strive has left only $19,72, very apropos, considering this is the class of '72's production. Naturally, all the relatives need money; Granny (Verona Leake) needs an operation; the children have to go to college (Wanda Carter and Susan Stutz). To raise more money, the family decides to have a talent show, complete with folk songs, tap-dancing, skits, and various other acts. "On the Edge . . ." even including the interruptions incurred when watching a regular TV soap opera - commercials and station breaks. And, of course, the ending is a surprise.

So, tune in Thursday night, same time, same station for "On the Edge of Dark Shadows as the World Turns Around the Strive Family Searching for Tomorrow in the Guiding Light to find Love of Life."

Dr. Whitaker, Southern Culture Speaker, Talks To LC Students

"Latin American Tensions and U.S. Foreign Policy" is the topic of a lecture to be given by Dr. Arthur P. Whitaker at 10:00 on March 5 in the ABC room of Lankford.

Dr. Whitaker, who received his Ph.D. from Harvard, is professor of Latin American history, emeritus, at the University of Pennsylvania. Aside from lecturing at many U. S. universities, Dr. Whitaker was head of the Latin American Unit of the Department of State from 1943 to 1945. He also represented the United States at the Pan American Institute of Geography (Caracas, 1946), at Mexico City in 1947, and at Santiago, Chile in 1951.

Active in several professional organizations, he is a member of the Inter-American Academy, American Philosophical Society, Sociedad Chilena de Historia y Geografia, American Historical Association, Council on Foreign Relations, and was recipient of the Serra Award of Americas.

Dr. Whitaker is also an author of several books: "The United States and Argentina," "Spain and The Defense of the West," "Ally and Liability," and "Nationalism in Latin

Honors Program Offers New Challenge To The Ambitious

Wouldn't you like to graduate with honors in your specialized field? Answers to this question vary from "Me? You've got to be kidding!" to "I haven't got the time," or "They only want students on the Dean's List." Although these were the common responses, Dr.

Helms repudiated them quite definitely in the Honors Program assembly last Tuesday night.

Dr. Helms began with a call for protest against mediocrity and for a superior academic atmosphere. This could be achieved by more individual accomplishment in the Honors Program. The honors program consists of a credit course of six hours awarded in the senior year after deep research into a specialized field of interest, terminating in a paper and a one-hour oral examination by unbiased testers. The oral exam itself cannot be given unless the paper warrants a grade of A or B. If the exam is given, the student is graduated with honors in her particular field.

The initial step in the program is to decide upon a topic to research, then go to an advisor or someone on the Honors Committee which includes Mr. Lee Land, Dr. Charlotte Hooker, Pat Cloonan (a student), Dr. Shirley O'Neill, Mr. Darrell Harbaum and Dr. Helms. The committee, along with the advising teacher, discusses the feasibility of the undertaking and gives its approval or disapproval. The student registers for the six hours' course and begins research. After months of study, the results are compiled into a paper, and if the grade is either an A or B, you may take the oral examination, assured of an A or B in the course.

In the case of a student who decides not to complete the oral exam, she may keep the hours as an individual research course, and her grade will rest on the contents of the paper.

The course is open to all majors in any field; it isn't necessary to research your major, only the field of your greatest interest. Anyone with a stable average, not necessarily Dean's List, could use this time to research and expound upon a theory which interests her. Many of the projects are accomplished by films or demonstrations in areas of activity such as music, art, and physical education.

"The Honors Program is a challenge to the academic ego of students," continued Dr. Helms, "I would like to see academic achievement become the most recognized thing on this campus, then we could stand above others as number one in the field of individual research."

Mr. Wood, director of Lankford building, explains how to work the sign machine to Nancy Roach and Emily Callahan, the two representatives of the Alpha Delta Pi Colony on campus. The shop is available to all organizations with a very slight fee. The most expensive sign is 25c per foot.

Sign Shop Opens In Lankford Juniors, Frosh Take Advantage

By KATHY ATKINSON

A new sign printing shop, which is located adjacent to the ABC Room of Lankford, is now open and ready for use according to Mr. Gilbert N. Wood, Jr., director of the building.

The shop consists of a cabinet and work area. Supplies are also available and provide for a variety of different combinations and effects. Instant drying spray paint is used in the process and comes in varied colors. The letters and numbers which are used are available in sizes from 3/4 of an inch to 20 inches. Paper comes in 2, 3, and 4 foot widths and is available in nine colors including metallic gold and silver. Logos or stencils for designs can be obtained, but at present the shop does not have any.

The process itself is essentially one of blocking out spaces with the rubber letters and spraying around them. Shadowing of the letters can also be achieved. Usually the bottom color is fairly light and a darker color is used to shadow. Full instructions are available in the shop.

Purchased for $700 from Shoco Paints, the sign printing shop arrived before semester break. The first organization to try their hands at using the shop was the junior class. They prepared signs for Ring Dance with it. Next, the freshman class used the shop to prepare signs for Freshman Production.

The shop is available to all students, organizations, and faculty members at very slight cost. Signs on metallic paper are the most expensive and run .25 per linear foot. On regular paper the cost is .20 per linear foot. If white paper is used the cost is .15 in the 2 foot width, .20 in the 3 foot width, and .25 in the 4 foot width.

Mr. Wood has also announced that Lankford will have its own reading collection. He has donated quite a number of predominantly paperback to the building. Topics are varied and there will also be a collection of contemporary magazines. The collection is open to anyone and will be handled on the honor system.

Due to trouble incurred with students monopolizing the same channels on all the televisions in Lankford, all televisions will be permanently set on different channels.

REVEREND JAMES W. TURNER

Rev. Turner Speaks At Wesley Center On Church Involvement

Dr. James W. Turner, minister of Trinity United Methodist Church, Richmond, was the speaker on Wednesday, February 26 at 7 p.m. in the Methodist Student Center.

Dr. Turner is well known in the Virginia United Methodist Conference, having served churches in New Market, Bridgewater, Franklin, Harrisonburg, Roanoke and in Richmond. Mr. Turner is very active in his own church and in the conference in the areas of Evangelism and Church Involvement.

The meeting will be informal and there will be time for questions and discussion. This was a good opportunity for you to come and share what you think the church is doing in involvement and to meet a good speaker.

DR. ARTHUR P. WHITAKER

Improvements Welcome

Members of the incoming class of 1972 were met not only by herds of colleagues, sophomore assistants, junior sisters and plenty of meetings when they arrived in September. Some of the lucky ones were also greeted by a newly remodeled second-floor French. Comfortable and pleasant surroundings aid a great deal in the adjustment from high school to dormitory life.

The class of 1973 will also see vast improvements on their arrival to Longwood, such as the finished remodeling of French and the conversion of Ruffner to administration offices. Last, but by no means least, I include the newest addition to our fair campus, the new ten-story high rise dormitory, complete with facilities for air conditioning. Other improvements in the foreseeable future are the completion of a new fine arts center on campus, remodeling of Hiner, and additions to the Student Building.

We should indeed count ourselves lucky for these improvements to the Longwood campus. — S. M.

Hats Off To Honors Program!

The Rotunda staff wholeheartedly supports the newly colonized Honors Program and its importance to each of us. A student now has the opportunity, through extended research, to expand her knowledge in any subject area which interests her most.

It is not necessary to have maintained Dean's List grades in order to participate in the program. The student must, however, continue earnest effort in her study area in order to achieve academic excellence. — E. C. B.

Ring Dance Presents 'Wine And Roses'

"The Days of Wine and Roses . . ." a time to remember, a time to begin anew. So goes the famed song and so goes this year's Ring Dance 1969. The dance will be held Saturday night, March 1, from 8:00-12:00 in the Gold Room of Lankford Building. The fifth annual Ring Dance looks back upon a twenty year heritage of junior class dances beginning with the "Ribbon Ball" of 1949, the first to be officially sponsored by the class.

Each year, since that time, the Junior Class has presented a dance in February or March with varied themes. Beginning in 1965, the class called this function the "Ring Dance," hoping to make it an annual affair to become one of Longwood's traditions.

Previously, the rings had no part in the theme. The dance was a school wide affair just as is today's Ring Dance, but unlike now, there were no special features exclusively for juniors.

Each year, a different theme was adopted ranging from "Basin Street" in 1952 to various Valentine dances in the mid-50's to "Oriental Reflections" and "Parisian Square" in the early 60's.

The 1968 Mardi Gras Ring Dance was a revival of a dance sponsored by Alpha Kappa Gamma (now Geist) that was once a college tradition before 1949. The Mardi Gras dances were held in February, but gave way to the junior dances over the years.

Naturally, the dance has seen many changes, and this year is no exception. The earlier ones were held in the gym, with the balcony reserved to seat spectators. From 1958 on, the dance was held in the Old Rec (the Senior Dining Hall) with an after-dance breakfast in the Tea Room or at Longwood Estate.

This year, the Gold Room of Lankford will be used for the first time as a ballroom. All furniture will be removed from the room, and in lieu of extravagant decorations, the room itself with its gold decor, huge mirrors, and chandeliers will set the mood. Special soft lighting will be created by replacing the white chandelier bulbs with blue ones for the occasion.

As in past years, there will be a central theme structure on the dance floor. In keeping with the "Wine and Roses" theme, there will be a five foot tall gold wine glass decorated with red roses which will serve as the center for the circular ring figure.

Junior class members will form this traditional circle and officially receive their college rings from their escorts. Long stemmed red roses will be carried by participants in the ring figure.

Another new feature this year comes with the after-party, exclusively for juniors and their dates. In the past, these parties were either combo parties or breakfasts held in the Tea Room. (Currently the faculty dining room) or in the Senior Dining Hall. In 1953, the party was held at Longwood Estate. Last year, completion of the Lankford Building made it possible to have the breakfast in the ABC Room.

This year, the breakfast will be replaced by a 12:30 buffet in the ABC Room. Juniors will be given 2:00 permission on Saturday night in order to attend this buffet. All other students attending the dance will receive 1:00 a.m. permission.

The BC room will be opened throughout the dance to provide an area for refreshments and conversation. All furniture from the Gold Room will be placed in these two rooms.

No refreshments will be allowed in the Gold Room. Since this is the first use of Lankford for a dance, the effectiveness of this rule will determine future use of the building for such purposes.

The custom of dance favors which began in 1953 has been carried through to the present. This year's favors are small wine glasses with the theme and year of the dance engraved in gold.

Beginning in 1955, the concept of the "Junior Weekend" climaxed by a Ring Dance was initiated. It was then that the Saturday afternoon concert by a popular singing group originated when the Class of 1966 presented the Lettermen in concert.

This year, the Tams, famous for their recording of "Be Young, Be Foolish," and other current favorites, will perform Saturday afternoon from 1:30-3:30 in Jarman.

Over the past four years, the Lettermen, Otis Redding, the Swinging Medallion, and the Platters have performed very successfully at similar concerts.

The Centaurs, a group from the University of Richmond, will provide music for the dance Saturday night. Admission is $1.00 per couple.

Here is another contrast with the earlier junior class dances. Until 1961, a full dance band orchestra was hired to provide music. Changes in musical taste have introduced combo groups such as the Centaurs into the tradition.

Pictures of students and their dates will be taken by Kevin Mannix, a photographer from the University of Virginia. For $3.75, to be paid at the dance, two color 5X7's and four color wallet sized pictures may be purchased. Chairmen of the 1969 Ring Dance are Andrea Myers and Mary Margaret Holm.

The Junior Ring Dance has seen many changes since couples stepped through the mouth of a paper clown onto the hardwood gymnasium floor to dance to the music of Johnny Satterfield and his "Moods in Music" band. Yet through all of these changes the spirit of the Junior Class has prevailed, giving Longwood College yet another tradition to build upon.

View Of Controversial Topics Given By Leading Va. Newspaper

In the past few weeks, several important issues have covered headlines from coast-to-coast. The Vietnamese situation, unrest on college campuses, reports of student-administration anarchy — these events are facing us today.

A release from Wichita, Kansas, appearing in "The Richmond News Leader" Thursday, February 20, concerned a father's comments on his sons on the war in Vietnam. Air Force Major Victor Colasonna was killed in action last week, but before his death, he answered his sons' question of the meaning of war.

"War is all the horrible things a human being can do to another human being because he has not learned to love."

He later wrote, "I'll tell you what war is not. It is not glamorous, daredevil existence where the 'good guys' always win."

"It is not a fearless fighter pilot jumping into his airplane to shoot down the enemy. It is not a game which you play (and which I played as a child), where you go home to a good supper and a warm bed after it's over."

"War is fought by real human beings, not Hollywood stars — men like your daddy and perhaps older brothers. We all face a moment of truth when we must overcome our fears and do what must be done, no matter how difficult."

Perhaps this statement should remind us that our men in Vietnam feel they are there for a genuine cause — helping to preserve our American democracy:

"War is the curse of mankind because he will not listen to God's will. War is the agony of mankind because he will not love his neighbor."

Major Colasonna offers these words of advice, which I feel we must remember in order to understand the intensity of the issues facing us:

"If a man learns to love, there would be no wars, for man does not hurt what he loves. Perhaps your generation can accomplish this — it seems that mine has failed. Do not allow adults to teach you to hate — for no reason and against no man."

The problem of hate faces us in the United States — more recently on our large college campuses. The Duke University uprising two weeks ago has been termed by "The Richmond News Leader" in an editorial (February 19), entitled "Shape Up Or Ship Out" as a "sell out to violence and will only fuel the fires of academic anarchy."

The incident involved thirty of Duke's ninety Negro students who seized the administration building "threatening to burn all student records unless their demands were met." The article cited the demands of the militants as "bordering on the insane." Some of them included the "dismissal of President Knight, re-admission of all black students who had flunked out, agreement to reserve 29 per cent of the student body for Negro enrollment, regardless of qualifications, and, among other things, the hiring of a barber qualified to cut Afro-style hair."

Dr. Badger and Mrs. Magnifico review material for conference. Both teachers will represent Longwood in N. C. convention.

Members Of Math Department To Speak At Fall Conference

By LISA WORTHINGTON

New concepts and innovations are occurring in the field of Mathematics, and Longwood's mathematics department is attempting to keep up with all of them. In order to do this, the department head, Dr. Badger, says that she likes to try to send representatives to the three most important Math Association meetings every year. These are, the American Mathematical Society, the Mathematics Association of America, and the National Council of Teachers of Math. Just recently the whole department received quite an honor, when they were invited to participate in the convention next fall of the National Council of Teachers of Math. Dr. Badger and Mrs. Magnifico will be Longwood's representatives at the convention to be held in Raleigh, North Carolina. Mrs. Badger plans to speak on some of the neglected concepts in Mathematics needed by college freshmen, and Mrs. Magnifico will speak on the topic geometry for the elementary teacher. They both are very optimistic and inspired about the future meeting.

Dr. Badger is not only to be one of our representatives on the upcoming fall meeting, but she has also represented us very aptly in the past. In January she attended the 52nd annual meeting of the Math Association in New Orleans. The outstanding feature of this convention was that it was a joint meeting of the three most important Math Associations. The highlights of the convention included lectures delivered by Prof. R. L. Wilder of the University of Michigan and by Prof. S. B. Morrey, Jr., of the University of California, Berkeley. Prof. R. L. Wilder delivered the 42nd Josiah

Willard Gibbs lecture on the "Trends and Social Implications of Research," while Prof. S. B. Morrey, Jr., gave the retiring presidential address on "Differentiability Theorems of Weak Solutions of Differential Equations." Dr. Badger mentioned however, that the topic she found most interesting was a panel discussion on the secondary school preparation of students for freshman calculus.

Other conventions that members of the Mathematics department hope to attend include a sectional meeting of the National Convention of Teachers of Math in March, held in Knoxville, and a similar meeting at Minneapolis in April. Dr. Badger expressed the hope that by attending these conventions and meetings, Longwood will be able to keep up with modern programs and new curriculums, which is absolutely essential in this scientific age.

Other news in the Mathematics department include Mr. Webb who plans to take a leave of absence next year to work on his Doctor's Degree. Also, the department is looking forward to the return of Mr. Gusset who has been making advances in his doctoral program at the University of Cincinnati.

Dr. Badger says proudly in summing up the activities of her mathematics department, "The members of the staff are making every effort to advance professionally and to keep abreast of the times." Certainly with such educated and industrious workers in the department, they will succeed.

Student Organization Seeks Understanding Through Evaluation

The Student Academic Affairs Committee, headed by Jane Edmondson, was formed to see what it could do to improve academic relations at Longwood. For the past two years it has passed out questionnaires at the request of faculty members to be given to their students for a student evaluation of the faculty member. This year the Committee is in the process of revising the questionnaire which will be administered again second semester.

The Academic Affairs Committee acts as an intermediary between the faculty and the students. Committee members are available to talk to students with questions on academic work. The Committee will anonymously review the problems with Dean Blackwell. If a student has an academic problem, she should talk it over with her instructor; if this fails, the Department Chairman; and she should always feel free to take her problem to Dean Blackwell. The worst thing she can do is to brood about her problem.

The Committee hopes to keep the college administration informed about instances of good teaching and activities that add to the academic distinction of Longwood. They are also concerned about the restriction on major reports and tests during the seven-day period and would like to be informed about infractions of this rule.

Dr. Frank has recently become advisor to the Academic Affairs Committee composed of: Jane Edmondson (Chairman), Joan Tice, Mary Armstrong, Becky Bartholomew, Bev Johnson, Marcia Mitchell, Ede Raine, and Janet Sharp. Two new members will be appointed shortly.

An open meeting is planned soon for all interested students, when the Committee will explain its objectives, student problems, and suggestions.

Swim Team Invited To Attend Meet At U. Of Maryland

The Longwood Varsity Swim Team has been invited to participate in the first Annual Intercollegiate Swimming Meet to be held Saturday, April 12, at the University of Maryland in College Park, Maryland. The meet is sponsored by the Washington, D.C. Area Metropolitan Interscholastic Sports Association.

Some of the Longwood team members have begun practicing to prepare themselves for the meet. Miss Bush, the team coach, is enthusiastic and she hopes that several of the Longwood swimmers will be able to participate.

Students Participate In Class Basketball, Teams Are Picked

After two weeks of practice, those girls participating in intramural basketball divided into classes and chose the following girls to represent their class in basketball. Seniors are: Jane Tibbs, Ginny Sirc, Cathy Jester, Becky Easter, Jane Roenke, Peggy Jones, Susan Long, Nancy Schwartz, and Martha Hall. ? Well, anyway, it's their last year, let them at least try!

The competing juniors have chosen Suzanne Turner, Shorti Marconi, Kathy Parker, who incidentally injured her finger in practice, Chris McDonnell, Betty Ford, Dillard Vaughn, and Janice Hudgens.

The sophomores are out to win with Linda Southworth, Casey Wilkes, Sherry Williams, Mary Lu Sowers, Janet Harpold, Maxine Stone, Kathy Long, who won't be able to participate because of a sprained ankle, Laurel Baldwin, Barbara Jenkins, and Jane Richardson.

The frosh really are doing a good job. They have chosen Darlene Almond, Nancy Gunter, Pat Grady, Judy Heironimus, Sandy Cordle, Gay Snead, Patti Coogan, Margaret Webb, Nancy Maloney, and Cindy Clarke.

The class games began Thursday, February 20, with the sophomores defeating the seniors and the freshmen defeating the juniors. The class games continue through to March 3, when the color teams are chosen. The color games begin March 4.

The schedule is posted on the A.A. bulletin board across from the Dean of Women's office. Check the board and go out and support your class and color. See the battle of wits and skill, and most of all endurance! Just ask any of the players, they'll tell you what it's like!

L. C. Girls struggle to get the ball in last week end's competition. VCU's team shocked the Blue and Whites in Saturday's game as "Radar" basket shots led to opponent's victory.

Basketball Team Ends Winning Streak With 48-27, 26-24 VCU Losses

Longwood's five game winning streak was brought to an abrupt halt Saturday as the Longwood "Ladies" faced the "Sock it to 'em" Virginia Commonwealth University team in the VCU gym in Richmond.

The first game began with a bang as VCU cornered the ball and kept it to gain a substantial 10 point lead. Judy Turner put in a good two points for Longwood, and we gained two more through foul shots. This gave us four to VCU's staggering 18 points at the end of the first quarter.

The second quarter continued along the same lines, VCU making shot after shot, each shot seemingly zoomed into the basket by infallible radar. Their rebounds were nicely snatched and then headed in one direction, to the goal. Their favorite tactics were the 'dunk under the outside guards, dive into the center 'shot, along with a low arched outside shot from the corner of the court. Passing was another of their specialties which moved the ball quickly, especially the bounce pass in a strategic position.

On the other hand, being as diplomatic as possible, this was definitely not one of L.C.'s better games as far as playing was concerned. Passes and shots were a little hesitant, while rebounds were few and far between. Before the end of the first half, the Longwood team racked up another 7 points from goals by Freda Lunsford, Lynn Coleman, and Becky Bondurant, plus another foul shot. Fouls were flying heavily through the remainder of the games, for example, Betty King's flying dive down the court after being tripped by a VCU player. Ending the half with a 29-11 score.

In the second half, Longwood looked livelier and began inching its way in the general direction of the far distant VCU score, mainly through a series of good foul shots and goals by Lynn and Becky again.

VCU's radar appeared to be losing power towards the end of the half, but the ball maneuvering still gave them a definite advantage over us. So the game ended with VCU victorious with a 48-27 score.

The second game started badly when the VCU team got the ball and (Continued on Page 6)

Exciting Volleyball Competition Ends Sophomores Victors

Over 100 students participated in intramural volleyball last month as the Green and Whites won the color competition and the sophomores were victorious in class competition.

Members of the winning Green and White team were seniors Cathy Hass, Jane Tibbs, Becky Bondurant, Anna Pettis and sophomores Carol Sanders, Margaret Harrison, Janet Harpold, Lynn Coleman and Gay Rutland.

The sophomore team was made up of Carol Sanders, Janet Harpold, Gay Rutland, Margaret Harrison, Lynn Coleman, Freda Lunsford, Laurel Baldwin and Sandi Naylor.

headed for their goal; however, they didn't have the same radar equipment as their first team and had a little trouble scoring. Then Mary Tolley got the ball back to our goal and scored. The play continued as the first game on Longwood's part, little rebounding and unsure passes. Fouls were moving in also; Mary Tolley was taken to a nearby hospital after receiving a fall in which she hit her head, but returned after the game with little more than a big headache. The first quarter ended in a 6-6 tie, better odds than the first team at the first quarter.

The second quarter was dominated by Betty King, scoring 2 goals, and 2 foul shots for the Longwood team. There were still few rebounds; although we made a few more scores, so did VCU, ending the first half in another tie, 14-14.

The third quarter was very bad for Longwood. Lucy Gilbert scored our only goal, while VCU racked up 7 more points, bringing the score to 23-7 in VCU's favor.

The fourth quarter showed Longwood gaining by goals from Marcia Tench, Rene Harrison, Sandy Naylor, and Lucy Gilbert, bringing LC up to 24 big points. But meanwhile VCU came up with a mere 3 points that quarter, but it was enough to give VCU the win, 26-24.

Ring Dance Band, the Centaurs, have backed up such bands as the Showmen, Clifford Curry, and the Drifters. They have played from Maryland to the Carolinas. The big news for the band is their recording date on March 23 in Baltimore.

L. C. Professor, Dr. James Helms, Receives YR Old Friend's Award

"I feel a deep sense of appreciation for this recognition," says Dr. James Helms, professor of history at Longwood, on receiving the Old Friends Award at the State Young Republican Convention in Richmond last weekend. He said that he felt the recognition "really came from the Longwood Club" which had submitted his name to the Awards Committee.

The award was presented to Dr. Helms by Mike Tarrent, the newly elected YR State Chairman, when asked how he felt, he responded, "extremely pleased" and "appreciative." The Old Friends Award is given to a member of the Senior Party who has done the most for the Young Republicans. An Awards Committee consisting of Young Republicans throughout the state judged the candidates for the award.

Dr. Helms is an outstanding Republican both at the local and state levels. In 1964, he founded the YR

Club at Longwood and has remained the well-loved sponsor of the club. He also was founder of the Republican Party in Prince Edward County.

Concerning the convention, Dr. Helms stated that he was "well pleased with the conduct of our club. It set up an example of individual responsibility and club harmony." He felt that the L. C. club could act as "a model to other clubs in the way they accepted the results and joined in to make the new administration successful."

As well as electing state officers which included State Chairman Mike Tarrent, the college Young Republicans elected their officers. Paul Scott was elected state chairman for this group. Longwood's YR, Carolyn Cummings, was elected Fourth District representative to the College Board.

Blasch To Show Wide Variety

In Jarman Recital Feb. 26

The Music Department of Longwood College presents Mr. Robert Blasch in recital on February 26, 1969, at 7:30 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium.

The piano selections that Mr. Blasch will perform include "Toccata in C minor" by Bach, "Sonata in A-flat major, Op. 110" by Beethoven, "Serenade in A" by Igor Stravinsky, and "Gaspard de la nuit" by Maurice Ravel.

The compositions depict piano literature from all eras, ranging from the Baroque to the modern. Mr. Blasch will favor the audience with some information about each composition before playing it.

Although Mr. Blasch describes the works for the most part as being serious and "long hair," he relates also that they are very beautiful pieces of art and that he's "anxious to share their beauty with those who come."

Mr. Blasch, a member of the faculty in our Department of Music, has studied at Hofstra University in Long Island, New York, the University of Michigan, and the University of Illinois.

CORRECTION

The Student-Faculty basketball game will be on Wednesday, March 12, at 7:30 p.m.

Virginia Newspaper Gives Views Of Controversial Topics

said barber to be forbidden to cut hair for white students."

The article explained that "while 85 per cent of Duke's 5,000 students took no part in the disturbances, the entire university was disrupted. Typically, a tiny minority managed to jeopardize the educational pursuit of the vast majority."

The point that the article emphasized was the "tragedy that the black students at Duke and at other institutions of higher learning are, by including in irresponsible actions, forfeiting their privileged opportunity to prepare themselves for leadership."

Later, the article pointed out that the students should have been expelled. It stated that "campus revolutionaries have achieved their worst disorders at those institutions with the most liberal, permissive environments." The editor termed the revolutionists "like cancer cells, destroying any tolerant host unwilling to cut them out."

"Love-Hate" In connection with the "love-hate" stressed by Major Colasunno, the editorial concluded that "while less privileged members of our generation are fighting a hard war against Communism in South Vietnam, some students at American colleges, wittingly or unwittingly, serve the Communist cause at home."

Even at the University of Virginia, dissent has begun. Last week, a gathering of three or four per cent of those enrolled met to rally and present 11 points of student grievances to the administration. Robert Hildrup, educational editor for "The Richmond News Leader" noted in an article entitled "Intramural Coup at U.Va.," that "to the casual observer, it was an interesting collection." He explained that there were a large number of "Virginia gentlemen" — attired in coats and ties. "In truth," the article read, "these were the genuine student leaders, duly elected representatives of major campus organizations." He then pointed out a similar aspect that seemed apparent in the Duke University uprising: the fact that the "hard-core students for a Democratic Society and the Southern Student Organizing Committee included a genuine membership of not more than a couple dozen." The similarity lies between the correlation of just a small number of revolutionists, in each situation, who cause the most furor. He then described these hard-core crowd as "straight out of a hippie community. It was almost as if some metaphysician had captured a little slice of Richmond's Fan District and sent it on a bad trip to Charlottesville — dirty levis, work shirts and all."

Even "The Cavalier Daily," the University of Virginia's campus paper, endorsed the gathering in an editorial February 19. The second day of rallying brought organization, and 10 per cent of the student body. The article praised the "effective and constructive movement for change."

However, for those of you who think defiant behavior brings only hate — the antithesis of Major Colasunno's plea for more love in our lives, Dr. Douglas D. Bond, professor and chairman of the department of psychiatry at Case-Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, remarked in a lecture at the Medical College of Virginia last week that "deviant behavior is necessary if society is going to move." He later remarked that "Jesus was probably a deviant in that he wasn't within the usual norm of things at that time." Concluding his lecture, Dr. Bond added that "In the Middle Ages, both Oxford and Cambridge had pitched battles between their faculties and students in which a lot on both sides were killed. So it's not so new."

YWCA Union Vespers Planned At Methodist Student Center

REV. GEORGE WESLEY JONES

The Longwood College Y.W.C.A. each year sponsors several Union Vesper Programs. Each one of these programs is under the leadership of one of the church groups on campus. Union Vesper Program will be held tonight at 6:45 p.m. at the Methodist Student Center.

Union Vespers will be under the supervision of the Wesley Foundation and will be directed by the Rev. George Wesley Jones, pastor of the Farmville United Methodist Church, who will speak on "A Contemporary Service of Worship." Mr. Jones came to this church in June 1968 after serving five years as the Chaplain and Minister of the college church at Ferrum Junior College. Mr. Jones has also served other churches in the Virginia Methodist Conference.

Hymns and prayers that speak the language of our day and help us to be honest in our worship of God will be used in the service. In commenting on the service Mr. Jones said: "In the hymns we shall sing about life as we know it and feel it, in the prayers we shall talk to God in openness and sincerity, and then we shall listen for God to speak to us in the light of our times and our need of Him. Thus the worship time will be for us, not a time to leave our daily concerns outside the door while we come in and worship, but rather a time when we bring all our concerns into the presence of God and seek His light and power for us."

Everyone is invited to come and experience a new form of worship.

An unknown killer stalks Paris and the multiple killings mount in Seven Arts Pictures' "The Sleeping Car Murder." High on the killer's list is Simone Signoret, portraying a fading actress, and Catherine Allegret (Miss Signoret's daughter), cast as a young traveler who is an innocent bystander caught in a killer's trap. In hot pursuit is dedicated detective Yves Montand (Miss Signoret's husband), who sifts the maze of clues that lead to the surprising ending.

Art Exhibition By Twery And Family Currently On Review In Library Room

Mosaic exhibition displayed in library through March 31.

There is an exhibition of mosaics in the Library Exhibit Room, now through March 31, executed by Elliott R. Twery and his family. Mr. Twery, professor of art at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, includes four framed mosaics in his show. Also included in one small circular piece done by his daughter while in high school. She is now a sophomore at the Tyler School of Fine Art in Philadelphia. Another work was completed by his son Michael, a few years ago, and another, was executed by the whole family.

In addition to Mr. Twery's mosaics are three small mosaic pieces which he uses to demonstrate techniques and various combinations of materials. There are also color photographs of his major mosaics projects. One of these covers an entire wall in the foyer of the Agudath Shalom Temple in Lynchburg. Based on the Creation, it was dedicated in 1961 and, with Mr. Twery's direction, assembled in sections by members of the congregation. The whole project, involving over 100 members of the congregation, took 1,000 hours to complete. The subject matter is intended as a visual hymn to the "wonder and glory of God."

More recently completed is a six foot mosaic circle which was installed at the Ohel Shalom Temple in Norfolk last year. It was designed and dedicated to a lifelong friend, Reese Weidick.

Mr. Twery, in 1940, received a full tuition scholarship from Scholastic Magazine, to Carnegie Institute of Technology (now Carnegie-Mellon University). While there, he was a member of Phi-Kappa-Phi Collegiate Scholars Honorary and Tau-Sigma-Delta Collegiate Arts Honorary. After receiving the B.F.A. degree from Carnegie Tech, Mr. Twery spent a year of self-planned study in New York City and then studied at the Art Students League with Morris Kantor. In 1951, he received the M.F.A. degree from the State University of Iowa. Mr. Twery has also been awarded the Edgar Kaufmann Fellowship to Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture.

In 1956, Mr. Twery joined the faculty at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, after teaching five years at Tulane University in New Orleans. At R-MWC he was acting chairman of the art department and chairman of the R-MWC Summer Study in Italy Program.

In 1961, Mr. Twery was commissioned by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts to design its Christmas card and to do a mosaic panel for a touring educational exhibit.

Mr. Twery's paintings have appeared on the cover of "The Reporter" and in "Art in America," in the "New Talent in the U.S.A. Exhibition and National Tour" sponsored by the American Federation of the Arts; the Religion and Art exhibit of the 25th Anniversary show in the Washington Cathedral; and the Houston International Exhibition. His works have also appeared in the Delgado Museum (New Orleans), J. Selegmann Gallery, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Martha Jackson Gallery, and in numerous other galleries in at least eleven states other than Virginia.

School Spirit?

Spirit-n. spir-it-8. Enthusiastic loyalty; as in school spirit. This is how spirit is defined in Webster's New World dictionary, but spirit can be synonymous with many ideas. For example, participating in school activities such as the upcoming A. A. Field Day, Geist festivals, or just being a spectator at a basketball game and supporting our team. It doesn't take much time or skill to show a little school spirit, and everyone can do it. One of the major complaints about activities at Longwood is that the same small group is in charge of everything, and the main cause of that is nobody else shows enough interest to put in the time and energy. So how about it? This is your school too!!

Swinging 70's

Last weekend, the junior class celebrated its annual ring dance hampered by fifteen inches of snow. But despite ominous weather, the concert and dance certainly deserved recommendation. Many girls were left stranded without dates at the last minute because of dangerous road conditions. The trip from dorm-to-Lanford in evening dresses posed even more problems. The Tams were (behind) schedule — things looked bleak after weeks and weeks of planning.

Alas! Hard work and effort payed off for the class of '70. The Tams drew a record-setting crowd. The figure was lovely; and the buffet following the dance certainly set the mood for the "Days of Wine and Roses."

Dr. Willett, particularly, deserves a special note of thanks. His concern for all his girls can only be compared to a father's love for his family. His delight upon receiving the portrait Susan Davenport pointed, was, in itself, rewarding.

Congratulations to all those students and committees who worked so diligently to make the dance such a success!

English Staff Signs Fulbright Scholar

Longwood's English Department is going to receive added impetus as well as a competent addition to their staff in the fall. The new motivating force and addition are one in the same presented as Dr. Alexander Thereux, a graduate of the University of Virginia and a Fulbright Scholar. Dr. Thereux was honored with the Fulbright fellowship last spring, when he proved in a recommended competition that he had great potential for scholarship and leadership. Under the grant, Dr. Thereux is being paid to study abroad for a year. He is presently studying in England, where he has lectured at the University of London.

WRITING NOVEL

He is also working on a novel, and planning a trip to tour the United Kingdom. When joining the Longwood staff, in the fall Dr. Thereux will be an Associate Professor. It is thought now, that his course schedule will include courses in the Modern British Novel, a survey of Yeats and Joyce for graduate study, English 212, Freshman English, English 300, and Modern Poetry. It is certainly a pleasure and an honor for Longwood that Dr. Thereux has agreed to become a member of the faculty.

Welcome H-SC!

"When Longwood Goes Co-Ed"

By LINDA SHEPHERD

Many's the time that a Longwood Lady has attended Rotunda Sings and sung of her desire to "be in that number when Longwood goes co-ed."

This semester, it might appear that the rain-dances and chants sung around Joan of Arc in the Rotunda have brought results, for a large number of Hampden-Sydney students have appeared in Longwood's classrooms.

The registrar's office lists 108 H-S students enrolled in classes at Longwood. In addition, there are about 14 Longwood students enrolled in H-S classes.

This exchange began last year, aiming to provide students of both schools with the opportunity to take classes not offered in their own systems.

Mr. Harold K. Magnusson, Longwood registrar, commented on the system, saying, "This is a cooperative endeavor. I think it will benefit more and more students from both schools in the future. We will give full credit for any course taken at Hampden-Sydney."

Most H-S students are enrolled in the History and Social Science Department in courses ranging from Geography to Economic History to Anthropology. There are also several H-S students taking courses in Education, Biology, English, Foreign Language, Music, and Business Education.

The majority of Longwood students at H-S are enrolled in Foreign Language courses and a few are in Computer Mathematics.

There has been much speculation as to the motives of these men in coming to Longwood. Many rumors that they are seeking an easy grade seem to be high on the list of reasons.

An H-S student in Mr. Mortimer's Political Geography class, enrollment: 19 males, five females, commented on his motives.

He identified himself only as Harlow Farquatz.

"We expected a whole roomful of girls when we arrived. We were kind of surprised to find only five girls in the class." Relatively few Longwood students would have guessed the above as a reason for their taking courses here.

When asked how he felt about classes here, Farquatz remarked, "We like it, it's a good change. We need more co-operation."

Contrary to popular belief on campus, the H-S students appeared to be a little worried about their performance in the courses.

Farquatz expressed this concern as he revealed that he is "a little worried about the course. That first test is going to be interesting."

One of the few girls in the class agrees that they are concerned. Several of them have asked her how to get a good grade in the course and all seem to be uneasy about the tests. "They all seem to be worried about the course. Just what have they gotten into?"

She feels that the H-S students are an asset to the class because of "the masculine viewpoints that they've gotten out of the political science courses at H-S. It really adds to the class." These viewpoints are brought up in class discussions which are usually started by the male members of the class. "They ask questions more than we do," remarked one of the girls. "That's good."

Last week, Mr. Mortimer showed a Dutch travelogue film to the class. The film is intended to introduce the viewer to Dutch women.

"There's not much political geography, gentlemen, but we'll stretch the point. It's a treat — if you like to see girls."

There was a small laugh throughout the male side of the room after this introduction. From the female side came an under-the-breath "Are you kidding me?"

The atmosphere in this largely male class is surprisingly typical of any other class except all five girls are neatly attired and wear make-up to class. There was not one pair of knee socks or saddle shoes present, not even one gypsy suit.

Co-educational classrooms are not new to Longwood. Men have been attending summer and night classes here since 1930.

In 1946, the GI bill brought 22 men to Longwood as full time fall students. For the first time, Longwood was a co-educational school.

Between 1965 and 1966, the last man completed the requirements for a degree from Longwood, ending its life as a co-ed school.

Current trends lean toward the co-educational institution, with even the stalwart University of Virginia beginning to liberalize its views on admissions. In the meantime, Longwood is reacquainting herself with the male viewpoint, just in case!

H-S boys carry on friendly conversations with Longwood students.

Barter To Present Dos Passos' "USA."

The Barter Players, a nationally acclaimed troupe, will present "USA," the fourth program of the Artists' Series, tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. in Jarman.

A dramatization by Paul Shyre and John D. S. Passos based on the novel by John Dos Passos, "USA" is a "panoramic view of life in the United States from the beginning of this century up to the 1930's," says Mr. Charles E. Butler, chairman of the Artists' Series Committee. It had a long run in New York a few years ago and was highly praised by drama critics.

The home of the Barter Players at Abingdon, Va., is the South's oldest and largest professional theatre. It was designated in 1946 the State Theater of Virginia, the first and only state-subsidized theatre. They maintain at Abingdon the largest professional company in continuous operation outside New York.

Frosh Cagers Win

Last week in exciting class basketball games the freshman class defeated the sophomores, juniors, and seniors to win the class competition and to give the Red and Whites points toward the color cup.

Color teams have been selected by the varsity basketball team and the first game was played last night. The Red and Whites and Green and Whites will meet each other again tonight.

Dr. S. C. Barry, of the University of Maryland School of Dentistry, will speak on "The Use of Radioactive Tracers in the Study of Carbohydrate Metabolism of Oral Streptococci," on Monday, March 10, at 5:00 p.m., in Stevens 108.

Dr. Barry will also discuss research and graduate school opportunities in the School of Dentistry and other professional schools of the University of Maryland. The lecture is being sponsored by the Lychnos Society.

The Fencing Club is now meeting Mondays and Wednesdays from 4:45-5:45.

Mrs Griffin Attends National Home Ec. Conference In Chicago

In early February, Mrs. Griffin, head of the home economics department, attended a conference in Chicago sponsored by the National Councilors of Administrators of Home Economics. "The purpose of the convention was to strengthen higher education of home economics through teaching, research, and service and to encourage cooperative working relations among home economics administrators," says Mrs. Griffin.

The theme of the convention was "Issues Administrators Face" and the major emphasis was the role of higher education as a dynamic force in today's world.

On March 12 at 7:30 in French gym the Longwood faculty will meet the varsity basketball team in a benefit game. All contributions collected from the game will go to the heart fund.

Although there is no set admission charge for the game, students are asked to bring their contributions for the heart-fund which will be their admission into the game.

The strong faculty team is made up of George "Bomber" Bristol, T.C. "Dynamo" Dalton, Fred "Hook-Shot" Herndon, John "Marvel" McCrimmon, Lewis "Romping" Rutherford, Joe "Scoring" Scolnick, Bob "Stomping" Stauffer, E. T. "Nimble" Noone, Randy "Wild" Weber, Henry "Winning" Willett, and Robert "the Wonderful" Wu. The team has been practicing and they feel they are ready for the game.

The Longwood varsity team, who has a winning season thus far, has been working especially hard to get ready for the big game, Miss Callaway, assistant varsity coach, is enthusiastic and she hopes that many people will come to the game since it is for such a worthy purpose.

"Natatorial Mythology" Water Show Scheduled

The H2O and Corkettes club are presenting their annual Water Show March 19, 20, 21 and 22. This year it is entitled "Natatorial Mythology." Each group represents in their routine a certain god or goddess. Under the direction of Dr. Smith, the girls have been practicing since the beginning of the year for this show. They practice every night and the practices consist of learning group routines and even new stunts. Anne Bishop, Bonnie Walton, Barbara Carr, Candy Dickerman, Frances Bain and Dr. Smith are among the writers of the routines. The girls are divided into a group and are required to learn the routine of that group. The show is presented elaborately, with costumes, light effects, and scenery, all to make a story in the water.

Synchronized swimming is a beautiful form of swimming which consists of the utmost body control in the water in performing ballet stunts. The stunts are coordinated in timing and space with each girl to present an overall pattern effect. In the past, the show has proven to be a great success and Dr. Smith has confidence that this year's show will be even better. The tickets will be $.50 and may be obtained from any H-20 or Corkette members. So be sure to buy your ticket and your date is invited also. Come out and see the water show this year and see what other things can be done in the water aside from the traditional swim or sink routines most of us experience at the beach or pool during the summer. You think you can't swim now, try some of the things these girls do and you know you can't swim!

Dining Committee

On the first Monday of every month, the Dining Hall Committee meets to discuss and evaluate the operations of the Dining Hall. At this time, all suggestions and recommendations from the student body are presented and reviewed.

The committee consists of the following representatives: Dean Wilson; Mr. Martin, Slater Food Service; Mr. Paul, Business Manager and Treasurer; Pat Halstead, Senior representative, Cox 216; Barbara Roukema, Junior representative, South Cunningham 208; Sherry Grigg, Sophomore representative, North Cunningham 175; Suzanne Morgan, Freshman representative, Tabb 323; Janice Hudgins, waitress representative, South Cunningham 206; and Julie Wright, Chairman.

Due to the snow on Saturday the Longwood-Westhampton basketball games have been rescheduled for Thursday, March 6.

W-F Chorus Concert

The William Fleming Mixed Chorus was presented in concert on Monday, March 3, in the ABC room of Lankford Building. The chorus which came from William Fleming High School, Roanoke, was under the direction of Mrs. June Webb, a former Longwood graduate. Before coming to Longwood, the 110 piece chorus sang at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

H-S Announces Future Lecturers On Far East

Hampden-Sydney College is pleased to announce plans for its "Symposium on the Far East and Southeast Asia." The conference will bring to the campus a distinguished team of political scientists who will lecture on a variety of subjects concerning this troubled area of the world.

On March 7 at 2:45 p.m. the second lecture will be held in the Parents and Friends Lounge. The featured speaker will be Professor A. Diak Barnett and his topic will be "Communist China and Its Neighbors."

Born in Shanghai, Mr. Barnett is professor of government at Columbia University and one of the West's foremost authorities on China. After World War II, he covered China's civil war for the Chicago Daily News Service, and later held positions with the State Department, National Planning Association, and the Ford Foundation before going to Columbia in 1961. A 1942 graduate of Yale, summa cum laude, he holds a master's degree from that institution. The author of four books, Mr. Barnett testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in 1966 and urged the United States government "to alter its position toward Communist China and adopt a policy of containment but not isolation."

The third and final lecture will be held on March 12 at 8 p.m. in the Parents and Friends Lounge. Guest speaker will be Dr. William W. Lockwood speaking on "Japan's Resurgence as a World Power."

Dr. Lockwood, professor of politics and international affairs in the Woodrow Wilson School, Princeton University, has been described as "one of the best informed Americans in the field of Far Eastern affairs." After a distinguished career with the Office of Strategic Services during World War II, he served the State Department as Assistant Chief, Division of Japanese and Korean Economic Affairs prior to joining Princeton in 1946. Primarily interested in the political-economic development of modern Asia, he has made four trips to the Far East since 1952. A Shanghai native, he is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of DePauw and holds a Ph.D. from Harvard. The lecture series has been developed by Hampden-Sydney's political science department. Some time ago it recognized the need of such a conference to focus attention on and seek a better understanding of the Far East and Southeast Asia. Realizing the importance the area plays and will continue to play in international politics, the Symposium will be open to all who are interested, including the general public. There is no registration or admission fee.

The Symposium is being underwritten by a $2,000 grant from the S&H Foundation sponsored by the Sperry and Hutchinson Company which the college won in competition with more than 420 schools. Since 1960 the Foundation has awarded 283 such grants as a part of the Sperry and Hutchinson Company's program of aid to education.

Banquet Held By Home Ec. Club

By LINDA FLOYD

On Tuesday, February 18, 1969, the scene in the Tea Room was the 13th annual banquet of the Home Economics Club. Wednesday, February 26, 1969, Kappa Omicron Phi, the Home Economics honorary held a panel discussion in the Home Economics building.

Dr. Etheridge, of the History Department, addressed the banquet gathering. Her topic was "Of Time and Fashion or is the Mini Skirt a Tribal Costume?" The down-to-earth speech vividly described fashions through the ages, including our very own mini skirt.

During the evening the Home Economics Club presented their sponsor, Miss Bernard, with a gold charm bracelet as a token of their appreciation for her work with the club.

This year, for the first time, college students majoring in home economics are allowed to have affiliate membership in the American Home Economics Association, a professional organization for those engaged in the field of home economics. In honor of this milestone and in honor of the new home economics building to be opened on the Longwood College campus in 1970, a plaque was presented to Mrs. Griffin, chairman of the Home Economics Department. The plaque is a replica of the American Economics symbol and will be displayed in the new building.

Members of Kappa Omicron Phi and their sponsors, Mrs. Griffin and Miss Bernard, were led in the group discussion by panel members, Terry Knight, Rachel Hall, and Bev Ryder. The discussion centered around "The Future of Home Economics and Its Role in Dealing with the Social Changes of Today."

'Gyre' Represented At Literary Festival Sylvia Wilkinson Speaks At Hollins C.

By MARY ALICE CARMODY

The Ninth Annual Literary Festival, sponsored by the Graphcon Literary Society and the Department of English at Hollins College, was held on March 8 at Hollins. Five students represented Longwood and the "Gyre" at the Festival.

The novelist Sylvia Wilkinson, who had been a University of North Carolina art major, received her M.A. in English from Hollins in 1963. She has taught at Asheville-Biltmore College and William and Mary and is presently on the staff at the University of North Carolina.

"Moss on the North Side," from from which Miss Wilkinson read excerpts, was first published by the Hollins College literary magazine.

Miss Wilkinson, in good humor, told the audience that when she was at Stanford, her professor told her that, "I needed a good course in freshman English." She was also told that, "I wrote like a thirteen-year-old illiterate Southern girl talked."

Reading excerpts from another of her novels, "A Killing Frost," she explained that she modeled the grandmother "after my own grandmother."

Miss Wilkinson, who deals with females in her fiction, described a technique she likes to use of taking her characters out of familiar settings and placing them in an entirely different situation.

A chapter in rough draft was also read by Miss Wilkinson. This unfinished book deals with a characterisation to the author, a woman in her late twenties who is about to have a child during World War II times.

A panel discussion on "The Literary Scene Today" was moderated by George P. Garrett, one of the editors of "The Hollins Critic." Mr. Garrett explained that the panel was to give the literature teacher and others, who are not aware of what is going on in the literary scene, a chance to find out.

The panel consisted of Perry Knowlton, Shannon Ravenel, Paxton Davis, and James B. Colbert.

Mr. Knowlton described the different agencies: the literary oriented agencies, the agencies oriented around talent, who subsidize the literary end, and the "flesh peddlers" who handle nothing but the talent.

Mr. Knowlton feels that the agency who wants to represent the writer for a long period of time is best, because, "Writers are artists. The tend to be individual."

"Income in Fitzgerald's day," Mr. Knowlton explained, "came from magazines." Books were a sideline like the movies, but now "the magazine market is dwindling fast . . . and the book market is taking over." This is "probably a result of the paperback."

Shannon Ravenel, a 1969 graduate of Hollins, is an editor for Houghton Mifflin in Boston and is also Sylvia Wilkinson's publisher.

Miss Ravenel explained what happens when a manuscript arrives at Houghton Mifflin, who receive more than 4,000 manuscripts a year and publish about a hundred. "Each manuscript is read by more than one reader." Also, the editors are on the lookout for new talent in magazines and journals. Miss Ravenel feels the best way for a newcomer to the field to start out is to be published in magazines.

Paxton Davis, Book Review Editor for "The Roanoke Times" and chairman of the Journalism Department at Washington and Lee University, is author of "One of the Dark Places" and "The Season of Heroes."

"It is chancy," is how Mr. Davis described the book review scene. "The amount of space available is small compared to the amount of books published."

There is also the difficulty of getting good reviews. There is the chance that the wrong reviewer will be picked for a book. In short, "Books are not really getting the attention they ought to get."

James B. Colbert, who was formerly on the faculty at the University of Georgia, is now editor of the "Georgia Review."

Mr. Colbert claims that some of the "best poetry is published in the world." He illustrated this statement that most of the "best poetry" "takes place in the white house with columns, the house is usually decorated, has a toilet that squeals, and has a lady upstairs looking at the clock and the house burns."

The other poem, "The Death of Pius XII," was read by A. D. Hope, a native Englishman and one of the leading poets. He is Literary Fellow in the Australian National University and the author of three volumes of poetry and a book of essays on poetry. At the present time he is a special consultant in Australian literature at the Library of Congress.

Mr. Hope read several poems, one, "Isabel," he explained, "is an expression of my permanent views of the country I live in."

"Return from the Freudian Islands," a poem written when he was a young man, was "a revolt against people who went to their analyst rather than using their own resources." Another poem of particular interest to the audience was the "Ode of the Death of Pius XII." It described the leaves hanging color in the fall, something very unusual to an Australian, for Australia has very few deciduous trees.

The last program for the day was the panel on Student Poetry composed

Mr. Willett Speaks At Education Forum

The Department of Education is planning, for the first time, an education forum. The first forum will be March 27 at 7:30 in Jeffers Auditorium.

The purpose of this Forum is to get practitioners, people who work in the field of education, to discuss the practical application of the material the Education Department is teaching. At the end of each Forum will be a question and answer period.

The first Forum speaker will be M. E. W. Chittum, Superintendent of the Chesapeake Schools. His topic will be "The Superintendent Views the Role of the Teacher." Along with this topic, Mr. Chittum will discuss the sojourn to the U.S.S.R. which he and a group of educators made last year. He will show slides comparing and contrasting the schools in the U.S.S.R. with those in the U. S.

The second Forum speaker will be Mr. H. I. Willett, Sr., Superintendent of the Richmond Schools, and also father of our own President Willett. This lecture will be April 24, at 7:30 in Jarman.

Mr. Willett will speak on "The Superintendent Views a Critical Problem: Employer-Employee Relations."

The first two forums will provide the audience with an idea of the problems of the suburban schools (Chesapeake) and city schools (Richmond). This information will be especially valuable for prospective teachers.

The last Forum for the semester will be on May 13, at 7:30 in Jeffers. At that time, Mr. C. L. Kent, Supervisor of Guidance and Testing of the State Department of Education in Richmond, will speak on "The State Supervisor Views the Testing Programs in the Public Schools."

'Oliver' In Richmond Bus For Students

Arrangements are being made by the English Department to provide bus transportation to Richmond March 21 for students to see "OLIVER!" at the theater in the Willow Lawn Shopping Center. Cost will be $2.75 and the money should be turned in to the English Department this week to Miss JoAnn Fritzsche. The bus will leave at 5:00 p.m. and arrive in time for students to have dinner before the show. English students will be given preference in the venture, but all students are welcome to attend, space permitting.

Dr. Seymour H. Levitt, chairman of the Division of Radiation Therapy at the Medical College of Virginia.

Radiation Therapist Shows Film, Speaks

Dr. Seymour H. Levitt, chairman of the Division of Radiation Therapy of the Medical College of Virginia, will speak in the ABC room of Langford at 8:00 p.m. on Monday, March 17. Dr. Levitt is sponsored by the Longwood French Club and a local Women's Club to raise money to pay for the new Clinac 6 Medical linear accelerator at M.C.V.

The Clinac 6 is used in the radiation of cancer, thus enabling the institution to continue its endeavors to improve the cure rate in cancer and to more adequately treat cancer patients from all over the state with the most modern methods of radiation therapy. The Clinac 6 provides a beam that is sharper so that the cancer can be treated with less damage to the normal surrounding area. It also provides a higher amount of radiation per minute; thus treatment time is shortened and patients can be treated more rapidly. It produces an electron beam which is useful in treating melanoma. For the treatment of approximately ten to fifteen percent of the cancer patients.

The Clinac 6 cost over $250,000 and students are being recruited all over Virginia to help pay for it.

Students who are interested in attending should contact the English Department for more information.

Will The Real Longwood Lady Please Stand Up !!

"Lady" as in Longwood "Lady" doesn't necessarily imply the same connotation that is used in Pride and Prejudice. However there are a few standards that it does include. Neatness in attire is a major attribute of a "Lady." Would one call a wornout sweat shirt and shredded sneakers neatness in attire? Another factor of ladylike behavior is good manners. Again the question arises. Do good manners include throwing ice and other food in the dining hall? Other facets of lady-like behavior which might be mentioned as food for thought are kindness in words and intentions, punctuality, and so forth.

We are almost all guilty of some of these errors, and now that we have a semi-educational system on campus, our appearance and manners are more noticeable. So let's make a standing ovation in answer to the question, "Will the real Longwood Lady please stand up?"

— V. C. M.

Calm Your Curfew Complaints

This past weekend, a large number of girls were out after the set curfew hour. Fortunately, many of the offenders were excused. However, several offenders have complained about our "system." Our head residents have the responsibility of locking the doors exactly at the curfew hour. They are performing this duty as a part of their job, not willingly shutting out any late-comers. They also must check the sign-out cards to find out who is or who is not in yet. Many times, girls who have been late, explain their plights to the head residents and await notice from house council. It is evident that on big weekends, these ladies have their hands full — and often must stay up a few hours later than usual.

But the students who suffered extreme curfew violations present another story. Some girls could have saved a few minutes on their time if the doors had been opened when they arrived. Several incidents wherein girls pounded on doors for a full five minutes before the nightie watch's arrival, could have been avoided.

Whichever side you support, try to consider all facets of the argument.

Letter To The Editor

Letter to the Editor:

On behalf of Hampden-Sydney College and Sigma Nu Fraternity, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Longwood College for the excellent participation at our first blood drive. The project was definitely a success, and could not have been so without your assistance as donors, typists, and hostesses. No reward is greater than the knowledge that you have unselfishly given something which is very precious — a little of yourself. I hope such a noble liaison as this can continue in the future. We are looking forward to the Bloodmobile visit at Longwood on April 25, and with the proper cooperation, I believe that this visit can exceed the last one; so let's plan on it, okay?

Thank you so much.

In retrospect,
Larry Campbell

English Dept. Announces Changes, Far Eastern Lit. Offered

Dr. Frank, chairman of the English Department, has announced some important changes in English course offerings.

Three new courses have been created. Since next year freshmen will only be required to take one three-hour course in composition, English 100 — Expository Writing and Research Techniques — will originate.

English 395 — Literature of the Far East — is being offered to complement the far eastern history study and to meet the growing need and demand on the part of the students to learn more about far eastern Asia. It is hoped that this will be of interest to non-majors as well as majors.

English 432 — Advanced Composition and Analysis of Literary Genres — will be required of all majors. It is designed to meet the demand for more individual attention and to offer to those who are going out teaching a senior level course in composition.

In describing the course, Dr. Frank said, "Five courses have been changed. English 560, 561 — Shakespeare — replaces English 360 and will include the comedies, tragedies, histories, and non-dramatic poetry.

English 510, 511 — Chaucer — has also been expanded to two semesters replacing English 411. It will emphasize the Canterbury Tales first semester and Troilus and Cressida second semester.

English 565, 566 — Victorian Literature — is a revision of English 365 and 465. It will give attention to the major poets and prose writers of the age.

English 300 — Traditional Grammar and Modern English Grammar — replaces English 405. English 510 — Introductory Linguistics — is taking the place of English 505 and 506. Either of these two courses, English 300 or 510, will satisfy the major's grammar requirements.

From Disneyland To Farmville, Banjo-Playing Prof Brings "Rifle," "Dixie," And Dr. McCrunch

For Wayne Meshejian, Physical Science instructor, it's a good life. It all started about six years ago when he was an undergraduate student at Samford University in Birmingham, Alabama.

A mild-mannered double-major in physics and mathematics, he built a television camera and somehow it got "installed" in the dressing room of the women's gymnasium. Nelson ratings were set back three years when it was found that among Samford men, the nonexistent Channel 2 soared to the number one viewing spot in less than a week.

Luckily, since that time, in fact, since coming to Longwood, things are looking up for Mr. Meshejian. When he walked into his Electronics 341 class in the fall, he was anxious to begin a campaign to build up the Physics Department at Longwood.

He then found out that there were only two students enrolled in the class, and that one of them, Annette Winch, a senior, was the second Physics major in the history of Longwood. Mr. Meshejian hopes to increase interest in a Physics major here.

Next year, he wants to start an introductory physics class, using calculus, to attract Math majors.

"We need more people taking physics. I guess the girls think it's dull — but it can be interesting. When a physicist makes practical jokes, it's something. We get into more mischief around here."

Sometimes, however, the mischief backfires.

Mr. Meshejian is an avid banjo player. Anyone who has heard strains of "Foggy Mountain Break-Down" and "Dixie" coming from his Stevens Hall office can attest to this.

About a week ago, he and his banjo were on second floor Stevens turning out the lights in a classroom at about 11:00 p.m. Across the way in Cox, some study-wearied girls mistook the banjo arm for a rifle and called the Nightie Watch to report a mysterious "rifeman" in Stevens Hall.

Seamstresses Model

By KATHY ATKINSON

The Home Economics Club will hold its annual fashion show Tuesday night, March 18, in the Gold Room of Lankford at 7:30 p.m.

Approximately fifty entries by members of the clothing construction classes and Home Ec. majors will be modeled. The fashions will range from shift to wedding gown, and the girls will model their own creations. There will be no competition or judging of the entries.

Sophomore Gwen Phillips is chairman of the event. The student body, faculty, and town of Farmville are all invited to attend. Refreshments will be served.

He has three banjos in his office, one four-string, one five-string, and one that he is refinishing for Dr. Marvin Scott.

He learned to play the instrument about five years ago when he met Nathan Vanderlip, a member of the original "Alexander's Rag Time Band."

He learned more about playing the banjo last year at VPI where he is a Solid State Physics candidate for the doctorate degree.

On weekends, he played with a group at Roanoke's "Village Inn." "It was a lot of fun — all the pizza and beer we wanted plus $20 each per night."

Several years ago, he spent the summer in California with relatives and worked at Disneyland's Frontier Land. He was a member of the minstrel band, wearing a red and white striped suit and a straw hat and playing his banjo. He also played the role of Davy Crockett, wandering around the park in buckskins and a raccoon hat to the tune of "Davy Crockett."

"I had an aunt who was formerly Walt Disney's private secretary and a cousin who was a Mouseketeer. I

Hooker, Gresham Receive Promotion

The English Department recently announced the promotion of Dr. Charlotte Hooker and Mr. Foster Gresham to the position of full professor.

Dr. Hooker came to Longwood from New Orleans. She received her BA and MA from Texas Women's University and her Ph.D. from Tulane University.

In her fourth year at Longwood, Dr. Hooker teaches British Romantic Poets, Comparative Literature, Children's Literature, and English Literature.

Mr. Gresham received his AB from Randolph-Macon College and his MA from the University of Virginia. He has done graduate work at Princeton University, the University of North Carolina, and the University of Virginia.

Mr. Gresham is in his fifteenth year at Longwood and served as acting chairman of the English Department for three years. At present he is supervising the student teachers in English and teaching Children's Literature, Reading Improvement, and Methods of Teaching English.

Aside from his teaching duties, Mr. Gresham is active in the Virginia Association of Teachers of English, an organization of over 2,500 members.

guess that's how I got interested in Disneyland!"

Dedicated Mouseketeer fans may recall his cousin, Sheryl Holderidge, the smiling, curly-haired blonde member of the group who later blossomed into a bikini-clad "Beach Party" movie star before vanishing from public life.

Mr. Meshejian recalls that before Walt Disney's death, all Disneyland employees had to be interviewed by Disney personally. "That was a wonderful experience. He made every employee feel important. He used to come out in the park and introduce us to all of the visiting VIP's."

Since coming to Longwood, Mr. Meshejian has also seen the value of acquainting students with VIP's. As a result, Dr. McCrunch, an "eminent physicist" from MIT has spoken several times in Mr. Meshejian's classes. McCrunch bears a striking resemblance to Mr. McCrimmon, a sociology professor at Longwood.

Born in Maryland and reared in Alabama, Mr. Meshejian graduated from Samford University, Birmingham, Alabama. He then came to Virginia to attend graduate school at VPI prior to joining Longwood's faculty this fall.

By Linda Shepherd

Wayne Meshejian, new faculty addition in physics from Sanford University, has stormed the L. C. girls with his "Foggy Mountain Break-Down." He teaches banjo lessons to individual pupils, and accompanies the Sing Out South group.

Fencing Team Attends Clinic; Electric Fencing Demonstrated

On Friday, March 7, the varsity fencing team and seven members of the beginning fencing classes left for Mary Washington College to participate in the fencing clinic held there. The clinic was conducted by Terry Terune and Madeline Miyamoto, both of whom are among the top ten women fencers in the nation.

Miss Terune demonstrated the basic techniques of fencing and various attacks. Several members of the Longwood team were given the chance to try electric foil fencing. All the fencers were then given a chance to practice what they had learned and to fence with girls from the other schools.

After the clinic, the fencing team members had dinner at Mary Washington and stayed overnight at a nearby motel. The next morning the Virginia Fencing Tournament for Women took place. The team members who participated from Longwood were Patti Coogan, Nancy Harris, Penny Eberly, Melinda Whitman, Marjorie Fox, Aleta Sardam, Phyllis Colombo, Mary Baldwin, Betsy Smith, Ellen Cahill, Chris Brighter and Sandy Goodman.

Miss Bush, the team coach, participated in the open competition in which any woman fencer interested in competing could enter. The team fenced well and felt they profited by the experience and competition.

Mary Washington Lancers placed first in all divisions in last weekend's fencing clinic.

Bad Weather Curtails Practice LC Tennis Team Tryouts Begin

Varsity tennis tryouts got into full swing last week as Mrs. Harris, the team coach, met with the girls trying out for the team. The girls practice on Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays from three to four and when the weather is bad they practice in French gym. On Tuesdays and Thursdays they practice from two to four and if the weather is bad there is no practice.

On March 22 and 23 all students trying out for the varsity team will participate in a round-robin tournament and the team will be selected by March 29. A list of girls making the team will be posted on the AA board.

In April, the team will practice from 4:30 to 5:30 five days a week. Also in April four students from the varsity team will be selected to represent Longwood College May 1, 2, and 3 at the Middle Atlantic Collegiate Women's Tennis Championships at Mary Baldwin College.

Varsity Golf Begins Practice Thursday, Plans For Matches

If you enjoy golf and shoot from 80 to 140 for 18 holes come out for varsity golf. The first practice will be Thursday night at 7:30 in Iler gym.

Although the schedule has not been completed yet, Dr. O'Neill, the varsity coach, hopes to schedule matches with Madison, William and Mary, Lynchburg College, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Hollins and Mary Baldwin.

Dr. O'Neill and Dr. Smith will coach the varsity golf team this year and they are looking forward to an exciting and successful season. All girls are urged to come out for the team. "Last year the team was undefeated in six matches," said Dr. O'Neill, "and we hope to do as well this season."

practice," Mrs. Harris said, "and I'm looking forward to the best season ever." She also added that if there were still some girls who wanted to come out for the team it is not too late and they are welcome.

Gymnastics Team Defeats Stratford In First Meet

By JUDIGUIDICE

Saturday, Longwood had its first gymnastic meet with Stratford College. The girls in the gymnastics club have been practicing since the beginning of the year for this debut of their talent, and they made quite a showing, winning over Stratford by a score of 56.4 to 19.4. Miss Caughey, Stratford's coach, made mention of the fact that this was their first meet also, and they only regret that they did not have as many girls on the team as they would have liked to have. This greatly hindered their performance, for whereas there are supposed to be three girls participating in each of the events, Stratford only had one or two girls to perform.

Judging the meet were girls from Longwood and Stratford. The routines are judged on a basis of five points for difficulty and five points for execution. The first event was tumbling. Each girl did a routine of rolls and springs down the mats, and returned with another routine. Entering for Longwood was Debbie Morris, who made a score of 3.1; Pam Harrison, who scored 4.2; and Debbie Ellenbrand, who performed beautifully and scored the highest with a 5.1. Performing for Stratford were Mary Pepper, who did a series of back handsprings and front walkovers and limbers scoring 4.6; and Wicky Pritchett who scored a 3.3.

The next event was floor exercise, which is a routine of ballet movements and tumbling stunts performed on the floor with musical accompaniment. Longwood showed this to be their strongest area with Pat Halstead scoring a 5.2, Suzanne Morgan scoring 4.3, and Karen Lewis giving a tremendous showing of 5.5. Mary Pepper and Wicky Pritchett entered the event for Stratford scoring 4.6 and 2.6 respectively.

The side horse vaulting was the next event. Stratford had one entry, Peggy Sowers, who did a straddle vault and scored 2.0. Longwood entered Kathy Barclay who did a headspring and scored a 4.5; and Martha Hicks, with her funny faces and all, did a thief vault scoring 4.6.

The next event was the balance beam. Pat Halstead scored a 3.0, Susie Marsh scored a 2.4, and Suzanne Morgan scored a 4.1. The balance beam routines were a little scary to the audience, especially when Pat and Susie each had one fall. But little did the audience know that these girls are quite used to falls. Stratford's entry, Mary Pepper, ended her routine with a backwards dismount and a 1.9 score.

The last event was the uneven parallel bars, another eerie event for the audience. Even Miss Huffman's stomach turned every time one of the girls let go of the bars! Stratford had one girl performing who had a few falls in her routine and scored a .4. Debbie Morris performed for Longwood and came out with a 1.9. Debbie Ellenbrand was a little nervous and managed to "ad lib" two unwanted falls in her routine, although it was a well planned routine as well as difficult. Her score was also a 1.9. Martha Hicks had a great performance, faltering only after dismount, and scoring a 3.3.

All in all, the girls performed quite well and Miss Fath was very pleased. With this success, we hope to be able to schedule more gymnastic meets and give the girls a greater opportunity to display their talent and hard work.

The Gymnastic Club is still active; they are sending girls to judge the regionals this weekend. Kathy Barclay and Suzanne Morgan are going to Newport News; Susie Marsh, Nancy Gorkes, Debbie Morris, Jo Motley, Debbie Ellenbrand, Nedra Distel, Maxine Stone and Pam Harrison are judging in Alexandria; and Martha Hicks is going to Richmond to judge that area regionals.

Bob Stauffer and E. T. Noone watch as Dr. Barton blocks Mr. Webb's attempt to score. Longwood's faculty will play the varsity squad in annual student-faculty game.

LC Cagers Lose To Westhampton, W&M End Season With 5-5

Thursday, March 6, Longwood's varsity basketball team faced the Westhampton team and got its second loss after a five-game winning streak with a score of 53-32. The game had been postponed from March 1 because of snow. The high scorer on the Longwood team was Lynne Coleman with 14 points. The second team pulled through, beating Westhampton with a score of 25-23.

The Longwood ladies met with their fifth loss of the season Saturday, March 8, at William and Mary by a score of 38-31. Their final record was five wins and five losses.

In the first minute William and Mary pulled away to a 7-2 lead. The margin was small but it seemed that Longwood's baskets were few and far between. The blue and whites could not pick up the necessary points to close the gap, and William and Mary stayed ahead with margins of 5 to 7 points.

Longwood's second team showed their ability to work together as they pulled away to a 26-8 halftime lead and a final victory of 40-25. Margaret Pulley, a freshman, was high with 24 points. Their victory was a result of their excellent teamwork. Both first and second teams ended with winning seasons.

All State Lacrosse Clinic To Be Here, Everyone Invited

Longwood College will sponsor an All-State Lacrosse Clinic Saturday, March 15. Twenty-five colleges have been invited to attend and several All-American lacrosse players will do the coaching.

The day will begin with registration at 9:30 and at 10:30 sessions will be conducted for beginner, intermediate, and advanced players. After a break for lunch, coached games will begin on Barlow and Iler fields. After all games are completed refreshments will be served in the ABC rooms in Lankford.

Miss Huffman, varsity lacrosse coach, urges any student interested in lacrosse to attend and participate regardless of "know how." Varsity practices will begin soon and the experience gained at the clinic can be put to good use on the varsity lacrosse team.

Last year's Varsity Lacrosse team members will be in charge of refreshments, equipment, and the various groups. So, check the list, girls!!!

Spanish Club Welcomes New Exchange Students

The Spanish Club on Wednesday, March 5, welcomed the new exchange students, Mirian Aluati of Santiago, Cuba, and Denise Oudette of Paris, France. Mirian, whose family now lives in New Jersey, is a freshman and is taking English, Art, Music and Modern Dance, and assists in the Spanish lab. Denise is here at Longwood taking Philosophy of Education and Psychology, and also assists in the French Dept. Also at this meeting a special program was presented by Ninette Corredera from Salamanca, Spain. Ninette lives in Charlottesville and is touring the United States.

Ninette's description of Spain, given entirely in Spanish, was accented by pictures she had painted of her town and of flamenco dancers and bullfighters. She explained that to a Spaniard the bullfight is an expression of art and of the courage of a man whose intelligence is pitted against the strength of the beast. Ninette went on to compare the educational systems of Spain and the United States, noting several differences. In Spain, she said, there is less opportunity for a woman to pursue a career and thus the classes of a Spanish university are made up almost entirely of men. Actually only twelve out of fifty women in her class at the University finished their career. Another difference she noticed is that in Spain the students are not encouraged to talk with the professor during class, and questions may be asked only after the class is over. Also, Ninette noted, students in Spain study much less than we do. Classes usually are scheduled between 9:00 and 12:00 in the morning, after which the students are free to spend the rest of the day as they like. Their activities include drinking coffee and wine with friends, taking walks, and dancing, and no more than two or three hours a day are spent studying. When examinations are given at the end of the courses, the city is deserted and the dancing stops until it is resumed again by the few lucky or very smart ones who passed them.

Sen. Spong Sponsors Youth Poll, 30 Va. Colleges Represented

By LISE WORTHINGTON

Senator William B. Spong, Jr., has said that Virginia has one of the youngest populations in the nation, and he has seen the increasing political awareness and activity of students today. Senator Spong wasn't just trying to pacify the younger generation, with idle words, for earlier this year, Virginia college students were given the opportunity to make their views known on current issues from Vietnam to campus demonstrations through a survey conducted by the senator and two faculty members, Dr. Michael Messey, and Miss Carolyn Pratt from the University of Virginia.

The poll was conducted at 30 colleges and universities throughout the state of Virginia. Those represented were listed under distinct headings of Women's Colleges, including Sweet Briar and Longwood, Negro Colleges, including Hampton Institute, and Virginia State College, Small Men's and Small Coed Colleges, including Washington and Lee University, and Hampden-Sydney College, and Large Coed Colleges, including William and Mary and Madison College. In addition to those represented in these categories, four schools were tabulated separately because of their size. The actual poll was handled in the same way that professional polling throughout the nation is. Approximately 650 students were selected at random, through a computer program designed specifically for professional style polls, and interviewed by fellow students who used a questionnaire supplied by the senator.

Julia Randall is a member of the Hollins English Department and also author of several books of poetry, including "The Puritan Carpenter."

Also a member of the Hollins English Department is R. H. W. Dillard, and the author of a book of poems, "The Day I Stopped Dreaming About Barbara Steele." He is co-editor with Louis D. Rubin of "The Experiences of America," a book of readings.

The questions that were asked covered a broad range of topics including Vietnam, government control of cigarettes, alcohol and drugs; the future of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the extent of United States commitment in potential trouble spots around the world; the draft; the proposed lowering of the voting age to 18, and student protest and demonstrations.

The percentage indicates that China is the "troublemaker" in Asia, but there seems to be great hesitation to cast the U. S. in the role of the "World Policeman," and to see her squander her money overseas. It is felt that if domestic programs have to be cut back in order to finance the war, those cut would be foreign aid, the space program, and the highway program. The education and the poverty program would be the last to be cut.

In the area of Cigarettes, Alcohol, and Drugs, it is found that there is a greater tolerance for the legalization of marijuana than for either heroin and L.S.D. There is a marked preference for the status quo with respect to regulation of cigarette advertising and sales.

On the questions of Foreign Involvements, the fear of China and a growing awareness of the Middle East were major concerns, and military intervention seemed strongly supported only in the Western hemisphere — Latin America, Canada, and Western Europe.

Other areas of interest in the survey included the response to the draft question. The question demonstrated a lack of popularity for lottery plans with only moderate support for the volunteer army. Other questions included the voting age, and the student demonstration problems. According to Virginia students, the initial voting age should be lowered, and a great majority of students feel that demonstrators on the Virginia campuses do have something important to say.

In summarizing the success and results of the poll, it should be remembered, that the primary goal was to get an accurate representation of the entire college student population of the state.

Brumfield Captures Mr. Longwood Title

By LISE WORTHINGTON

Sophomore week end was officially initiated with a bang, Friday night, March 14, 1969, when Lankford Building's Gold Room was invaded by hordes of girls, loaded with pillows, blankets, rattans, noise makers and plenty of spirit. There they camped, using all the building's facilities which were left open until two. Girls in frilly pajamas, sweat shirts, and every mode of dress were found bowling, eating, singing, telling savory jokes and laughing in every part of the building. Finally when exhaustion set in, they slept, and all was quiet at the fort. The next morning, the conquerors were turned out, bleary-eyed, to wander sleepily toward their dorms, in order to prepare that afternoon for the Powder Puff Football Game with the Hampden-Sydney Blockers.

The Rose Bowl began Saturday afternoon, when the Longwood girls, mysteriously revived both in spirit and in troop action, arrived on the Wheeler Mall prepared for the ensuing battle. The war rules were "Touch," no handling, no pushing, no pulling . . . All was to be fair play, no pulling . . . All the Hampden-Sydney Blockers cooperated they were given a sock to wear on the hand which prevented anything but "Touch," and made handling of the ball harder. The Longwood Linemen were instructed to have socks and handkerchiefs in their back pockets, so the boys could neatly pull the name tag out, thus proving that a tackle had taken place. Further ruling, by the referees, Mr. Crowl and Mr. Schoelnick, said that the boys were not permitted to run, they had to settle for the slow pace, the walk. The Linemen on the other hand, raced up and down, laughing and committing fouls at every play. There were, however, fouls called on the Hampden-Sydney Blockers. One was a young man got unduly carried away, and attempted to carry a girl off on his shoulders. Needless to say, he was promptly fouled for holding.

Even though the Longwood troops were in fighting spirit, they suffered a defeat. Amid screams of joy and anguish, they bailed the Blockers until they dropped from exhaustion, and were helpfully supported away from the scene by consoling Blockers. The War Bureau reported the final score as 18-12.

Those persevering Sophomores who have survived the Pajama Party and the football game, were again on hand Saturday night for the crowning event of the week end, the 1971 Mr. Longwood Pageant.

The contestants for this coveted title were Mr. George Bristol, Dr. George Buteau, Dr. James Helms, Dr. Robert Lankford, Mr. Jimmy Paul, Dr. Robert Brumfield, Mr. Fred Herndon, Mr. Wayne Meshjian, and Mr. Earl Rubley. Each contestant was to be judged in three main areas, their appearance in sloppy attire, their individual talent, and finally, appeal in dress clothes. The five finalists were then asked an on-the-spot question which required individuality of expression and thought.

Thus, the Pageant started with the contestant slumming and his escort in formal dress. The audience was entertained between this showing and the talent spurt with a commercial advertising the "Tony Body." Then, the long-lost faculty talent was made public.

Mr. Bristol as Sydney, and Dr. Helms as Joanie were interviewed by Mr. Paul on the topic of Coed Dorm Rules. This witty conversation was highlighted by such cracks as, when asked the question what had been happening for the last nine months, the answer was "Well, she's filling out her pink slips lately." And when concern was expressed over the possible lack of business at the Hampden-Sydney Orchard, the worriers' fears were quickly expelled when he was told in no uncertain terms that its use would still be very fruitful. Mr. Robert Lankford showed up on stage riding a bike in a Boo Boo gorilla suit. He refused to learn the animal tricks and instead played the enraged gorilla trick and carried his trainer away to eat her.

Mr. Earl Rubley dressed in light green pants, a fluffy silky shirt, and with a flashy scarf around the neck, made his debut in the Jarman auditorium as the brother of James Brown. With his soul back-up band and three Longwood go-go dancers, he belted out the favorite, "Papa's got a brand new bag."

Mr. Herndon paraded about onstage in a ravishing mini-dress with a very low cut back, in a voice throbbing with sensuality and promised fun, he sang, "Hello, Hello, I Like Your Smile, Would You Like Some of My Tangerines?"

Mr. Meshjian provided the banjo music and hinted to the audience that Dr. Buteau was going to make his appearance as a cowboy. However, Dr. Buteau for the longest time made no appearance. Finally, to the tune, "I Got No Use for Women," Dr. Buteau chickened out in dark tights and laid a yellow egg on the stage floor. Dr. Brumfield in a really moving appearance, arrived on stage in an engineer suit and proceeded to sing "The Wreck of the Old 97."

When all the contestants had completed their talent acts, the five finalists were picked. They were Mr. Rubley, Mr. Bristol, Mr. Herndon, Dr. Brumfield, and Dr. Helms.

To these five the judges, who were Mrs. Presas, Donna Gleason, Jane Tibbs, and Suzanne Turner, asked the deciding questions. Dr. Brumfield's question was, "A lot of students don't see any reason for the required science courses, what can you give as a reason for having the requirement?" His answer, which clinched the Mr. Longwood Pageant for him, was, "Well, it seems that a lot of girls don't know the facts of life."

Then, in a ruby red robe and to the strains of "Here, He Comes, Mr. Longwood," Dr. Brumfield was presented an empty bottle of champagne, and the title of Mr. Longwood 1969.

Sophomore spirit was still running high on Sunday afternoon when all parents and friends were invited to lunch. All the sophomores were given early admission to Sunday dinner, and they all sat in the same area, providing an atmosphere of a Sophomore banquet.

Thus ends Sophomore week end for another year. Much fun and frolicking went on, and those Freshmen of this year are looking forward to their turn next year.

Founder's Day Activities Planned For March 21-22

By MARY ALICE CARMODY
Friday, March 21 is the official beginning of Founder's Day activities. Registration for alumnae, aided by the Granddaughter's Club serving as hostesses, will be from 3 to 9 p.m. in the Rotunda. Following dinner in the dining hall, the alumnae will be able to attend the play "Caucasian Chalk Circle" in Jarman at 7:30 or view the Elliott Twery art exhibit in the Library Exhibit Room. At 9:30 the Alumnae House will hold open house.

On Saturday, from 9 until 10:15 a.m., coffee will be served in the Alumnae House by the Farmville Alumnae. At 10:30 the dedicatory ceremonies will be held in Jarman.

Mr. Hesselink will give the professional and recessional at the dedicatory ceremony, and the madrigal singers will sing. Mr. George Wesley Jones, pastor of the Farmville Methodist Church, will give the invocation and benediction. Greetings will be brought by Candy Jamison and Mrs. Jean Ridenour Appich, president of the Association of Alumnae. President Willett will give the main address.

Miss Jeane Bentley, an alumna, and supervisor of Health and Physical Education of the Roanoke City Schools, will give the dedicatory remarks for Barlow Field and Tennis Courts. The field and courts were named for Miss Mary Belle Barlow, who was head of the Physical Education department at Longwood from 1919 until her retirement in 1949. In 1967, Miss Barlow died at her home in Beverly, West Virginia. Her niece, Miss Elizabeth Barlow, will be present at the ceremonies.

Speaking for French Building will be Mrs. Lewis C. Spicer, Jr. (Lillian Rossen) from the class of '59. French Building is named for Raymond Holliday French, who taught chemistry in the Natural Science Department from 1929 to 1964. Affectionately known by the students as "Charlie Hop," Mr. French now lives in Orlando, Florida, and will be here for the dedication.

Giving the dedicatory remarks for Jeffers Auditorium will be Mrs. Clyde M. Rawls (Grace Virginia Woodhouse), an alumna, Dr. Jeffers, for whom the auditorium was named, who was originally from Canada, served as professor, and was at one time, head of the Natural Science Department. He has been honored by the Academy of Science with Junior Academy and Ivey F. Lewis Distinguished Service Awards. Last year Dr. Jeffers retired, and he and his wife reside in Farmville.

Dr. Elizabeth Burger Jackson, professor of physical sciences, will give the dedicatory remarks for the McCorkle Wing of Stevens. McCorkle Wing is named for Mr. Thomas Alexander McCorkle, who was professor of chemistry and physics from 1922 until 1960 and served as Chairman of the Department of Chemistry and Physics from 1922 until 1958. Mr. McCorkle resides in Farmville.

A business meeting for alumnae will be held at 1:30 p.m. in the year that the business meeting and luncheon have been separate. The Alumnae Victory Luncheon will begin at 1:00 in the dining hall. The Jarman Singers will sing at this time.

From 2:00 until 3:00 there will be guided tours of the newly dedicated facilities, starting at French Building.

A symposium, "Contemporary Trends - Art, Drama, Literature, Music" will be conducted from 3:00 until 4:00 in the A-B-C rooms of Lankford. Moderator will be George Elliott from the Education Department. The four faculty members who will speak and their topics are: Art, Mrs. Janine Lemen; Drama, Dr. Patton Lockwood; Literature, Dean Blackwell; and Music, Mr. Robert Blasch.

From 4:00 to 5:00 there will be a reception in the Gold Room, and at 7:30, alumnae who missed the play will have another opportunity to see "Caucasian Chalk Circle." At 9:30 Founder's Day activities will close with open house in the Alumnae House.

Although all alumnae and students are invited to Founder's Day activities, the regular classes will be those scheduled in 1 and 2.

The Founder's Day program is headed by Mrs. Josephine Magnifico, from the Department of Mathematics. Members of the Founder's Day committee are Miss Virginia Bedford, Dr. Janet Binper, Miss Barbara Bishop, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, and Mr. Edgar Thomas. President Willett serves as the official host.

The Sophomore football team obligingly builds a Pyramid for the Rotunda Photographer before the game Saturday afternoon.

Proper Channels, Please

Last Monday, a proposal for a new method of housing was submitted by the housing committee. They had worked diligently in this proposal and had various outside pressures put on them, such as the increased number of freshmen, state regulations, and so forth. Their proposal incorporated many abrupt changes from the traditional procedure of handling this operation, therefore a large number of students were alarmed at the provisions.

Ultimately proper measures were taken to suggest amendments for the proposal. I believe it is certainly to the advantage of the student body to take active part in the regulations of the school through proper channels.

Increased Freedoms Reveal Responsibility

Last Wednesday's Presidential Press Conference stood out as another example of Longwood's increasing efforts to lessen the communication gap. Other Virginia colleges demonstrate protest, and complain for student freedom. Longwood's administration has solved this problem. Dr. Willett addresses the student body and then is bombarded with questions concerning all phases of campus activity.

We now have a book store advisory committee of students who will offer suggestions concerning improving the type of materials and novelties on sale. Our new dorm is scheduled to be completed by opening day in September, and Longwood boasts the first state-supported institution with a completely air-conditioned system. The completion of the two new dorms is expected to eliminate the basic need we now have for floater.

Future plans include increased parking lot areas and a possibility of students other than seniors having cars on campus. An addition to the dining hall is to be completed in 1971 with continued family-style servings.

Students questioned our current home management training system for home economics majors. The classes of '64 and '68 have recently had plans for a brick Longwood marker at the corner of High and El Streets approved by the state art committee.

In addition to the above changes, Dr. Willett announced that Legislative Board is reviewing the handbook and a number of liberalizations resulted.

All for continued student freedom — stand up for responsibility!

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor,

My original purpose was to refute the proposal as stated by the Housing Committee. I think the student body accomplished this Monday night. Therefore this letter is addressed to those students who have the logic to realize what is happening.

What you are fighting is more than just a housing plan. The housing plan is only a beginning. With mixed dorms, Chi's significance will be diminished (Chi meaning the ideals of Longwood more so than the organization itself), and class unity will be stifled. Other changes will follow; other traditions will be lost; and among the student body, bitterness will begin. Longwood will become another school of "so what" students. So what about tradition; so what about class spirit; so what about Chi; and, eventually, so what about Longwood.

Each freshman class is like a child. One does not take a child and throw him into society with no code by which to live. One sets before a child an example and allows him to take that which he chooses to be of value and permits him to grow with these values. Give them the example they need. Teach them the excitement of being a Blue 'n' White and a Green 'n' White or Red 'n' White; challenge them to build Longwood's character; share with them the wonder of singing about Joan of Arc. But split a class before it even begins, and how can it choose to be united; do not allow a class to grow together in its first year; how can it formulate a basic premise; do not allow a class to know itself, and how can it come to a unique conclusion? I think the answer is obvious; it cannot. Kill class unity, and the death of Longwood's unity is begun.

I believe this resolution must be defeated. It should, however, be attacked with logical thinking. The refutation cannot afford to have the many contradictions the original proposal has.

Sincerely,
Susan Stutz

Students Increase In Numbers

Need For Teachers Increases

As the number of students on campus increases, so does the need for teachers. To meet this need the college administration has added new positions in several of the departments.

The Education department will have three new teachers added to its staff. The first of these is Mr. Edward V. Daubner, Mr. Daubner received his Bachelors degree from Rutgers University. He has had nineteen years of college teaching experience and has published a number of articles in his field. Mr. Daubner will teach various courses in the Education department next year, and he will also help in the supervision of practice teachers.

Another addition to the Education department will be Dr. Robert D. Gibbons, E.D.D. Dr. Gibbons received both his Bachelors and Masters degrees from William and Mary and was awarded his Doctorate from the University of Virginia. He is presently serving as principal of an elementary school in Fairfax county and while at Longwood, he will teach in the elementary program.

Also joining the Education staff will be Dr. Edith Shell. Dr. Shell was awarded her B.S. from Towson State College; her M.A. from Loyola College in Baltimore, Maryland, and she received her Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University.

The Foreign Language Department will have two additions when the '69-'70 session begins.

Also joining the Foreign Language department is Mrs. Sam Narinsky. Mrs. Narinsky was awarded her B.A. from Florida State University, and received her M.A. from the University of Illinois. She has been awarded a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship and she expects to receive her Ph.D. in June from Florida State University.

Another department that will see new faces in the Fall is the History Department. Mr. Bruce Glascock who is currently completing requirements for this doctorate at Louisiana State University will be offering courses in Latin American history. Mr. Glascock received his Bachelors degree from Memphis State University and his M.A. degree from Louisiana State University.

Mr. Sam Narinsky, whose wife will be teaching in the Foreign Language department, will be adding to the staff of the department of Mathematics. Mr. Narinsky was awarded both his Bachelors and his M.A. degrees from the University of Illinois, and he is currently working for his Ph.D. at Florida State University.

Mr. Homer Springer, who is currently teaching high school in Annapolis, Maryland, will be joining the Art department. He received his Bachelors degree from Virginia Commonwealth University and was awarded his Master's degree from Towson State College. Mr. Springer will specialize in teaching art education.

An addition will also be made to the Department of Natural Sciences. Dr. Robert Bissell, who is currently teaching chemistry at Hampden-Sydney College will join Longwood's staff next fall. Dr. Bissell received his M.A. from Columbia University in New York and was awarded his Ph.D. from Duke University. Not only will Dr. Bissell teach chemistry, but he will also help to find additional ways of coordinating courses with Hampden-Sydney.

Dr. Blackwell stated that the administration is still in the process of filling other vacancies.

Students Help Slow Learners In Nearby Elementary School

By PAT LUCAS

Do you have a couple of hours when you just sit around the dorm pretending to do your assignments? Are you tired of just going to classes and listening to lectures? Do you want something more — something in which you will be helping both others and yourself?

If your responses to these questions are yes, the Teacher's Aid Program may be for you. Girls participating in this program are members of the sophomore, junior, or senior class. A specific grade average is not required. Perhaps the only requirement is a willingness to devote two hours a week to this cause. It is to be emphasized that the program needs dependable, responsible people who will continue with the activities and not loose interest after several weeks.

At present, there are seventeen girls working as aids at the Mary E. Branch Elementary School. The school is located about four blocks from Longwood on Ely Street. State cars are available for transportation. The girls participating are Stephanie Maio, Chairman; Linda Klafen, Priscilla Stefanek, Pat Vaughn, Paula Tunstall, Sue Slate, Joyce Dowdy, Linda Owens, Judy Old, Sharon French, Ellen Wood, Janet Platt, Mary Jane Brinsden, Nancy Williams, Jean Phillips, Janet Clark, and Jeannie Robbins. Mr. Pyle is faculty advisor. He recalls that the program was organized on a trial basis second semester last year by a group of interested students. Since it was a success, it has been expanded, offering valuable experience for student teaching preparation and as an opportunity to serve the community.

The participants are quite enthusiastic about this experience and do not regret giving up the two hours a week.

As one of the aids put it, "Everyone has two free hours." Quite a few girls said they signed up for the program because they wanted something constructive to do with their extra time. Others agreed upon experience as their primary reason.

All agree that the program is definitely helping the children. Sue Slate sees it as a connection with a world they really don't know anything about." Sharon French said "the individualized help that the aids can give the children is very beneficial because there are so many slow learners." Ellen Wood spends most of her time at the school teaching two retarded second graders. She said one is just learning to write while the other has been in school three years and does not know his alphabet yet.

Pat Vaughan commented, "The teacher has so much to do that even if we can just grade papers, she will have more time to spend with the students." Concerning the benefit she is gaining from the experience, Ellen Wood feels "It is putting me in the position to answer questions and explain on their level. It is giving me more than any education course could to prepare me for student teaching." Jeannie Robbins said, "It's partly just being with the children. You know there is such a big need for the program that it really makes you feel good to know you're helping." Sue Slate considers it "fulfilling and important to obtaining a basic understanding of children."

Mr. McLendon, Principal of the Mary E. Branch Elementary School, said of the program, "The girls are really doing a wonderful job and are helping more than they realize."

The Parables

Of Peanuts

Robert L. Short has written another book about the famous "Peanuts" characters and the modern day parables. Short's first book, "The Gospel According to Peanuts" dealt with how Charles Brown, Snoopy, and the rest of the Peanuts gang portray the predicament of man.

Dr. Herbert Blackwell, Dean of Longwood College, will review "The Parables of Peanuts" on Wednesday evening, March 19, at 6:45 p.m. at the Methodist Student Center.

Dr. Willett answers questions from members of the student body in the Presidential Press Conference in the Gold Room.

Support Your Gyre Deadline Extended For All Contributions

"My work isn't good enough." "What is the Gyre?" Such are the responses from students when there is discussion of Longwood's literary magazine. Why this apathetic feeling? There really doesn't seem to be any plausible reason for this failure to communicate with the students. Signs are continually put up urging support. The Gyre Box is always on view during the submitting weeks, and still many of the students refuse to support the magazine. It has come to the point where the staff is being forced to ask individuals for literary material. This is wrong, creativity is being suppressed and hidden by individuals who are afraid of being made fun of. What have you got to lose by submitting? Everyone on the literary magazine staff would welcome all new material. Please submit. It has been announced by the editor that the deadline for the next magazine will be extended another week, until March 21. Create, and help support your literary magazine. It certainly can't be a good publication unless the student body is backing it.

Art contributions can be submitted to Susan Davenport in 209 South Cunningham and literary works to Joan Harrup in 108 Cox, or either may be placed in the Gyre Box in the Old Smoker.

Dr. Cecil Sherman Will Speak To BSU All Students Invited

Dr. Cecil Sherman, pastor of First Baptist Church, Asheville, N. C., will speak on "Christianity—A Way of Life" Friday evening at 7 o'clock in the Baptist Student Union Center. Dr. Sherman was one of the primary speakers at the state BSU Convention this past October, which is held annually at Eagle Eyrie near Lynchburg.

Dr. Sherman is a graduate of Baylor University where he received theological training and has also studied at Southwestern Baptist Seminary, Fort Worth, Texas.

Dr. Sherman is meeting the challenges of this generation through his open-minded approach to the problems within the church.

All Longwood students are invited to hear the speaker and an invitation has been issued to all Lynchburg schools.

Guest Organist, Mr. Hesselink Performs For Faculty Recital

The Longwood College Department of Music, in conjunction with the Farmville Presbyterian Church presented Mr. Paul S. Hesselink, organist, in a Faculty Recital on Sunday, March 16, 1969, at 8:00 p.m. in the Farmville Presbyterian Church.

The selections which Mr. Hesselink rendered included "Prelude and Fugue in D Minor" by Lubeck, "Two Organ Chorales" and "Prelude and Fugue in E Minor, BWV 548" by Bach, and "Introduction and Passacaglia" by Max Reger. The first half of the program included works by German composers, whereas the second half represented music from several countries.

The recital was held in the Farmville Presbyterian Church since they have recently obtained a new organ from Hamburg, Germany. This particular organ, made by Rudolf von Beck-erath, is considered to be a superior instrument and is especially rare in the U. S. Although there are only ten distributed across the entire country, Virginia has two of these organs, the one in Farmville and one at the University of Richmond.

Mr. Hesselink received his A.B. degree from Hope College in Holland, Michigan. He did graduate work at the University of Michigan under a Woodrow Wilson Grant and he did additional years of graduate study at Ohio State University under an assistantship where he earned his M.A.

Faculty Wins In Annual Game Over $55 Given To Heart Fund

In the annual Faculty-Varsity basketball game last Wednesday the faculty defeated the Longwood team 43-38. The game held as a benefit for the heart fund raised over $55.

Leading the faculty in scoring was Mr. Dalton with the game high of 21 points. Also scoring for the faculty were Mr. Webb with 8 points and Dr. Willett with 5 points. Other members of the faculty who played were Mr. Stauffer, Mr. Bristol, Mr. None, Dr.

Banton, Mr. Wu, Mr. Herndon, Mr. Scholnick, and Dr. Helms.

Freda Lunsford led the Longwood varsity with 14 points while Betty King scored 10 for the Blue and Whites and Judy Turner had 5 points. The game was close and exciting all the way as the score was 23-18 at halftime with the varsity leading. But the faculty came roaring back in the second half to win the game. Both teams put on quite a show for the crowd.

Number Of LC Students On AP Increases; Concern Expressed

What is academic probation? According to the Longwood Student Handbook for 1968-69, academic probation is "a state of warning and indicates that the student's academic work is not satisfactory."

Who is put on academic probation? As of this past semester, there are one-hundred thirty-four Longwood students who now know the answer to this question. The list is composed of students who do not maintain the set quality point average for their respective class. A Freshman must achieve a quality point average at the end of their first semester of 1.5; at the end of the second semester, it must be a 1.6. Upperclassmen are expected to maintain a 2.0 at the end of every semester.

Why should you be concerned? The number of students on academic probation for the fall session of 1968-69 was one-hundred thirty-four — this time last year it was one-hundred eleven. When one compares the number of students on "academic prob" to the number of students enrolled at Longwood, the proportion is small, but there was an increase, and if it were to continue at the same rate for a few more years, the comparative figures would not be as small as they seem now.

What caused the increase? From a student's point of view, the answer would be: "the teacher is working us too hard." But that response cannot be accepted. When Dr. Blackwell was questioned as to what he thought the reason could be, he stated: "Perhaps, the students had more trouble adjusting to the five-day week than they expected; the extra time is not used as wisely as it could be."

If these are the reasons for the increase, what can we do about it? There are signs posted throughout the class buildings informing students of tutor programs that are available. These should be taken seriously. For those students not on academic prob, why not offer your services to someone who may be having trouble?

Academic excellence is being stressed on campus through participation in honors programs, but this is not the only way to excel. Why not prove academic ability by helping to reduce the number of students on academic probation?

Longwood Players To Perform March 20, 21, 22

"The Caucasian Chalk Circle" directed by Dr. Lockwood and Barbara Roukema will be presented Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights, March 20, 21, 22 in Jarman.

Susan Jordan, a sophomore English and drama major from Ashland, portrays Grusha. This is Susan's first major role in the Longwood productions. Jim Rhodes, a senior political science major from Lynchburg, is Azdak. Jim has been in "The Taming of the Shrew," "The Miser," "The Fantastiks," and "Beyond the Fringe."

"The Caucasian Chalk Circle" can be traced back to the "Kreidekreis" which was written by Klabund Neher and produced in Berlin by Otto Reinhardt in October 1925. Lulise Rainer, the film actress, who knew and admired Brecht's poetry and had played in "The Three Penny Opera" commissioned Brecht in Hollywood to write a play on the same Chinese theme. He took a story which he called "Der Augsburger Kreidekreis," added a contemporary prologue, shifted the scene to the Caucasus and grafted on to it the independently-evolved figure of the disreputable judge.

The plot and some of the language are Biblical; the "Song of Chaos" Egyptian, the technique of narration and comment Japanese; the construction cinematic; the conclusion didactic; the wedding scene a reflection of the Marx brothers' "A Night of the Opera;" the soldiers an apparent recollection of "Mann ist Mann;" the atmosphere a cross between Brueghel and the pseudo-Chinese; the framework a commonsense, nonpolitical issue debated in modern Georgia, U.S.S.R.

The Story Teller: It's a play with songs.

Delegate: Will it be one of the old legends?

The Story Teller: A very old one. It's called the "Circle of Chalk" and comes from the Chinese. But we'll do it, of course, in a changed version.

Delegate: How long will the story take, Arkadi? I've got to get back to Tiflis tonight.

The Story Teller: (casually) It's actually two stories. A few hours, Girl Tractorist: (confidentially) Couldn't you make it shorter?

The Story Teller: No.

Founder's Day Success For Class Of 1919

Dr. Scott discusses biology with Dr. Jeffers. The retired professor was honored with the dedication of Jeffers Auditorium, an addition to Stevens Science Building.

Dean Wilson and Dean Blackwell prepare for academic procession in Alumnae festivities.

Alumnae visited in dorms, Lankford Activities Building, Jarman, and the Alumnae House in Saturday's open house.

"Above And Beyond" Topic Of Speech

President Willett has suggested that "colleges and universities respond to current student unrest with a rededication to ideals traditionally proclaimed by institutions of higher learning."

Speaking Saturday to a Founder's Day audience of some 700 alumnae, faculty, and students, Dr. Willett expressed concern over the national pattern of student demands and indicated that "the time has come for institutional soul-searching on the part of administrators and faculty members."

Emphasizing the timely significance to educators and students of two words — "emulation" and "relevancy" — the thirty-seven-year-old educator noted that "a relevant educational program involving a quality of teaching worthy of emulation" may be the answer to sincere and realistic student dissatisfaction being voiced on many college campuses.

"Many of our young people today cry out against what they term the hypocrisy of the older generation, popularly, age 30 and beyond. They state, specifically, that we adults are guilty of preaching a message and then practicing something entirely foreign and different," according to Dr. Willett.

Calling his address "Above and Beyond," Dr. Willett posed the question of what an institutional response to student criticism should be by asking, "What better way of countering this charge of hypocrisy do we have than to proclaim an ideal and then to practice it?" He further commented, "By setting an example of our willingness to go above and beyond we can hope not only to restore faith in our generation but to inspire others to emulate our example. We cannot expect others to do that which we fail to accomplish ourselves."

"Our aim at Longwood," Dr. Willett concluded, is not to be the biggest but rather it is to do our best in terms of our institutional mission."

Longwood's efforts to increase funds for additional expenditures was a focal point in Jarman presentation.

Founder's Day registration was conducted by the Granddaughters Club in the Rotunda.

Three members from the graduating class of 1919 posed before presentation of awards.

Dr. Willett presents the Founder's Days Attendance Cup to Mrs. Catherine Riddle, recipient for the first degree class of 1919.

Now that it is sunbathing time again, the school has asked us to remind the students of various policies regarding the season. First, the infirmary will not excuse students from classes because of sunburn. Secondly, sun-bathers must stay on their own roof, they are not to visit a fellow sun worshipper in another dorm or switch because another dorm has better facilities. Next, although in many cases sun time and class time cause a conflict, the student should make a decision on how the time should be more valuably spent. Is a tan really worth falling behind in all your classes?

Also a reminder on the time before or after your jaunt to the roof, a trenchcoat or similar cover-up must be worn over your bathing suit in the dorm, especially on Sunday when many fathers are visiting in the dorms.

With these thoughts in mind, happy "sock it to me, sun" day.

Longwood's spirit has risen again! "Charlie Hop" paid a visit to our campus last week. His arrival brought about confusion, excitement, and renewed faith in a blue-and-white spirit. Girls' spirited rumors of "Charlie Hop" the song which has made Professor French known from class to class, Charlie had heard rumors that Longwood's "get-up-and-go" had "gotten-up-and-gone," but after Thursday's Rotunda sing, he was certain his girls were as enthusiastic as in years past.

His well-known "Hi, Everybody!" accompanied by a friendly wave will remain a part of all our lives. His open, sincere personality is rivaled only by his solemn dedication to Chi, Longwood's most cherished secret association.

One point of interest to all sunbathers — in past years, Charlie Hop said the chemistry department took on the responsibility of preparing large quantities of tannic acid solution for those "roof top blues." Tea is a substitute solution for soothing sunburn, but if you can find someone in our chemistry department with a "pinch" of Charlie Hop's spirit, these burns won't hurt quite as badly.

Many of us have sung Charlie's song, heard his friendly letters read during Geist festival weekend, and wondered just what type of white knight we had immortalized. Now we have all had the opportunity to meet this charming gentleman. I only hope those classes in the future will be able to share this experience.

If you think we've got problems with housing next year, maybe it's because you've never heard of George La Monte. Mr. La Monte was President of Longwood (then Farmville Female Seminary) in its first days as a college, in 1859 and the early 1860's.

Mr. La Monte was the first president of the college as such, since he was president of the seminary when it was made into a college in May, 1860.

The 25-year-old educator, a native of New York, had to face the problem of housing all of the students of Farmville College in his house! Luckily, there were only 30 boarding students at the time. It was here that the concept of a home life at college began here.

for a home life at college began, here began the tradition that still lives today even through Farmville Female College, enrollment, approximately 100, has changed to Longwood College, enrollment, approximately 1,700.

As one walks up High Street past Ruffner, French and Tabb, turns left down Pine Street past the Cunninghams and turns right up Madison Street toward Stubbs, Wheeler, and Cox, it is hard to realize that 110 years ago, these nine dormitories would have horrified the 30 girls whom President La Monte housed in his three-story pre-Civil War mansion. We ourselves look with some question toward the new high-rise dorm. What would they say if they could be here now?

As the "Annual Register and Announcement of the Farmville Female College" 1859-60 (the College Handbook) states, every attempt was made to make Farmville Female "emphatically a Home School." In order to make the girls "at home," the women teachers, members of a staff of seven, were expected to act as "elder sisters" to the students. This, undoubtedly, was the forerunner of the sister class concept and the various "big sis-

Attention students! Registration will no longer involve waiting twenty minutes in front of a table to get an English class, only to learn that the course you needed has been closed for an hour. The many requests from the student body have been considered and a committee appointed by the Legislative Board has proposed a new registration procedure which will be made available to those students who wish to pre-register. This system is not required of the entire student body. Those who wish to, may register as usual in the Fall. The new registration procedure is as follows:

1. Registration for all current students who plan to return to Longwood for the 1969-70 session will be held the first week of May, 1969.
2. Students will meet with their advisors during this week, May 5 through 9, and select the classes they need or want for the first semester. A form will be provided for the student to indicate the instructor she wants for

Mr. E. H. Vassar, head of Student Teaching at Longwood, represented the college at the State Conference of Supervisors at Hotel Roanoke, Roanoke, Virginia, on March 17 and 18.

The speaker for Monday morning's session was Dr. C. R. Carpenter, Research Professor and Psychology and Anthropology at Pennsylvania State University. Dr. Carpenter spoke on "Recent Developments in Patterns of Learning." That afternoon, a symposium on "Factors Which Influence Teaching and Learning" was held. Marguerite F. Christian, Elementary Supervisor, Chesterfield, was chairman. Later that afternoon six discussion groups met to discuss "Classroom Provisions for Learning." That evening there were "Progress Reports on Standards for the Accreditation of Schools" on the elementary and secondary levels.

Tuesday morning the address was given by Dr. Helen Heffernan, formerly Chief of the Bureau of Elementary Education, California State Department of Education. Those attending the conference then broke into six discussion groups to discuss the "Supervisor's Role in Teaching - Learning." That afternoon they regrouped for a final session at which Dr. Heffernan spoke on "Leadership and Teaching - Learning."

designed to induce a "love" for science and art.

Upon satisfactory completion of requirements designated by the Board of Officers, the title of Mistress of Arts was granted, along with a diploma.

One section of the 1859 handbook, labeled "Daily Exercises," relates the daily schedule of a typical Farmville Female student in 1859.

"One hour after rising to the sound of a bell, the boarders met with the teachers in the parlor for morning prayer. After going to breakfast, all assembled in the Chapel for worship. At this time, the girls read from the Bible and sang hymns as a professor accompanied them on the piano.

Then came daily classes. There were six hours of classes daily for each girl. Each had a study card for every class which contained the order of exercises for the class. Without fail, these cards were followed, one exercise after another every day."

Four nights a week, the girls had to assemble in a supervised "Study Hall" for an hour and a half. Following this, they met with teachers in the parlor for evening prayers.

Unfortunately, these girls didn't even have mail to look forward to. If they did get mail, they would always know who it was from before even reading it. Before a girl arrived at Farmville Female, her parents were asked for a list of people who would be writing to their daughter. Each mail call, the President would personally check to see that a girl's letters had been approved by her parents. If not, he would put them aside.

Under what might be called "Do's and Don'ts" are listed the following things:

Mothers should "fit out" their daughters in a simple style of dress and the same style should be worn throughout her stay at the college.

Novels and "promiscuous newspapers" will not be received at the college.

Parents should encourage their daughters not to visit home oftener than once in three months. "Those Another delightful custom involved "gentlemen callers." If a gentleman was a stranger to the President and he was not on the parents' approved list, he had to carry a letter of introduction with him. The girls were allowed to "date" approved callers from 4:00 to 5:00 p.m. on Wednesdays or Saturdays.

No callers were allowed on "the Sabbath" and no girl could spend the night away from the college except under "very extraordinary circumstances." (1)

Then, as now, the college took pride in the "abundance and variety of food well prepared." Consequently, pupils were not allowed to receive "goodies" by mail from home to tide them over between meals, which by the way, were required. Absences from meals had to be cleared by the President!

Students, Faculty Study Proposal For New Exam Schedule

Sarah Brown, with Janice Austin and Andee Maddox, on behalf of Student Government, have asked for a modification of the present exam system. This modification would provide for greater flexibility of the exam schedule. Under this new plan, the exam schedule would still be published, but any instructor wishing to participate would turn his exams over to Student Government at the beginning of the exam schedule. These exams would be kept in a central location, and a student could take her exam at 9:30, 2:00, or 7:00 p.m.

Under this system, students could go to this central location at one of the three times, pick up their exams, and go to a nearby classroom to take their exam. At the end of the three-hour period, the students would return their exams.

If this plan is adopted, students would be able to balance their exams better even though the exams could not be taken later than the scheduled date.

It is the hope of Student Government that this plan would be decided and discussed by the faculty before they vote on it at their May faculty meeting.

If the students and faculty favor this proposal, it will be carried out on a limited basis this spring with the courses in the 400's and above.

This plan is similar to a plan operating at Hollins, Sweet Briar, and Randolph-Macon Colleges.

Our own favorite "Charlie Hop" taught chemistry on Longwood's campus for thirty-five years. His visit commemorated dedication of French Building in Founder's Day ceremony.

Here's A Toast To Charlie Hop

By SUSIE MARGH

Founder's Day brought many members of past classes back to their Alma Mater to revisit old dorms, classes, and faculty. Among the returning faculty members was Raymond Holiday French, better known as Charlie Hop, Charlie arrived Thursday and began renewing old acquaintances and making new ones with his warm smile and friendly manner.

Charlie taught chemistry at Longwood for thirty-five years, 1929-1964. He also sponsored seven green and white classes. He attributes his partiality to the green and whites to the statement "when I first came here I was greener than any Freshman."

Prior to teaching at Longwood, Charlie was the head of the Natural Science Department at Columbia High School in Columbia, South Carolina. He has also taught at Mt. St. Mary's College and St. Joseph's College.

Besides teaching Charlie was very active on the campus in other methods. He was the sponsor of Chi for many years and got a kick out of giving out just enough information to the Freshmen and Sophomores to have them running all over campus trying to uncover the old school tradition. He attended almost every campus function from color games to Freshman Productions.

One of the most prominent questions in most of the students' minds is the origin of Mr. French's nickname, Charlie Hop. When this question was asked, Charlie gave a delighted smile and began the anecdote. "When I was a student at Virginia Tech, my roommate, Joe Beale, and I worked at a chemical company in Kingsport during the summer. I worked in the lab where we made the base for a yellow dye and by the end of the summer my skin was as yellow as a Chinaman's skin. One day Joe went downtown and into a Chinese laundry. This laundry was owned by a Chinese man named Charlie Hop. On his return, Joe declared he had met my relatives and discovered my real name, Charlie Hop. When we returned to school in the fall, the name stuck. Now I feel that anyone who calls me Charlie Hop is a true friend."

Charlie was introduced to the entire student body at Thursday lunch and he greeted them with his famous expression, "Hi everybody," which was answered by a standing ovation from the students.

Besides being active in school activities, Charlie Hop was also interested in the local organizations in Farmville. He was member of the Rotary Club, the Methodist Church, the Wesley Foundation, and the Odd Fellows. For most of his visit Charlie spent his time meeting new students and swapping fish stories with his old friends.

Natatorial Mythology Presented Annual Water Show A Success

By JUDIE GUIDIES

The H2O and Corkettes Club presented their annual water show March 19, 20, 21, and 22. This year the theme was Natatorial Mythology; eight routines consisting of various stunts and strokes personifying different gods and goddesses, with the use of lights and costumes aiding the effect.

The opening number was an elaborate graceful pattern symbolizing Juno, the goddess of lovers and marriage. Written by Anne Bishop, the performers were Frances Bain, Barbara Carr, Candee Dickerman, Carol Umbdenstock, and Bonnie Walton.

King of the winds, Aeolus, was a very powerful god and dynamic god. Natatographer Frances Bain had Dale Grigg, Lois Hrubik, Ann Weisiger, and Kathy Wilson decked with special lights on their arms and legs, perform swirling aggressive stunts and floating patterns to represent Aeolus.

Belligerent, definite, vigorous strokes and movements symbolize the fierce god of war, Mars, Swimmers Anne Bishop, Candee Dickerman, Delight Swan, Judy Donohoe, Janet Harmon, and Linda Overstreet were in colors of gray and red to perform the number written by Barbara Carr and Carol Umbdenstock.

Dale Grigg was the Natatographer for a merry, frolic routine written of Pan, the noisy, childlike god of woods and mountains. The gay, frisky stunts and strokes were performed by Linda Ashern, Marilyn Chapman, Bonnie Jewell, Ann Weisiger, and Kathy Wilson.

The charming gracefulness of Anne Bishop, Carol Umbdenstock, and Bonnie Walton presented equal beauty to the flowing patterns of movements in representing Venus, the goddess of love and beauty. Bonnie Walton wrote this number to symbolize the graces of women and the emotional stimulation of love.

Ann Weisiger and Candee Dickerman author the routine representative of Mercury, the messenger of Zeus. His mischievous character was personified in the snappy somersaults and swift movements of Linda Aher, Judy Donohoe, Marilyn Chapman, Dale Grigg, Lois Hrubik, and Bonnie Jewell.

Gemini, the heavenly twins, the two brightest stars, and the great adventures, were humanized in the synchronized movements of Frances Bain and Barbara Carr. This number, written by Barbara, was one of refreshing, well done stunts, and equally difficult.

The grand finale, written by the Club's sponsor, Dr. Smith, symbolized none other than the supreme ruler Zeus. The majestic strokes and vigorous stunts represented the omnipotence of this great god.

The show was a great success this year, and each member is to be congratulated for her marvelous performance.

Alpha Lambda Delta initiated 11 honor freshmen in ceremony Sunday. Dean Wilson, Pat Cloonan, and Mrs. Cade Parrish led initiates.

Eleven New Freshmen Initiated

Alpha Lambda Delta Fraternity

The combined pledging and initiation for the new members of Alpha Lambda Delta took place Sunday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the ABC rooms of Langford. A reception followed afterwards.

The new initiates include Ada Avery, Brenda Belton, Diane Bottoms, Ann Bristow, Lynn Kwiatkowski, Donna Gibson, Alison Higgs, Barbara Little, Amelia Nespoli, Stella Simmons, and Sue Yeatts.

To become a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, the freshmen women's honor fraternity, a freshman must have a 3.5 quality point average on 15 hours of work, or an accumulative 3.5 on 30 hours credit. In addition to the new initiates, there are presently 13 active members on campus.

With Mrs. Cade Parrish of the Math Department as sponsor, the activities of the local chapter include sending congratulatory letters to all students attaining a 3.0 first semester and placing a banner in the freshman hall which boasts the highest average for the first semester.

Alpha Lambda Delta is presently in its fourth year at Longwood. There are only two chapters of Alpha Lambda Delta in the state of Virginia, the other being at the College of William and Mary.

3. Classes selected are binding on the student involved and IBM cards will be pulled during the summer months for each student involved.

4. Upon return in September, each student will be given a completed registration form indicating the class sections and times of classes as is the practice now.

5. Each student is guaranteed a place in each class selected or a place in a class designated as an alternate if the primary selection is filled or if conflict occurs. (Exceptions to this guarantee are in applied music classes, certain art classes, and certain physical education classes where load and space limitations prevail).

6. Students will be given sections and instructors desired if at all possible, but no guarantee can be given as to either time of class or instructor. Every effort will be made to satisfy student preference.

7. If a student desires to make a change in her schedule in September after registering for classes in May, she will be required to pay a $5 registration change fee in addition to the regular $2 course change fee for each change made.

8. For those students who do not wish to register in May, the regular registration procedure will be followed in September. These students will take a chance on closed classes in September.

9. Seniors will be registered first under the above procedure, Juniors next, and then Sophomores. This applies to the pulling of IBM cards during the summer and not to the selection of classes in May.

10. Freshmen and transfer students will be registered in September.

The above procedure was presented to each class and has received majority approval of both the students and the faculty. So rest easy, girls. Registration now means one quick trip to your advisor instead of a morning in the library.

Sprague's "Operation 3-Ring Circus" Burghardt To Show Childbirth Film

Tired of racing home every week end? Bored with "mickey mouse" amusements? Your chance is here. There's going to be a Happening at Longwood, April 10-12.

Three of the most dynamic men ever to visit L.C., Father Walter J. Burghardt, S.J.; Dr. Louis A. Padovano, S.J.; and Mr. Martin T. Walsh, S.J., are returning for the third year with the movie on childbirth. They will also lead various discussions on such topics as "Conscience, Church, and Contraception" and "Woman, What of Tomorrow?" This invitation was made at the request of students, faculty, and administration.

When Father Burghardt was asked what this visit should be called, he responded, "A Happening," and that is what it is. Even the faculty is begging for a conversation hour.

Hampden-Sydney will join in on the visit for the first time. This is an opportunity to hear the masculine viewpoint, but that doesn't mean the girls aren't free to express themselves. The former visitors characterizing L.C. girls as being open and willing to communicate. Let's not let them down.

It is a great honor to receive such distinguished guests. Father Burghardt, among many other honors, has received the following honorary degrees: Doctor of Laws from the University of Notre Dame, Doctor of Humane Letters from the University of Scranton, and Doctor of Letters from St. Bonaventure University. He is the author of several books and was featured in "Life" Magazine in an article on "Best Easter Sermons." These are only a very few of his activities and qualifications.

Dr. Rosamary Sprague, who is in charge of the arrangements for this event, calls the visit "Operation 3-Ring Circus." A look at the schedule for the three gentlemen shows why.

Dr. Sprague, among many others, is looking forward tremendously to this event. "It should be very exciting—a send off for further exploration for weekend events of this sort. The main thing we need is support."

If there are any groups or individuals, for example, newly engaged girls, who would like to meet with one of our guests, contact Dr. Sprague. Also any girls who would like to help with arrangements, publicity, and such, see Pat Sieman or Becky Bartholomew of the Student Coordination Committee.

Let's support this Happening. No meetings are required so let's show that Longwood really is an interested campus.

The Caucasian Chalk Circle

The Allegory On Wisdom

In Jarman Auditorium March 20, 21, and 22, the Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs presented the play, The Caucasian Chalk Circle by Bertolt Brecht.

The three hour production began with two Soviet Collective farms meeting to decide who should obtain ownership of a certain valley. One of the groups hired a storyteller who presented an allegory which was meant to decide ownership of the land. The allegory revolved around the plight of Michael, the governor's heir who was deserted by his mother in the midst of an armed rebellion. The governor's wife was more concerned over her clothing and personal belongings at this time than for the welfare of her son. Michael was left behind with Grusha, the governor's kitchen maid, who had to flee from the ironshirts who had gained control of the city. Grusha's conscience forbade her to leave the baby behind, so she began the long journey to her brother's house in the mountains where she was to await the return of Simon, her sweetheart from the war.

For Grusha, the journey was extremely hard. She was constantly plagued by the pursuit of the ironshirts who wanted to kill her and the baby. When she finally reached her destination, her reception was rather poor, for her brother's wife was convinced that the child was illegitimate and Grusha had been deserted.

In order to cover up this discrepancy a marriage was arranged between Grusha and a young farmer. In the meantime, the war had ended and Simon had returned to find Grusha married.

The political situation at this time found the ironshirts overthrown and a vast search was instituted to find the heir to the throne. When Grusha was found, Michael was taken from her and she was brought to trial for kidnapping the future governor.

After listening to both sides of the story, the judge decided to use the Chalk Circle Test in order to discover the true mother. He placed Michael in the center of a circle and instructed the governor's wife and Grusha to each take a hand of the young boy and pull. The woman who pulled the boy to her would be the true mother. This method of judgment refers to the Bible story of King Solomon, who had to decide a similar case. Because Grusha could not stand to see the child torn apart she let the governor's wife pull him to her. By doing this, the judge realized that Grusha was the true mother.

The storyteller's final words were—The one who cares for the child receives the child, therefore the one who cares for the land should receive the land.

This is just a brief look at the three hour production of The Caucasian Chalk Circle. For such a long showing, the cast should be commended for its overall performance. Special recognition should be given to Susan Jordan for her portrayal of Grusha, Jim Rhodes for his presentation of Azdak the judge, and Pat Quinn, for her excellent job as the storyteller. It must be said however, that the play did go extremely slow in some parts. Even the risqué lines didn't serve as enough stimulus to keep many of the spectators' eyes open. The play's vagueness in some areas was also disconcerting, and it took extra attention to follow exactly what was going on. But, it must be said that the cast did a remarkable job with the material as a whole.

The costume, scenery and makeup crews deserve special attention, for in these areas skill and precision were shown.

In summing up, the whole performance was a success. The Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs are once again congratulated in their performance of the Caucasian Chalk Circle.

In conjunction with the Red Cross Bloodmobile, Longwood will hold a BLEED-IN in Lankford Building on Friday, April 25, from noon to six p.m.

In this blood drive Longwood is competing with all colleges in Virginia for a College Bowl sponsored by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company. Sweet Briar presently holds the cup for having the highest percentage of blood donors. Fourteen per cent of the Sweet Briar students donated blood during their blood drive last year. Virginia Military Institute, Ferrum Junior College, and Hollins College have at one time won the silver bowl.

Geith A. Plimmer Of London, England To Speak Tomorrow

Communication gaps, generation gaps, and gaps of the heart, like loneliness and frustration, are closed only by closing the gap between humanity and God, according to Geith A. Plimmer, C.S., of London, England, a Christian Science lecturer.

He will speak on "Closing the Gaps" Thursday, April 24, at 1 in Gold Room, Lankford Building. Open and free to the campus public, the lecture is sponsored by the campus Christian Science Organization.

Mr. Plimmer has represented Christian Science in radio and television appearances over the British Broadcasting Company network. Once a schoolmaster in his native Australia and in New Zealand, he later became a joint headmaster in England, until resigning to devote full time to the Christian Science healing practice. Mr. Plimmer also served as a Minister to the Allied Forces in Italy during World War II. He is currently on tour as a member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship.

of the Longwood blood drive, and Mrs. Ananthony Munoz, Bloodmobile Chairman of the Farmville Area, Longwood's quota is 200 blood donors. The quota is established according to the population of surrounding counties. The Red Cross needs 200 donors from Longwood to keep the quota up for the overall chapter.

Anyone who is married or over 21 can give blood. If one is under 21, he must have his parents' permission to donate. Permission slips can be obtained from the sign-up desks or the home office. Also, a person cannot give blood if he has a history of hepatitis, weighs under 110 pounds, or is taking certain drugs. Hemoglobin will be checked at the Bloodmobile.

The Blood Program was first begun in the Prince Edward County, Farmville, and Buckingham County area in 1962. Longwood initiated its program in February, 1963. Longwood has participated in the program annually since the initial visit to the campus.

Mrs. Munoz stated that "with all the cooperation and enthusiasm of the Longwood girls, I know our blood program will be bigger and better than ever."

Anyone, including faculty, staff, community, and colleges, may sign up on the schedule sheet in the smoker to donate blood. Or, anyone may come to donate blood sometime during the scheduled hours.

Nancy Parsons, Miss Longwood, 1969 Judy Page Chosen Miss Congeniality

major from Falls Church and will represent Longwood in the Miss Virginia contest this summer.

By LISE WORTHINGTON

Regal Pat Perry, Miss Longwood College of 1968 relinquished her crown on April 19, in Jarman Auditorium to Nancy Crosby Parsons, Nancy, by winning this coveted title is now eligible to represent Longwood in the Miss Virginia Pageant this summer.

The certain rose Saturday evening at 8 revealing 15 lovely Longwood ladies vying for the Miss Longwood title. The Master of Ceremonies was Mr. Richard Barnes, who provided narration and fill in entertainment while the contestants were changing. The Village Singers, a group from Portsmouth, was another source of entertainment giving the girls and judges additional minutes.

Five judges were chosen this year to preside over the pageant. The chairman was Mr. William Sweeney, and his panel consisted of Mrs. Fae Christiansen, Mrs. Barbara Guthrie Kelley, Senator William Hodges and Congressman William Whitehurst. They had spent all Saturday with the girls beginning with an informal interview in the morning, followed by a luncheon at noon and finally a faculty tea in the afternoon. Then, the final test, the pageant.

The fifteen girls were judged on poise, looks and talent. They began the pageant by appearing in Sunday dress. This was followed by the swim suit competition which was, to say the least very revealing. The contestants then showed their coordination and spirit in a rousing chorus number "There's No Business Like Show Business."

This number was followed by the talent competition. Each girl was given 3 1/2 minutes to perform her special talent. The talents ranged from an acrobatic dance by Karen Sue Lewis, who managed to twist and turn her body in a variety of ways, to a miniature fashion show with accent on the homemade look by Gayle Hughes. The talent was followed by another group singing, "What's More American."

The final showing was the evening gown competition. Here again the girls were watched closely for poise, naturalness, and beauty in the gown they had chosen.

While the judges were debating on the five finalists, two other awards were given. Miss Judith Marie Page was selected by the other girls as Miss Congeniality, and Miss Karen Sue Lewis was given this year's new award for the most talented.

Finally it was time to announce the five finalists. They were, Miss Carolyn Theresa Elder who for talent played a piano solo, Au Clair de Lune by Claude Debussy, Miss Cadell Courtier Hollyfield who did a series of dances from the Nutcracker Suite by Chekovsky, Miss Maxine Carey Stone, who did a dance pantomime, depicting a court jester, Miss Karen Sue Lewis, who did a spectacular acrobatic dance to the Sound of Music, and finally Miss Nancy Crosby Parsons who sang a portion from the Opera Carmen.

These five girls were asked one question by the judges. Miss Parsons question was "What Kind of Music to you is the most permanent?" Nancy thought a moment and answered; she felt that the opera was the most lasting, for as she quickly pointed out, the opera has been around for a long long time.

The judges then named the runners up for the Longwood Pageant. The second runner up was Miss Maxine Carey Stone from Virginia Beach. The first runner up was Miss Carolyn Theresa Elder from Richmond, and finally Miss Longwood for 1969 was Miss Nancy Crosby Parsons, the 21 year old junior from Falls Church. She accepted the Longwood Crown and roses amid cheers and clapping from the audience. Then she walked down the runway, feeling both pride and accomplishment in her new title of Miss Longwood College 1969.

SOPHOMORES!

Students Draw For Rooms, Assignments Made April 28, 29

Dean Holt has announced the dates that Longwood students will sign up for rooms for the 1969-1970 school year. Rising seniors will sign up on Monday, April 28, from 7 to 9 in the ABC room of Lankford. Rising juniors will sign up for their new rooms on Tuesday, April 29, from 7 to 10 in the ABC room. The new sophomore class will get room assignments on Monday, May 5, from 7 to 10 in the ABC room. Only those who have paid their $10 room deposit will be able to sign up for a room. It will still be possible for one person to sign up for the suite, if she brings all the rooming blanks with her.

It is important that the rooming blanks of all seniors be filled out for all four blocks! Dean Holt says that it will be to the best interest of the seniors if they plan to triple themselves since they will have to triple during the November through January and the April through June blocks.

The language hall is going to be completely filled this year, if at all possible. Sophomores are making an attempt to fill all the rooms for all four blocks. This will help to relieve crowding.

Rooms will be assigned by lowest number, no matter how many are in the suite. Rooms are assigned in numerical order, from the lowest to the highest. It is important that the person who is going to sign up, be there when her number is called.

Dean Holt will post the rooms that have been taken so that the rising sophomores won't be quite as confused about the room they want when they go to sign up.

Bleed-In

Guest Editorial

There is going to be a "happening" of significance on the Longwood campus, a "happening" that is truly a love-in. We appeal to Longwood students to participate in the BLEED-IN. This is your chance to literally give something of yourself to your fellow man. Donate your blood to a worthy cause.

There is an endless need for blood. Three million pints of blood were collected nationally last year by the Red Cross. However, many more pints are urgently needed.

We are healthy American college students. The loss of one pint of your blood would do no harm to you. But, one pint of your blood may save someone's life, perhaps your own.

When the Bloodmobile arrives on the Longwood campus Friday, April 25, at twelve noon, be in Lankford Building ready to give "the greatest gift." Someone always needs your blood. Make this "happening" a true love-in. Give something of yourself to your fellow man. Join in the BLEED-IN.

V.A.S.G. Follows Left-Wing Radicalism

This past weekend, the Virginia Association of Student Governments met in council at Virginia Commonwealth University. The three-year old association appears to be concerned with improving student-faculty-administration difficulties; however, closer inspection proves contrary to popular belief.

In fact, the V.A.S.G. tends to advocate freedom in its most liberal interpretation. The general trend of the conference was based on over-riding the "old" in order to create and set up the "new." On many issues, although past standards and set legislative enactments continue to challenge our generations, the more outspoken liberals, demanded change — many times without reason.

One of the speakers featured in Friday night's banquet criticized Governor Godwin's militant stand against unrest on Virginia's campuses. However, those freedom riders at the conference seem to have an equal zest for trouble-making and revolutionary reaction which can only be quelled by threats from our Governor.

Unless the V.A.S.G. changes its set-up and confesses itself as a student government body, representative of campus majorities, the entire association may find itself with even fewer delegates from Virginia schools. The Longwood delegation was shocked at the association's attempt to become a political push-over. We came for constructive ideas — heard destructive policies — and left to the tune of too much radicalism!

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

May I leave off all the formal part of the letter and write you as one of the many friends I hope I made while visiting with you the week-end of Founder's Day. I arrived in Orlando Tuesday, April 8, still walking among the clouds centered around the campus of Longwood College. As a matter of fact, the folks around here can't understand what has happened to me. But then they didn't have that wonderful visit with you at Longwood.

I want to thank you and other members of the staff of "The Rotunda" for all the kind things you wrote about me in your March 26 edition. I am afraid I am not worthy of your most gracious statements about Charlie Hop. Over the years at Longwood I tried hard to make friends with the students, and am very happy I did just a small part to help the girls with the wonderful spirit that was already present in the college. One thing I found when I started teaching at Longwood — then State Teacher's College, was a spirit of togetherness, a friendly atmosphere that I had never found on any campus before or after being a member of the faculty for so many happy years. And what impressed me more than anything else while with you the week-end of March 22 was you still have this wonderful spirit. I felt a real welcome reaching out from all of you — I felt I was finally back home!

Please give my love to all the students and give them my heartfelt thanks for being so kind to me.

With best wishes to you and all "The Rotunda" staff, I remain Fondly,
Charlie Hop

Mr. H. I. Willett, Sr. To Speak In Jarman

Mr. H. I. Willett, Sr., will speak tomorrow night in Jarman Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. The father of Longwood's president, Mr. Willett will speak on "The Superintendent Views a Critical Problem: Employer-Employee Relations." Mr. Willett is currently Superintendent of Schools in Richmond, Virginia.

Dining Committee Faces Questions On Closed Tables

Perhaps one of the most frequent complaints to the Dining Hall committee is the policy of closing tables. The tables which are closed vary according to rotation, starting with Table 1.

The policy of assignment of a seat in the dining hall for every boarding student requires a certain number of tables; however, all students do not come to every meal and the frequency of closed tables is due, in part, to the meal being served. A record is kept of the number attending each meal, and the number of closed tables varies in accordance with the popularity or unpopularity of the meal. Also, field trips, sororities eating in their chapter rooms, sun bathing on the roof during lunch, reserving of open tables for guests, and athletic teams going to away games are several factors.

When a large group of girls do not eat in the dining hall, the number of closed tables is increased, thus, the rotation is sped up.

Therefore, due to the consistency in attendance to meals, it is necessary to close tables periodically.

Dancers Seek Experience, Discovery

Last week's Orchestral production, "A Spring Dance Concert," marked the peak of a year of discovery, practice, and most evidently, intense dedication by a group of girls who, in many cases did not even know that they could dance one year ago.

The audience may have found themselves believing that they were attending an Artist Series, watching a professional group, rather than a campus organization, had they not recognized familiar faces on stage.

Miss Betty Bowman, coordinator of the concert, feels that the professional appeal existed in that "the program didn't seem false. They strived for a certain level of excellence, staying within their bounds. I feel that each showed a great deal of integrity in their dancing. This is how we want to move."

Of the nearly forty members participating, sixteen are members of Orchestral, the honorary modern dance group on campus. This group, organized for many years, aims to promote creative interest in dance as well as to give members the time and place to hold the vital exercise and practice sessions.

"Orchestral," says Miss Bowman, "gives them an outlet to discover what hard work dance is — what training it takes." Some of the members, among them Diane "Monke" Schools and Sybil Prouse, have had several years of dance training but many had no previous dance experience at all. Judy Page, for instance, who is president of Orchestral, had no training in dance before coming to Longwood. Likewise Pam Patteson, who choreographed two of the dances in the concert, began dancing last year when she came to Longwood. At any rate, "They all work hard," says Miss Bowman.

Ordinarily, Orchestral members meet once a week and work out in the dance studio which is the former bank building, located beside Buildings and Grounds. According to Miss Bowman, they work out in terms of composition rather than technique. Their compositions are generally either improvisations or original "études" built around a basic theme suggested by Miss Bowman.

In the Spring Concert, both of these compositions played an important role. The movement of the program entitled "Class Etudes on a Bird Theme," for example, arose out of an assignment that Miss Bowman gave her Dance II class. They were to improvise an "air" movement, study, and study in flight. It seems that some of the groups in the class decided to add a little humor and the results were seen in short dances by the class members.

Dances created by the Dance II class were "Flight" by Judy Page, Theresa Elder, and Sandy Taylor; "Out of the Nest," done by Kaydell Edwards, Betty Carey, and Carol Sanders; "The Event" by Suzy Marsh, Nellie Distel, and Helen Beamer; and "New Bird in Town," with Jane Mc-Caffrey, Margaret Harrison, and Lynne Coleman.

Following these shorter dances, the whole class joined in a silhouette study, their darkened figures portraying "Flight."

Lighting played an important part in the effect of the dances throughout the concert. In "Improvisation" by Robin Wood and Diane Schools, a spotlight placed upstage right threw stark shadows of the two dancers onto the stage backdrop — giving the illusion of four dancers instead of two.

The final movement, entitled "Illusions," was perhaps the triumph of the evening as far as audience appeal. It was danced by Carol Leacock, Robin Wood, Pam Patteson, and Sherry Williams.

Miss Bowman explained that the "feeling of suspension" created by the four dancers who worked on a darkened stage with only flashlights as light, was the secret to the impact of the dance.

She emphasizes the fact that even when the dancers were completely darkened out of sight, they were dancing. This was the beauty of the dance, that although they were not visible at all times, the dance was continually in motion. "Just their presence produced an effect."

The dance originated out of a desire to rest the effects of light and darkness on a dance movement. What effect would a light have as it exposed different parts of a darkened dancer's body?

One night in the studio, the dancers experimented with flashlights, alternating isolating and exposing arms, legs, and faces by controlling the lights. The result was a composition of "floating" arms and legs, "bodiless" faces, and a film-like quality, a study in black and white.

Some of the dances were danced and choreographed by the same person. Linda Parsons, for instance, choreographed her dance, "La Delaissado."

"Interlude," danced by Pam Patteson and Sherry Williams, was choreographed by Pam, and "Michael from Mountains," by Sybil Prouse, Judy Page, and Cheryl Winn.

Orchestral officers are Judy Page, President; Linda Parsons, Secretary-Treasurer; and Carol Leacock, Publicity.

Point leaders were announced at Song Contest Wednesday night. The Green and Whites are in the lead for Color Cup, while the Sophomore Class has the most class points. The Juniors were victorious at song contest and are still hopeful for the Red and Whites, softball, archery, and tennis singles are still to be played.

The faculty will soon vote to approve or disapprove a proposed exam schedule change headed by Sarah Brown.

Betty Friedman, author of "The Feminine Mystique," will speak tonight at 7:30 in Jarman. (Currently working on her latest novel "The New Woman," the author will address the student body.

Honorary Fraternity Holds Sport Clinic High Schools Attend

Four high schools took part in a sports clinic Saturday sponsored by Delta Psi Kappa, the honorary fraternity for women in Health and Physical Education. Participating in the clinic were Brookville High School, Lunenburg Central High, Amelia High School and Appomattox High School. Tennis, Modern Dance, Fencing and Gymnastics were taught and there was also a special program after lunch for the students. The program included gymnastics and swimming demonstrations, a discussion of Longwood College Physical Education Program and the introduction of faculty members. Mary Tolley, coordinating chairman of the clinic, felt the event was a great success and hopes that it can be done again in future years.

Orchestra members apply stage make up prior to last Wednesday's performance.

Dr. Molnar Spoke On Colonial Music; Research Published

Dr. John W. Molnar, professor and chairman of the music department, presented Friday, April 18, a report entitled, "Music and Music Teaching in Colonial Virginia" to the research section of the Southern Division of the Music Educators National Conference in Mobile, Ala.

A partial report on the research Dr. Molnar has been doing in Colonial Virginia music for the past several years, and other results of his efforts have been published in "The Musical Quarterly," "Art and Music in the South," and in a book on music from the Williamsburg Theater to be published next year by Colonial Williamsburg.

Five members of the faculty of Longwood College have the distinction of being listed in the fifth edition of the "Directory of American Scholars." They are: Dr. William Frank, professor and chairman of the department of English; Dr. Patton Lockwood, associate professor and chairman of the department of speech and drama; Dr. Charlotte S. Hooker, Dr. Rosemary Sprague, and Mr. Foster B. Gresham, professors of English.

Three members of the Longwood faculty recently attended the annual language arts convention of the National Council of Teachers of English in Philadelphia, Pa. They are Miss R. Beatrice Bland, Miss Kate Gannaway Trent, and Dr. Charlotte S. Hooker.

Class And Color Bowling Taken By Green And Whites

Claiming victories in class and color bowling before spring break were the sophomores and the Green and Whites. The class teams were made up of those girls having the highest scores in intramural bowling and the color teams consisted of the girls with the highest scores in class bowling.

Making up the victorious sophomore team were Betty Boaz, Lynne Coleman, Freda Lunsford, Linda Overstreet and Laurel Baldwin. The Seniors on the class team were Ginny Sirc, Pat Holstead, Pam Wayne, Judy Kingsley and Mary Tolley. Juniors bowling were Pam Drummond, Betty Layne, Linda Low, Marcia Trench and Patricia Thacker. The Freshmen team was made up of Ellen Dunn, Debbie Ellenbrand, Karen Pfeiffer, Ellen Edmonds and Joan Lawter.

The Green and Whites downed the Red and Whites and therefore earned points toward the color cup. Bowling for the Green and Whites were Lynne Coleman, Linda Overstreet, Laurel Baldwin, Judy Kingsley and Mary Tolley. Representing the Red and Whites were Ellen Dunn, Joan Lawter, Pam Drummond, Betty Layne and Linda Low.

This year's spring concert featured discovery, technique, and creativity on the part of the dancers and Miss Betty Bowman, Concert director.

Dean Announces Schedule

Changes For Upcoming Year

Dean Blackwell has announced two modifications in the scheduling of classes for next year.

Starting with the fall term, all Tuesday and Thursday classes will meet for an hour and 15 minutes, with block courses meeting for 50 rather than 60 minutes on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Block courses will also meet for an hour and 15 minutes on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Two-hour labs will be the same.

The reason for this change is that students cannot make the necessary preparation between their morning and afternoon classes in the same subject on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The new scheduling will allow for more efficient use of the instructor's and student's time.

Another change starting with entering freshmen will be the English proficiency requirement. Since entering students will only be required to take one semester of English composition instead of two, these students will have to demonstrate their English proficiency in their junior year.

Each department will determine the proficiency of their majors. This may be done in one of the three alternatives. The department may give a standardized test, or they may have their students take a written exam administered by the department. Or, if the student wishes, she may take one of the three advanced composition courses to be offered on the junior level.

The Education department has already determined what the elementary education majors will do. Since the state now requires that elementary education majors must have 18 hours of English, the majors will have to take one of the three new composition courses.

The reasons for this are that it will provide greater flexibility in the student's schedule so that those students who have writing ability will not have to take a basic course at the freshman level. They will be able to choose an aspect of writing in which they are interested. Many students will be able to take an English more to their choosing than freshman English, which, to some, may be just an extension of their high school college preparatory English.

At the junior level, the students know more than they did as freshmen and will feel more comfortable in writing. Also, when students are in their major, this will provide a check to make sure they have good control of the English language.

Bishop, 'Best In Show'

By MARY ALICE CARMOY
Miss Barbara L. Bishop, assistant professor of art, placed "Best in show" with her painting "EarthSpace" at the 19th annual N&W Art Exhibit in Roanoke. The show was sponsored by the "Norfolk and Western," a publication of the Norfolk and Western Railroad. Miss Bishop's painting and her other winning entries were displayed at Roanoke College through April 11.

Miss Bishop also had a one-woman show at Alaska Methodist University, Anchorage. The show, which lasted until April 15, included more than 30 mixed media works in pencil, crayon, ink, oil, intaglio, and tempera.

Miss Bishop, currently a candidate for her doctorate at Columbia University Teacher's College, received her B.S. from Longwood and her MFA from the University of North Carolina.

Photo Exhibit By Namuth Is Showing In Library Til April 25

An exhibit of photographs well worth viewing is currently on exhibit in the Library Exhibit Room and will be there until the twenty-fifth. These are photographs by the German-born photographer Hans Namuth and are on loan from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

The exhibition is made up of large photographs of seventeen contemporary American painters. It is a sensitive exhibit with Mr. Namuth capturing the moods of the artist and his family. Included with the photographs are pictures of the artist's painting style. The artist's viewpoint is given along with Mr. Namuth's stated feelings of the artist.

One interesting photograph shows Bernard Perlin looking out through a row of potted plants in his window-sill. Above are two condemned rooms. Another photograph with Namuth's view states that Perlin lives alone in this deserted house.

Another interesting group of the photographs of Sonia Gechhoff. One shows Mrs. Gechhoff and her family eating in the kitchen of their apartment while another shows a different Mrs. Gechhoff - teaching drawing at the California School of Fine Arts.

This exhibit was part of an exhibition at the Brussels Universal and International Exhibition in 1958. After their display at the World's Fair, Mr. Namuth presented them to the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in 1961. Mr. Namuth, who was born in Germany, came to the United States in 1942 and a year later became a naturalized citizen. He worked in Paris and Majorca and also served in the French Foreign Legion and with the United States Army Intelligence. He is the author of numerous books and articles and contributes regularly to several magazines.

Some other artists included in the exhibition are: William Baziotis, Jimmy Ernst, Ellsworth Kelly, William Kienbusch, Robert Motherwell, and Ad Reinhardt.

Dr. Willett speaks to the students after the surprise rally, last Thursday.

Dr. Willett Has Got The Power!

By MARY ALICE CARMODY
Last week was a week of rallies and riots at colleges and universities across the country - Cornell, Johns Hopkins, American, Hampton Institute . . . And, for quite a different purpose, Longwood had a rally.
At 4:45 Thursday, April 24, Longwood ladies, newspapermen, and others began to assemble on Wheeler Mall for a surprise honoring of Dr. Willett. A banner on Wheeler Dormitory proclaimed "This is Willett Country" as well as the buttons the students wore, Janice Austin, president of Legislative Board, announced the strategy.

When Dr. Willett arrived, the crowd broke into cheers followed by "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Geist And Sigma Nu Join To Sponsor Bloodmobile

Red Cross Labeled Visit A "Complete Success"

The Bloodmobile visit to Longwood on Friday was a "complete success," according to local officials of the American Red Cross.

An official report states that in securing 154 pints of blood Longwood exceeded its assigned quota of 125 pints, an accomplishment made possible by the close cooperation of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students.

Sponsored for the first time at Longwood by Geist, organizational and promotional plans called for the active participation of representatives of all major Longwood campus groups.

Participation of Hampden-Sydney was coordinated by Sigma Nu fraternity, under the leadership of Larry Campbell who directed a highly successful visit of the Bloodmobile to Hampden-Sydney last February that netted 199 pints of blood, second highest amount ever donated in the Farmville area.

The all-time high for Bloodmobile visits to the area is 231 pints of blood, donated when the Bloodmobile visited Longwood in 1968, a visit participated in by both Hampden-Sydney and Longwood students.

"We wish to commend the students of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney for making the recent Bloodmobile visit a complete success. At Longwood members of Geist received excellent cooperation from other students and the college's staff."

"Ever since their first participation in the blood program in 1963, Farmville area students have responded in a most successful way to the need for blood donations."

"Our local paper is proud to be associated with students of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney." It was stated by Mrs. Anthony J. Munoz and Mrs. Adelaide Edwards, Blood Program Chairman and Director, respectively, of the Farmville Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Tradition Is Cherished In The Hearts Of All Here

Next year Longwood will open its doors to 200 extra freshmen and the year after that even more will be accepted. There is no doubt about it, we are growing, the new dormitories will allow an increased enrollment which means more and more new faces on campus. It may be a physical impossibility to know each one of them, but we can try.

One of the most treasured aspects of college is tradition, Longwood has its traditions such as Chi, Rotunda sings, color spirit, class spirit, and most important Blue and White spirit. These are instilled in each and everyone of us at Longwood and we are proud of them. Something must be done for next year and the following years to keep this feeling. The friendliness of our campus is something very rare and must be preserved at all costs. The Sophomore class has already made plans to greet the incoming class of '73 in September with enthusiastic girls eager to share their love for Longwood with their sister class. This should not be left up to the present sophomore class, it is the duty of all classes whether red or green to show their spirit and enthusiasm by getting out and meeting them. Each girl has something to offer us and it is up to Longwood to offer the challenges to bring out their various talents.

It should also be emphasized that academic pursuits are the main reasons for entering college and that studies must come before anything else; we must do everything possible to raise the academic standing of Longwood in Virginia.

— V. C. M.

This Here Is Willett Country!

In his seventeen months as Longwood's chief administrator, Dr. H. I. Willett, Jr. has defied campus leaders across the country. He has denied student upheaval. His interest and concern for his students prompted Longwood's first student-government-sponsored rally. We, the student body, wanted to express our thanks for such an understanding, deserving person.

Unlike Radford, Cornell, Hampton Institute, and American University, last week's demonstration was not a militant protest. Rather, we met the press with cheers, songs of unified appraisal, and a genuine attempt to prove the culture of the South and respect for authority still remains on our campus.

Nevertheless, although we have presented ourselves to the Virginia public as conservative young women, we redeem our rights to express ourselves as members in a democracy. Our cry for unity is equal in volume to that of any liberal protester's. We should take pride in what we believe and substantiate our beliefs as strongly as those whose opinions differ from ours.

As for the handful of students who conferred in last week's downtown march . . . you have a right to express concern in local matters. However, several Richmond newspaper releases removed your 'rose-colored' glasses. It seemed as if your involvement darkened prospects for a successful student-body rally.

But, in a democracy, the majority rules — and "This Here's Willett Country."

To make April 24 even more memorable, the members of Chi were disbanded at the annual Burn. Congratulations to those who received 'Chi Commends.' "And for those that Chi does not commend . . ."

Five Faculty Members Listed In 'Directory Of American Scholars'

Five members of the faculty are listed in the fifth edition of the "Directory of American Scholars," just published by the American Council of Learned Societies. These faculty members are: Dr. William Frank, Mr. Foster Gresham, Dr. Charlotte Hooker, and Dr. Rosemary Sprague, professors of English, and Dr. Patton Lockwood, associate professor of Speech and Drama.

April 18-20 Dr. Charlotte Hooker of the English Department, and Misses Beatrice Bland and Kate Trent of the Education Department attended the annual Language Arts Convention of the National Council of Teachers of English.

Instead of returning to Longwood in September, Miss JoAnn Fritzsche of the English Department will begin work on her doctorate at Case Western Reserve in Cleveland.

Mrs. Betty Friedan A New Philosophy

In Jarman Auditorium on April 22, Mrs. Betty Friedan, author of the best seller "Feminine Mystique," bombarded the Longwood Ladies with the sorry state of the American woman. To Mrs. Friedan women today are taken as a joke. They are severely exploited and made fun of. In order to improve the situation Mrs. Friedan advocates a revolution for the full humanity of the American woman.

Mrs. Friedan blames everything in society today for the woman's lowly state. But, most of all, she blames the facets of news media for this degradation. According to Mrs. Friedan the TV has brainwashed the American woman into thinking that she is not human.

Mrs. Friedan says that ever since the Industrial Revolution women have been left behind. Today, society is passing her by, while she passively sits in front of the "Boob Tube." "Get out of this rut! Women!" says Mrs. Friedan. She wants equality, full equality, with today's male. To create this "New Woman" she stresses the need for everyone to acquire a social conscience.

Greek Gab

Greek Week at Longwood College will be held May 5-8. At five o'clock on Monday, May 5, the week's activities will commence with a powder-puff football game. A bridge party is scheduled for Tuesday, May 6, at seven o'clock in the Gold Room. Stubbs Mall will be the location of a sorority sing to be held on Wednesday, May 7. This sing involves individual sororities who will sing a serious song as well as a rush song. All students are invited to come. All sorority presidents, the president of the Panhellenic Council, and its advisor, Mrs. Robert Woodburn, will attend a luncheon with Dr. Willett and student government officers on Thursday, May 8 in the Tea Room. Later that day, from 5 to 7, the sororities will have a picnic on Stubbs Mall. There will be a Panhellenic song contest for a song that all Greeks can sing together.

In past years, the Greeks have had a banquet. This year they decided to have a picnic because it would be less formal and they thought everyone would enjoy themselves more.

Rubley Highlights Of Soviet Tour; Posters, Pointed Shoes, Easter Eggs

Mr. Earl Rubley, Associate Professor of History and Social Sciences, returned from a two week tour of the Soviet Union April 19. He brought with him a host of souvenirs ranging from Russian cigarettes to a huge commemorative poster of Lenin dated "1870-1970." (The Russians are preparing to celebrate the 100th birthday of national hero Lenin next year.) But perhaps the most interesting thing that he brought back with him was a first hand personal knowledge of life in the Soviet Union.

"They were as inquisitive about us as we were about them. They'll stop you in the street and ask you why you're there," Mr. Rubley says that Americans have no trouble being spotted on a Soviet street, if for no other reason than the fact that his clothes are different. Although it is true that the Russians have westernized to a degree, "Our clothes are made much better than theirs. They can look at your shoes and tell if you're American. They wear a cheap, pointed-toe, high-heeled shoe."

Do the Russians talk politics to an American on the street?

"If, by politics you mean government, yes, they do." Most Americans apparently feel that the Russian people are so restricted by the State that they do not lead normal lives. Some things which happened, or rather did not happen to Mr. Rubley's touring party while in the Soviet Union might tend to destroy the American image of the typical Russian citizen.

Contrary to American belief, there are churches in Russia and they have not all been turned into museums. In fact, they have quite large attendance. On Easter Sunday the Russian Orthodox Church in Moscow had a congregation of "fifteen or twenty thousand people."

"Theoretically, there is freedom of religion in the Soviet Union. But the Pioneers, the youth group of the Communist Party, do not attend church. The churches are filled with old people."

Mr. Rubley found the definition of the communist to be another misconception. In Russia, there is no such thing as a member of the Communist Party as designated by an official card. All Soviets are members of the Communist Party, just as all Americans are considered citizens until they act to the contrary.

While in Russia, he toured Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, and Pushkin, a rural area, where he drove by a state farm. Also included on the tour was a visit to Prague, Czechoslovakia.

The group arrived there in the midst of renewed government tension as Premier Anton Dubcek was being demoted. When asked how Prague compared with Moscow, Mr. Rubley remarked that it was "like coming from hell to heaven," such was the difference. "Prague is a cosmopolitan city complete with night spots — the Soviet Union has nothing to compare with this." He also found many more smiling faces in Prague than he did in Moscow.

Mr. Rubley found the Soviet customs officials to be stern and almost forbidding, yet not harsh. His baggage was never checked as he left Russia or Czechoslovakia. His first encounter with the Soviet Union came as he landed at the Leningrad airport where he and his party were taken to a small darkened customs clearance room. "There were certainly no smiling faces to greet us."

The lack of hospitality was widespread throughout the tour. "Everybody seemed to be mad at everyone else," Mr. Rubley feels that this is due, in part to the fact that the Soviets are not accustomed to entertaining tourists. The hotels reflect this fact.

"We stayed in the largest hotel in Russia, the Hotel Russia, which they say is also the world's largest hotel." He found that the service there was "very bad, not accommodating at all." In the main dining room of the hotel, he was served on lightweight tin flatware which was mismatched and unpolished. He remarked that it reminded him of something out of an army mess kit.

Part of the tour took him to various examples of Russian schools where he had the opportunity to view Russian education from first grade through the college level. They have ten grades of free education with the curriculum completely state-regulated. After public education, those students that the Party feels are qualified and hold the most promise are paid to go through six years of college training.

"The College students can make a lot more profit than a worker," Mr. Rubley discovered. He also found no evidence of dissent among the students. In fact, "all of the people over there seem to have a sense of direction." The fact that they are working for the good of the state apparently gives them sufficient motivation.

"Technically, they can have private businesses, but they can't hire anybody to work in those private shops. This would be exploiting men, and 'exploitation' is a bad word over there." Russians are appalled by American education practices. "They just can't understand our educational system. They think that their standardized system is much better, and that some day we'll have to realize this."

The poster of Lenin which Mr. Rubley purchased while there is like those found all over the cities of the Soviet Union. These large pictures are posted billboard fashion on the streets, and in the private homes, smaller portraits of the hero Lenin are found in the bedrooms and living rooms.

Lenin's mausoleum, in central Red Square, has become a national shrine to the Soviets. The people can actually enter the tomb if they so desire, view Lenin's "body." Mr. Rubley saw this spectacle while he was there. It appeared to him that the body, which is actually on view, has been re-made with wax for purposes of display.

Among the souvenirs which Mr. Rubley brought back is an elaborately ornate Easter egg given to him by a young woman student. The egg was made by an ancient Ukrainian process which involves painting one color at a time, covering all but the desired portion of the egg with a coating of wax to keep the colors from smearing. The egg was given to him in exchange for a Kennedy half dollar and a ball point pen.

Mr. Earl Rubley proudly displays his poster of Lenin which he brought back from the Soviet Union.

LaCrosse Season Begins; Team Bows To MC, BC

By JANE McCAFFREY
Last weekend the Longwood College Lacrosse Team opened its season with one win and one loss against Madison College. In the first game Longwood was defeated 23-2. Despite lack of practice and a shortage of players for two complete teams, the Blue and Whites came through against the more skilled Madison team to win 9-7 in the second game. Suzanne Turner led the attack in the second game and was helped by Nedra Distel who sparked the defense with her determined efforts.

Friday night the Longwood ladies were the guests of Bridgewater College. In the game Saturday afternoon with Bridgewater it was evident that the experience gained from the Madison game was an asset. The first game ended in a 12-5 loss, but Longwood's offense and defense pulled together and worked more like a team. The second game gave Longwood another victory to even up its record for the weekend at 2-2. Barbara Shnellings led all scorers for the weekend.

Longwood did quite well considering that this is its second lacrosse season and most of the varsity players are just learning the new sport. Positions on the field have not been established so that many of Longwood's players were asked to fill in those spaces on the field where players were lacking.

Those girls returning for their second year include Ginny Sirc, Linda Atkinson, Mary Tolley, Jane Washington, Marcia Tench, Barbara Shnellings, Sherry Grigg, Jane Erdman, Susie Marsh, Linda Southworth, Sandi Naylor, Fran Anthony, Betty Ford, Barb Jenkins, and Peggy Schultz. New members on the team this year are Carolyn Thompson, Carolyn Latham, Jane McCaffrey, Judy Doty, Nedra Distel, and Suzanne Turner.

Golf Team Attends Tournament

By JUDIE GUIDICE
The golf team, along with Dr. O'Neil and Dr. Smith, left Friday, April 25, for Greensboro, North Carolina, to attend the Women's Collegiate Invitational Golf Tournament. Friday night was spent in Greensboro.

The girls who attended the tournament were Becky Bondurant, Karen Medlin, Kathy Long, Diane Turner, and Margaret Harrison. Longwood was one of the eleven schools invited to the tournament, including Sweet Briar, Mary Baldwin, Madison, Wake Forest, University of North Carolina, Mars Hill, and Salem.

The tournament began Saturday morning. Placing first with a score of 62 was Diane Dally from Salem College. Miss Sally Baute from UNC placed second with a total score of 64. Margaret Harrison, from Longwood, placed third with a 65-stroke score. Margaret also had the lowest score, 29, for the nine holes.

After the tournament there were putting, driving, and chipping contests. Becky Bondurant placed first in the driving contest, with a 210 yard drive. With these contests, equipment was set up to take video tapes on television for instant replay.

LC Netters Down Madison, Defeated By Bridgewater

By LYNNE COLEMAN
Longwood's Varsity Tennis Team finally got on the road with its first match of the season Friday, April 25, at Madison College. The team played a match Friday and then spent the night at Bridgewater College where they played Saturday. The final score Friday was 4-3, Longwood the victors, and Saturday, the tables turned — Bridgewater won 4-3.

Lynne Coleman played the number 1 position in singles and bowed 2-6, 6-8 to Chris Shelton. Marcia Franklin in the second position beat Sally Crickard 6-3, 7-5. Anna Pettis beat Debbie Davenport 10-8, 6-3 and Betty Layne fell to Judy Dalrymple 1-6, 4-6. In doubles, Laurel Baldwin and Lynne Kwiatkowski split sets and won 7-5, 3-6, 6-0. Judy Turner and Lynda Driver defeated Richards and Drier 4-6, 6-3. Sharon Farmer and Mary Ingram won their first match on a varsity team, gave Broe and Brewster a hard time but went down, 4-6, 3-6.

Saturday at Bridgewater, Lynne Coleman was defeated by Margie Young in the number 1 position, 6-8, 3-6. Marcia Franklin won over Janet Simpson 6-1, 8-6. Anna Pettis defeated Nancy Boller in three sets 5-7, 6-2, 6-2. Betty Layne was defeated by Karen Mountain 3-6, 7-5, 3-6. In doubles, Laurel Baldwin and Lynn Kwiatkowski fell to Cape and Miller 6-8, 5-7. Judy Turner and Lynda Driver won over Andes and Bullard 6-4, 6-2. Sharon Farmer and Mary Ingram fought hard through three sets and finally dropped to Ferris and Gatton 6-1, 8-10, 2-6.

Since these were the first matches of the season, the girls looked exceptionally well, and their hopes for the remaining matches are high. They meet Lynchburg, Mary Washington, and Westhampton, and William and Mary. The next match is May 7.

Banton Attends SACUS Convention In Florida

Dr. Robert L. Banton, of the Education Department at Longwood College, recently attended a Southern Association on Children Under Six (SACUS) convention in Jacksonville, Florida. There were 1,700 members present and 13 states represented. While there, Dr. Banton heard several speakers, including Dr. James Hines, University of Maryland; Dr. Keith Osburn, University of Georgia; and other named people in the early childhood development program. The four days were spent in meetings with people and in group discussions on early childhood development — teachings and practices.

Dr. Banton said that he was able to visit three schools: a private day care center, a public day care center, and a private kindergarten. He was very impressed with the large display of childhood development material.

Dr. Banton said the overall themes of the convention were: "Educators in elementary education, specifically early childhood education, would have to reach the parents in the community and enlist their support and sell them the idea of early childhood teaching to their children." Also he said, "We must inform parents of modeling themselves, for their children often copy their parents' actions."

Dr. Banton has slides and materials from the convention. Anyone wishing to see them should get in touch with him and he will try to arrange a time when you may see them.

Of all the colleges in Virginia, only three, Longwood, Madison, and Virginia State College, were represented at this very important meeting. Longwood should be proud of the fact that the administration has a great concern about this program and saw fit to send a representative. This is a sign that Longwood wants to learn of new teaching methods and wants to progress with the times.

On behalf of the student body, thank you, Dr. Banton, and the administration!

Dr. Willett Has Got The Power!

Janice Austin then welcomed and introduced Dr. and Mrs. Henry L. Willett, Sr., Dr. Willett's parents, and Mr. and Mrs. T. Preston Turner, Mrs. Willett's parents. She then told President Willett that the student body was "honored and proud to have a president like you." A letter from Governor Godwin was read regretting that he could not attend the rally and complimenting Longwood's president as "an outstanding administrator at one of the best state-supported colleges in Virginia."

Between waving signs such as "Willett's great, See?", "Happiness is a president like Willett," and "A man who can govern women can govern a nation," the students sang Dr. Willett's two favorite songs, "Joan of Arc" and "Take the White of the Winter Snow."

Smiling, Dr. Willett said that, "It would certainly take a group of women to organize something like this." And, after a few jokes, President Willett said about the rally, that, "I think it was the biggest surprise I have ever encountered."

At 5:20 Longwood's rally was officially ended, but the happy crowds lingered on the Mall until dinner.

Dr. Bland Will Receive Her Doctoral Degree From U.Va.

By LINDA FLOYD

Miss Beatrice Bland, associate professor of education and director of the reading clinic, has recently completed work for the doctor's degree, which will be conferred upon her on June 8.

Dr. Bland, a graduate of Longwood College, comments that upon viewing her undergraduate record, one would consider her "the most unlikely candidate for a doctor's degree." However, several years later, she earned the master's degree at Columbia University and now she is about to take the doctoral degree from the University of Virginia.

Dr. Bland worked as an elementary supervisor in Rockingham and Henrico counties and held the position of educational consultant for Houghton-Mifflin Publishing Company before joining the faculty at Longwood in 1965.

Dr. Bland is excited about another position she has recently acquired. She is the chapter advisor of one of the newly-formed sororities on campus, Alpha Delta Pi. She says she had always had the yearning to be a member of a Greek-letter organization, and now at last that dream has come true.

Miss Beatrice Bland at the Longwood Education Department will receive her Doctoral Degree from U. Va. June 8.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter was received by the editor on April 28. The "Rotunda" staff wishes to publicize its contents in appreciation of the success and effect of the rally sponsored on campus April 24.

Willett Praises Student Rally

Dear Libbo:

I would like to use the medium of the Rotunda to express my appreciation to the student body for the "demonstration" held last week. Certainly April 24, 1969 is a date which I will never forget. I would also like to point out to the student body that the events of that date can conceivably mean to the College. At a time when so much student protest is being registered in other forms and other directions, Longwood has been put in a favorable position.

This morning Governor Godwin and members of the General Assembly were on our campus to review some of our needs. It was obvious to all that they were deeply impressed by the attitude of our student body. There is no way you can translate such an attitude into dollars and cents but I can't help but believe that if funds are available that the Governor and other members of the General Assembly are going to do everything that they humanly can to provide us with the facilities and equipment we have requested. If we are successful in receiving them, it will be difficult to convince me that our "demonstration" didn't play a major role in our achievement.

Sincerely,

H. I. Willett, Jr.

Face The Music, Baby

The editor realizes there exists a minority of faculty and students who are vehemently opposed to the stand which I took in supporting our recent rally. The staff has been criticized as a "tool of the administration." This minority faction also seems opposed to the viewpoint I support concerning student unrest. Now, if you feel our staff does not express the voice of the people, stand up and be counted! Identify yourselves. Publicity, through signed letters to the editor, admit your beliefs so the entire student body, a large percentage of alumnae, and state officials can see your decedent remarks. If you feel any former attempts to convey your views have been too subtle, then you have only one more issue to speak.

Last Friday, Longwood's Board of Visitors held a meeting with a number of campus representatives. They, too, wish to "thank every member of the student body for the rally in honor of Dr. Willett." This includes even those who have expressed resentment.

Mr. Henry Chesley, vice-rector of the Board commented that "this demonstration of good will was not only a wonderful thing for Longwood, but it did more for all the state colleges than any events in recent months."

Taking Mr. Chesley's commendation into consideration, imagine how embarrassed he and the other members of the Board and our president would have been if we had joined with rebel counter-parts in a campus protest. Those who feel students will accomplish more by bucking the system are not thinking logically. If the horse bucks, the rider falls.

Mr. Angus Powell, rector of the Board, claimed "the rally particularly heart-warming for those board members who were able to attend the event and witness the wholesome enthusiasm of the students." Other Board members reported numerous favorable comments throughout Virginia.

Dean Blackwell spoke at a luncheon Monday on behalf of the Board of Visitors to express their thank for our student actions. (Favorable actions, I might add.)

Why, then, do a few of you condemn the majority's actions? It takes so few of you to harm what so many of us have fought to uphold. Consider the source . . .

Directing Class To Present One-Act Plays

The directing class will present four one-act plays Monday, May 12 in Jarman beginning at 7:30.

Susan Jordana is directing Lucille Fletcher's "Sorry, Wrong Number," a suspenseful drama with bits of comedy. Glenna Lewis has the lead role of Mrs. Stevenson.

Linda Dexter chose "The Final Performance" by Charles George. It depicts a little known and highly dramatic incident in the life of Edwin Booth, brother of John Wilkes Booth. Scott Reeves portrays Edwin, with Bid Wall as Pete and Tom Garrett as Elmer.

"Home Free!" by Lanford Williams is directed by Kathy Goodwyn. A pol-nan fairy-tale quality pervades this story and helps the play achieve a tender tension between sickness and sweetness. Rich Vaughan and Pat Lucas are Lawrence and Joanna Brown.

Maggie Parker is directing "Impromptu" by Tad Mosel. This play was written for the living theatre and sets forth provocative treatment of a popular theme: How much truth and how much illusion does a person need to live and balance life? Winifred, the supporting actress, is played by Sandy Ellis and Ernest, the leading man, by Frank Faust. Edrie Bays portrays Lora, the ingenue, and Chris Roberts, Tony, the young actor.

Baptists Sponsor Tutors

Next week, "The Rotunda" will ask, "What's It All About, Longwood?" Regardless of when one asks, be it 1869 or 1969, the foremost conclusion to be drawn is that this is and will always be a teacher's college, dedicated solely to progress in education.

This year, the Baptist Student Union feels that in cooperation with the Youth Council of the Community Action Group, they contributed to that progress, establishing an approved tutoring system in the Prince Edward County Public School system. The program is conducted by Longwood College students at R.R. Moton High School.

Operating purely on a voluntary basis, slightly more than a dozen Longwood students have given of their time this year to help any student in the County Public School system who expresses a desire for a tutor.

Each semester, a list is sent from Moton High School containing the names of these students who feel that they need help in a certain area.

This year, under the direction of senior Mary Palmer, Longwood students Lillian Mustoe, Gayle Evans, Barbara Blythe, Kay Webb, Patsy Peach, Betty Ford, Brenda Kay Hammer, Candy Dickman, Nancy Martin, Sandy Smith, Rosemary Lohman, Linda Pelican, Jenny Young, Sharon Stickle, and Debby Morrison, have worked with the students individually at Moton as well as on the Longwood Campus.

Miss Marguerite Stanfield, director of the Baptist Student Center on Ely

Street, stresses that the project is not limited to Baptists. Any junior or senior in good academic standing, or any sophomore with sufficient previous background in the tutorial subject is eligible. The Baptist group attempts to merely serve as a base for the organization.

The amount of time devoted per student to the project is optional. Some participate several hours a week, some only one. The system operates on a type of availability to need ratio. They have expressed no purpose other than to provide help where it is needed. "I'm most interested in the help we can give the kids," explained Miss Stanfield. "I'd like to see some of them be able to go away to college and come back and lead their community some day."

The group hopes to organize the system again next year and in future years in Prince Edward County Public Schools. According to Miss Stanfield, there is a similar program at Radford College.

As one enters the Baptist Student Center, there is a curious message posted on the central bulletin board which spans the top of the stairs. The quotation from Gian-Carlo Menotti reads:

"Hell begins on the day when God grants a clear vision of all that we might have achieved of all the gifts which we have wasted of all that we might have done which we did not do."

Policy Concerning Curriculum Changes Affects Requirements

By LINDA FLOYD

The Academic Policies Committee has established a policy concerning the effect of the new curriculum changes that will occur next year on those students presently enrolled in the college.

A student who will graduate in 1970 or afterwards may choose to satisfy the general education requirements in either the catalogue under which they entered or the catalogue for the year 1969-70. However, the student must fulfill the requirements of whichever catalogue she chooses in its entirety. There can be no interchanging between the requirements in the two catalogues.

The new curriculum provides for major changes as to the actual required subjects that a student must take in order to meet general education requirements. One example of how this policy would affect the student lies in the changes made in the History and Science Departments. Now a student must take two semesters of American History and two semesters of one laboratory science. Under the new curriculum a student is required to take only one semester of American History (filling in the other with a subject of her own choosing from within a specific area) and she must take one semester each of two laboratory sciences. In other words, a student must fulfill all the requirements of every department in one catalogue.

Testing In Public Schools Is Topic For Last Forum

"The State Supervisor Views the Testing Program in the Public Schools" is the topic of Mr. C. L. Kent's speech to be given May 13 at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffers Auditorium.

Mr. Kent is currently Supervisor of Guidance and Testing in the State Department of Education in Richmond.

Mr. Kent, a graduate of the University of Richmond, received his Master's in Education at the University of Virginia. While in college, he was a member of Phi Delta Kappa (honorary educational), Omicron Delta Kappa (honorary leadership), and Kappa Sigma (social fraternity).

Mr. Kent has been a counselor with the State Consultation Service, Directing Counselor, and Assistant State Supervisor of Guidance. He is a member of Virginia Personnel and Guidance Association, American Personnel and Guidance Association and has been president of the Southern Association for Counselor Education and Supervision.

This forum is being sponsored by the Education Department at Longwood and is the last in their series of forums for this year.

Friday night in Jarman Auditorium, "Sing Out Students" will give its last performance of the year. Jettie Paschal and Sheila O'Neil will present their final performances. "Up With People" buttons, records, and song books will be on sale during intermission. No admission will be charged, but donations will be accepted.

Archery Practice Begins For Varsity, Intramural Teams

Archery season has begun. Varsity archers, under the direction of Miss Brockenbrough have been practicing since spring vacation. The team has not definitely been chosen as yet, it depends upon the girls' practice scores. Among the girls practicing for varsity archery are Ginny Sirc, Linda "Moose" Atkinson, Mary Tolley, Judie Guidice, Penny Everly, Georgia Freeman and Susan Stutz. Among these Judie Guidice, Ginny Sirc and Penny Eberly shot last year.

So far in practice the underclassmen have been shooting qualifying scores of 400 or more. Susan Stutz, a freshman, has reached a high of 457. Georgia Freeman, also a freshman, a high of 451 and Judie Guidice a high of 461. The matches are scheduled beginning Wednesday, May 7. "As far as intercollegiate competition is concerned, we don't know how we stand because we don't know what the other girls shoot," says Judie Guidice about the up and coming competition. "But if five of us can shoot well in the 400's, we have a good chance of winning."

Intramural archery practice has informally begun. Miss "B" has had supervised practice for those girls interested. Most of these girls are in archery classes. These girls will shoot a regular Columbia round just as the varsity team. The Columbia round includes four rounds of six arrows each at the 50 yard line, 40 yards, and 30 yards, the total score being tallied for competition.

There is still time to practice for intramural archery. So go out and support your class and color.

Longwood Fencers Place Second, Third In Handicap Meet

Several members of the Longwood fencing team traveled to V.C.U. for an A.F.L.A. Handicap foil meet on May 3. Those who participated were Phyllis Colombaro, Patti Coogan, Ellen Cahill and Sue Meador.

All of the contestants were equaled on the basis of past experience. A handicap was given to those fencers who had reached the semifinals in the state meet at William and Mary in March.

Phyllis Colombaro and Ellen Cahill placed second and third respectively in the meet. The awards for second and third won in the V.C.U. meet two weeks ago by Judy Thomas and Mary Baldwin were also presented.

The Athletic Association will have an open point file May 20 in the Rotunda after dinner. Check your points!

The Varsity Lacrosse team poses for the Rotunda Photographer before the Westhampton. They will travel to Hollins Friday for the State Tournament.

Lacrosse Team Victorious Over Westhampton, Fall To Sweet Briar

The Longwood College Varsity Lacrosse team played their first home game Wednesday on Barlow Field, beating Westhampton College 6-4. The first half was a successful one, with Suzanne Turner's two goals leading the blue and whites onward.

Linda "Moose" Atkinson, Carolyn Thompson, and Barbara Jenkins were instrumental in holding off the advances of the Westhampton attack. The attack and defense wings were expedient as links between Longwood's attack and defense. Barbara Snellings did her usual good job in scoring. She was aided on the other offensive plays by the other homes and wings. Longwood's team pulled together and showed good team spirit and enthusiasm in their first win at home.

In their second home game on Friday Longwood met with Sweet Briar College whose coach this year is a 1967 graduate of Longwood, Diane Lee Davis.

The first half ended with a 6-3 score in favor of Sweet Briar. After halftime the Sweet Briar team returned refreshed and with newly gained strength, and their offense went on to build up a large lead. Despite Longwood's efforts to close the gap the score ended with Longwood 7 points and the opponents, 12 points.

Nedra Distel was Longwood's first real casualty of the year as she had to leave the game because of injuries. She was first hit on the head with a lacrosse stick and several minutes later was struck across the fingers in a second accident as she was attempting to defend the goal.

This Friday and Saturday four members of the Longwood lacrosse team will journey to Roanoke to the State

Virginia Women's Lacrosse Association Tournament to be held at Hollins College. The girls will play three games against other college teams and from these matches two all-college teams will be chosen. These girls will go on to the National Tournament to be held at the beginning of June. The State tournament will close out the second season for varsity lacrosse at Longwood. Jinx Washington, member of the varsity lacrosse team, feels that the skills and experience gained in this second season of lacrosse will be beneficial to next year's team.

Miss Huffman, team coach, also feels that the girls have gained a lot of valuable experience, and she is already looking forward to next year's lacrosse season.

Members Of Math Department Attend Meeting At RMWC

Members of the Mathematics Department at Longwood have recently attended two math conferences in their efforts to keep abreast of the current trends in their field.

A conference on mathematics in two-year colleges, attended by Mrs. Cada Parrish and Dr. Blanche Badger, was held on the campus of Randolph-Macon Woman's College the latter part of this year. This conference was sponsored by the Committee on the Undergraduate Program in Mathematics.

Dr. Badger, a former participant in CUPM conferences, served on a panel discussing Mathematics for Elementary Teachers. Other panel members included representatives from Radford College, Ferrum Junior College, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, VPI, Dabney S. Lancaster College, University of Virginia, and Virginia Western Community College.

The panel, consisting of mathematicians with extensive experience in various phases of education, at four-year colleges and universities as well as at two-year colleges, discussed the problems evolving in the transfer from a two-year college to a four-year college or university.

Miss Josephine Magnifico and Mrs. Cada Parrish attended the 47th annual meeting of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics from the 22nd to the 26th of April in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

There were over 100 topics being discussed from which the ladies could choose the areas in which they were most interested. One trend which both Miss Magnifico and Mrs. Parrish observed was a new emphasis on geometry in the elementary schools. The conference also tried to establish a correlation between the community college and the four-year colleges in reference to the field of mathematics.

There were many noted authors and mathematicians at the conference, including a former Secretary of Education. Mrs. Parrish says that she even met the author of the textbook from which she teaches.

Tennis Team Members Attend Tournament At Mary Baldwin

Four members of Longwood's Varsity Tennis Team represented the college Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at Mary Baldwin College in the Middle Atlantic Lawn Tennis Association Tournament, a division of the Intercollegiate Tennis Association for Women. Twenty-three schools from New York to Mississippi were represented.

Wednesday night when the girls arrived, they immediately began to practice on the new courts. There were hostesses to take care of the girls and many activities for them. Among these were a tea and reception for all the players and coaches. The tournament was headed by Miss Mary Jane Donnelly, head tennis coach at Mary Baldwin.

There were singles and doubles divisions and girls could enter both. Seeded number one in the singles division, Laura DuPont from University of North Carolina at Greensboro and seeded number one in doubles was Laura and her partner, Kathy Warden. Competing with schools such as Mississippi and Florida State University where tennis is played all year, Longwood players did well. Lynne Coleman, Lynn Chamberlin, Betty Layne and Sharon Farmer played both singles and doubles. Even though they did not win a trophy, they gained a lot of experience from playing and watching excellent tennis. The tournament should be an asset to each girl.

LC Junior Varsity Tennis Team Beats Ferrum College, 4-1

In their first tennis match, the Junior Varsity tennis team defeated Ferrum Junior College at Longwood last Thursday 4-1.

Freda Lunsford playing number one singles for the baby blue and whites had an easy time defeating Pam Wilmoth 6-1 and 6-2. Margaret Puley played two good sets but was finally downed 6-4 and 6-2 by Carla Ennis. Linda Overstreet defeated her opponent 10-8 and 6-2.

Cartie Keene and Lise Worthington defeated the team of Crozier and Gilbert in doubles and likewise Longwood's Bobbie Thurston and Sherry Dossel beat Denner and Thomas of Ferrum.

Other girls on the team who helped out at the match were Cathy Smoral, Kathy Parker and Marty Repole. Managers for the JV team are Debbie Kinney and Trisha Shaw.

Miss Callaway, the JV coach, was pleased with the way the girls looked in their first match. "They are gaining lots of experience and the rest of the season looks very good," she said. The Junior Varsity tennis team has another match at home May 8 with Stratford.

Students in Dr. Hooker's English 326 class will participate in a Story Hour on May 7, 14, and 21 at 4:00 p.m. in the classroom of the library. Those participating include Anna Lineweaver, Betty Simons, Diane Stout, Linda Tuck, Pam Drummond, and Ellen Lyon. All children of faculty and staff members are invited to attend.

Mary Baldwin provided hospitable staying conditions. Sharon and Lynne stayed with a professor in the German department, and Lynn and Betty stayed with the head of the music department. The girls had a wonderful trip and learned a great deal. They hope to attend again next year with a lot of improvement and hopes of some winners.

Mrs. Phyllis Harris, tennis coach, drove the girls to Staunton and she was accommodated in Holiday Inn. She also felt the girls gained a great deal of experience and some new desires.

Longwood's next tennis matches are Wednesday, May 7, here with Mary Washington, and May 14 and 15 here. The Junior Varsity plays Thursday, May 8 on Barlow Court.

Students' Art Work Fills Exhibit Room And Hall

By MARY ALICE CARMODY
The Library Exhibit Room, usually filled with the works of professional artists, is now brimming with the work of students. Yes, it's the Annual Student Art Exhibit and will continue until May 21.

This year's show is different than past shows in that there are catalogues available listing the artists - making the show much more professional.

Outside of the exhibit room are graphics and batiks and drawings on the wall. One interesting printing is #32 by Carolyn Henderson. In two parts, this work illustrates the Black/White situation. Another interesting work is one made of styrofoam and modeling paste (#33) by Donna Wadsworth, illustrating the word "Crash." On the opposite wall there is a striking batik (#42) of purple grapes by Carolyn Allen, and also a serigraph of fall trees done in the style of the pointillists (#52, Gail Blount).

In the exhibit room itself, there are weavings, jewelry, enamel work, sculpture, prints, and paintings. An interesting ceramic work in this room is a bottle done in earth colors by Melinda Mettley (#36).

A blazing red sun shining over a city street is an acrylic painting by Beverly Perryman (#33). An acrylic painting using bright-colored tissue paper (#41) was done by Pat Linamen. This painting uses three heads with the middle head painted as if it were to be a paint-by-number painting.

There are many more paintings and other art work, so come look for yourself. See what your fellow students have accomplished. And after you've seen the exhibit in the library, go to Second Floor Grainger and view the works on the bulletin boards and in the painting rooms. It's an interesting way to spend some time.

A study of forms in sculpture is displayed in the library exhibit. The exhibit will continue until May 21.

Mrs. Lemen Attends Art Conference At The Hotel Roanoke

By MARY ALICE CARMODY
Miss Bedford, Miss Bishop, Miss Leitch, and Mrs. Lemen attended the Spring Art Conference, sponsored by the State Department of Education, at the Hotel Roanoke, April 25-26. The theme of this year's conference was "Planning Curriculums of Excellence for Art Education."

At this conference attended by elementary and secondary art teachers, supervisors, and college art professors, Dr. Mayo Bryce, president of Moore College of Art, Philadelphia, and Mr. Baylor E. Nichols, Supervisor of Art Education in the State Department of Education, were the main speakers for the Friday session.

On Saturday, Dr. John Benz, head of the Department of Art at the University of South Carolina, and Mr. Charles R. Flynn, Assistant Supervisor in the State Department of Education, spoke.

Miss Bishop, Assistant Professor of Art at Longwood, was a participant in the symposium "Planning Curriculums of Excellence for Art Education." This symposium was moderated by Dr. Herbert Burgart, Dean of the Art School of Virginia Commonwealth University.

Another event of interest in the Art Department is that Miss Bishop has just had a print accepted by the Society of American Graphics Artists for their 15th Annual Exhibit. This exhibit is at the Associated American Artists Gallery in New York and will run from May 5-30.

Mrs. Jane Callaway will conduct art lecture here on May 7 and 8.

CRAYOLA Makers Sponsor Creative Art Education Session

One-hundred and forty students from Longwood College will attend an art lecture and demonstration session on May 7 and 8, 1969 from 4-5 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. in Jeffers Auditorium.

A free educational service provided by Binny & Smith, Inc., manufactures of CRAYOLA crayons and other school art supplies, the sessions will be conducted by Mrs. Jane Callaway, who has taught extensively and holds a Master's degree from Columbia University.

Outstanding Acting Makes Final Play A Great Success

By PAT LUCAS

The Longwood Players' final production of the year, William Gibson's "The Miracle Worker," provided a most entertaining and worthwhile evening.

Sandy Peterson as Helen Keller and Cookie Howell as Annie Sullivan played their roles superbly. Their enthusiasm combined with a considerable amount of talent set forth two very strong characters who, for most of the show, succeeded in overshadowing the remaining cast members. Both should be commended for excellent performances.

In comparison, Kate and Captain Keller did not fill their roles to their capacities. Randy Hallman as Captain Keller lacked the force of a stern disciplinarian. The loving warmth of the mother was missing from Teresa Seaman's portrayal of Kate Keller.

Blake Adams' performance as James Keller was most effective. Viney, Elvira Beverly, Percy, James Rowe, Martha, Debbie Davis; Aunt Ev, Ann Taylor; and Doctor Anagnos, Frank Faust; also did well in their supporting capacity.

The set was very impressive and lent much to the total unity of the play. The use of black, white and grey in props, costumes and set most ingenious in depicting Helen's lonely colorless world. The sound and lighting effects also contributed much to the successful staging of the play.

"The Miracle Worker" showed a tremendous amount of hard work by both the cast and crews. Their efforts plus the directing of Mr. Melsness combined to produce a memorable show.

Miss Lora Bernard Retires, Scholarship Given In Her Honor

After thirty-three years of teaching, fifteen at Longwood, Miss Lora M. Bernard is retiring. When asked how she felt about this retirement she replied, "I have mixed feelings. It's nice to retire, but I'll miss teaching and the girls. I hope they'll keep in touch." She has taught from the first grade to college level.

Miss Bernard has been a faculty member of the Home Economics Department here since 1954. Her plans for the future are incomplete.

She is a native of Tennessee. She received her B.S. degree at Carson-Newman College and her Masters at the University of Tennessee, where she worked thirty hours beyond her Masters.

She was dietitian at Carson-Newman for eight years. She was there during the war when 250-275 Navy men were stationed there. "I thoroughly enjoyed working with them," she recalls.

When she heard that the Home Economics Scholarship was named in her honor, she was near tears. "I was very touched. It was a surprise."

Alpha Psi Omega Initiates Nine Into Dramatic Honorary

Time: 6:00 a.m. on May 13
Place: the dimly lit stage of Jarman Auditorium

Although the silence was intermittently interrupted by a hushed dialogue, there was still a calm but mysterious atmosphere enveloping the stage. Black and white figures mysteriously walked across the empty set.

Could the spirit of Dr. Jarman have been visiting his namesake, as here-say often claims? Although Dr. Jarman's spirit may have been present at the time, there was yet another kind of spirit prevailing in the atmosphere at that early hour. The spirit and magic of the theatre as embodied in the hearts and minds of the nine, white-clad pledges who were awaiting initiation into the national dramatic fraternity, Alpha Psi Omega, diffused throughout the environment.

In order to become a member of the honorary, the pledges had to audition for a permanent place in the Iota Tau Cast of the national cast. Their performances and qualifications were judged by the academically-clad honorary members. This performance was but a final test of the students' spirit and love of the theatre. For many semesters the pledges had worked on various Jarman productions to earn at least fifty points to be considered for the honor; each crew position and cast part held by the individual denotes a certain amount of points.

Alpha Psi Omega congratulates its new cast members: Sharon Bourne, Maria Bays, Kathy Goodwin, Susan Jordan, Sandy Peterson, Maggie Parker, Vivian Vascotto, Kitty Wyman, and Jenny Young.

The Young Republican Club of Longwood College will have a powder-puff football game with U. Va. on May 18 at two o'clock on Barlow Field.

Following the game, the YR's will hold a picnic for the U. Va. group. Later that evening, the two clubs will have a party.

Freshman Recital

Miss Ann Freshman presented her Senior Recital on Sunday, May 11, 1969, at 4:00 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium. Ann, a contralto, is a music education major concentrating in voice. Presently a student of Mr. James McCombs, she will teach upon graduation.

The recital included "Four Biblical Songs" by Divakar, "Samson of Dabha" by Saint-Saens, "The Medium" by Menotti, "Silent Noon" by Williams, "When They Come Back" and "I've Heard an Ocean Talk Sometimes" by Copland, and "May-Day Carol" arranged by Taylor.

Ann's musically-related activities include membership in Sigma Alpha Iota, Music Educator's National Conference, and Jarman Singers. She has won district, regional, and state awards in voice contests sponsored by the National Association of Teachers of Singing. Other campus activities include chairman of the Honors Council and membership in Baptist Student Union.

Letters To The Editor

Dear E.C.B.,

In your May 7 editorial, "Face The Music, Baby," you launch a puzzling assault on the "minority of faculty and students" who might feel that the student newspaper staff "does not express the voice of the people" on campus.

This is puzzling because you seem to be outflanking your own editorial policy. You claim to express "the voice of the people." But according to the last sentence on the masthead of your editorial page, "Opinions expressed are those of the weekly editorial board and its columnists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the student body or administration."

Nevertheless, undaunted, you persist, charging those who think you might not be the voice of the people to "publicly . . . admit (their) beliefs so the entire student body, a large percentage of alumnae, and state officials can eye (their) decadent remarks."

Now, we had known that in other parts of the world, newspapers pretend to represent the voice of the people and call on "state officials" to "eye" dissenters who make "decadent remarks." But we had thought that in the Western World it is generally recognized that a newspaper's opinions are its own, and that letters to the editor express the opinions of the individuals who write them.

We had not known it is now possible, by some statistical miracle, for the editor to pretend that a collection of editorial statements represents more than individual opinions. And we had certainly not suspected it is now possible that one or two such statements could be considered the "voice of the people."

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert N. Wood, Jr.

Dear Editor,

It seemed that the editor of "The Rotunda" was considerably less than accurate in the April 30 editorial in saying, "As for the handful of students who conferred (sic) in last week's downtown march . . . you have a right to express concern in local matters. However, several Richmond newspaper releases removed your 'rose-colored glasses.'" If "rose-colored glasses" means to the editor what it usually implies, i.e., an unrealistically cheerful and optimistic view, then the specs were hardly on the student demonstrators. They were aware of what Miss Ball chooses to ignore — or is, if possible, ignorant of: this college is located in a community nationally notorious for its race relations. Yet her May 7 editorial, when she said that those who disagreed with her ideas could use her paper to air their "decadent remarks," can hardly be considered an improvement. We have no quarrel with the rally for Dr. Willett, but we do have a quarrel with a college newspaper that ignores matters that are extremely relevant to the world today. While the Longwood students stood up for their President, the local high school students were also standing up for someone they admire and respect. And these students were also standing up for something more — a better education. It seems that a college whose major aim is teacher education should pay more attention to the world outside this campus. Longwood College and "The Rotunda" seem to forget they do not live in a vacuum. A college newspaper should reflect the issues of the world in which we must live and teach. If it is "decadent" to stand up for better education, then Longwood must be a decadent school. What you call "rose-colored glasses," we call believing in, and striving for, the finest possible educational system for all. We are convinced that the majority of Longwood students and faculty would like to have a newspaper that has something meaningful to say.

Gerald J. Pyle, Jr., Ben Sandige, Janis Ragland, Barbi Vincent, Mary Kinneen, Karen Guthrie, L. Dabney Holloran, Sue Slate, Stephanie Mato, Karen Derhuss, Barbara Lance, Lee Letkuecher, Jeannie Kay, Linda Amick, and Gayle Evans

EDITOR'S NOTE: After having discussed the contents of this letter with Dean Blackwell, the student body should be informed that the reason these groups cannot come on our campus this year is because of lack of time. However, they have been given permission to appear on our campus next fall. E. C. B.

Dear Editor,

There is one striking difference between me and most of the others who are attending Longwood College. In the minds of some students there is an immense and justified pride in what our college is doing. Until recently I could have said the same. There has been a grave injustice committed and I feel that the student body should be aware of it.

The Political Science Club had scheduled speakers from the Students for Democratic Society and the John Birch Society for next week (May 12-16). This past Wednesday they were informed that these people could not come to speak to our campus at this time. A reason given to the club was that the calendar was too full for next week. Imagine the embarrassment of those who had to call these speakers to inform them that they would not be permitted to appear.

Many questions come to my mind. Why was the Political Science Club chosen as the organization whose speaker had to be cancelled? Is it because they would present radical views and could possibly stir some controversy? Is someone afraid that exposure to these organizations may induce some students to start a SDS or JBS on this campus? Is someone worried that the public or perhaps the legislature will think about having these speakers on this campus at this time?

I realize that the prevention of these speakers is not a matter that concerns all the student body, but I do feel that because this is an educational school attempts to limit the intellectual experience are matters that concern everyone of us. For that reason I have brought this matter to your attention. This was an attempt to bring to our campus something of today, something in which some of our fellow students are involved. This was an opportunity to see why these two organizations do not belong on this campus. But unfortunately, at this time, we are not being given the chance to have this truly educational experience. We are not even being given a chance to make the decision on our own.

Carolyn Cummins

Dear Miss Ball,

The silliness of your editorial statements last week are obvious to any informed reader. One need only peruse Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary to find that "decadent" means: "one of a school of French writers of the late 19th century, including Baudelaire, Verlaine, and Mallarmé, who cultivated the abnormal, artificial, and neurotic in subject." You call for decadent views. But how can you expect these fine gentlemen to respond in print when, I fear, they are deceased. Am I to detect a note of spiritualistic belief in your appeal to these ex-literature. I should think the student body, alumnae, and state officials, be most upset to learn that a student leader is publicly voicing dead purveyors of abnormality and neuritis. Please consider this letter a prayer that you will soon return to your senses.

Sincerely,
John McCrimmon

Archery Team Wins Over RMWC; Meets Westhampton Friday

Wednesday, May 7, the Longwood archery team went to Randolph-Macon College for Women in Lynchburg. The archery team consists of the five girls who shoot their best scores during the week before the match.

Miss Brockenbrough along with the five girls, left at 2:30 in a state car to their first of three meets. The girls representing Longwood were Penny Eberly, sophomore, Judie Guidice, sophomore; Georgie Freeman, Susan Stutz, and Debbie Ellenbrand, all freshmen.

The girls really didn't know quite what to expect, and most of them being freshmen and inexperienced, were a little wary of the results. Nevertheless, Longwood archers showed their skill. The scores were not exactly up to par with the practices—Georgia shooting a high of 396, the others being over 350, but the total score was 1836, some 500 points over Randolph-Macon's total score.

There are two more meets scheduled, Tuesday, the archers will go to Madison College, Friday, Westhampton will come here. Miss Brockenbrough is thinking on the lines of winning all three meets.

As for intramural archery, girls have been practicing on their own, and with some supervision from Miss Brockenbrough. It seems as though there is a lack of Green and Whites out for archery, but rumor has it that the Green and Whites have a secret weapon! If you are interested in class and color archery, keep your eyes on the AA bulletin board—the Red and Whites are trying desperately to find that weapon! So get out and support your class and color!

Exam Changes

The faculty of Longwood College approved a program at its May meeting which will add more flexibility to our present examination schedule.

Under the new program, the present examination schedule remains intact. However, most examination are scheduled for one evening throughout the examination period. With the instructor's approval, a student may take her examination at either of the two times for which it is scheduled. Allowing a student to take her exam at either of the two times is the prerogative of the instructor since some classes do not lend themselves to dual examinations.

Madrigal Singers performed last week in the Sunken Garden. Longwood Madrigal Singers include music majors from the freshman, sophomore, and junior classes.

Team Members Participate In Lacrosse Tournament At Hollins

Several members of the Longwood Lacrosse team left Friday morning at 9:00 for a Lacrosse tournament held at Hollins College near Roanoke, May 9-10. These girls were Jane McCaffrey, Linda "Moose" Atkinson, Ginny Siro, Mary Tolley, Nedra Distel, Jinx Washington, Suzanne Turner, Carolyn Thompson, Marcia Tench, Barbara Snelling, Susie Marsh, Linda Southworth, Sherry Strigg, and Manager Maxine Stone, Miss Huffman, the Lacrosse coach, also accompanied the team.

The team was greeted by a small fire on the Hollins campus near the Lacrosse field, but it was kept under control and soon extinguished. The first game for the Longwood team was Friday afternoon against Madison. The first half was slow for the Longwood Ladies, but the second half was much better with Madison scoring only three goals in the second half, however the final score ended with a 16-7 victory for Madison.

The team stayed overnight at a local motel and rested up for the next day's activities. Saturday morning Longwood played the Sweet Briar team at 9:00; this was also a loss for Longwood 7-1. The next game was at 10:20 against Mary Washington, which was a better played game all around, but Mary Wash pulled ahead in the second half with a 4-2 win.

The games were followed by a picnic on the Hollins campus for the attending teams were Longwood, Madison, Sweet Briar, Mary Washington, Bridgewater, Lynchburg, Hollins, William and Mary, and a team composed of alumnae, the Virginia Club Team.

Then a meeting of the Lacrosse Division of the DGWS team was held. A new constitution was adopted and a new president, Joy Archer, was elected for the coming year.

The selection of the number one and two teams to attend the national tournament was then made. The first team consisted mainly of William and Mary players while the second team was more diverse, Barbara Snellings, third home for the Longwood team, was given Honorable Mention by the judges.

Despite the scores of the three games, the Longwood players feel the tournament was good experience for future seasons.

Woodcut By Annie Lee Ross Included In Virginia Exhibit

A woodcut by Miss Annie Lee Ross, Associate professor of art at Longwood College, has been included in the tenth annual Virginia Printmakers Exhibit now open at Newcomb Hall on the campus of the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. This spring exhibition is sponsored annually by the University Union and is open to all Virginia artists. The judges for the current exhibit were Mr. James Hagon, assistant professor of art at the University of Virginia and Mrs.

Ruth Latter, an art critic of Charlottesville. Miss Ross has been an exhibitor in most of the Virginia Printmakers Exhibitions. In the past, Her woodcut is entitled "Owlets."

A proof of this print has recently been added to the permanent collection of the Sandzen Memorial Gallery at Lindsborg, Kansas. This gallery, built in memory of the eminent Swedish artist Birger Sandzen, is on the campus of Bethany College. Miss Ross was a student in the Art School there, studying painting under Dr. Sandzen. She later returned to Bethany College to serve as Dr. Sandzen's assistant.

LC Varsity Netters Defeat MW JV Team Downed By Stratford

Wednesday, May 7, was the varsity tennis team's first home match. The girls met Mary Washington at 3:30 on Barlow courts and came out victorious.

Lynne Coleman played no. 1 position singles; Marcia Franklin, no. 2 and Anna Pettis, no. 3. Lynda Driver and Judy Turner were one of the doubles teams, and Laurel Baldwin and Lynn Kwiatkowski were the other. Longwood won all matches and hopes to be victorious this week. With the luck of pretty weather, Longwood will play Tuesday against Roanoke, Wednesday against Westhampton and Thursday against Lynchburg College.

The girls have high hopes.

The Junior varsity played Thursday against Stratford College. It seemed the match would be canceled after a rain, but the players swept the courts and the matches finally got underway. Perhaps the wind was a factor, or it was just "one of those days," but Longwood bowed to the Stratford girls. Freda Lunsford played no. 1 singles position for the junior varsity. The girls have another match Wednesday, May 14, at home.

Longwood Golfers Victorious Winning Streak Goes To Four

What's It All About, Longwood?

Dr. Banton's 9-month-old son shows an interest in an ordinary pan.

Wondering what to do with it now that he has picked it up Robby, contemplates the opportunities.

Is this slight beginnings of musical talent or a creative expression?

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Robert Lee Banton, one of Longwood's outstanding education professors, editorializes in "An Important Beneficiary." He stresses the importance of early childhood education and emphasizes exposing the child to as many experiences as possible before he enters the first grade.

Dr. Banton received his doctorate last summer from the University of Virginia. Here we see his nine-month-old son, Robby, becoming aware of, and developing perceptual concepts of sound, light, movement, and animal life. —E. C. B.

An Important Beneficiary

By Dr. Robert Lee Banton

During the last decade, our nation has witnessed an increased emphasis toward education for the four and five-year-old child. Prior to this time, regard by public school educators for education of preschool age children could be described as oscillatory.

Why are educators giving an abundance of attention to early childhood education? The answer to this question is quite obvious if one simply looks at his environment. Our society is, to use an old phrase, rapidly changing and is changing more rapidly than ever. Newspapers, magazines, and research reports reveal hundreds of discoveries and changes that are occurring every day. With the increasing number of discoveries in the various disciplines and the societal changes that follow, the American public is quickly realizing that not all of its citizens can keep pace with the times. With approximately 22 per cent of the population categorized as disadvantaged, the American public school is becoming less and less able to cope with those disadvantaged youth who probably enter school with a learning readiness retardation of two to three years. Thus, one has a solid argument in favor of programs such as Project Head Start.

Another cause for the educators' interest in early childhood education is the increased number and percentage of working mothers. As of November 1, 1966, the Census Bureau estimated that there are 21 million children under five years of age. Of these, about 3 million children have working mothers. With the number of working mothers steadily increasing, educators are realizing that many children are being subjected to a less-than-desirable educational environment. Thus, they are feeling the need to provide early childhood education.

A third reason for interest in this area is the increasing amount of data from research on this age group. The Space Age has made educators take a long look at what they are doing and upon what bases their goals rest. Teachers, administrators, and college personnel, after reviewing early studies in the field of child development, found the glaring message that more current research in the area of child development was needed. A review of child development research from 1957 to date will reveal an increase in the amount of study in this area. Impetus has been given to this area of research by the National Defense Education Act of 1958 and Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

This writer has noted that the increased interest in early childhood education arose from concern for the disadvantaged preschool youth, concern for the children of working mothers, and the renewed interest in research the area of child development. These are not the only causes for the recent trend toward more concern for early childhood education but they do represent major causes.

Can there be dangers ahead for those persons working to develop programs in early childhood education? What are some of the pitfalls that face school systems in the Commonwealth of Virginia which are establishing kindergartens? Two major dangers should be noted.

As Virginia schools move toward the establishment of kindergartens, many systems may be in such haste that they neglect to utilize sound curriculum development procedures. For example, they may fail to give adequate consideration to the needs of the learner in their own community setting. One area of curriculum in certain schools that is already deficient is that area known as the statement of goals or objectives. That some of the schools in the commonwealth do not have clear specific behavioral statements of their aims causes one to wonder how they evaluate their teaching. After all, education is a profession which concerns itself with behavioral changes. Hopefully, the school system moving into the area of kindergarten education will consider the needs of the learner in relation to its community. Secondly, it is hoped that the school will state its goals for the kindergarten classroom and it will assist those people concerned with the evaluation process.

A second danger is the placement of an inadequately prepared teacher in the kindergarten classroom. Numerous investigations have revealed that the classroom teacher is a potent force in all phases of the development of the child. This is specially true in the kindergarten classroom because it represents the first exposure of the child to formal education. During that year, many aspects of the child's development may be "put in gear" for the first time.

Because many authors note that the kindergarten serves a role in the process of socialization, perhaps it would be appropriate to illustrate the important role of the teacher in classroom socialization. Glidewell and others in "Review of Child Development Research," pointed out that numerous researchers confirm the belief that the classroom teacher holds a great amount of social power. They stated:

All . . . investigations have indicated systematic effects of the degree of dispersion and the manner of employment of teacher social power and emotional acceptance. Intervention of any sort at any point in the system has been demonstrated to induce effects in all the related parts and, sometimes, throughout the classroom social system. The manner of intervention by a teacher into the affairs of individual pupil not only influences the response of the individual pupil, but also (a) the behavior of many watching pupils, (b) the perception by the peer group of the teacher's power and competence, and (c) the perception by the group of the target pupil's power and competence. In sum, the whole social organization and work pattern of the classroom. Some modes of intervention (e.g., firmness versus roughness) produce more intense and more widespread effects. The effects include changes in (a) interpersonal conflict and anxiety, (b) rate of interaction, (c) divergence and convergence of opinions, (d) autonomous work and independent thought, (e) responsible commitment to agreements, (f) conformance and nonconformance to teacher and peer influence attempts, and (g) sometimes simple disruption of the learning experiences of the classroom. (P. 234)

In short, the teacher of kindergarten children must have a thorough, not basic, understanding of child growth and development. Especially important is knowledge of how children learn and what factors influence learning. It must be remembered that education is concerned with behavioral changes and a behavioral change implies learning. And the kindergarten teacher must have a basic understanding of the physical and biological sciences, mathematics and philosophy, literature and language, social sciences, and the fine arts.

A question which is being asked by many of the students at Longwood is "What is Longwood College doing to provide competently trained kindergarten teachers?" It is to this question that I will now address myself.

The Department of Education considered the question of what constitutes adequate training of a kindergarten teacher and arrived at the following. Three phases of training should be utilized—a general education phase, an interdisciplinary phase, and a professional phase which includes laboratory and practicum experiences.

Regarding the general education phase, it is believed by this writer, and others, that a kindergarten teacher education program which endeavors to train teachers who are responsive to the needs of individuals, society, and their profession must begin with a broad general education program focused upon the liberal arts. General education should be taken by the student to mean certain humanity, social sci-

Could this be taken as an avid interest in current events or just idle curiosity?

One of the most important concepts developed in life, is the self concept. Robby takes a good long look at himself.

Early Childhood Education . . .

An interest in animal life and the child's environment are exhibited by Robby as he is occupied by his father's puppy. The puppy is curious at first but then goes on his way. Robby has encountered a form of life different from his own, his individual concept of the dog is different from that of anyone else.

Teachers' Job - Changing Behavior

ence, natural science, mathematics, and health and physical education courses.

During the school year, the kindergarten teacher may cause the five-year-old child to mentally manipulate concepts taken from many disciplines. It is the opinion of this writer that a prime function of kindergarten education is to provide the child with percepts of many subject areas which will later assist him in the development of concepts. This percept to concept sequence requires that the teacher have a background or fund of concepts of the various subject areas which are usually "taught" in the kindergarten. An assumption is made that one cannot teach a subject for which he has little or no academic training. It is for this reason that an elementary education major at Longwood College is required to pursue what may be called an interdisciplinary major. In short, the taking of these courses will provide the prospective teacher with a satisfactory background of concepts of the subjects which may be "covered" in the kindergarten classroom. The subjects include art fundamentals, biological sciences, mathematics, music, physical and health sciences, physical sciences, speech fundamentals, world geography, and world history.

It was stated previously that the teacher must have a thorough knowledge of human growth and development. One must remember that a teacher's job is to change behavior in a pre-determined way. As an attempt to provide the prospective teacher with a thorough knowledge of human growth and development, a block of courses which may be called the professional phase are included. This consists of the following: Developmental psychology, educational psychology, language arts, teaching reading, principles of kindergarten and elementary education, measurement, philosophy of education, seminars, and student teaching.

As one progresses through these courses, she will acquire concepts of growth and development (behavior) and how she should utilize these concepts to change the behavior of her kindergarten pupils to a desired state. A new technique which is being utilized to some extent in the education department is micro-teaching. Besides being told how to teach, the student will be given practice in teaching by "scaled-down" simulated teaching episodes. This micro-teaching episode is placed on videotape and analyzed by the student, class, and professor. In other words, the student is able to see and evaluate herself as others do. This technique utilizes the principle that active participation is more conducive to learning than passive attending. Thus a student is given practice in teaching prior to the student teaching in a "live" kindergarten classroom.

It has been stated that teaching is not ONE of the most important professions, it is THE most important profession because everyone must pass through our hands to get where they are going. The truth of this statement points to the almost overwhelming responsibility placed on the shoulders of every educator - whether he be a professor or kindergarten teacher.

In my opinion, Longwood College offers one of the finest teacher training programs in the United States. Four points support this contention. First, the student who graduates from Longwood has been exposed to a body of knowledge which provides her with an excellent opportunity to function as an effective citizen. Second, the graduate is prepared with an abundant wealth of academic knowledge which she may utilize in her kindergarten, elementary, or secondary classroom. Third, a graduate of Longwood College knows that her job is to teach children - not subjects! She leaves for a teaching career having a thorough knowledge of the dynamics of behavior (not all teacher training colleges can make this important claim). Last but not least, the Longwood graduate knows that she must keep up with latest research in a rapidly changing field. The most important beneficiary of this kind of teacher is the young child.

Robby wonders what he sees. Could it be someone else?

After all these pictures, what baby wouldn't be just a little tired?

This is a crawltogeter, a technique for teaching the child how to crawl.

After it is all over Robby seems quite content just to sit and take in everything around him.

"Ladies Home Journal" . . . wonder how I can make by own breakfast?

On Graduating

Cap and gown are put away
Both were worn the last today
Four short years of memories
Summed up in conferred degrees
More than that was growing up
To this day from freshman pup

No more Rats to climb the wall
No more plays in Jarman Hall
No more paint fights, "mickey" stuff
Four short years were long enough
No more classes, books and such Didn't look forward to them much
No more tramping through exams
Call downs, cards, or other slams
No more games, Rotunda sings
Color Cup and all those things
No more Circus skits, parades
Walking down the Colonnade
No more dorm with all the noise
Seeing all the H-S boys
No more singing in the "rees"
No more pseudointellects
No more little study nooks
Trusty cup and lots of books
No more student teachers' plights
Long discussions, shorter flights
No more clubs and paper work

Those Were The Days . . . We Thought They'd Never End!

To The Old Rotunda

You stand through the ages
Gazing at youths' journey of four years
You vibrate with the enthusiasm
Of many voices and cries, or
Stand silent as the sound of tears

Your winding stair and stately columns
Watch with welcome the first unsure gaze
From a freshman's eyes . . .
You stand through the ages
Listening to youths' singing
Watching them cling to your balconies
Horrible creatures entwined around your statue
And converge up your stairs
But then you look with a gentle smile
At remains of Rats who used to be

Feathers tickle you
Pennies fall to your floor
But you survive them all
With humor you enjoy the rousing rallies, the Ramble around your statue
Banners hang from your balcony
Red X's, welcomes, 'grease paint and sawdust' signs . . .
A tall tree's top reaches up for your dome
And greenery intertwines your wooden posts

You stand majestic with the sunlight of day
Solemn with the darkness of night
But only those who know you well
Can know the true majesty and solemnity
"Among the gleaming columns . . ."

At the end of it all you watch
Sadly but proudly the procession of lanterns and Black robes
But your column and dome will Stand in welcome to your Children of the past
And you will gaze at youths' journeys still
You will vibrate with the enthusiasm
Of many voices and cries or
Stand silent as the sound of tears
You will stand through the ages

Dr. Marvin Scott Named Head Of The Science Department

Dr. Marvin Scott, a botany professor, has been named as head of the Natural Science Department here at Longwood College.

Dr. Scott received his B.S. degree from Hampden-Sydney College and worked for his Ph.D. at Virginia Tech. He has previously taught at Hampden-Sydney before coming to Longwood four years ago.

Speaking of Longwood ladies, Dr. Scott had this to say, "I find the academic quality of students has greatly improved in the four years I've been here. The students are, for the most part, quite friendly, and seem to enjoy the challenges that the natural science department offers them."

His main concern is the southern tradition of girls who feel that the natural sciences are part of a man's world. "In this department there is no 'Down with Women's campaign,'" he says. "Young ladies do have the stamina, mental capacity, and interest to do well in natural science courses. They can handle the work and are capable of thinking scientifically." Dr. Scott feels that teaching girls is a challenge. He substantiates his belief with this, "When teaching men, you are teaching an individual. But as most girls will someday become mothers responsible for early education of their children, teaching women is actually teaching a family. The influence of educating a female mind has greater depth with further reaching effects and rewards than teaching an individual.

Dr. Scott feels that the natural science department is the strongest on campus. He is especially pleased that almost half of the science majors who graduated last year went on to postgraduate work.

The Natural Science Department also boasts six additions to its staff. They are Dr. Robert Bissell, professor of chemistry, Dr. Sandra Brell, Mr. Tom Ely, and Dr. Wayne Tinnell, professors of biology, and Mr. Robert Thomas, and Mr. R.K. Fletcher, professors of physical science.

New members of the National Science Department staff are Mr. Tinnell, Mr. Ely; front row, Mr. Fletcher, Dr. Bissell, and Mr. Thomas.

Dean Brown Attends Drug Conference, Meeting For Deans

Longwood's Assistant Dean of Students, Frances Brown, attended the Eighth Mid-Atlantic Conference on "Counseling the Counselors of Youth About Drugs and Alcohol," yesterday, Tuesday, October 14. The Conference took place at the Roslyn Conference Center in Richmond. Several lectures were given, pertaining to the drug problem such as "Drugs, Alcohol, and Youth;" "The Role of the Police" given by Sgt. Herbert A. Conner, head of the Vice Division of the Richmond City Police; "The Role of the Church in Alcohol and Drug Addiction" by Dr. Eboe Curtis Hoff; and "The Role of Public Health in Alcohol and Drug Education." After the completion of the lectures the group will be shown a film on counseling the youths on drugs and alcohol.

Friday and Saturday, Dean Brown will be attending the annual meeting of the Regional Association of Women Deans and Counselors at the Catholic University of America in Trinity College in Washington, D. C. Topics of the various lectures will be "Alienation in College and High School" by Dr. Mimi Spielberg, Chief Psychologist of the Adolescent Clinic of the Public Health Department of Washington, D.C. Later there will be several discussions on such subjects as student unrest, changing patterns of Student Government, drugs, and suicide. Dean Brown will be in charge of the discussion group on student unrest. She will prepare a short paper and then open the floor for discussion. Since Longwood has been blessed by being void of student demonstrations, the topic will probably be concerned with the factors underlying our success.

Longwood Students On Committee Work With Faculty

Longwood girls have been named to serve on Faculty-Student Committees. Jo Anne Melcher and Pat Quinn will work for the Academic Ceremonies Committee, which arranges details for the fall convocation, Founder's Day, and commencement. The Artist Series Committee includes Lynn Coleman, Connie Williams, Janie Spitzer and Debbie Mortan. Helping determine the use of automobiles on campus will be Barbara Austin, Caudes Dickman, Jody Mace and Susan Talbot - who compose the Automobile Committee. The College Calendar Committee, who plans the college calendar activities includes Janice Austin, Andrea Myers, Suzanne Turner, and Mary Lou Whitehead. The Honors Committee, which is concerned with the Honors Program, consists of Mary Alice Woeley and Susan Yeatts. Mary Alice Elwang serves the Institute of Southern Culture. The Library Committee's members are Joan Harrup and Charlotte Lynch. These girls decide on general library policies. The Committee on Scholarships and Financial Assistance is served by Andrea Maddox and Beverly Aston. The Sponsor Board, which evaluates student organizations consists of Frances Brown, Chairman, Casey Wilkes and Kate Powell. The Student Activity Funds Committee includes Janice Austin, Sally Gill, Kathryn Parker, Kathy Smoral, and Casey Wilkes. The Supplementary Reading Committee consists of Cynthia Blair and the incoming president of the freshman class. These students de-

Mr. R. T. Couture Addresses AVAA Meeting On October 6

Mr. Richard T. Couture, assistant professor of Social Studies, told the Association of Virginia Academies on Monday, October 6, that if they were going to achieve academic superiority, they would have to overcome the social stigma attached to their work so far.

"The academics are in a good position to experiment with history courses," said Couture. "They have no tradition and should capitalize on their independence. They, however, have a long way to go."

Couture feels that selected and isolated education is making no great contributions. The academics have not solved the problems which have always faced public school educators and history teachers. Mr. Couture does not feel that the academics offer quality education in history at this time. For example, some can not provide good library facilities. The professor said that he hopes he left the impression of a public school man and much could be learned from public schools.

He also talked about the problems of communication. There is a lack of communication and reality between high school teachers and college personnel and between teachers and students at all levels. "Unless these barriers are down, each will follow a policy of isolation that helps no one, least of all the students of the academics who need to live in an interracial world," stated Couture.

Leeper Encourages Support Of Council

Comprehensive studies and an accumulation of detailed information have greatly aided the State Department of Education in concluding that there is a definite need for better economic education for students and young adults across not only the state of Virginia, but the nation as well.

As the result of six months of hard work and organization on the part of a Steering Committee the ground work for a Virginia Council on Economic Education is nearing completion.

Mr. Willard Leeper from the School of Business at Longwood College has been asked to attend an important meeting of prominent Virginians in Richmond Wednesday, October 15.

Janice Austin will represent Longwood in the Harvest Bowl Festival. Oct. 31 and Nov. 1.

Janice Austin Chosen Harvest Bowl Princess

The administration recently named Janice Austins the Longwood Princess to the annual Harvest Bowl Festival of Roanoke. The festival, which is sponsored by the Junior Women's League of Roanoke, will be held October 31 and November 1.

Janice is a Senior Music major from Portsmouth, Virginia. She is the President of Legislative board, a member of Sigma Kappa social sorority, and a member of Sigma Alpha Iota, honorary music fraternity.

Janice will leave for Roanoke, Friday, October 3, where there will be a dinner party in honor of the Princesses. Saturday morning there will be a parade in downtown Roanoke with the Princesses as the major attractions. Following the parade, there will be the Virginia Tech - William and Mary football game in Victory Stadium. At half time the Court, escorted by Virginia Tech cadets, will be presented to the audience.

Then there will be another dinner party honoring the Court at the home of Mrs. Beirne Carter.

Janice will be wearing a gown of white poile de soie, seeded with pearls and rhinestones.

Other princesses to the festival are: Frankie Mitchell, William and Mary; Dexter England, Hollins College; Nancy Carnellussen, Madison College; Ginky McLaughlin, Mary Baldwin; Elizabeth Wingold, Radford; Polly Sheffield, Randolph-Macon; Carol Sholar, Roanoke College; Dorothy Ann Compton, Sweet Briar; Connie Marshall, VPI.

Janice was also honored early in September to appear in the annual Lions Club Parade in Farmville. Last year's Longwood Princess was Lynn Rachel.

Janice commented, "I was surprised and honored to be chosen to represent Longwood in the Harvest Bowl Festival. It will be an enjoyable experience and enable me to meet many interesting people. I only pray it doesn't rain."

Institute Of Southern Culture Sponsors Program October 20

A program, sponsored by the Institute of Southern Culture, will be presented October 20, 1969 at 7:30 p.m. in the ABC Rooms of the Lankford Building.

The overall theme is "Philosophy in the South". Guest speaker will be Dr. Rosamond K. Sprague, Professor of Philosophy and Greek at the University of South Carolina. The topic of this program will be "The Knower and The Known in Greek Philosophy".

The Institute of Southern Culture was established at Longwood in 1956 to promote the study of different aspects of Southern civilization through academic course work, special lectures, and through the publication of research in the field. The Institute is currently sponsoring a series of lectures by visiting scholars and members of the Longwood faculty. Course work on both undergraduate and graduate levels also provides a means for exchange of ideas about various aspects of Southern regionalism.

Members of the Faculty committee for the Institute are: Virginia Bedford, Chairman; Foster B. Gresham; L. Marshall Hall, Jr.; and Helen B. Savage.

The industrious Red and Whites have already begun the long hours of song practices for Oktoberfest.

Freshmen Express Varying Opinions On Artists Series

What do freshmen think about Longwood's required artist's series?

After the first show the opinions were not too varied. Carol Chory represented the majority of the opinions. "It puts the audience on the wrong foot because they don't want to be there in the first place."

Doris Anderson thought people would enjoy the program more if it wasn't required.

Many thought the series a good thing. Like Faith Troydon they felt that cuts should be allowed though.

"They would be all right if they weren't on nights when there is a large homework load," commented Pam Allen. Kathy Bozard thought that culture rounds a person out, but she also felt homework was a problem.

Kay Spreeman felt that only a percentage of the programs should be required. If only a few of the series were required, Marsha Sweet felt she would enjoy them.

Many said the artist's series is a good idea. Emily Inesco said, "I enjoyed it very much. I enjoy cultural activities for a change." Another girl, Kathy Hollins, thought the series presented good cultural opportunities at Longwood. Along these lines Louisa Wallace said, "For those who want a cultural experience it is fine, but I don't believe you should have to go."

Is Opera Your Thing?

The Artists' Series Committee presented the first of four scheduled assemblies, last Tuesday. The Committee had gone to a great deal of effort to arrange for these performances, and they should be appreciated in at least a superficial manner.

Even though opera may not be the most fascinating event on your calendar for the day, a certain amount of respect should be exhibited for the performers. Tuesday there was an undue amount of talking, laughing, and a general restlessness in the audience. It has been a requirement to attend the Artists' Series for many years, and even though the homework loads were heavy and the content was not appealing to the entire student body, they have attended. This has served as an opportunity for the Freshmen to find out if they enjoy these culturalizing activities if they have never been exposed to them. Even if the individuals do not enjoy these assemblies, they should be considerate of those around them who like the program.

It has been suggested that the Freshmen be allowed one cut for the year or make the assemblies a matter of choice altogether. However, the small amount of time forfeited in the course of one year doesn't seem to warrant these suggestions since the school has arranged for them. If you feel change is really necessary, why not find another method of voicing it in a more respectful manner.

Letter To The Editor

Editor's Note:

The following letter was received by the editor last week.

Those of you who participated in today's National Student Moratorium are allowed this freedom on Longwood's campus; however, administration officials feel that those who choose to boycott classes, did so at their own academic expense. It is suggested that if you feel strongly about the Vietnamese issue, your protest efforts will be more successful by writing a letter to your congressman during your views.

In my opinion, you probably will serve your cause more effectively at your typewriter — and in class!

E.C.B.

Editor:

There are two urgent matters which I would wish to bring before Longwood community.

The first is the matter of coeducation at the University of Virginia. Most of you are familiar with our position as a segregated state school. The administration of our university has moved very slowly in this area, promising gradual integration culminating in "true" coeducation (3% female) in 1980. Many here are unwilling to wait that long, and reject the concept of a quota system. We ask for your help on a joint coeducation committee which would be responsible for working out the details of a Coeducation Week at UVA, in which the various girls' schools in the area would participate, a la Princeton.

The other, and unrelated, matter is the Vietnam Moratorium. On October 15, we are sponsoring a series of marches, talks, workshops, demonstrations, church services, etc., at UVA, as a substitute for regular classes. We are, as are countless thousands throughout the country, asking students on this date to "work for peace" instead of going to class. In November, there will be two days of such activity culminating in a march on Washington on the 15th. We would hope you might wish to participate in these actions at UVA, or — better still — organize such actions at your school.

If you are interested in either of these vital issues, or if you would like further information, please contact me at P.O. Box 5529, Charlottesville, Va.

TO: THE FEMALE STUDENTS OF LONGWOOD COLLEGE:

I write in reference to several very unfortunate incidents which have occurred during the past year at the University. On party weekends and at other times the fraternity area at the University is infiltrated by many troublemakers from Charlottesville and out of town. Because the fraternity houses are situated in a non-University owned residential area, it is impossible for fraternities or the University to restrict entrance into the area. Two security measures have been adopted to cope with the problem. First, the Interfraternity Council has created a new closed party rule which will be enforced at all future parties. No one will be admitted to a party who cannot present University I.D. card or a guest card from that particular fraternity. Second, the I.F.C. has employed a security force to serve as doormen for the fraternities and to patrol the area during parties.

I feel these measures represent a big step toward ending such problems as muggings and molestations, but it remains the responsibility of all fraternities and their dates to exercise extreme caution when traveling through the area. Please stay on Rugby Road or Madison Lane whenever possible and never travel along poorly lighted streets. Always travel in groups of several couples. If for any reason you are left without an escort or transportation to your housing, please ask a security doorman or a Fraternityman for assistance. Do not take chances. While at the University or within the fraternity area, your safety and well being is considered by your hosts (the fraternities) to be their responsibility. I hope you will visit the University often and enjoy yourself while you are with us.

Sincerely yours,
Robert W. Fisher

That Is The Question

Hong Kong Representative Joins Longwood Student Body; Becky Contributes Spirit

Becky Yau is a member of the class of '73. Of course, considering that there are 666 new Green and Whites, this is nothing spectacular. What makes Becky so special, though, is the fact that she is from Hong Kong. Yau Ka Rick, the daughter of Hong Wai Jun, decided she would like to study in the United States. Just from looking at criteria about the many different schools in the U.S., she found that Longwood met her personal specifications. In short, she applied, was accepted for admission, and is presently a member of the student body.

Becky lists her major as pre-medical technology or biology. If she majors in premedical technology, she will probably transfer to the Medical College of Virginia. This semester she is studying Freshman English, Biology, Chemistry, and Physics.

Unofficially, Becky says that there are probably a few thousand Hong Kong students presently studying in the U.S. The fact that there are only two universities in Hong Kong, with the exception of teacher's colleges and technological schools, accounts for this. Naturally, these universities are extremely competitive.

The educational system in Hong Kong is quite different from that in the U.S. Before attending a university, one must spend six years in elementary school, five years in secondary school, and two years in postsecondary school. In Hong Kong, the "try, try again" system does not work. If you fail a grade, you may repeat it once. If your second attempt is unsuccessful, then you must drop out of school. Also, to move from each educational level, for example, between elementary school and secondary school, you must pass an examination. Hong Kong students specialize earlier than we do — by your last year in secondary school, you take courses relating to either the curriculum of science or the arts. Of interest to elementary majors, in Hong Kong, two to three years at a teacher's college prepares one to teach in the elementary school through eighth grade.

Becky says that she has never worn a Chinese dress, the clothes which she says everyone wears are very similar to what American girls wear. Also, we Americans haven't got a thing on Hong Kong misses, for they wear their mini-skirts just as short as we do! To school, though, the students must wear uniforms.

Becky, who left four smaller sisters at home, plans to study in the U.S. for the entire four years that she is in school. She has been in the United States since August 6 when she arrived in San Francisco. After her arrival, she visited with friends at Berkeley and in New York City. Under the Experiment in International Living program, she spent a month living with a family in Norfolk before coming to Longwood. In regard to Farmville, she comments, "Hong Kong is small, but it's bigger than Farmville!"

Longwood is similar in size to her high school. Becky relates that she has been impressed with the friendliness of Americans, and particularly that of LC students. Although she has studied English since first grade, Becky says she sometimes finds our Southern drawl perplexing and that the difference in background occasionally poses problems. For example, she doesn't always readily catch on to our jokes!

Indeed, there is quite a different background between Asia's Freshman, who hails from Hometown, Virginia, and Becky, who was born in Canton, China, and has lived in Hong Kong since she was three. Yet, this is an excellent opportunity for Longwood to have her very own "Experiment in International Living." Welcome to Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia, U.S.A., Becky!

Landrum Resigns, Myers And Leeper Assume His Duties

Dr. Landrum, Chairman of the Department of Business Education, has asked to be relieved of his administrative duties to devote more time to teaching. Mr. Myers, senior member of the Business department, will be in charge of the teacher training program in the department for the rest of this year. Mr. Leeper will be responsible for coordinating the curricular offerings and advising the majors, while also representing the department in the academic policies committee of the college.

Dean Blackwell commented that, "Dr. Landrum has given long and arduous service in his role as chairman. It is understandable that with the increasing burden of administration, he would wish to be relieved of these particular increasing chores."

Alumni On Hand To View Double Tie With Lynchburg

At the unearthly hour of 9 o'clock in the morning, the Longwood hockey team was out on Barlow Field clashing sticks with Lynchburg. After the bully, Lynchburg had possession of the ball until Janet Harpold and Kathy Parker decided to take the ball the other way. Play continued very close to the Lynchburg goal until a foul and free hit carried the ball up to our goal. Phyllis Carter decided that the play was more fun at the other end and having passed Lynchburg's backfield, she passed the ball across the striking circle where center Barbara Snellings got hold of it and scored. The play was even flow up and down the field until Janet Harpold and her opposing wing literally fell all over each other trying to save a drive towards the side line. This must have shaken up Lynchburg because Longwood dominated the play for a while after that. Lynchburg was on the offensive and made a few attempts to score but goalie Jane McCaffrey saw to it that those attempts were in vain. At the end of the half, Longwood had dominated the play at the Lynchburg circle but no other score was made.

New Faculty Positions Filled Reflects School's Expansion

Twenty-seven new faculty members joined the staff this year, of whom 10 are filling new positions. Among the new faculty members are two holders of the doctoral degree, five active candidates for the doctoral degree, and 18 holders of the master's degree. Longwood's faculty roster now includes a total of 46 doctoral degrees, representing a substantial increase in recent years.

Reflecting an increasingly representative breadth of academic backgrounds, new faculty members bring to the college 17 graduate and undergraduate degrees earned at Virginia institutions and 43 degrees earned out of State.

Dean Herbert R. Blackwell noted that 34 nationally known educational institutions are represented in the degrees held by the incoming group of instructors and commented that Longwood is pleased to be able to attract scholars trained in such outstanding universities as Duke, Fordham, Northwestern, Columbia, Vanderbilt, Southern Methodist, Illinois, Indiana State, Louisiana State, and Florida State.

Two of the nine new faculty members holding doctoral degrees are a husband-and-wife combination. Dr. M. Bruce Glascock will serve as assistant professor of history, while his wife, Dr. Janice D. Glascock, will hold the rank of assistant professor of foreign languages.

In joining her husband, Dr. David A. Brell, on the Longwood faculty this fall, Dr. Sandra Jean Brell gives the college another husband-and-wife combination who hold Ph.D. degrees. Both of them are associate professors of natural sciences.

Dr. Robert D. Gibbons, recipient of the B.A. and M.Ed. degrees from the College of William and Mary and the Ed.D. degree from the University of Virginia will be associate professor of education.

Dr. Louis Kovacs, named associate professor of education, received the B.A. degree from Emory and Henry College, M.Ed. from Southern Methodist University, and the Ed.D. degree from the University of Tennessee. A native Virginian who recently lived in Bristol, Dr. Kovacs is a former principal of elementary and secondary schools, director of instruction, and teacher and athletic coach in Virginia public schools.

Dr. Alexander Theroux, associate professor of English, was recently in England on a Fulbright grant. He holds the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Virginia.

Among the new faculty members is a couple whose marital status has changed from single to married since their employment by the college. Dr. Edith W. Schell and her husband, Edward Daubner, have been appointed associate professors of education.

Dr. Robert Bissell, a recent member of the faculty of Hampden-Sydney College, and Dr. Edward E. Graham have been appointed to assistant professorships in Natural sciences and

During the half, this roving visitor visited the grandstands to see where the critical comments were coming from. Alas, I found Becky Bonderant, Jane Erdman, Anna Pettis, and Jinx Washington . . . alumni hockey players.

At the beginning of the second half, Longwood tried desperately to score. A few times the Lynchburg defense cleared the ball, making backs Debbie Page, Betty King, and Freda Lunsford work extra hard. With one good rush, Barbara Snellings scored again but the goal was not counted since it had been deflected off the wrong side of her stick. It was then that Lynchburg had caught us off guard and scored. The game remained to the end at the 1 to 1 tie.

The second game also ended in a tie, although this time both teams were scoreless. The play was alternating ends of the field and ran smoothly until Sandy Wilson was accidentally hit in the head while trying to score. Several very close attempts to score were made by both teams, however, both goalies were alert. The game ended in a 0 to 0 tie.

Seven other faculty newcomers also hold the rank of assistant professor. Mrs. Mary Ergler, sociology and anthropology, B.S. degree in nursing from University of Virginia where she is a doctoral candidate. Teaching experience includes Martha Jefferson Hospital and school of general studies at University of Virginia.

Richard K. Fletcher, Jr., a doctoral candidate at University of Virginia; Robert B. Thomas, Jr., former resident of Richmond, whose public school experience includes serving as principal and teacher in secondary public schools of State; Thomas E. Ely, biology, a native of Roanoke who received his B.S. from Emory and Henry College; Wayne H. Timnell, microbiology, B.S. and M.S. from V.P.I. where he just completed his doctoral program.

Among the new assistant professors is another husband-and-wife duo, Dr. Johnny McNeill Narkinsky, assistant professor of foreign languages, and her husband, Sam S. Narkinsky, assistant professor of mathematics who is a doctoral candidate.

Eight new faculty members have been appointed to the rank of Instructor: Norma Jean Abbott, mathematics, native of Roanoke who received B.S. in Education at Madison College and M.S. at University of South Carolina; Mrs. Nancy Anderson, speech, former teacher at Prince Edward Academy and present resident of Buckingham, B.S. from Westhampton and M.A. from Longwood; William T. Duke, history and social sciences; Jane Farrell, home economics;

Evelyn June Glass, mathematics; Mrs. Barbara Hevlin, English, native of Alabama who has taught in Virginia public schools, received B.S. from Marion College and master's from V.P.I.; Harvey Louis Snelidman, speech and drama; Homer L. Springer, art, native of Virginia, B.F.A. from Virginia Commonwealth University and M.Ed. from Towson State College, teaching experience at secondary level in Maryland and at Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

Theresa G. Poston has been named librarian of the proposed campus school, scheduled to open next September, and Mrs. Ruth Ann Wert, assistant librarian in the Dabney S. Lancaster Library.

Panhellenic Council Has Meeting Oct. 20 About Sorority Rush

Panhellenic Council would like to invite all students, both new and old, to an assembly on October 20, 1969 at 5:30 p.m. in Jarman. At this meeting sororities and rush will be explained and the Panhellenic Council will be introduced by Dean Wilson.

All the Greeks together invite all students interested in joining a sorority to attend the Panhellenic Tea on November 25, 1969, at which time students interested in participating in rush must bring $2.00 and a picture of themselves. The Tea will be held from 4:00 to 6:00 p.m. in the Gold Room and the dress is Sunday attire.

Rush this year will take place from December 2 till December 9 and on December 9 the entire student body is invited to the traditional "walk."

All the Greeks on Longwood's campus urge the new students to attend these functions and become familiar with sorority life. Rush affords a perfect opportunity for girls to make friends.

STATEMENT OF POLICY

1. That, in so far as is possible, it will distribute, among the activities on the campus, the money allocated to it so that each student will receive during her four years at Longwood benefits that approximate the amount of each student's fees received by the Committee during that period.
2. That it will encourage current, economical and appropriate expenditure of funds appropriated to the various organizations.
3. That it will require uniform and accurate financial records of all organizations that receive appropriations of activity fees.

Student Union Plans Activities LC Participation Necessary

The Lankford Building Committee has a new name this year along with a new director for the building. The Lankford Student Union is our new name and Tim Brown is our director. Many activities have been planned for the student body and we hope everyone will participate.

The Student Union was formed so the students could take part in more of the activities planned by the students for the student body. The Student Union has taken over many activities which were formerly handled by the Student Government. The May Day festivities and weekly movies are two of these events. This was done for the students so they could help plan and present the activities which are planned for them. We hope everyone will support and participate in these functions.

The Student Union is divided into four committees: Major Functions, Minor Functions, Fine Arts and Publicity. Each committee has certain responsibilities and there is room for all students who wish to help plan activities. In the Games Room in Lankford, there are places where each student can sign up for a committee. Everyone is urged to participate.

Movies will be shown each week in either Jeffers' Auditorium or Jarman, "Marnie," starring Sean Connery and Tippi Hedren is the movie planned for Tuesday, October 21. It will be shown in Jeffers' at 7:30. All these movies are free, and the invitation is extended to the entire student body and their dates. The names and dates of these movies will be posted in each dorm.

A fashion show is scheduled for November 12. In past years, these shows have been received with great enthusiasm by the entire student body. Mrs. Edith Ennis, Lankford Building Hostess, along with the Small Functions Committee is putting a lot of time and hard work into making this show one of the best. Fashions will be modeled from five of the local stores here in Farmville.

1969. This meeting is one of several steps being taken to urge Virginia to join the other 45 states which have Councils on Economic Education.

Mr. Leeper definitely feels a need for such a council and that the knowledge brought about on this council will be well-received by students and young adults. "The average young adult of Virginia and the nation," he stated, "has deficiency in knowledge about economic facts and the way economy functions. The goal of this council is to familiarize the people with the workings of economy on the state and national level."

Vietnam Moratorium Committee Sets Wednesday Oct. 15 For Nationwide Protest For Settlement Of Vietnam War

WASHINGTON - (CPS) - Nearly 300 student body presidents and editors have now signed a call for a Vietnam Moratorium - a nationwide antiwar class and work boycott.

The call, sponsored by the new "Vietnam Moratorium Committee," is for a one-day boycott of classes at all U. S. colleges and universities on October 15 to call attention to and move toward ending the Vietnam War. The committee plans to expand the moratorium to two days in November, three in December, adding a day of protest each month as long as the war goes on.

The Moratorium hopes to involve the community as well as the colleges in cities and towns across the country. Workers and businessmen are being asked to boycott their daily routine at least for a short time during the moratorium days.

The new Mobilization Committee Against the War in Vietnam has planned a national rally in Washington November 15 to coincide with the second month's Moratorium days.

The rally, similar to the march on the Pentagon in 1966, will include a march from Arlington Cemetery past the White House to the Capitol building, according to tentative plans. Both militant and not-so-militant groups are supporting the Washington rally, while some militant groups (including some SDS chapters) refuse to support the Moratorium. The Moratorium action is too moderate, some are saying.

Organizers of the Moratorium include: David Hawk, a former National Student Association staff member and coordinator of a "We Won't Go" statement campaign involving 250 student body presidents and editors last year. Sam Brown, another former NSA staff member and organizer of youth for Sen. Eugene McCarthy's 1968 presidential campaign. He is currently a fellow at Harvard's Institute of Politics. David Mixner, another former McCarthy campaigner presently on the Democratic Party reform commission headed by Sen. George McGovern (D-S. Dakota).

The committee, according to its moratorium strategy statement, expects the monthly protests to grow if the first month's is successful. High school students, antiwar and civil rights constituencies, entertainers, labor union locals, churches, businessmen, and politicians are invited to participate.

A central office in Washington is coordinating plans for the demonstrations and projects to take place on the Moratorium days. Among the committee's suggested plans for the first demonstration and boycott day are town meetings, debates, rallies, leaflet distribution, study groups, vigils in homes and churches, antiwar films, petitions, teach-ins, and memorial services for war dead. Violence is out of the question, say the organizers.

The committee refuses to refer to its class boycotts as strikes, because it does not feel the analogy applies. The intention is not to cripple the universities, but to use them as a base to end the war, Brown says.

Financial assistance is coming from private gifts. Moratorium organizers say, though they do not list any primary backers. The National Student Association has provided some financial aid for the Washington office.

Oktoberfest Plans Materialize Festival Becomes L.C. Tradition

Plans have been underway for several weeks in preparation of Oktoberfest der Geist, the traditional German festival held at Longwood each autumn. Geist 1969 is scheduled for the weekend of October 24-26.

It is through the hard work of Longwood students and a best-loved tradition of the Germans that Oktoberfest has come to be a part of the life of every Longwood Lady. The festival is modeled after a German holiday held every year from September 16-October 6. The Germans celebrate the oncome of fall by drinking kegs of beer. This jolly merrymaking is followed by exhibits of crafts and vegetables throughout the towns of Germany much on the order of American country fairs.

Longwood is kicking off this gala affair with a parade Friday afternoon at 5:00 beginning in front of Lankford Building and progressing through downtown Farmville. The parade is composed of three floats - a Green and White float, a Red and White float and a Geist float. The fire engine of clowns with their funny antics is also a main attraction of the parade along with the cars which bear the Usherettes. The clowns in this year's parade are: Kathy Wilson, Susie Marsh, Curry Pettis, Kathy Parker, Dillard Vaughn, Donna Gleason, Bonnie Longley, Jane Edwards, Kris Naylor, Martha Hicks, Linda Driver, Suzanne Morgan, Pam Harrison, Maxine Stone, Lee Sharr, Terry Reese, Karen Lewis, Nedra Distel, Patty Coggan, Kathy Long, and Cathy Barclay.

The events which follow the parade completely fill every waking hour. The color skits presented by the sister classes will be presented in Jarman beginning at 7:30. The Green and Whites will present "The Missing Link." Ann Ingram is Geist chairman of the freshman class with co-chairmen Bonnie Bowers and Sally Gill of the Junior class, "The Impossible Measurement" by the Red and Whites will follow under the direction of Martha Chevalier, Sophomore class chairman and Barbara Snellings, Senior class chairman.

Saturday afternoon at 1:30 a concert will be given by the 392nd Army Band from Fort Lee, Virginia. From 2:00-5:00 the Midway set up on back campus and around Tabb Circle will be open for everyone's enjoyment. Geist takes great pleasure in announcing the largest number of booths for the Midway since Oktoberfest became a part of Longwood tradition. The following organizations will be represented on the Midway: Geist, Athletic Association, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Lambda Delta, Alpha Phi, Alpha Psi Omega and Longwood Players, Alpha Sigma Alpha, Alpha Sigma Tau, Baptist Student Union, Canterbury Club, Delta Psi Kappa, Delta Zeta, Der Deutschklub, H20 and Gymnastic Clubs, Granddaughter's Club, Gyre, Kappa Delta, MENC and Sigma Alpha Iota, Newman Club, Phi Beta Lambda, Phi Kappa Phi, Phi Mu Pledge Class, Residence Board, Sigma Kappa, Sigma Sigma Sigma, El Club Espanol, Student Education Association, Wesley Foundation, Young Democrats, Young Republicans, YWCA, Zeta Tau Alpha, Senior class, Junior class, Sophomore class, and Freshmen class.

The traditional hockey game between the alumnae and varsity teams begins at 3:00 followed by Color Rush, both to take place on Barlow Field. For those who have never had German food, there is a real treat in store when everyone congregates in the dining hall for the German Theme Dinner. The dinner is followed by the color skits and the cutting of the Geist cake by the Usherettes in the Gold Room of Lankford Building. (The cake will be on display in the Gold Room for all to view during the day). The Geist festivities are brought to a thrilling climax at 9:45 Saturday evening when the old members of Chi walk through the Colonnade.

The word Geist means spirit or intellect. The Geist organization on Longwood's campus is very well-known for its leadership qualities. Vivian Whitted is President of the organization and members include the following: Mary Margaret Holman, chairman of Oktoberfest 1969; Phyllis Carter, chairman of the clowns; Susan Davenport, publicity; Claudia Cunningham; Candee Dickerman, parade; Mary Alice Elwang, judges; Janice Hudgins, concert; Bev Johnson, Green and White skit; Chris McDonnell, Usherettes; Margaret Nuckols, publicity; Andrea Meyers, Green and White skit; and Joyce Temple, Red and White skit.

Students are reminded that tickets for reserved seats in Jarman and tickets for dinner are being sold together and should be bought well in advance. Tickets may be purchased during the week before Geist and at the Midway only until 5:00. Tickets are $1.10 for reserved seats in Jarman and 75¢ for meals.

Dr. Willett's Press Conference in the Gold Room last Thursday allowed many of the student complaints to be discussed. Topics brought up include changing the dress code, later curfews, dining hall food, and dining hall renovation. One of the main subjects, was the Moratorium held last week.

Press Conference In Lankford's Gold Room; Willett Hears Longwood Ladies Complaints

Last Thursday in the Gold Room of Lankford at 2:00, the bedroom gripes were made known when Dr. Willett held his monthly press conference. It was at this time that Dr. Willett gave the students a chance to complain about different aspects of student life, and to become aware of the current events going on around campus. The atmosphere in the Gold Room was one of distinct informality in spite of the persons of major importance present. On the whole the conference turnout was unimpressive, but the students who did attend were willing to ask the questions most bothering them, and the topics brought up reflected general life at Longwood.

The question and answer period began with a question regarding Dr. Willett's proposed stand on the Vietnam Moratorium. Dr. Willett began by posing the question, "How do you define Moratorium, to what extent does it go, certainly not so far as to aid and abet the enemy." Then commenting in regards to Longwood students, "how involved should a college be? There should definitely be an absence of violence, but not an absence from class." Dr. Willett approved the idea of getting groups of students together to discuss current issues. He made it clear though, that these meetings should be on the students own time, (preferably after classes), and that the meeting place, (if in a certain room), should be scheduled beforehand.

A question regarding the food in the dining hall was raised. The general complaint seems to be that the food is not being coordinated properly. An example was given of a meal served one Saturday, in which hotcakes, french fries, vegetable soup, pineapple marshmallow salad and ice cream was served. The students didn't feel that this was a balanced meal, and they were wondering if the food in the dining hall was going to improve.

Dr. Willett began answering this question by saying that he himself wasn't quite satisfied with the food situation. He pointed out however, that in comparison with other schools, Longwood's food is "pretty good." But, he hastened to point out that there is still room for improvement. He told the students that in order to work with the Slater people in improving food, he would have to be supplied with specific examples of unacceptable foods, or food combinations, in order that improvements can be worked out. Dr. Willett plans to bring in at the next conference representatives from the Slater system to discuss with the students areas of improvement.

There was an interest expressed in possible changes in the dress code. Dr. Willett pointed out that the dress code had to reflect the whole student body. He made it very clear that he is not opposed to new styles, only to sloppiness. There will be more discussions on the dress codes later in the year, but it is evident that Dr. Willett is willing to agree that styles are changing, and with it the college girl's taste.

There was a question on the change of curfews, not so much on the week nights, but on the weekends. It was brought up that perhaps 12:30 is a bit extreme, as many students are not required to be in that early at home. Dr. Willett responded that there certainly would be no major change on week nights. However, if there is a good reason for change on weekends, then the situation is not closed. The proposal for a new curfew hour would have to pass through the regular boards, the judicial legislative, and residence, before anything definite would be settled.

One student wanted to know whether the book store was a profit making organization. The answer was yes. After some probing, it was disclosed that the owner of the book store was not making quite as much money as some of us had previously thought. There is for the owner a 20% return on the books and probably more on pencils and paper. The school makes about $8,000 to $10,000 a year from the book store. This money is in turn plowed back into infirmary fees and laundry fees enabling students to pay less in this area.

In addition to questions, Dr. Willett mentioned some areas in which work is taking place around the campus. These includes, meetings to look into the sidewalk and light situation in the area of Curry. Dr. Willett is also looking into suggestions for setting up a stamp machine in front of the post office, and putting in a change machine somewhere on campus. These are doubtful additions as the cost is

Hats Off To Honors Program!

Last year a great deal of emphasis was put on a program of individual studies which is offered by the college. This program allowed the student to take a course which credited her with six hours and use this time doing research on a particular field of interest, with the approval of her faculty advisor and an interested member of the department in which she is majoring. At the end of the research the student submits a paper covering her research and is given an oral exam by a board of faculty members. Unless the paper warrants either an A or a B, the oral exam will not be given. If the exam is given and answered satisfactorily, the student graduates with honors in her chosen field.

The initial step is to decide on a subject to research, then go to an advisor or someone on the Honors Committee. They will decide on the feasibility of your project and give their approval or disapproval. The student registers for a six hour course in individual study and begins research. After two semesters of work, the student compiles her findings into a paper and submits it to the committee. If she receives an A or B, she takes the oral and graduates with Honors.

In the case of a student who does not take the oral exam, she may keep the hours on an individual research course and her grade will rest on the contents of her paper.

The course is open to all fields even if it is not in your major. Anyone with a stable average, not necessarily Dean's List, should look into this program, if you have any questions consult your advisor. Even though most of the work is usually done in your junior and senior years, Freshmen should be considering a topic now.

Participating in the Honor's Program will be your way of protesting against mediocrity in the college for an superior academic atmosphere.

Dr. Alexander Theroux, a new associate professor in the English Department, brings quite an interesting background with him to Longwood.

Dr. Theroux, a native of Boston, spent two years in the Trappist Monastery right after high school graduation. Upon this experience, he comments, "but God didn't want me, if I may speak for God for a moment."

The gentleman of French and Italian descent, received his B.A. degree from St. Francis College and the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Virginia. He spent last year in England on a Fulbright grant, while in England, he utilized his time by lecturing at the University of London and working on a novel. The novel, which will be published at the beginning of 1970 under the title of "The Lollipop Trollops," is a comic murder mystery. Dr. Theroux is presently working on another novel which he says may even be about Longwood, and jokingly adds, "If anyone wants to be in it, tell them to report to my office!"

Last year, while in England, Dr. Theroux had three related plays entitled "Menopauses" produced on BBC, the British Broadcasting station. "The Fat White Elbow," another play, will go on stage in the West End in London this coming June or July.

The author of 15 plays, 11 of which are one-acts, Dr. Theroux had 8 of these plays staged by the Virginia Players while he was studying at the University.

Dr. Theroux has visited Germany, Greece, Italy, France, Ireland, Poland, and Russia. He has written a series of articles about Russia.

The September, 1969 issue of "London Magazine" contains a short story by Dr. Theroux, "Mrs. Proby Gets Hers," the story of a fat woman killed by a Chinaman. A copy of this issue is available in the campus library.

When asked how he happened to choose Longwood to teach in, Dr. Theroux says that he had heard Longwood was a good school; that Dr. Frank impressed him, through correspondence, as being a very "intelligent and kind" man; that he likes the state of Virginia; and that there's "enough solitude in Farmville to write, although I didn't expect this much solitude!" He finds Longwood ladies to be "gentle, kind, and nice."

Dr. Theroux comes from a very diversified family. The son of a shoe store chain owner, he has five brothers. An older brother is in the CIA, and a younger brother is a novelist in Singapore.

Upon being queried about future plans, Dr. Theroux smilingly comments, "Maybe I'll find a wife at Longwood!"

Student Union Gives New Opportunity To Student Recreation

Are you tired of sitting here during the weekend doing nothing? Do you complain that Longwood doesn't offer entertainment for your dates? The Lankford Student Union is trying to create activities and events for the students and their dates.

The bowling alleys, ping pong and pool tables are open for the use of Longwood students and their guests. The price for a game of bowling is 40 cents per game for guests. Shoes are available for 15 cents per hour and ping pong is free. Longwood students don't pay anything for these activities. The Card Room is located on the main floor along with the television rooms. If you use the facilities available to you, you and your guest can have a nice evening — even at a low cost.

Tim Brown, the director of Lankford Building, is hoping to initiate bridge tournaments for the weekends. If you're interested, please sign up in the Card Room next to the director's office. Mr. Brown is also planning pool, bowling and ping pong tournaments for the near future.

Guest festivities are in the high-light this weekend, but the movie "Forty Pounds of Trouble" is scheduled for Saturday, November 1. This comedy stars Tony Curtis and will be shown in Jeffers' Auditorium at 7:30. Dates are invited and this movie is free.

So come on girls, try a weekend at Longwood. Even if you have a date, there are things to do — and at a minimum cost. You might find yourself having a good time. Are you ready to take a chance???

Panel Discussions Give Freshmen Aid For Good Studying

On Thursday, October 16, a study habits panel discussion was held in Jarman. The meeting was required for freshmen and open to any other interested students. The upperclassmen who served on the panel were Margaret Nuckols, senior; Dianne Anthony and Candy Jones, transfer juniors; and Barbara Lewis, transfer sophomore.

The point brought out most frequently was to organize. Freshmen were advised to learn to go over notes each day, study a few days in advance of a test and then on the night before go over the material and tie it all together.

Other suggestions were to get enough sleep, be selective when taking notes instead of writing each word the professor says, enter class discussions, ask questions when you don't understand, and start early on long-range assignments.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor,

We are living in an era of "protests" and I see no reason why the young should have a monopoly on complaining. Hence, as a loyal Longwood alumna and a long-time member of the faculty, I have a complaint to make.

On Tuesday night, October 7, many of us were privileged to attend a delightful concert given by two members of the Metropolitan Opera Singers, formally dressed for the occasion. No one expected the audience to be in evening clothes, but I for one certainly did not expect to see the students in shorts and cutties, many of the vigorously chewing gum — one girl in front of me loudly popping hers.

I raise the questions: Was it respectful to the talented performers? Is it an appropriate practice for "Longwood ladies" who will soon be instilling principles of proper etiquette and good taste into the children of the Commonwealth?

Several people around me had a similar impression, one other retired professor, a well-beloved gentleman, remarked, "What a contrast! Remember how Dr. Jarman used to say, 'Girls, dress up and look your prettiest tonight?'"

I hasten to add that it was an appreciative and respectful audience, the students indicating their approval at the end by a standing ovation.

Respectfully submitted,
Mildred D. Davis

Press Conference Held In Gold Room

a small deterrent, but Dr. Willett has not dismissed the problems entirely.

There was a very interesting discussion on the renovation of the dining hall. It seems that an architect is working with the Slater people in possibly extending the balcony area, resurfacing the floor with all weather carpeting, installing air conditioning, and building a separate banquet room which would seat up to 150 people. Since these plans have to be carried on while the serving of food is taking place, it is proposed that the additions to the dining hall, whatever the extent will be finished by September of 1971.

This conference which was televised on Channel 12 made it evident to the students and to all who watched the news cast that Dr. Willett is willing to cooperate with the student body in hearing their complaints and trying to do something about the situation. It seems that Dr. Willett is making every possible effort to help you, so why not let him. Attend the next press conference and let your complaints be known.

LC And H-SC Presents 'The Moths' Oct. 30-Nov. 1

The first play of the season will be "The Moths" on October 31-November 1. The Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs are shown rehearsing for their opening night.

Green &amp; Whites Victorious Over Oktoberfest Weekend, Reds Win Skit

By SARAH FARRAR

The experience is over. The results of blood, sweat, tears, fun and cooperation have come and gone. Weeks of organization and hard work resulted in a festive one-and-a-half days that parents, friends and especially Longwood students will not forget.

Some two-thousand Longwood students, parents, alumnae, friends, and boy friends participated in the college's second annual Oktoberfest, a festival based on a traditional German celebration. With ingenuity, participation and help from Geist, a bit of Germany enveloped Longwood.

The colors of "Green" and "Red" reached the height in spirit. The 70's competed wholeheartedly toward the Oktoberfest cup.

Floats covered with hours' worth of decoration, Bavarian dressed ushers, bicycled glows in floppy costumes, a decorated beer wagon, class chairman, and class presidents were all part of the parade that began Oktoberfest. Members of the Oktoberfest Court decorated the parade with smiles. These girls were Mary Lou Whitehead, Geistmeister (Mistress of Spirit); Casey Wilkes, Festmeister (Mistress of Ceremonies); Penny Jones, Mittenmeister (Midway Marshall); and Betty King, Suzanne Turner, Julie Smith, Carol Umbdenstock, Joan Putney, Terry Van Cantfort, Bonnie Adams, and Marcia Sweet, all Ushers.

One student's reaction to the Oktoberfest Der Geist's parade was: "Fabulous! Those girls have certainly used every ounce of enthusiasm to make this happen." The parade began at Longwood and went up through the upper part of Main Street. The floats were judged on the basis of craftsmanship and theme communication, modeled after their skits. The Green and Whites won with 15 points for theme effectiveness and spirit with the Reds for float craftsmanship. Each team won five points for this.

Oktoberfest featured the college's first meeting of parents and alumnae. Both groups met with President Henry I. Willett, Saturday morning in Lankford Building.

At 1:30 the 392nd Army Band from Fort Lee, Virginia, presented a concert in Jarman. Later, the boys in the band wandered about the lively Midway to enjoy the sights.

When the Mittenmeister, Penny Jones, cut the strings, the Midway was officially open and celebration and spirit set the mood. People strolled among the thirty-six booths located behind the dining hall and around Tabb Circle. The agenda ranged from candied apples and pretzels to fortune telling.

A variety of items drew interest at the Midway. The singing voices of girls and the pounding of an electric guitar echoed over the festival. The attractive French coffee house on the bridge and the comical auctioneering of Dr. Helms at the Marche' aux (Flea Market) really added to the attractiveness and zest that characterized the whole festival.

The Freshman booth dunked a clown in water every time someone hit the target to "Put Jack Back in the Box." The Gyre booth offered body painting and a chance to "Pick Your Horoscope Sign" while psychedelic music touched your mind in the background.

Organizations presented a great deal of festive versatility and sales. Among them: the YWCA Kollage Korner, Chug-A-Mug with the Sigma Kappa, the Mystic Mood of the Spanish Club, "Pitch Your Way to Victory" with the Young Democrats, Kindergarten S.E.A., Geist and their root beer sales, clown posters and the Newman Club's sale of the ever-popular Pepsi.

The winners of the booth competition: On theme, the Alpha Delta Pi's took first place. For miscellaneous, the Kappa Delta's were victorious. The Gyre booth won for entertainment, and the Alpha Sigma Tau's won for food. The Junior Class won 7 points of the weekend victory on their class booth. Sophomores won 3 points for display materials. The Green-and-Whites won 15 points for theme effectiveness.

At 3 o'clock, the attention was centered on the hockey games. Longwood was victorious over the Richmond 3-1. The alumnae beat Longwood 3-0. The "older ladies" proved to still have what it takes to cover the hockey field a few hundred times.

Each dorm had two representatives to race in the Color Rush. The Green and Whites won 5 races and the Reds won 4.

Gymnastics and a swim show were presented in French gym. Three shows were given and some of Longwood's top athletes displayed their skill.

The Bavarian theme continued as everybody piled into the dining hall for dinner. A German menu with sauerbraten, sauerkraut, pumpernickel bread and German chocolate cake awaited the hungry celebrators.

Friday and Saturday nights the color skits and loads of fun were featured. The crowds assembled in Jarman and were ready to be entertained. To start the frolics, the candy-throwing twenty-one German clowns ran down the aisles sporting ribboned pigtales and globes of make-up. They performed gymnastics during the show that delighted the entire crowd.

The tempo picked up again as eight beaming usherettes danced down the aisle. The audience was very aware of the long hours of practice involved when the usherettes performed a schottische. It was magnificent!

Miss Mary Lou Whitehead introduced the Oktoberfest class chairmen; Mrs. Barbara Snellings, Martha Chevalier, Sally Gill, and Anne Ingram. She presented all of them with a Hex sign symbolizing "good luck."

Mistress of Ceremonies, Casey Wilkes, recognized the many people who worked in Oktoberfest who were not seen on stage. She then turned the skit competition over to the audience and judges.

The Greens presented a condemned toy shop filled with toys too old and ugly to be loved. With spirit and hope, they decided to redo themselves. In handmade, painted, glued contraptions, the girls appeared as toys who believed that being together was almost like a chain. Every link of the chain is important, and "The Missing Link" is a square.

In "The Impossible Measurement," the Reds proved that the finest things are based upon individuality. The girls act as walking, talking rulers, compasses, speedometers, cups and spoons. Their computer (the overpowering voice of Dr. Lockwood) coughs up a "reject." Judy Thomas, she wants the right to choose her own set of values and standards. Sympathetic "rejects" from the audience join Judy on stage to sing and emphasize the importance of "being yourself."

While everyone was awaiting the judges' skit decision, Oktoberfest chairman, Mary Margaret Holm, was awarded 12 long-stemmed red roses for her tremendous work done on such a difficult task.

The skit results showed there to be a tie in music. The Reds won on theme, costume, and staging. The Greens won in dance. The Reds came out winners in the final scoring, for the skit.

Weekend scores for the Greens was 52 points and for the Reds, 47. The Green and Whites were awarded the Oktoberfest Cup.

After the skits, the 600 pound cake in the Gold Room was cut and served to everyone who came to celebrate.

Immediately afterwards, all eyes turned to the Coronade as Chi members from past years walked in quiet ceremony.

More than five-hundred students were involved in Oktoberfest plans and activities. Among the many students responsible for major festival activities were the following: Vivian

The play, written by John Potter, revolves around three main characters in the legendary city of Atlantis.

John Potter's comedy, "The Moths" will be presented at 7:30 p.m. October 30-November 1 in Jarman Auditorium. This is the first presentation of the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs, and the Longwood Players for the 1969-1970 season.

John, who graduated last year from Hampden-Sydney, was a classic major. His play, written in the style of Aristophanes, mixes political, social, and literary satire. The satirical motif most evident in the play, however, is the relationship of teachers to students, or of teachers to educators.

The setting for "The Moths" is the turbulent city of Atlantis threatening to sink into the ocean. The major characters are, Struchnon, who is a teacher of philosophy, and his two students, Manos and Amphiglettos. The play revolves around Struchnon, who discovers the existence of a chorus of universal moths which seem to contradict the prevailing theological and evolutionary theories of the time. A major part of the play after this realization, is trying to convince the people of Atlantis of their existence.

The Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs and Longwood Players are working toward an outstanding performance. The play should be very interesting and enlightening, and it is hoped that everyone who is able will attend.

Senator Reynolds Addresses LC Students On October 30

State Senator J. Sargeant Reynolds, candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Virginia, will address a luncheon in the Senior Dining Hall on Thursday, October 30, 1969, at 12 o'clock noon.

The thirty-three year old Reynolds was born in New York City. He moved to Richmond and attended Woodberry Forest School and received his Bachelor of Science degree in economics at Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania, where he graduated ninth in a class of 450.

The State Senator was elected to the House of Delegates in 1965 and in 1967, leading his party ticket twice. He is a member of the Executive Committee of Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia.

Reynolds led the Democratic ticket in a mock election last week.

SEN. J. SARGEANT REYNOLDS

Election Participation Highest

All three Democratic candidates led their Republican opponents by a substantial margin in last week's mock election in which 1132 votes were cast, making Longwood's 61% participation the highest reported in recent mock elections on Virginia college campuses.

William C. Battle, Democratic candidate for Governor, received 56% (630 votes) of the total 1132, as compared with 44% (501) votes for Linwood Holton, his Republican opponent.

State Senator J. Sargeant Reynolds, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, led the Democratic ticket by securing 66% votes as opposed to 33% votes for his Republican opponent, H. Dunlop Dawburn. Andrew P. Miller, Democratic candidate for Attorney General, defeated Republican Richard D. Obenshain by a margin of 607 to 493 votes.

Other candidates received the following votes: Dr. William A. Pennington, candidate for Governor, one; Samuel J. Breeding, Jr., and Louis A. Brooks, Jr., candidates for Lieutenant Governor, received 16 and 6 votes respectively; Flavius B. Walker, Jr., candidate for Attorney General, received 9 votes.

The colorful election, held last Thursday, was sponsored by the ROTUNDA, Young Republicans, and Young Democrats.

Longwood-Madison Tie Hockey Game Second Team Loses

In cold weather last Wednesday the Longwood hockey team played a rough game with Madison College. The contest ended in a tie, 2-2.

The Madison team jumped off to a roaring start by scoring a goal in the first minute of the game. Center forward, Barbara Snellings, scored later in the first half for Longwood making the score at halftime 1-1.

In the second half both teams scored again. Barbara Snellings scored again for the "Blue and Whites" and the game ended with each team having two points.

Losing their first game of the season, the Longwood second team tied to Madison by the score of 4-2. Janet Ford and Kathy Parker each scored a field goal for Longwood in the first half and at the end of the first half the score was tied 2-2. But in the second half the Longwood team was unable to score and Madison went on to win the game, scoring two more goals in the last half.

It looked like last year's forward line coming out to melt Longwood's Varsity team in the Alumnae game.

LC Defeats Richmond Club, 3-1 Alumnae Hockey Players Win

The action was on Barlow Field Saturday afternoon as the varsity hockey team beat the Richmond Club 3-1 and the Longwood alumnae were victorious over the second team 3-0. Large crowds ran from the midway to the gymnasium show to the water show to the hockey field to see both games. These games were one of the many exciting events of the Oktoberfest weekend.

Playing one of their best games of the year, the first team came out on top of the Richmond Club in a well skilled game. Seniors Barbara Snellings and Chris McDonnell did the scoring for the "Blue and Whites."

The second game proved very exciting for the crowd as they saw many Longwood alumnae once again on the hockey field. Even though they have aged a wee bit, their skill proved to be just the same. They defeated the Longwood second team 3-0. 1969 graduates Jane Tibbs, Anna Pettis, and Becky Bondurant each scored a goal for the alumnae.

Other returning alumnae who played in the hockey game were Cathy Hass, Carol Blyth, Peggy Wilkins King, Jane Erdman, Connie Gallahan, Judy Bateman, Leslie Sedgewick, Mary Tolley, and Sally Heilman.

On Barlow Field Thursday the Longwood teams will play the William and Mary teams at 4:00. Be sure to come out and support both the first and second Longwood varsity hockey teams. Cheer them on to victory.

Herndon Represents Longwood At NC-Va. English Conference

By MARY ALICE CARMODY

Mr. Herndon represented Longwood at the annual North Carolina-Virginia College English Association Conference at East Carolina University, October 11. This meeting was attended by college representatives from both states to try to coordinate and share ideas in English teaching.

The topic was "Relevance" and one of the speakers, Darwin T. Turner, Dean of the Graduate School at North Carolina A. and T. University, tried to define relevance and correlate it with the teaching of English courses. Some of the questions professors were to ask themselves were whether the professor distinguishes between the needs of the major and nonmajor in a literature course, whether students are provided with evaluative skills of literature, whether students are exposed to diverse kinds of literature, and are ways sought to make literature relevant to the students.

Another guest speaker, Francis R. Adams, a professor at Madison College, spoke on the role of the teacher in determining the relevancy of the course. In order to achieve relevance, Mr. Adams felt that the teacher should be as good as he can.

A question that raised quite a discussion was how stories could effectively be taught if they are based on a racial situation. This was answered by determining whether the Negroes in literature were realistic. Certainly Faulkner and Twain did not write of the Negro of their day, but merely a caricature. An Afro-American Literature course was discussed, and the University of North Carolina's course was used as an example. Such writers as Malcolm X, Martin Luther King, Eldridge Cleaver, and LeRoi Jones were used as examples.

Dr. Jackson Named To State Elementary Science Committee

Mr. Bernard R. Taylor, Supervisor of Elementary Education of The State Board of Education, has named Dr. Elizabeth B. Jackson of Longwood College to the Planning Committee for Elementary Science. This committee held its first meeting in August to consider proposals for helping in-service teachers of elementary science.

A second meeting of the committee was held October 16 and 17 in Richmond. Preliminary work on a teacher's guide for elementary science was undertaken by the committee consisting of in-service teachers, professors responsible for preservice teacher training and supervisors of science in the elementary schools.

Horseback Riding Offered For First Time; Students Register

By JUDIE GUIDICE

After many requests and inquiries over the past few years, Longwood College has been able to provide horseback riding facilities. Many girls have been asking about a place to ride, but more areas are distant and transportation is not always easy. Through the efforts of Miss Bush, there is now a place to ride with transportation available. Mr. Price is starting an academy and his farm is out past Prospect. At present he has some 20 horses and in the future he will buy more. Trail rides are going out every Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday there will be three pick up times: 9:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m., and 3:30 p.m. On Sunday there will be one ride at 2:00. Right now there are no lessons available, but anyone interested in learning is urged to join in on the trail rides because soon lessons will begin. For all those interested, a list is placed on the A.A. Bulletin Board for signing up. The cost is $2.00 per hour and each student must have parent permission sent to her head resident. For all those interested in riding, come on and join us!! We guarantee fun on every ride!

Alpha Gam, Wheeler, SC Hockey Teams Finish Intramurals

Intramural hockey competition continued last week to determine the champion dormitory or sorority. On Monday, October 20, Wheeler defeated Main Cunningham 3-0, Alpha Sigma Alpha beat Cor 2-0 while Curry rode over Zeta Tau Alpha 3-0. The following day Alpha Gamma Delta defeated Curry while Wheeler smashed Sigma Kappa 5-0. On Wednesday, October 22, South Cunningham edged out French 2-1.

Competition grew fierce as the week ended with a tie between South Cunningham and Wheeler. That game was replayed Monday, October 27, to determine who will enter the finals against the undefeated Alpha Gamma Delta team. The results of that game will decide the champion.

All during this intramural hockey program, Dr. Jackson and Miss Bobbitt have been rating the Junior physical education majors who have been serving as referees.

After the championship game, on Thursday, all those who participated in the program will choose members of the class teams. At the conclusion of the class competition, the Varsity hockey team will select players from the class teams to battle out the finish of the hockey intramural program.

A great deal of enthusiasm and participation totaled up a successful hockey intramural program.

Early Sunday Hours For Lankford Rec On Temporary Basis

Several requests have been received to open the Snack Bar in Lankford Building at 2:00 p.m. on Sundays instead of 4:00 p.m. Last year the Snack Bar was opened on a trial basis for two Sundays to determine whether the extra two hours would provide enough sales to make the earlier opening hour possible. Sales from 2:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. on Sundays last year amounted to $3.00 on one Sunday and $5.00 on the other.

The Snack Bar will again try opening at 2:00 p.m. on Sundays for a two-Sunday trial basis beginning Sunday, October 26, 1969. I certainly hope that sales will be enough to justify the continued operation of the Snack Bar from 2:00 p.m. on Sundays. Your support is the only way to determine whether the earlier hours will be economically feasible.

DR. H. W. JANSON

Dr. Willett will meet with the Junior Class, November 6 at 7:30 p.m., in Jeffers.

Dr. Moss Returns

Dr. Gordon Moss, a retired professor of history at Longwood, will speak at a Baptist Student Union meeting, Wednesday, October 29, at 6:45 p.m. at the BSU center. He will show the film about education in Prince Edward County, "The Lost Generation," which was filmed by Britannica films. Everyone is invited to attend.

Green And White's Victorious; Win Oktoberfest Color Cup

The Junior Class's booth was a main attraction on the Midway ... an honest-to-goodness walk in Toy Shop.

The Alpha Zeta Pi booth, theme winner, display workmanship and thought.

Big sister might like that art but I've got my balloon.

The midway bustles with clowns and alumnae, as a CHI flag waves above.

The shop may be considered out the spirited Green and Whites will pull through.

In the Freshmen booth a not-too-anxious Jack challenges anyone who thinks he has a good pitching arm to "Put Jack Back in His Box."

Miss Calculated receives a comforting pat from the Head Ruler as the Red and Whites "size her up."

Dillard Vaughan works hard on the Red and White float so it will "measure up" for the parade Friday.

Green and Whites.

The Oktoberfest clowns added skill and many laughs as they performed their antics between the skits.

Coffee house music added atmosphere to the entire Midway this past weekend.

Dr. H. W. Janson To Speak At LC On Role Of Chance

Dr. H.W. Janson, chairman of the department of fine arts at New York University, will lecture on Friday, November 7 here at Longwood. The topic of his talk will be "The Role of Chance in Artistic Creation."

A native of St. Petersburg, Russia, Dr. Janson was educated in Germany, attending Hamburg University and the University of Munich. Prior to joining the faculty at NYU, he was an associate professor and curator of the University Art Collection at Washington University in St. Louis. He published a two-volume study of the sculpture of Donatello as a result of research done under two Guggenheim Fellowships received in 1948 and 1955.

He has written a number of books, several in collaboration with his wife. He twice received the Charles Rufus Morey Award sponsored by the College Art Association of America for the year's most distinguished work of art historical scholarship by an American or Canadian scholar.

Longwood students anxiously await Cabots' big "Freeze" in the Rotunda.

Ceramic pottery from the Geff Reed Show is on exhibit in the library.

Geff Reed Ceramic Collection On Display Until November 29

At the present time in the Library Gallery is an exciting collection of ceramics by a young Missouri artist. Geff Reed, a full time instructor of ceramic art at Virginia Commonwealth University and president of the Richmond Craftsmen's Guild, will have his works on display here until November 29.

Born in Washington, D. C., the twenty-five year old Mr. Reed considers Kansas City, Missouri, his hometown. While working on his B.F.A. at Kansas University, Mr. Reed served as assistant to Mr. J. Sheldon Carey. As assistant, he learned repair and maintenance of the kilns, firing, and keeping inventory of the chemicals and materials used for glazes. In 1967 Mr. Reed received a studio fellowship to work on his M.F.A. at the University of Michigan, serving as assistant to Mr. John Stephenson. Other colleges Mr. Reed attended are Colorado College, Kansas University, and Alfred University.

Before coming to VCU, Mr. Reed taught classes in ceramic art and glaze technology at the Ann Arbor (Michigan) Potters' Guild, a private non-profit organization. Mr. Reed also operated his own studio in his home. Since 1966, Geff Reed Crafts, Inc., has specialized in the manufacture and sale of ceramic pottery. In the operation of this studio, Mr. Reed says that he has "gained experience in the purchasing of raw material, manufacture of a product, marketing and distribution, plus many other facets of running a small business."

Mr. Reed is a sustaining member of the American Craftsman's Council and a member of the National Council of Education for the Ceramic Arts. He has exhibited at the Detroit Institute of Art and won the purchase award for the permanent collection from the Butler Institute of American Art. The Hand Work Shop, the Creative Crafts Exhibition at the National Housing Center, and the Michigan Biannual Crafts Exhibit are a few of the places where Mr. Reed has exhibited.

The works in the Library Gallery are for sale, so be sure to see the show. You may even want to buy an original piece of ceramic art.

Longwood Girls Represent Publications Staff At 45th Annual ACP Convention In Miami

Five Longwood girls represented our Publications Staff in Miami, Florida October 31-November 2 at the 45th Annual Associated Collegiate Press Conference at the American Hotel. Libba Ball, Editor, and Susie Marsh, Managing Editor, represented the "Rotunda" Staff, and attended newspaper seminars while "Virginian" representatives Lois Wells and Barbara Blythe met in Yearbook personnel sessions. Louise Dougherty represented the Cyre staff.

Some 1,500 delegates from all over the country, met to discuss current journalistic trends in workshops. They were greeted Thursday afternoon in the Sunshine state by a hurricane-style downpour, quoted by a Miami native as being "The worst weather we have had in 12 years."

Thursday night's luau buffet sponsored by the Ford Motor Company highlighted registration, especially for those twenty-five journalists whose names were pulled at random in a raffle. They were given a month's expense paid ownership of a brand new Ford for testing and advertisement purposes. Unfortunately, our own publications representatives were not that lucky. Following dinner entertainment featured a Trinidad band and fire limbo exhibitions by native dancers.

Friday's busy agenda included an advertising short course, a newspaper short course, layout and design discussions, Law and the Student Press, and a photography short course. Other areas of interest included Press censorship, offset printing, college magazine financing and employment opportunities for publication staffs.

Aside from the fifty minute lecture sessions with prominent newspaper men and publishing companies, our delegates found new ideas and techniques from informal discussions with LYNCHNOS, the local honorary society for mathematics and science majors, will sponsor a symposium about graduate school on Tuesday, November 11, in the A and B Rooms of Lankford Building from 5:00 to 6:00 p.m. This honorary society has invited such faculty members as Mr. Jim Gussett, a member of the mathematics department, Mrs. Robert Woodburn and Dr. Elizabeth Elberidge. They are meeting to discuss problems centered on graduate school. Anyone who is planning to attend graduate school, anyone who is considering graduate school, or anyone who is even interested in graduate school should try to make an effort to attend this symposium in November. The members on the panel will be ready, willing, and anxious to answer all of your questions. Questions may be written down and deposited at the door of the A Room as you enter, or you may ask the panel your questions orally concerning the Graduate Record Examination, possible fellowships that are available, special grade requirements or allowances for graduate work and other provisions for the exam. So whether or not you are a math or science major or anyone interested you should come to this symposium to check the "scoop" on graduate school and its opportunities open for you.

To go along with this symposium about graduate school, the Honor's Council would like to inform the student body and the faculty about the graduate school's file which is located in the Honor's Council Room in the Lankford Building. This file is maintained for the convenience and use of anyone who is in anyway interested in graduate study. The Honor's Council is trying to keep this file as up-to-date as possible and they would appreciate any help or any suggestions in hopes of making this a worthwhile project for the student body. If you would like to see a catalog which is not presently in the file, or if you have any critical comments or suggestions please see Mary Alice Elwang who is in Wheeler 324. Also included in the file will be information about financial aid that is available to students for graduate study. One final significant point to add is that any payment on Virginia State Teacher's Scholarship may be deferred for graduate study. Now is the time suggested for making plans for your graduate study.

W. S. Klein Speaks Out On Drug Abuse Nov. 10 In Jarman

Dr. Wallace S. Klein, Jr., a pharmacist, will speak on drugs on Monday, November 10, at 7:30 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium. Mr. Klein is a graduate of the Medical College of Virginia School of Pharmacy in Richmond.

Dr. Wallace Klein has served as a member of Council, Secretary, Vice-President, and President of the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association.

During the past two years, he has made more than 350 talks to at least 60,000 persons on the subject of drug abuse. He is also the coordinator of the Drug Abuse Program for the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association, and he has established a corp of pharmacists to be available to high school, college groups, and similar audiences throughout the state. He was recently appointed by Mr. Godwin, the Governor of Virginia, to the Drug Study Commission. The purpose of this commission is to rewrite and update the laws pertaining to pharmacy.

land College in Fremont, Nebraska, centered around the issue of censorship in the College Press.

Throughout the conference, numerous newspapers and Yearbook publishers opened displays presenting their ideas and creative designs to inquiring newspaper workers. The trend is moving toward gimmicks such as superimposed fade out prints, floating flags, and creative advertising presentation.

Although publications obligations required the staff representatives to attend the sessions, there was time left to sun-bathe and socialize. The Rotunda representatives roomed with the editor of the yearbook for Syracuse University, Patricia Orsins.

Advice for those incoming publication representatives next year, "enjoy your trip, meet new people, come well prepared to learn new journalism techniques and exchange ideas. We guarantee a good time.

MGM's "Good-bye Mr. Chips" starring Peter O'Toole and Petula Clark, the portrayal of James Hilton's unforgettable love story was presented before the ACP delegates for review and discussion Thursday afternoon from 3:30 to 7:30.

Paramount pictures gave the ACP representatives a preview review of "The Sterile Cuckoo" starring Liza Minnelli and Wendell Burton. Spotlighting Friday's theatre presentation was an open after-film discussion with director Allan J. Pakula, director of "Up the Down Staircase" and "To Kill a Mockingbird." The tender relationship which falters between two college freshmen relates a young couples struggle to find identity their first year away from home. Students should try to see this film.

Two convention activities were offered for Friday night's entertainment. Delegates could choose between a Riverboat Cruise on the Biscayne Bay or a pop band dance and concert at the motel by the "Mystics," a favorite of the Midwest.

Two members from Longwood's delegation purchased tickets for the cruise. The advertisement boasted entertainment by a Hawaiian band and floor show. The $13.50 ticket paid for an assortment of Polynesian food barely worth the money invested. A floor show and sword dance was performed on the lower deck. However, the staff representatives were leaning over the top railing wishing they could return to the hotel.

Lectures and discussion groups continued Saturday from 10:15 to 12:30, followed by a student conference evaluation. Many newspapers, literary magazines and Yearbooks also received recognition at the Award's Program.

A Study In Fortitude

Have you had about two hours sleep within the last two weeks? Have you been plagued by tests or papers every day of the week? Are you beginning to think your college address is "Study Room, Dabney Lancaster Library"? The basic question behind all this is, why must things be this way? Professors claim that they do not really want to give tests, but that they must have a grade before mid-semester. This is the same reason that has been given every semester. I have been here. Why?

Last year the faculty and administration decided to quit sending out midsemester estimates to all upperclassmen not on academic probation. This was to relieve the great amount of pressure and tension brought about by having to have mid-semester estimates in. Surely not everyone on this campus is a freshman or on academic probation, so why all the testing? Cannot the professors determine how one on A.P. is doing without having a mad rush to test everyone in the class the last week before mid-semester? Having a test every day of the week does not test knowledge, just fortitude. Studying a subject everyday does help when test time comes, but there are still little details that must be looked over before the test, so having several tests in one week does not help the grade average.

Certainly there must be a better solution to the testing problem. The administration did help. Now, perhaps the professors could help further by spacing their tests either before or after the mid-semester deadline. There must be another way, and I know that the many tired students around here would appreciate a solution to this problem being considered.

Do Yourself A Favor

The flowering plants enjoy the art displays that are periodically placed in the Library Gallery, why don't you? No matter how much publicity is given the collection on view, students seem for the most part uninterested or apathetic. Even if you aren't an avid art appreciator, can't you get interested in an artist who was reviewed by Time Magazine? And yet, if you arbitrarily stop a student on the sidewalk and ask if she has seen the Vasarely prints, you will probably find that she hasn't. If the student happens to say yes, you can wonder with amazement whether she went on her own, or whether a distraught art teacher sent her there. These collections just aren't getting the student support they were meant to have. Why not try to broaden your horizons, walk over to the Library Gallery tomorrow, and view the ceramic showing by Geff Reed? If not tomorrow, then sometime in the coming month. You might do yourself a favor.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Miss Ball,

As editor of the Rotunda I hope you can help in some way. I have a Freshman daughter at Longwood College who has five friends from this town who are also freshmen. After listening to their complaints about the food they were served I tried the food in the dining room. I came away very worried about the health of my daughter and all the other students.

I have written to Slater Service, Student Government Association and also Dr. Willett voicing my concern.

I hope you can urge all students who are dissatisfied with the food service to complain to the food service, Dining Hall Committee, and also to Dr. Willett at his next press conference. Unless they voice their complaints we worried parents can do little to help them. A well balanced diet is essential to good grades, good health and good looks.

Hopefully,

Letter to the Editor:

If any one of the dorms on this campus should have sandwich machines, hot drink machines, and general survival and ration kits, I definitely think it should be Curry. When one lives in Curry, it isn't hard missing a few meals. When this happens, and your funds are low, your only alternative is to go to "the machines". The ones in Curry now, boast of a varied menu. For example, for a dime you may have either a crunch bar, fig newtons, peanut butter crackers, or some other delicious treat. Certainly the students in Curry would be thankful for a variation in their limited diet. I'm sure that the new machines if installed wouldn't lack for business. After all, sandwich machines are now installed in Wheeler, South Cunningham and Cox. We are in need, why not in Curry?

On November 10, the Fashion Show will be presented in the Gold Room at 8:00. Many fashions will be modeled and door prizes will be given. This show is a lot of fun and you can get some good ideas on what the "fashion world" is up to.

On November 19, Mrs. Gibbs, the Southside Electric Home Economist, will present a program in the ABC Rooms of Lankford. She will demonstrate the making of Christmas decorations and goodies. Refreshments will be served.

Activities for the student body have been going strong. We have been trying to plan something every weekend for the students to attend. The dance and Halloween Party went over real well, and we're hoping on continued interest in future functions. A movie is planned for this weekend. The name and place will be announced later this week. A correction must be made from the paper last week. The mixer with Hampden-Sydney has been canceled.

Longwood Freshman Recounts

Eleven Months In Ethiopian City

Mary Smiley recounts her summer in Ethiopia in her dorm room.

Ethiopia, a land of poverty, deprivation, and beggars has been imprinted on Mary Smiley's mind. Mary, a freshman this year at Longwood has the opportunity to spend 11 months in Asmara, a small city of Ethiopia. There, she completed her senior year in high school, graduating with eight others.

Her family lived on a military base, and Mary participated in the activities that the base had to offer. There were approximately 50 young people on the base, to share with her the wonder and amazement that they must have felt in discovering how the Ethiopian people conduct their lives.

Although Mary was occupied a good part of the time with her studies, she was nevertheless able to visit different villages, and observe the living conditions. She found that many of the inhabitants live in houses of mud and stone. A great majority of the men make their living by farming, but since the soil is not very productive, their crop productions are very meager.

From The Board:

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffers Auditorium, Student Government will hold a meeting which will be open to the entire student body. This meeting will be held jointly by the three branches of Student Government with all board members present. Also, the committees under each board and all faculty committees on which the student body is represented will have members attending. The meeting will be conducted as a regular business proceeding. Since the time for rule evaluations is approaching, rule changes will be a topic of conversation for everyone present. If you have any comments or suggestions this is your chance to "say it," so come and participate.

On October 10-12, Janice Austin and Sue Rinaldi attended the Fall VASG Conference at Old Dominion College. They felt that the conference was more organized and beneficial to Longwood than last Spring's conference.

Brenda Brown and Julie Smith represented Longwood at a convention on "Student Rights" which was sponsored by VASG and the American Civil Liberties Union. This convention was held in Blacksburg on the weekend of October 18 and 19.

Potter's First Play A Satirical Study Gets Mixed Reviews

The comedies of Aristophanes created humor through the effective use of satire.

When John Potter attempted to produce this same effect in his play "The Moths," he became too carried away with the satirical motif. The result was that much of the humor and ridicule presented in the play was not caught by the audience. For two hours the audience suffered through various soliloquies and actions that were meant to be uproariously funny, only to wonder in the end what the real meaning of the play was. Many in the audience found themselves at a distinct disadvantage, because they didn't have a wide classical background, and they didn't understand the many references to the Hampden-Sydney characters that were being portrayed. The play then could have been taken on any one of several levels, and I would venture to say that it was each to his own in this case.

In spite of the overall confusion of the viewer, he could without hesitation appreciate several aspects of the play. One of these was the cast's performance. For the most part, the lines were well memorized, and the acting was superb. Randy Hallman as Sturchnon, the moth eaten instructor, did a very good job of depicting the isolationism of a mind unable to impart knowledge effectively. His two pupils, played by Chris Roberts and Scott Reeves, provided an excellent chance for a study in the difference between students, and their relationship with an instructor. Other performers to be commended were Bob Hearn portraying the coffin seller, and Ed Koffenberg portraying the priest. Ed with a well executed transfiguration of voice was able to present a character so pitiful in his greediness, that it was actually humorous. Sandy Ellis as Rosey Maple did an excellent job in spite of the limitations of her role.

Even though these individuals excelled in their parts, their performance was marred by the chorus of Moths. They were often much too loud, and it became very difficult at times to understand what they were saying. They found it extremely hard to stay in unison, and a few of the players tried to dominate the chorus. The players should also be commended to the makeup, the scenery, and the lighting. The makeup in particular was very realistic. The scenery was helped a great deal by the phosphorescent paint, and the excellent use of lighting.

Even if everything wasn't entirely clear in "The Moths," the entire play was interesting, and extremely provoking.

William And Mary Defeats LC Second Team Wins Last Game

Thursday, Longwood's hockey team played their last intercollegiate game of the season with William and Mary College. The spirit and anxiety of both teams seemed to express the girls' desire to end the season with a win.

The play both halves was hard and rough. At times the spectators got dizzy trying to follow the ball going up and down the field, powered by long hard drives. William and Mary's rushing, forward line caused the Longwood defense to play a very fast and open game. The pace was hard for the forwards to keep up with, therefore causing the William and Mary defense to intercept. Although most of the play centered in the middle of the field, William and Mary managed to score. Despite Longwood's efforts to score, the game ended in favor of William and Mary 1-0.

The second team was up against the same type of wide open fast play. The drivers were hard and long and often dangerous. Longwood managed to take advantage of some of these drives and won the game 2-0.

Another intramural activity has gotten under way. Tennis doubles began Wednesday, October 29 with approximately 18 doubles teams "braving the cold."

The teams are composed of girls from the same class and the tournament is run in a single-elimination draw. The first three-round winners are determined by a one set victory. The semifinals and the finals will consist of the best of three sets.

The freshmen should be saluted for their turn-out and we hope everyone will support her class. Points are given to the winner toward class cup.

Panhellenic Holds Coke Parties For Interested Rushees

On November 4, from 7-10:00 p.m., Panhellenic Coke parties were held in the individual chapter rooms, giving interested persons an opportunity to meet the eleven sororities on campus. However, attendance of the parties does not necessarily obligate you to participate in rush.

Dress for the parties is casual, and it is left up to each girl to decide which coke parties she will attend and at what time. Panhellenic delegates will be stationed in Stubbs and Curry to direct the girls to the chapter rooms.

Other coke parties will be held on November 12 and 18. The only requirements to participate in these parties are to sign your name to the list outside each chapter room, wear same tags, and not to stay longer than 30 minutes at each party, although you can return to the same party after 30 minutes.

The eleven sororities on campus are Alpha Delta Pi and Delta Zeta, located in Curry, and Zeta Tau Alpha, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Alpha Phi, Phi Mu, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Sigma Alpha, Alpha Sigma Tau, Sigma Kappa, and Kappa Delta, located in Stubbs.

University Of Tennessee Adds To "Cluster Group Program"

KNOXVILLE, TENN., - (LP.) - The major innovation of the "cluster group" program at the University of Tennessee this year is the addition of "super cluster groups" - the combination of two 25-member cluster groups into 50-member bodies, each with faculty coordinators.

Since cluster students are taking the same three courses, teachers are now able to take advantage of materials covered in the courses which overlap, vary the times and places for class meetings, and develop outside-the-classroom interests as a group.

"This flexibility in curriculum and class times and the higher level of student-faculty interaction along with the 'small group' association of one's peer group level are the real advantages of cluster groups," stated Dr. Ronald H. Petersen associate professor of botany and assistant to the dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

The classrooms involved are those of English and history, the two largest freshman courses offered. The average size for an English class is 25 students as compared with 40 students in a history class.

In the past, Dr. Peterson pointed out, a cluster group in English would stay together in history, but some 10 or 15 nonclustered students would also be included in the second class. "Under the new setup, a cluster group in English can hook up with another clustered group to form an homogeneous 'super cluster group' in history," he stated.

During the past two years, cluster group students on this campus lived in the same residence halls but were mixed in with nonclustered students. This year, however, only two of the four "super cluster groups" may experiment with the residence hall aspects of the program. The emphasis will be on classroom clustering, Dr. Petersen stated.

St. Olaf's College Tries New Intervisitation Policy

NORTHFIELD, MINN. — (I.P.)—St. Olaf's Board of Regents, by a vote of ten to one, approved a new intervistation policy for the current academic year. The new policy includes the provision that the college will provide dormitory facilities for those students whose parents indicate that they prefer their sons and daughters live in residences where there will be no intervistation.

The text of the policy: "The length and frequency of intervistation shall be decided by majority vote of the residents of each living unit.

"In order to protect the privacy of those who may not wish members of the opposite sex in the living unit, no living unit may be open for intervistation more than four days a week, for more than four hours, or later than 11 p.m., except on Saturday, when intervistation may extend for 12 hours and as late as one a.m. The usual rules governing dormitory life (for example, rules calling for quiet hours) remain in effect during periods of intervistation.

"It is understood that when members of the opposite sex are present in a room the doors shall remain open. Since the personnel deans are charged with the administration of the dormitories, they are responsible to work with students in developing procedures and regulations that will protect the rights and privileges of all the residents and that will encourage responsible sharing of the community life in the dormitories."

Longwood Freshman Recounts Eleven Months In Ethiopian City

Mary found it a little disconcerting to find camels roaming the streets in the major cities of Ethiopia. She commented on how thin and underfed these animals look.

When asked about the food, Mary said that most of the food on the base was sent from the United States, but she added with a smile, that she had tried many different Ethiopian dishes. One dish in particular, Cigundi, was made up with tomato paste, and filled with either goat meat, or chicken. This dish's chief characteristic is that it is extremely hot and, at its best, it is served with Angera bread, a tough vinegary bread. Mary found that she couldn't eat indiscriminately, for it is very easy for an American to get intestinal disorders if they aren't extremely careful about their food preparation. Mary related how the food must be cooked very carefully, and the vegetables and fruit must be soaked before eating.

Mary demonstrated the style of dress worn by the average Ethiopian woman. It seems that the national dress consists of a dress made of thin cotton cloth, gathered at the waist, and extremely long. The women also wear a veil around their head. The men are often attired in a mixture of clothing, consisting of a draped cloth on the upper part of the body, and a pair of suit pants worn below. The men also wear the turban.

Mary was very impressed with how friendly the Ethiopians were. She said that they were always anxious to try their English on the American. In some cases, however, Mary could have done without the friendly Ethiopians. These cases were brought about by the numerous beggars scattered on the main as well as side streets.

Mary said proudly that her parents, while in Ethiopia, met Hail Salassie. Every year he makes a visit to the base school, and when he came last year Mary had the opportunity to see the prime minister.

On her way back to the states, Mary flew to Athens, and then to Germany. Finally her 11 months were up, and it was time to report to Longwood. Mary certainly won't forget quickly all she saw in Ethiopia, and she has an invaluable source of conversation for all who are interested in the African country.

LEGISLATIVE BOARD MET, MAJOR ISSUES DISCUSSED

The Student Body was given an opportunity to express their views on the major issues concerning all of us last Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffers Auditorium in the Stevens building.

Janice Austin, President of Legislative Board, called the meeting to order and opened the floor for suggestions and discussions. There was a fair sized representation of the student population, although they were mainly upperclassmen.

One of the first suggestions offered was a need to lower the accumulative average required to campaign for a minor office to a 2.2. They felt that a 2.5 would restrict many students from running who had the ability to handle the office.

Next there was a discussion of the blacklist restrictions and its exact meaning, especially the area limitations on dating.

A letter concerning the major complaints of many of the students was given to the head of Judicial, Legislative, and Residence Boards. The authors of the letter voiced a complaint that petitions could not be used, but this was cleared up by Andrea Myers reviewing Dr. Willett's comment that he would rather hear any suggestions personally than have petitions circulating the campus.

One of the more direct questions discussed was the extension of the curfew. The general consensus was that 2:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights would allow enough time to go to parties out of town and return by curfew. Another curfew suggestion was that perhaps the five minute leeway should be changed to 15 minutes to alleviate dangerous driving situations created, by this small leeway. Other suggestions were going away with curfews altogether, locking the doors at 2:30 a.m. for everyone regardless of the situation, putting pink slips in a sealed envelope, or doing away with them completely. In some cases of lateness, a student's parents were called, this brought up the question of making the rules set up by each Head Resident, uniform.

Another pertinent issue discussed was the $15.00 fee for each hour of overload. It was suggested that this was unfair to those students who have to have the hours, such as Summer-February students and accelerated students.

The dress code, a major issue in previous years, was again brought up with revived enthusiasm. The neat appearance of pantsuits versus gym suits and skirts was the focal argument. A questionnaire to give a survey of student opinion on the dress code was suggested, then if the students were in favor of it, perhaps a trial period.

The need for a uniform grading scale for each department was discussed.

The discussion was still hot and heavy when Janice suggested the meeting be adjourned since it had run past its limit. Another meeting is scheduled in two weeks to report on what has been accomplished in the intervening period.

Board Of Visitors Adopts Policy Of Providing A Better Education

In a period of American history marked by major campus unrest, and even violence, the Board of Visitors of Longwood College views with great pride the positive attitudes displayed by the student body of the College. The Board wishes to commend the students for such action as the pro-College demonstration held on April 24, 1969.

So that all may be aware of the feelings and the expectations of the Board of Visitors of Longwood College, this statement of policy is adopted on November 7, 1969. The adoption occurs after due consultation with faculty, staff, and student groups. It is recognized that no single statement is capable of covering all possible contingencies but it is hoped that this statement will convey the prevailing philosophy of the Board.

The objective of Longwood College is that of providing education of high quality. In order that this might be accomplished, the Board of Visitors recognizes that certain rights and certain responsibilities must be incumbent upon the varied parties involved in the educational process. This includes the student body as well as the faculty and staff. To that effect, the Board is expanded to promote acceptance of the concept that all groups comprising the college have a common objective in securing such an education of quality.

The student body has the right to expect that the fundamentals of due process will be accorded to each and every student just as these fundamentals also must be accorded to all members of the college community. The Board of Visitors, therefore, adopts as institutional policy "The Joint Statement on Rights and Freedoms of Students" published in 1967. This document was prepared by a Joint Drafting Committee representing the American Association of University Professors, U. S. National Student Association, Association of American Colleges, National Association of Student Personnel Administrators, and National Association of Women Deans and Counselors.

The Board wishes to note its concern that members of the college community have the privileges and rights accorded to other citizens. While the Board is concerned with individual rights so is it concerned with the responsibility of the college community to avoid taking advantage of membership in this community in order to further partisan political or other views.

Embodied in the joint statement is the concept that freedom and rights do carry with them certain responsibilities for all members of the college community. The Board of Visitors, therefore, asserts the responsibility of all involved to follow established and orderly channels of communication, inquiry, and dissent and to desist from any action which interferes with the rights of others to pursue their normal educational tasks.

Recognizing that the student body has certain rights and responsibilities, so, too, should it be observed that certain rights and responsibilities accrue to the faculty and staff of the College. The faculty and staff have the responsibility of establishing and maintaining open channels of communication through which student inquiry and dissent may be directed. On the other hand the faculty and staff have the right to expect that students will recognize student responsibility to peacefully direct inquiry and dissent through such channels.

The Board of Visitors can tolerate no activity which disrupts the normal processes of instruction, study, research, service, assembly, and administration. Neither can the Board accept conduct which encourages or incites other to disrupt the functions of the College.

On November 7, the Board of Visitors of Longwood adopted the "Longwood College Statement of Rights and Responsibilities." This statement was first discussed at the Student Retreat before the college session opened. Later it was adopted by the Legislative Board and on November 5, by the faculty. This statement represents contributions from both faculty and students and is a consensus of opinion.

Many colleges and universities have a statement of rights and responsibilities which help clarify the philosophy of the schools. This is also a help for students who are making a decision about a college, and for parents and alumni who are interested in the college.

President Willett feels that the student body knows the expectations of the college, but that the "Statement of Rights and Responsibilities" will let other groups know.

Dr. Catherine S. Sims, Dean of Sweet Briar College, will speak at Convocation Friday, Nov. 14.

Dr. Sims, Author And Dean, Will Speak At Convocation

Dr. Catherine S. Sims will be the guest speaker at Convocation exercises on Friday, November 14. Dr. Sims will give the speech "The Field Is Won".

Dr. Sims, Dean of Sweet Briar College and professor of political science, came to Sweet Briar in 1965 from Agnes Scott College. While on leave of absence in 1960-63, she was vice-president and dean of the American College for Girls at Istanbul, Turkey. After graduating from Barnard College with honors in history and election to Phi Beta Kappa, she spent a year at the Institute of Historical Research at the University of London. Later she returned to Columbia to complete her master's and Ph.D. degrees.

Having an interest in international activities for many years, Dr. Sims served on the Selection Committee of Fulbright student grants from 1953-55 as chairman of the United Kingdom and Western Europe sections.

As an active member of the American Association of University Women, Dr. Sims was a member of the International Relations Committee for three years, while serving as chairman of the committee and as a representative of the AAUW to the Council of the International Federation of University Women in 1959-60.

Dr. Sims is a member of the American and Southern Historical Association, the International Commission for the History of Representative and Parliamentary Institutions, the American Association of University Professors, the Conference of Academic Deans, and the National Association of Foreign Student Advisers.

She has written numerous articles and two books: "The Liverpool Tractate, An Eighteenth Century Manual on the Procedure of the House of Commons," and "Expeditio Billarum Antiquitas, An Unpublished Chapter of the Second Book of the Manner of Holding Parliament in England" by Henry Elsynge.

Longwood House, on Longwood Estate, will house the college's President and family.

Longwood Estate Houses Pres. Willett And Family

President Willett and his family are now making their home at Longwood House, the white, three-story house at Longwood Estate. This 134-year-old frame house and the nine-hole golf course adjoining it are part of the 103-acre Longwood Estate that has belonged to the college since 1928. Longwood Estate used to be the site of the May Day festivities.

The golf course, which was formerly operated by the Longwood Golf Association, will still be maintained by the college as a physical education facility and for recreational use by the students, faculty, and staff.

The former home for Longwood presidents, which was 608 High Street, will now house the offices and facilities of the Alumni Association. The house had been the home of seven presidents, beginning with Dr. John Atkinson Cunningham. In 1906 the house was purchased from his widow and has since housed Presidents Joseph L. Jarman, Dabney S. Lancaster, Francis G. Lankford, Jr., Fred O. Weyal, James H. Newman, and Henry L. Willett, Jr.

Longwood House at Longwood Estate is well known in this area as being the home of Peter Johnston, Jr., a lieutenant in Light Horse Harry Lee's famed legion and judge of the Circuit Court of Virginia. General Joseph E. Johnston, a Confederate military figure, was born at the estate. The present house was erected in 1815 following a fire that destroyed the original house.

Both moves were authorized by Longwood Board of Visitors, and the General Assembly provided the funds with which to renovate Longwood House.

The Department of Foreign Languages of Longwood College will present the following films: "Don Quixote (Dec. 8), "To Be A Crook (Jan. 12), "Miguelin" (Feb. 9), "The Transport" (March 9), "Hiroshima Mon Amour" (April 13) and "Last Year At Marienbad" (May 11).

One For The Suggestion Box

The word for the year is experimentation so it seems, which is very good. Trial and error is the best way to discover the advantages and disadvantages of a certain solution to a problem.

In the dining hall, the experimentation proved very valuable in finding the proper way of serving the meals. It was suggested perhaps the solution might involve letting the students enter the dining hall early but the blessing would not be said until all of the food is on the table to save some of the confusion in the kitchen. This was merely a suggestion, to be considered along with other experimental approaches.

Since the trial and error method was successful in the dining hall, couldn't its range be broadened to include other areas of school interest?

The Student Government discussion meeting brought out many areas of controversy, most of which have been discussed time and again. However, this time most students feel some action will be taken concerning curfews and proper attire.

Perhaps one method of study in these areas would be to experiment with the various systems and tally the results by the reaction of the majority of the students and not by the careless attitudes of a handful.

Peace Corps College Degree Program Extended, Expanded

The officials of the Peace Corps and the State University of New York College at Brockport announced completion of arrangements for continuing and extending the unique Peace Corps/College Degree Program to admit a fourth group of candidates in June, 1970. The members of the first contingent completing the fifteen-month program which combines the upper division undergraduate education with Peace Corps preparation are now serving on bination educational development teams in the Dominican Republic; the second group is now serving in similar assignments in Peru and Honduras; the third group is now in the academic year phase of this joint project and is slated for overseas assignment in Latin America in August, 1970.

The candidates will be selected from the ranks of students in good standing at an accredited college who are completing their sophomore or junior year by June, 1970. Those selected will be able to earn an A.B. or B.S. degree and be eligible for a Peace Corps assignment in one academic year flanked by two summers of fully subsidized and integrated academic courses and Peace Corps training. They are expected to major in mathematics or the sciences; those who have completed their junior year prior to entrance into the program have the opportunity for a double-major.

At the end of the second summer armed with the degree, a teaching license, indepth cross cultural preparation and fluency in Spanish the graduates as Peace Corps Volunteers will be off on their Latin American assignment. As members of the staffs of teacher training institutions and/or consultants, to secondary teachers of mathematics or science, they are important participants in the educational development efforts of their host countries. During their two year sojourn they have the opportunity to earn up to twelve semester hours graduate credit.

Peace Corps and college officials pointed out the several features which make this joint program unique including: academic credit for Peace Corps training, two fully subsidized summer sessions totalling thirty semester credit hours, in-depth Peace Corps training synchronized with the liberal arts and specialized professional preparation, individualized programming, opportunity for double majors and supervised overseas graduate work.

"This integrated program is based on our twofold conviction that (1) to combine the college and Peace Corps experiences is to make both more relevant and meaningful and the personal product more valuable (2) to provide much-needed skilled specialists—mathematics and science teachers—as Peace Corps Volunteers in Latin America is to make a significant contribution to all concerned," said President Albert Warren Brown, of the State University College at Brockport in announcing the extension of this unique partnership.

State MENC Meeting Held On Oct. 31 At George Wythe High

On Friday, October 31, the members of the Longwood Chapter of the Music Educators National Conference attended the state MENC meeting of the VMEA convention and the exhibits of the Virginia Education Association convention.

The morning's activities included a business meeting of the state college chapters of MENC. At this meeting Jeanne Richardson, president of the Longwood Chapter, was appointed editor of "The Centaurs," the student section of the statewide publication of VMEA NOTES. One of the main features of this meeting was a program given by individual members of the various college chapters. Janice Brown represented Longwood with two solos by Norman Della Jolo.

The highlight of the morning was the general meeting of the state VMEA convention held in the auditorium of George Wythe High School at which Dr. Henry I. Willett, Sr., former Superintendent of Richmond public schools, spoke on "The Role of Music in the Public Schools." Entertainment for this session was provided by the Fairfax High School Madrigal Singers.

In the afternoon, the students visited the music exhibits of the respective publishing companies in the John Marshall Hotel.

The Judicial Board set up a stolen articles—lost and found file system in Lankford Building. Lankford was chosen for its central location.

Located in the Information Office, the file system has two different color cards. The pink cards are for stolen articles and the blue cards for lost articles. When filling out the cards, a student may follow a sample card in the file.

If a student cannot reach a Judicial Board member about a stolen article, she can use the new file. Even if she can tell a board member, a student should fill out a card for the record. Anything that is stolen even money should be put in the file.

HEW Provides Experimental Math Program For Schools

Nearly 50,000 elementary school children are learning mathematics this school year mostly on their own under a unique system for tailoring instruction to a pupil's individual needs and abilities, the U.S. Office of Education said today.

Known as Individually Prescribed Instruction (IPI), the experimental technique is being made available to more than 160 schools in 32 States by Research for Better Schools, Inc., a Philadelphia-based educational laboratory supported by the Office of Education's National Center for Educational Research and Development.

Children seem to enjoy their school work more under IPI, a recent study indicates. IPI students and members of a control group were asked, "What would you answer if your best friend asked you, 'Do you like school?'" Among fourth graders, 73 per cent of IPI pupils replied positively, while 52 per cent of the other students did so. IPI also scores high with teachers. In a recent poll of demonstration school teachers, one question was, "Would you look for another IPI school if you had to seek work elsewhere?" More than 80 per cent of the teachers said yes.

In IPI, teachers diagnose learning problems by evaluating pupil performances on highly specialized tests. They then prescribe lessons and materials specially designed to help the student achieve specific objectives, for example, finding the squares of numbers 1-10 or dividing decimals by whole numbers.

Children master the materials on their own and at their own pace, but there are also small group or classroom sessions where children hear lectures, take part in discussions or thrust out common problems.

Students may also teach one another by tutoring younger children, helping another student learn new concepts, or playing games that reinforce learning tasks. Other features of IPI are tests before and after each lesson, management procedures for teachers to follow, training programs for aides, teachers, and administrators, and ways of monitoring and evaluating the system.

IPI reading, spelling, handwriting, and science programs are undergoing field tests in special demonstration schools this year. By 1971, social studies will be added to the list for wide-scale testing in schools around the country.

About 3,000 elementary school children in 26 schools are learning reading through IPI, and its success is often striking. A good example is the Downey Elementary School in Harrisburg, Pa., where the program is three years old.

Mrs. Helene Broome, principal, says: "Ninety per cent of our sixth graders were reading below their level in 1965 before IPI was introduced. Last year 22 per cent of sixth graders were reading on or above their level."

Equally important, Mrs. Broome adds, is the program's impact on the children's behavior. She says last year no "antisocial" acts such as vandalism, requiring police action, were committed by children in her school area. In 1965, the tally was 137 police contacts.

Mrs. Broome believes that IPI gives children "a chance to express themselves as individuals, to master materials specially selected for them, and to be responsible for their own education and behavior." Self-image blooms in this setting, she says.

"IPI is the culmination of intensive research and development efforts, some of them going back to the 1950's, to discover how children learn and how to individualize learning," says Howard F. Helm, head of the U.S. Office of Education educational laboratories program.

"Its success demonstrates that scientific knowledge about learning, derived from a broad base of research, can produce significant improvements in educational practices," Dr. Helm says.

He noted that a study comparing test scores in six IPI demonstration schools and six control schools showed: At the 50th percentile, across grades, IPI pupils were one or more levels higher than the other pupils 41 per cent of the time.

First Week Of Class Hockey Sees Sophomores, Seniors Tied

After a close half, the Junior class beat the Freshmen 3-0 last Tuesday in the intramural hockey program. The game between the Sophomores and the Seniors proved to be even more exciting as they tied 0-0.

In the first game on Thursday the Seniors surged ahead to beat the Juniors 2-1. In the second game the Sophomores overcame the Freshmen 1-0.

The games were called by Juniors who were being graded for their ratings. The players were also being graded on their playing. This was done to see who would play on the color teams. In addition, all players were rated on sportsmanship for the sportsmanship award.

This week, the green-and-whites will play the red-and-whites for points toward the color cup. These color games will end the intramural hockey season for this year.

Longwood did very well despite the strong Madison team. Many of Madison's first places over Longwood were by a few tenths of a second.

First place winners for Longwood were Katherine Hipskind in diving and Eleanor Challen in the sixty yard breaststroke.

Marriage Matters Has Last Meetings On November 17, 18

The last two programs of Marriage Matters, a series of programs on various aspects of married life, sponsored by the YWCA, will be held on Monday, November 17, and Tuesday, November 18, from 7-8 p.m. in the ABC Room in Lankford.

On Tuesday, November 18, Mrs. Neal H. Griffin of the Home Economics Department will talk about the purchasing of large appliances and furniture, buying a house, and renting an apartment and then answer questions on these topics.

The programs are open to all who are interested in marriage and matters concerned with marriage. Everyone is encouraged to ask questions at the meetings. In addition to "Marriage Matters" the Wesley Foundation is sponsoring a panel on Birth Control Wednesday at 6:45 at the Wesley Foundation.

Shari Heflin, a Business Education major from Richmond, carries on a lively conversation with one of her Alpha Delta Pi sisters. Shari also is a member of Phi Gamma Mu and Student Education Association.

French Club Held Special Meeting On European Meeting

Tuesday night, November 4, 1969, the French Club, Les Francophiles, held a special meeting to recruit students for their LONGWOOD IN EUROPE program. Mrs. Suzanne Puroell and Mr. Gerard de Berly from Educators and Students International Association in Miami, Florida, were here to present their program and attempt to make this program even better than it was last summer. Mr. Nunn, director of LONGWOOD IN EUROPE here at Longwood, discussed last year's program and informed the audience of many innovations. Peggy Anderson, acting Vice-President of Les Francophiles, informed the students of possible scholarships. The proceeds from the Foreign Language Film Series and the flea market held during Geist will be the source of these scholarships. The Junior Class sponsor, the president, vice-president, and treasurer of the French Club, will choose a rising-senior girl as the recipient of these scholarships. The Silvera twins entertained all with their singing and guitar-playing. They sang songs in English, Spanish, and French. Linda Rumpf and Susan DuPriest then spoke to the group about their experiences on the excursion last summer. Mr. Nunn and Mr. de Berly then had a question and answer period which was followed by refreshments.

All students interested in the Longwood in Europe program for next summer should contact Mr. Wayne K. Nunn in the Foreign Language Department. Extensive information is available on request.

Dr. Landrum Honored

Illinois University.

Dr. Landrum is listed in "Who's Who in American Education".

Longwood's Phi Beta Lambda chapter has accomplished major achievements in the business field. The Business Education Department may have more state and national winners than any other college in the nation.

The Phi Beta Lambda "Miss Future Business Teacher" contest has proven very successful for Longwood. Many girls have received honors in business and scored quite a record for the college. Rose Mary Street placed first in the state and national in 1966. Joyce Temple placed first in the state contest in 1968. Mina Koons was the recipient of the First Place State in 1969.

Since 1957, Longwood's Phi Beta Lambda has won three First Place States, and eleven First Place States.

"The girls are selected by the department here and given rigid, written tests and interviewed by experts," Dr. Landrum added.

The highly successful Business Education Department at Longwood has pioneered many professional contributions. It taught the subject of type-writing to classes of sixth-grade students approximately 25 years ago. The department was one of the first to include a course in Social Security and payroll accounting in curriculum. This is now in common use.

Since 1957, the college's Phi Beta Lambda has been a leader among the colleges in the United States in winning state and national honors.

Mr. Hollis Guy, executive director of the National office in Washington, stated that he did not know of any other college chapter in the nation that has so consistently won state honors and, in addition, had also had national winners.

The department was among the first in the South-Eastern area of the United States to install a wireless shorthand laboratory and among the first in the state to install data processing equipment. These installations were made possible by Dr. Francis G. Lankford who served as President and by Mr. Jacob Wamsley who was the Business Manager at that time.

Sigma Nu Has Bloodmobile At Hampden-Sydney Nov. 17

The bloodmobile, sponsored by the American Red Cross, will visit the Farmville area for the first time this academic year on Monday, November 17, when blood donations will be made at Hampden-Sydney College between 12 noon and 6 p.m. in the Student's Recreation Lounge.

Sponsored by Hampden-Sydney's chapter of Sigma Nu fraternity, the bloodmobile will provide an opportunity for both Hampden-Sydney and Longwood personnel, as well as the public, to make contributions.

Longwood College's honorary leadership fraternity, Geist, is coordinating plans for the participation of Longwood students, faculty, and staff. Bev Johnson, member of Geist, is arranging for Longwood's participation.

Geist, in close cooperation with Hampden-Sydney students, sponsored a highly successful visit of the bloodmobile to the Longwood campus last spring. It is contemplated that the bloodmobile will pay another visit to Longwood this spring, according to officers of Geist.

From Larry Campbell, who is coordinating bloodmobile plans for Hampden-Sydney, comes the request that many Longwood students participate in the visit of the bloodmobile and help Hampden-Sydney meet its blood quota. He stated that Hampden-Sydney students would provide transportation for Longwood blood donors.

Sophomores Sponsor Mixer In Gold Room Nov. 15 From 8-12

The Class of '72 is sponsoring a mixer this Saturday night, November 15, from 8 until 12 in the Gold Room of Lankford Building. The Statesmen, from Lynchburg, will provide the music.

Eight colleges have been asked to participate in the mixer. Included in the list are: VPI, VMI, U.Va., University of Richmond, Randolph-Macon, W&L, VCU, and Hampden-Sydney. The entire student body is invited to come and mix or bring your own man.

Due to the lack of a treasury, there will be an admission fee of 50¢. Cokes will also be on sale.

This is the first Sophomore Class Mixer ever held. The Sophomores hope to decorate the Gold Room and to also use a room as a "lounge room."

Joel Moore is in charge of the mixer and L. H. Lewis is publicity chairman.

So, everyone come out and support the sophomore class mixer.

VOTING TODAY FOR STUDENT GOVERNMENT OFFICES

The student body had many inquiries to make of those girls running for legislature chairman and vice chairman. They are Andee Maddox, Sue Rinaldi, Casey Wilkes, and Lynne Coleman.

Legislative Aspirants Cure All Headaches

Question for legislative candidates: Longwood College is rapidly increasing its enrollment. With this increasing expansion, what should be the role of student government?

LYNNE COLEMAN
President of Legislative

Whether there is increasing enrollment or not, a student government has one major duty. It is the functioning unit of the student body in organizing and evaluating activities deemed justifiable by that body. It should serve as a liaison between faculty, administration and students, but in so doing, retain the powers of the government in the hands of the students. If a proper liaison, the board should be distinctly honest in its confrontation with students and be able to accept suggestions. The board should realize that it is capable of making mistakes in regulations and requirements, and should strive to incorporate an understanding of this in the student body.

A great step in communications has been the student government conference. At the time, students and board alike were open-minded. Questions were raised honestly and actions have been taken to improve certain areas. This should be the first and principle purpose of all student government — to represent the student body, but to make decisions with help and not alone.

CASEY WILKES
Chairman of Legislative Board

We have been quite fortunate here at Longwood to have such an "open" Student Government. By the term "open" I am referring to the fact that the members of the three boards are always open to suggestion from every member of the student body. Even with the increase in the number of students this year, the democratic spirit has prevailed more strongly than ever. Look at the manner in which the Boards go about handling rule evaluation. The students have had a chance to voice their opinions by contacting a member of the Board personally, through the suggestion box, and more recently, the Student Government conference held in Jeffers. With the largest student body in the history of Longwood thus far we have not lost the personal concern for each student, nor do I see any deviation from this policy in the coming year.

With the rather comprehensive orientation program we have had in the past, the freshmen are oriented from the beginning to understand the details of each branch of their government. It is made quite clear that everyone's opinion will be listened to and considered. Actions and decisions are always made with the hopes that the best interests of the entire student body will be benefited. Longwood is very fortunate to have such a democratic form of Student Government—one in which there is room for everyone to be involved.

SUE RINALDI
Vice-Chairman Legislative

Student Government is concerned with all key problems involving the general and overall welfare of the student body. As our enrollment enlarges, these problems will be more acute and will demand even more attention than they already require. With this idea in mind, it is necessary that Student Government continue to play an active part in overseeing all facets of student life.

One major problem and responsibility of Student Government is concerned with communication. Today, with ideas and opinions constantly changing, a strong liaison among students, faculty, and the administration is necessary and extremely important. This communication link can be strengthened through various committees where student representatives and faculty advisors discuss various aspects of academic and social life. These committees should become more active, thereby making the student body aware of their activities and functions.

The individual branches of Student Government constitute another link of communication. The purpose of the three Boards is to generate an awareness of their specific powers and responsibilities, to stress the importance of student suggestions and opinions, and to further strengthen the communication link among students through good representation.

The student body must realize how important student participation is and, should therefore take a very active part in voicing their suggestions and varied opinions either through their elected representatives or at Student Government conferences.

If both the student body and Student Government do their part, the communication link may be tightened permanently and Student Government will more easily and effectively serve Longwood.

ANDEE MADDOX
V-Chairman of Legislative

Even though Longwood is rapidly increasing its enrollment, the roll of Student Government will and should be basically the same. As the Constitution stands now, the roll of Student Government is to insure the general welfare of the students by promoting the cultural, intellectual, and personal development of all students. It must strive to strengthen the unity, loyalty, and understanding of the students in all aspects of campus life. Because the Student Government is for the students and run by the students, there is opportunity for any interested person to participate in any of the three branches.

Most probably, as the enrollment of Longwood increases, more student representation will be needed. I feel that the more students are involved in an organization, the higher will be the general interest of all students in the organization and the better the communications between the active participants and the rest of the student body will be.

I believe that as the student enrollment increases that policies such as Student Government leaders have a more difficult task in keeping up with student opinion. By having such conferences the problems of the students will be brought into the open and action can be taken. I think the conference held on November 6 by Student Government served its purpose well. Many new points were brought up and I think the students could see that the Student Government leaders were willing to listen and to act once they were made aware of the problems.

Play Premieres Nov. 20

If one were to choose a phrase to best describe Elmer L. Rice's "The Adding Machine," he might select optical illusion. This effect, however, is created by director Harvey Snelde-man, not playwright Rice. Snelde-man creates his effect in the play to be presented by the Jongleurs and Players by employing a raised stage, an opening scene without the rise of the curtain, and a leery ending which is probably like nothing ever before viewed by theatre-goers.

The play depicts the life of a middle age man who has had an accountant job for fifteen years. He has never been a minute late nor a minute early. Upon hearing that he is to be replaced by a machine, he murders his boss. The story proceeds to illustrate his trial for murder, his soul's brief stay in the Elysian Fields, and the return of his soul to earth by reincarnation.

"The Adding Machine" was written from an expressionistic viewpoint. That is to say, it is marked by "unreal atmosphere, a nightmarish quality of action, distortion and over-simplification, and the de-emphasis of the individual." This type of thinking flourished in the 1920's when man was fearful of being replaced by a machine.

Opening November 20, "The Adding Machine" will run through Saturday, November 22, at Jarman Auditorium. Curtain is at 7:30 p.m.

But each consideration should be given to an individual's past circumstances (i.e., citizenship, personal, record, family situation, etc.)?

BONNIE BOWERS
Chairman of Judicial Board

It is the individual circumstances of a case that should be considered and weighed in reaching a decision by the Judicial Board. Each case is unique in itself. Similar offenses by different students could merit different decisions depending on the existing circumstances that may have had some influence on the incident in question. I believe that each student who comes before the Board should be dealt with on an individual basis. Her character and not who she is should be the important criteria to be considered.

I believe that if a witness gives information pertaining to previous incidents that the offender was involved in, the information should not be used as evidence for the question at hand. However, in cases where an offense has occurred a second time after a warning of some kind for the first offense, then further and even more serious action should be taken by the Board. But within the case itself only its own specifics should be used to make a decision.

JULIE SMITH
Chairman of Judicial Board

Since I have previously served on Judicial Board, the question of how much consideration should be given to individual circumstances, citizenship, and character has often arisen. I feel each case should be viewed as a unique situation and that all relevant factors should be considered. I think our present procedure is flexible enough to allow for the consideration of extenuating circumstances. If definite penalties were stated for specific violations it would hurt the student by ignoring the circumstances of her situation. I do not believe that a campus leader should receive special privileges just because of her position.

MARY INGRAM
Vice-Chairman of Judicial Board

Individuality is a very important aspect in every Judicial Board case. Regardless of any established order of precedence, every student and every case will have distinguishing characteristics. No two students will have committed the same infraction for the same reasons. As a result of this differentiation, each student should be judged in light of the circumstances surrounding her individual case. These individual circumstances, however, should be considered equally in every case. In other words, a Freshman member of the student body should be considered on an equal basis with a Student Government leader.

Character witnesses and citizenship records are definite determining factors in a case. An offense may occur during a moment of irrational judgment, or it may have been planned and calculated. A student's character and records will reveal her habits, opinions and ambitions, and these in return will help determine the opinion of Judicial Board.

Therefore, I firmly believe that circumstances, character and records are important factors in every case. I also uphold the belief that these factors, in total, should be considered equally in each and every Judicial Board case.

Judicial board candidates Bonnie Bowers, Julie Smith, and Mary Ingram discuss Topics of great interest to the students.

YWCA Candidates Air Views Discuss Purpose Of Organization

Question: What do you think should be the overall purpose and objectives of our YWCA?

BRENDA MORENE
Candidate for Y Pres.

I feel that the overall purpose of our YWCA should be to establish a spirit of Christian love and awareness throughout the campus and community, by incorporating into the activities of Longwood a spiritual side of college life. Since service to others is the main basis of any religious organization, the YWCA should serve as a means for Longwood students to express their care and concern for those around them. By uniting girls of all faiths, the YWCA seeks to meet the needs and fulfill the interests of all students on campus no matter what their religious beliefs. Thus, the YWCA can establish a feeling of unity among the students, which in turn can help in spreading the Longwood Spirit. It is in this area that the YWCA can especially hold up to its responsibilities as a major organization on campus. By working towards a unification of girls of all faiths, and by creating a desire to express love and concern for others, the YWCA can do its share in creating and sustaining the spirit of Longwood College.

LOIS WELLS
President of YWCA

The overall purpose of the YWCA should be service — service to the school, the community, and the student body. The YWCA should encourage interest in and development of the spiritual aspect of life, instilling in the girls Christian love and awareness. As one of the primary aims, the "Y" should attempt to unite the various denominational groups, acting as the focal point around which these groups revolve. Striving to draw the students closer together in loyalty, understanding, and friendship, the "Y" should seek to meet the individual interests and needs of the girls. Having a responsibility to the members of the student body, the YWCA should strive to find ways and means of meeting the need of every girl to belong to a group in which her ideas will be considered and shared and where new ideas and outlooks may be imparted to her.

Personality and maturity consist of many things. The spiritual side is often neglected. Venturing through life, (Continued on Page 4)

Your Vote Counts!

Major elections have arrived again or perhaps this is your first experience in choosing the heads of various campus organizations. This is just a reminder that you should consider your choices with thoroughness. Find out what their qualifications are, their responsibility and what beliefs they hold on various issues. Compare these factors and then VOTE for the one you feel will comply with the responsibilities of the specific office.

The elections are finished and your candidate either won or lost; whatever the case remember the majority of the student body voted these girls into office and they are doing their best to fulfill their offices to the best of their abilities. So before you start downrating your student leaders, remember you elected them.

Letter To The Editor

Letter to the Editor:

I was a recent visitor on the Longwood campus and was appalled at the inadequacy of street lights and sidewalks. My basic concern is the lighting situation around Curry. When I asked why nothing was being done, I was informed that a committee has been appointed to "look into" the matter. Great! While this matter is being "looked into" someone can be seriously hurt. Indeed, an accident has already occurred. As far as I am concerned, this was one accident too many.

Then there's the possibility of assault. Has anyone stopped to consider that? Would anyone at Longwood want the responsibility of this hanging over his head, because the matter was being "looked into"?

Something should be done NOW — not later after months of slow deliberation by a committee — it may be too late.

Rebecca Fortum, U. Va.
(former student at Longwood)

"Kinetic Art" Film Preview On Campus For Student Body

By MARY ALICE CARMODY
Sometime in the near future, Longwood will have the pleasure of showing a preview reel of "The Kinetic Art." This film will contain a representative cross-section from the complete film.

"The Kinetic Art" is a twenty-six film threeprogram series by the world's leading film-makers. The twenty-six films run from 55 seconds to 55 minutes in length and are divided into three separate programs which offer a variety of interest . . . pop, documentary, animated, experimental, and dramatic. Recently the Virginia Museum presented the series, and now Longwood students will have a chance to view previews of all the films in one showing.

In this collection of films are the works of twelve new directors whose works have never before been seen by the American public. The films have been collected from more than 1,000 film festivals, laboratories, and screening-rooms.

Everyone is invited to attend this preview at no cost. The date will be announced in the dining hall later, or see Mr. Rouillard in the art department.

Be Ahead - Submit Now

The pills of a pot head give a bad trip, but the creative pills of a literary head are generally mild in effect. They neither mutilate or deteriorate, but instead arouse, and liberate. Why not blow your mind in a burst of creative spirit. Joan Harp is offering you two more weeks to submit to the CYRE. She is extending the deadline until December 3. This means that the magazine cannot be distributed until the week after exams, but the fault is yours. These creative openings have been offered since the first of October, and the response from the student body has been close to nil. This is a serious warning to the literary head. If you don't support the literary magazine, how can you expect it to continue.

Longwood House Becomes Willett's Home

Renovation Still In Process Of Completion

Longwood House, purchased by the college in 1928 for the purpose of being a recreational site for Longwood students, is now the home of President Willett.

The house once was an area which various campus organizations could use for week end retreats. A colored woman ran a tearoom there on the week ends, being quite famous for her "Longwood buns." Since those days, the house has been occupied by various persons.

Originally, it was planned that a new house be built for the President of the college, and the General Assembly of Virginia had provided funds for this purpose. However, when President and Mrs. Willett went out to select a site for the new house, Mrs. Willett saw the old house and like it. After going through the various channels, it was decided that the money for the new house would be used for the renovation.

Unless plans had been made for its renovation, Longwood House would probably just have gradually deteriorated. The former home of Longwood presidents is now available to be used by the Alumnae Association since renovation of the present Alumnae House on campus is necessary but impractical.

The direction of the renovation project was assumed by Col. Carr, Longwood's Vice-President for Administration, who has somewhat of a background in restoring old houses. Col. Carr was assisted in this project by Mrs. Willett. Their general aim has been to restore the house as nearly as possible to the original, but at the same time to modernize its facilities; for example, the putting in of heat and air conditioning and the addition of modern conveniences in the kitchen.

Although the project is not completed as of yet, Dr. Willett hopes that in the future, regular hours can be set aside for students to come out and tour the house.

The interior of the house represents a delicate balancing between the stately beauty of old tradition and the easy convenience of the modern. The spacious entrance hall with its intricate woodwork archway makes one think he is stepping into an old Southern plantation home.

In the formal parlor an impressive high bay catches one's eye. This beautiful piece of furniture was supposedly given to the school by the wife of a governor of Virginia. The furniture in the house is a combination of furniture that was in this house, in the former presidential mansion, and the Willett's own personal furniture. From the parlor one can move into the more informal living room. Gracious old fireplaces enhance practically every room.

The kitchen would definitely be a dream for almost any aspiring homemaker. Easy efficiency reigns, storage space abounds, and the general tone of tradition is skillfully fused to produce a quite striking effect.

Upstairs on both the second and third floors one finds a multitude of bedrooms; which, Mrs. Willett says, will most probably be filled with guests sooner or later.

On the second floor is found the master bedroom, which, by the way, has no bed as of yet. Rodney and Scott, the older Willett boys, share a spacious room which features bright orange-trimmed woodwork against a beige background. The library opens out onto a sun porch from which one can easily pick up some pointers from the golfers enjoying themselves out on the golf course.

The third floor features more bedrooms. One room will be a playroom for the boys, while Mrs. Willett will use another room for her sewing.

The white frame house exhibits red shutters on the outside, but Dr. Willett hastens to say that "we're not trying to take sides." Future plans call for a fenced-in area for the boys and some sidewalks.

Dr. Willett cites the advantages ensuing from his new abode. The space is good for the boys, and the golf course provides a wonderful opportunity for him. Since they're still in the process of moving, he's been getting up earlier in the morning to arrange things and to jog the quarter mile to get the paper. About the jogging, Dr. Willett adds that he "doesn't know how long it will last when the weather gets cold!"

There are signs that someone new has moved into the Longwood House, for no drapes hang at the windows yet the walls are adorned with pictures, etc. The indications are, though, that Longwood House is fast becoming filled with the warmth and love that turns a house into a home.

Symposium On Graduate School, Informative Discussion Results

The symposium on graduate school sponsored by Lynchos, was held on November 11, last Tuesday, and was very informal and informative. The panel of faculty members, answering the questions of the audience, included Dr. Carolyn Wells, Mrs. Robert Woodburn, Dr. Elizabeth Etheridge, and Mr. Jim Gussett. Among the audience were Dr. Blanche Badger, chairman of the mathematics department, and Dr. Jane Holman, advisor of Lynchos, and students from several majors.

The panel agreed that students wanting to research and to learn more about their particular field or subject area, such as science, mathematics, or history, should definitely consider graduate school upon graduation from college. Those with an intent interest in education can pursue a Masters in Education Degree (commonly referred to as M.Ed.) in several ways. One is to teach for a while then apply as a fulltime student to graduate school, or one can teach a regular school year and participate as a special student in summer sessions at the graduate school of your choice. Mrs. Woodburn cited that she taught four years and attended graduate courses during the summers, thus completing four years' teaching experience and a M.Ed. in three summers prior to coming to Longwood.

Selecting a school is similar to applying to college. Writing for catalogues, meeting people who have attended the school, seeing what the school can offer you in your field, determining the cost, and many other factors, will influence your choice. Whether you want to live at home and save money while attending a local school, or travel to a distant place, depends upon your maturity, your budget, and your field. A choice of three schools should be made. Your acceptance is dependent upon the school... whether emphasis is placed on undergraduate grades in your major field and your cumulative, on your GRE scores, on your experience in the teaching profession, and on the amount of competition when your application is filed. Requirements vary since some consider only applicants with an accumulative of 3.0 while others seek applicants with a 3.0 in their major field and a 2.5 in overall grades.

As for assistantships and fellowships, many applications ask whether or not you desire financial aid. The usual load carried by a graduate student would be 12-15 hours per quarter or 12 hours per semester. A person with a fellowship or assistantship may have to work up to 10 hours a week to repay the loan or grant. These loans or grants are available by asking on the campus of your choice, but work loads vary from school to school; national loans and grants are available. Thus, money is available, but your study load may have to be lessened in order to be either a research or teaching assistant since the work is much harder, but then your degree would require more time.

Foreign language exams vary from school to school as well as required scores for GRE. GRE should be taken in your senior year of college, since you will be more familiar with the material; the scores are good for five years. GRE applications are available in Dean Beckwell's office.

Once you get in, you should be able to "sacrifice" and assume a certain amount of responsibility, assume a daily schedule of study activities, and assume some ambition to finish your daily work. Effort must be put out for the work which is not "spoonfed" to the student. Though graduate work sounds terrifying at the present, if one is "intelligent" to get in, then one should be intelligent enough to get out. With ambition, determination, and maturity, he will find graduate school an "exciting and interesting" experience.

THANKSGIVING!

The Athletic Association candidates Susie Marsh, Janet Harpold and Laurel Baldwin, offer suggestions for the revised intramural program.

Marsh-Harpold For AA President Laurel Baldwin For Vice-Pres.

Question: Do you favor Red n' White versus Green n' White competition and if so, what exactly do you feel is accomplished by this that regular intramural program could not offer? If you do not favor this, please explain.

JANET HARPOLD
President of Athletic Association
I definitely favor Red n' White versus Green n' White competition over a regular intramural program. Our system of color competition offers, on the intramural level, all the freedom of choice one has in a regular intramural program—freedom to compete with any other students one wishes to have as teammates, regardless of class or color, on the class and color levels, however, our system has added aspects which are not available in most intramural programs. Playing with other members of one's own color, for the glory of that color, gives an added element of competition and spirit to our intramural sports program. Color competition also serves as an excellent way of introducing the freshmen to our intramural program, since their sister class invites and encourages them to participate; otherwise, I doubt that freshman participation would be as high as it is.

SUSIE MARSH
Candidate for Athletic Assoc. President
The system has been in existence for many years and has come to be a tradition, however things can become outdated and must change with the times if they are not accomplishing their purposes. On reviewing the purposes of the color system they must be stated as a mechanism to build spirit, a bridge, not only between classes but also for the whole school. Personally, I think the color system is the best device to accomplish this because of the high pitch of spirit during these games. It is very gratifying when someone comments on the superior level of class, color, and school spirit here at Longwood and I feel that it is the color system which contributes a large portion of this spirit.

Certainly there would be spirit in an intramural program which involved individuals playing only in the name of their specific team, however their enthusiasm would involve only them. In the class and color method there are a certain number of girls representing two entire classes, this gives them a feeling of unity and working together for a common goal. If the spirit of the color games was one of total conflict it would then be time to change the system, as it stands now and in past years, there is also a prevailing feeling of Blue and White spirit, which is the main function of this system.

LAUREL BALDWIN
Vice President of Athletic Association
Yes, I'm in favor of Red n' White vs. Green n' White competition.

First of all, this type of color competition provides an opportunity to meet new people on the class level and on the color level for the sister classes to get acquainted with each other. A regular intramural program tends for the same people to group together.

A regular intramural program has only one goal, for one team to win. In color competition there is a double goal which provides for more excitement. There are winners first on the class level and then the sister classes combine to win on color level. However, competition does not end here, for points are awarded in every sport competition to both the class and color winners for another far reaching goal. This goal is class cup and color cup.

Lastly, color competition provides for more excitement in class spirit. Since a regular intramural program only allows for one goal, there is not likely to be any reason for many to cheer your team on. With color competition's double goal there is more reason for people to come out and support their team just as in big football games. People want to see their own class and color win!

Gymnastic Members Participate In Clinic Plan Other Activities

Sophomores Debbie Ellenbrand and Nancy Fowlkes accompanied Miss Fath this weekend to a Gymnastics Judging clinic at Patrick Henry High School in Roanoke. The clinic was open for coaches and college women interested in the technique of judging gymnastic events.

At present, the gymnastic team at Longwood is preparing for their own clinic. On November 22, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., a participation clinic will be held in French gym. The purpose of this clinic is to aid and train gymnastic coaches on various apparatus. Local and state coaches have been invited and two students may accompany each coach. Specialists will be on hand to instruct on the teaching of various apparatus and floor moves.

Longwood's gymnastic team is becoming more active in the state and Miss Fath feels that this will enhance the reputation of Longwood's team and obtain more support and interest from the campus.

Juniors Win Class Hockey Competition Color Teams Named

After a week of exciting play, the Junior Class hockey team emerged as the winners after defeating the sophomores.

Those girls playing for the Green and Whites are freshmen B. J. Purcell, Louise Moss, Terry Gadsby, Becky Jennings, Joy King, Bev Turner, Diane Padgett, Sandy Oliver and Sue Manahan. Juniors playing include Barbara Jenkins, Jane Sakshaug, Susie Marsh, Jan Deyerle, Sherry Williams, Connie Williams, Carol Sanders, Lynn Coleman and Maxine Stone.

Playing on the Red and White team are sophomores Karen Haldean, Kay Harvey, Pam Harrison, Betty Ann Glasheen, Debbie Morris, Sue Wilkes, Joan Lawter, Terry VanCantfort and Renee Harrison. Seniors on the team are Suzanne Turner, Lydia Driver, Sue Rhodes, Shorti Moriconi, Sandy Peterson, Cherie Weeks, Lorraine Clawson, Pat Quinn and Marsha Franklin.

we encounter many obstacles that can be more easily overcome and decisions that can be more easily made, if a person is able to draw from a deeper, fuller understanding of life.

The YWCA should be a place where everyone can turn for help with problems, a place where one can find someone with whom to talk, or a place where one can find a friend. As the YWCA should be of service to everyone, so should everyone feel free and have the desire to become involved in the "Y" activities, because the YWCA is made up of the students and YOU are the students.

Four Vie For Residence Board Positions Candidates Outline Various Duties Involved

What particular problems would you as chairman or vice-chairman be concerned with?

CAROL UMBDENSTOCK
Chairman of Residence

The Chairman of Residence Board is generally concerned with rules governing the dorm and the dress and conduct of the students. It is her responsibility to co-ordinate the board and govern the meetings. Also with the help of her dorm and hall presidents she is expected to keep the student body informed of any new or changed rules. She then has to see that these rules are enforced.

At this present time there are two particular changes which Residence Board is considering—the dress code and the curfew. I feel that the chairman and the board should look very closely at these and any other problems which should arise and then move in the direction that is desired by a majority of the students.

The chairman's job is large and varied but her main job concerns the rules, making and enforcing them.

JUDY HAYNES

Chairman of Residence Board

The immediate area of concern would be a general evaluation of all rules under the jurisdiction of Residence Board. Some areas, of course, are more controversial at the moment, but this does not mean that the other rules should be ignored until controversy arises over them also.

The dress code needs much study and thought. This area of rules is perhaps the most controversial set of rules on campus at this time. Residence Board needs to reevaluate and alter many aspects of the dress code, but this cannot be achieved by changing the entire mass. Each place on campus and off must be thought of when determining "proper attire." There will be changes, but there will also be new restrictions that go along with the reforms.

Curfew is another controversial area. Curfew should be extended, but NEVER abolished. The matter of an extended leeway period is related to curfew. The later curfew is made, the smaller the chances of extending the leeway. If curfew is set at two o'clock, a twenty minute leeway, should not be necessary.

Regulations concerning the dining hall are of interest now also. The new ideas of Residence Board are good, but the students must realize that this may prove to be burdensome for the waitresses in the future. If the students do not show consideration by leaving their coats outside and remaining seated, it will be difficult for the waitresses to work efficiently.

There are many areas that need a careful reevaluation, but I believe these will be the immediate areas of reevaluation. As soon as these are modified then work on other rules could be begun.

SALLY GILL

Vice-Chairman of Residence Board

There are many numerous and varied areas that will concern the newly elected Vice-Chairman of Residence Board. I feel, however, that of most importance are her duties as Chairman of the Dining Hall Committee and also her function of presiding over the Residence Board Trials. By having a vote on the Board she will be able to use this to voice her opinions for other rule changes.

The dining hall has always been a problem at Longwood College. The experimentation that is being held now is a good indication of what permanent changes will be made. However, there are many areas that the Board will be concerned with later such as the seating problem with the increased enrollment. This will have to be looked into and evaluated before definite plans can be made.

Concerning the Residence Board Trials, I feel that the circumstances of each case should be considered individually however, consistency of penalties must be regarded. Since Dorm Trials are a new phase of determining penalties, I feel that with time these can be improved.

Other areas that Residence Board will be concerned with are Dress Code, curfew, pink slips, sign out cards and room check. I feel that these areas should be liberalized not only because of modern day trends but also because of the increased student enrollment. The Vice Chairman of Residence Board is a representative of the student body and I feel that her job should be centered around the opinions and needs of the Student Body.

The above are the areas that Vice-Chairman of Residence Board will be concerned with. This office also offers many opportunities to encourage enthusiasm and participation in school activities and the spirit of Longwood College and I feel that this should be an objective of the newly elected officer.

ELLEN LYON

Vice-Chairman Residence Board

As Vice-Chairman of Residence Board, my main duties would concern dining hall problems and procedures which I would become involved with by serving on the Dining Hall Committee. I would be responsible for receiving any student complaints in this area. It would be my duty to conduct all trials brought before the Residence Board, and to investigate and explain any such student violations to the Board.

I feel that it is the responsibility of each Residence Board member to be aware of and to convey any student complaints concerning dress code, curfew, dormitory regulations, etc., to the Residence Board as a whole. Open discussion and proper procedures can then be taken to clear up any difficulty.

I also believe in and uphold the purpose of the Residence Board. The rules and regulations it strives to enforce are conducive to safety, self-discipline, honesty, neatness of attire, and order. Though these rules should not be immovable, the basic standards they strive for are necessary for acquiring maturity and responsibility as an individual. However, rules constantly need reevaluation and adaptation.

Carol Umbdenstock, and Judy Haynes candidates for Chairman of Residence Board and Sally Gill and Ellen Lyon candidates for vice-chairmen discuss pertinent issues, such as dress code and curfew.

Drama Students Showed Aladdin For Area Children; December 12

By JACKIE COLBERT

The Drama 101 Class presented Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp on Friday, December 12, for some area school children.

Written by Elizabeth Dooley, the story successfully depicted Scheherazade's tale from One Thousand and One Nights. The play was well executed on a child's level. The audience seemed to be caught up in the wonder of the story. During a chase scene the house lights were turned on and the actors ran into the audience. The children joined in to tell Aladdin where the soldiers were hiding. When the actors returned to the stage, the children still yelled warnings to Aladdin.

Brenda Griffin who played Aladdin gave a wonderful performance. She was perfect as the gay, carefree boy who becomes a prince. Her winning smile captivated the children in the audience. When caught in the cave of jewels, her despair was just right. Always in a light vein so the children would not be frightened, her character was very believable. Her facial expressions made some of the scenes come to life.

Two other characters deserve special praise. Marty Repole as the camel and Debbie Henshaw as the Wazir added comic touches. With the funny costume and voice with the continuing cry of "I want a drink (of water)," the camel's personality enchanted the children. When the Wazir came on stage, her frenzied movements caused one of the biggest laughs in the play. The whole cast was good and made the play come alive. They all seemed to know their lines and made the play move quickly.

The scenery was fanciful but represented old Bagdad well. Mosques and spires showed a street and market place. As in Shakespeare, props though scarce served their purpose.

'The Adding Machine' Second Fall Play Entertains Audience

The November 20 performance of Elmer Rice's "The Adding Machine" provided its Longwood audience with an example of something Longwood sees much too seldom. A job well done. Directed by Harvey L. Sneideman, the cast of Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs presented what by all rights should have been an enthusiastic but nonetheless outdated representation of man versus machine. Mr. Sneideman's troupe, however, managed to thwart both time and theme to achieve a workable, believable portrait of man versus himself. Just how this was achieved is up to conjecture. Perhaps it was the simplicity of the set or the obvious lack of updating of the characters. It could have been the use of a present-day hippie to interject the idea of a society in need of change. The most likely conclusion is that it was achieved by a combination of these and other agents. Whatever it may have been, it certainly made "The Adding Machine" work as no play of its style and theme should have logically.

The technical aspects of the production were handled so subtly that the viewer came to expect the smoothness offered him, a quality usually absent in amateur productions. Set, lighting, and costumes all blended in a seemingly effortless coordination; in particular the costumes, rather than attempting to update the play with late sixties' styles, remained in their thematic place with shapeless jackets and below-the-knee skirts. Special effects such as the strobe light that opened the second act and the color wheel which flashed at the end served to close the gap between Rice's authorship and Sneideman's presentation.

Certainly the actors deserved an extra round of applause, both for performance and endurance. Mr. Zero, played by Frank Johns, was an effective example of the man who is all talk and no action; his boastful grumbling and nervous objections made him appear as an antithesis—smaller, (Continued on Page 4)

G.B. Ya'll

During the past year I have expounded on many subjects — from sunbathing to the dress code and from the Janssen series to Blue and White spirit. Now, as my year as Managing Editor is drawing to a close, I am reflecting back on my three years on the ROTUNDA staff and wondering if all the work, worries, and late nights have been worth it. Would I recommend that anyone interested in giving the newspaper their time do so? The answer is definitely YES!!

As I leave I have a few words pertaining to the New staff for next semester and especially for all of those students who say, "If I were Editor of the Rotunda, there would be a lot of changes made." Any position on the staff involves a lot of work, more than most students are aware of. If you think something is newsworthy, help them out and suggest it. Perhaps the paper doesn't reflect your personal views on a particular subject, but it isn't supposed to. The newspaper is made to pertain to a majority of the student body, not to take extremist views on every issue.

If you particularly don't like the way the paper is planned, do something about it, not by standing around complaining, but by constructive criticism to those who are involved; or better yet, by working on the paper yourself, after all someone has to do it.

In closing, I want to wish the very best of luck to the incoming staff and hope that they have as wonderful a staff as Libba and I have had.

Change For The Better ... Or Not?

In the year that I have held the position as Editor-in-Chief of The Rotunda, there have been a number of marked changes in campus policies. In a few short months, Longwood students have been granted permission to have a voice in determining their own exam schedule. Pre-registration holds the spot light now, but the change in the dress code and extended curfew have added much in up-dating campus regulations. The sidewalk from Curry through Iler field has finally been completed. Longwood's ten-story skyscraper has been open all week to a host of community visitors, faculty members, and campus administrators. The holiday spirit is reflected in a number of door decorations, a certain Christmas tree above Curry, and the star and cross which are visible throughout the Farmville Corporate limits. Even the Christmas tree Freshman Commission decorated in the Gold Room is a change in L. C. tradition. Since the Rotunda is getting its long overdue face lifting, students are prohibited from walking through the halls on their way to or from classes. Our freshman class does not know how attractive the old Christmas tree was — nor do they know that decorations were sometimes placed from the second floor balcony. Yes, things have changed.

But is change always a good thing? Should we continue to revise the student handbook and delete more rules next fall? Will more student freedom be the up-and-coming campus trend?

When I was a freshman, we were granted a 2 o'clock permission only on special Hampden-Sydney weekends. However, now students can stay out until 2 o'clock whether or not they go to H-S. Has anyone wondered what these people are doing between 12:30 a.m. until 2 a.m.? Especially those couples who have not decided on any "special" place to go... Oh, and suppose your date is studying with you. You have 2:30 permission, but he has to be out of the dorm at 1 a.m. What can you do? Go outside and freeze together for an hour-and-a-half? Why can't dates remain in parlors until the curfew hour? Our present system needs another change—only how much change is a good thing? When do we know to stop and "let things be" as they are?

In four years work on The Rotunda staff, there also have been a number of changes. People were eager and willing to volunteer their time and energy in interviewing, setting up, and proofing the paper. Photographers and staff members came in large numbers — willing to assist the campus publication. But apathy has taken over. Only a few dedicated patrons will work each week. People complain—but do they offer help on week nights or Sundays? It is time for a progressive, positive change in newspaper policies. When the new semester begins, listen for announcements concerning newspaper organization. If something is not done in the way of recruiting new staff members The Rotunda may be a thing of the past. True, we are one of the only college publications whose editors and managing editor are NOT paid. Some schools even give three to six hour's credit for these students. Maybe it's a matter of "too much work and never any pay" that has turned people against staff involvement. And then of course, as editor, you are responsible for everything printed. If you received a pecuniary reward, the classroom ridicule from professors and "fellow" students would not be quite so alarming. The ironic thing is that those who complain the most are "verbal objectors." I have yet to see these people offer help — and help is what The Rotunda needs.

Let's bring about another change. Volunteer some of your time to real work... and then complain!

Students Urged To Take National Exams As Early As Possible

The National Teachers' Exam, which is required by some school systems before they will sign a contract, is being given in areas throughout the state on January 31. Because it takes 41 days to receive scores from the exams, it is important for students seeking teaching jobs to take this exam now rather than waiting until April. The deadline for registering for the NTE is January 8. Bulletins may be picked up in Mr. Elliott's office (Education department) or Dean Blackwell's office.

Students who want to work for the government this summer are urged to take the Federal Summer Employment Exam at their local post offices at an early date.

The United States Information Agency Exam for Foreign Service at Longwood is enough are interested. For placement in the Foreign Service, a degree is not necessary. Clerks must be able to type 40 wpm; a secretary, 50 wpm, and for shorthand, you must be able to do 30 wpm for 3 minutes. If interested in this exam, sign up with Mrs. Brooks in the Placement Office, now located in the Alumnae House.

Trial Dress Code Changes And Pre-registration Are Main Topics

By LISE WORTHINGTON
December's press conference was held last Thursday in the Gold Room at 4:00. About 100 to 150 Longwood ladies sat or stood drinking cokes and discussed campus happenings. The two main areas for discussions were the announcement made by Residence Board in regards to the dress code and academic aspects of Longwood.

Julie Wright, representing Residence Board, told the students present, that many advances had been made towards trying to liberalize the dress codes. A petition had been submitted, and in response, the Residence Board had sent around a questionnaire trying to find the general feeling of the entire student body on the question of sports attire and its proper place. The result was that for the week before Christmas, neat sports attire will be allowed everywhere on campus. There are, however, two stipulations to this proposed rule. One, cut-offs are prohibited, they may not be worn in public places and Sunday attire is required for Sunday dinner, and for all special banquets. Julie was quick to stress that whether or not these rules go into effect is strictly up to the way in which you, the student body, conduct yourself. One important question that was brought up was "who decided what is neat attire." Julie smiled, and her response was, "You do." As it stands then, the students decide what they think neat attire, but Residence Board will be watching and observing, so it is to your best interests to think carefully as you put on that stretched T-shirt.

Dr. Willett felt it necessary, after the discussion on the dress code, to announce again his stand on petitions. Contrary to what many of the students might think, Dr. Willett is not opposed to petitions. What he is worried about, and definitely opposed to is that when the student signs a petition he is not aware that she is agreeing to everything contained in that petition. Dr. Willett wanted to make it entirely clear that when you sign your name, you are endorsing every facet of the petition, not just part A or Part B.

Questions pertaining to the academic side of school life began with the question of whether morning classes were to be canceled on the last day before Christmas holidays. The answer was no; student dismissal is at noon. The reason given was that morning classes were already out on the day of Convocation and further cutting will only throw these teachers further behind.

Another student wanted to know what the chances were of "changing over to a quarter system." Dr. Willett answered, "Not very good." He said that Bedford was on the quarter system, and the administration was not too enthused. It seems that on the semester system, more teaching is done at a lower cost to the student. Another point brought up was that Longwood offers on its present system a much better and faster method of acceleration.

Further questioning included a library staff member who made a plea to students to stop violating the Honor Code when they removed books from the library. She pointed out, that this is an honor code offense and if the student is apprehended, Judicial Board might not take kindly to the excuse "I forgot."

A few questions were brought up which had to do with the second semester registration policy. As the plan stands now, the juniors and seniors will be registered on a "first-come-first-serve basis," and the freshmen and sophomores will go by reverse alphabetical order. The entire registration, it was found out, is done by hand and not by machine. This means that each student card is scrutinized with the hopes of giving the student her first choice of classes and instructors.

The last really important question discussed had to do with Lankford being open until 2:00 on Friday and Saturday nights. The answer was no for earlier in the year there had been no provision made for funds to bring in additional personnel. Perhaps next year, the state will appropriate the needed funds, but until then Lankford will not be open.

Christmas At Curry

Curry Dormitory gave a Christmas party for all faculty, staff, and their children on Monday night. All the entertainment was provided and arranged by the girls who live in Curry.

Story tellers told tales to the children. A student from Hampden-Sydney and a girl from Curry put on a skit. There was a group of girls, dressed as angels, who sang to the little children, Rachael Paschall and Jane Boykin sang solos.

The foreign language hall, located in Curry, presented a special program on Christmas in other lands. The girls, dressed in their native costumes, told the Christmas traditions of France, Germany and Spain. The foreign exchange student from Vietnam told how they celebrate the holiday.

The thrill of the evening came when Santa Claus appeared, giving each of the children a gift. The gifts were supplied by the girls through a dorm aid. Refreshments, made by the girls, were served.

Ron Moody and the Centours played at a dance Saturday night in the Gold Room. These mixers are sponsored by the Lankford Activities Committee, and under the direction of Tim Brown, these functions have become "the" popular campus entertainment.

Volleyball Intramural Finals Are Scheduled For December 17

After an exciting season of field hockey, the sports scene has now turned to volleyball. Intramural games are being held several nights a week in Iler and French gyms.

Using the same procedure as in hockey, the teams were formed representing the various dorms and sororities. Because there was so much interest shown, several of the dorms and sororities have two teams playing.

Most of the officiating is being done by several of the upperclassmen physical education majors. This gives them practice to get their ratings in volleyball officiating.

The main thing that has proved to be a big problem with most of the girls is getting use to the new rules. The ball must not be hit with the flat palm and if it is tapped with the fingers, the wrists must not be broken. This has caused many of the girls to be called for using illegal hits.

This week brings the intramurals to an end. The semifinals will be played on Tuesday night with the finals being played Wednesday night at 7 p.m. in either Iler or French Gym.

Basketball Season Begins, New Squad Prepares For Game

Practice for varsity basketball began Monday, December 1, 1969. The response was very good with approximately forty students showing up to try their skill.

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday were set aside for organized practice with individual practice, consisting of laps and foul shots, expected on all other days except Sunday. The girls' ability in a game situation was the most important factor in the coaches' final decisions, so they were each given a chance to display this talent as the two coaches observed.

Quite a bit of adjustment had to be made by both the girls and the coaches because of the new style of playing. This year the teams will consist of five girls, all playing full court. After two weeks of long, hard practice, supreme individual and team efforts, and three cuts, the final team was posted. The team consists of the following seventeen girls: Fran Anthony, Dottie Bohannon, Cindy Bradley, Patricia Lynne Coleman, Barbara Cridlin, Janet Ford, Cail Gossage, Joy King, Margaret Lowry, Freda Delight Lunsford, Sue Manahan, Linda Moody, Diane Padgett, Margaret Pulley, Martha Teach, Carolyn Thompson, and Judy Kay Turner.

Volleyball intramurals have been moving along with a lot of sore knuckles and bruised knees. The final game will be tonight at 7:00.

LC Swim Team Ends Season Attend Inter-Collegiate Meet

The Longwood Varsity Swim Team won two of its last four swim meets and ended the season with a 4-3 record. In the meet against Lynchburg here, Longwood won by a score of 48-29. First placers were the 200 yard Medley relay of Carolyn Starmont, Eleanor Challen, Mary Ellen Saslowski, and Ellen Cahill; 50 yard freestyle, Betty Cavedo; 100 yard Individual Medley, Mary Ellen Saslowski; 50 yard breaststroke, Eleanor Challen; and the Freestyle Relay, Ellen Cahill, Carolyn Starmont, Betty Cavedo, and Eleanor Challen, Kathy Hipskind won the diving event.

In the home meet against William and Mary, Longwood lost by a close score of 47-30. The only firsts were in the 50 yard butterfly, Ellen Cahill and the 200 yard Freestyle Relay of Ellen Cahill, Carolyn Starmont, Betty Cavedo, and Eleanor Challen. Longwood was able though, to capture many second places against the tough William and Mary team.

In the meet at Roanoke on November 24, Longwood was narrowly defeated by a score of 44-33. Longwood won the first event, the 200 yard Medley Relay consisting of Lois Hrubik, Eleanor Challen, Mary Ellen Saslowski, and Betty Cavedo. Longwood also placed first in the 60 yard freestyle, Carolyn Starmont; Diving, Kathy Hipskind; and 60 yard breaststroke, Eleanor Challen.

The Longwood team won its final home meet against Westhampton by a score of 43-33. Longwood's first placers were: 50 yard freestyle, Betty Cavedo; Diving, Kathy Hipskind; 50 yard butterfly, Ellen Cahill; 50 yard breaststroke, Eleanor Challen; and the 200 yard Freestyle Relay of Ellen Cahill, Cynthia Kearney, Carolyn Starmont and Eleanor Challen.

The Swim Team also participated in the Inter-Collegiate Swim meet at Mary Washington on Saturday, December 13. The other colleges who participated were Lynchburg College, Madison, Mary Washington, Old Dominion, Westhampton and William and Mary. Longwood's team placed fifth. Four of Longwood's swimmers made the finals. They were Mary Ellen Saslowski in the 100 yard individual medley and the 50 yard butterfly; Eleanor Challen in the 50 yard breaststroke; Lois Hrubik in the 100 yard backstroke and Betty Cavedo in the 100 yard freestyle.

Eleanor Challen placed third in the breaststroke; Mary Ellen Saslowski placed fifth in individual medley, and Lois Hrubik, Betty Cavedo and Mary Ellen Saslowski all placed sixth in their events.

Longwood PE Students; Staff Attend Vahper Convention Judie Guidice Elected To Office

On Friday, December 5, over 40 physical education majors and staff attended the Virginia Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Convention. The convention was held December 4 through December 6 at Hotel Roanoke, Roanoke, Virginia. Longwood students attended a variety of programs and meetings during the day. Of the programs offered, there was a demonstration of coaching and teaching basketball given by Patsy Neal, one of the noted women's basketball authorities. Other programs included elementary movement, dance, secondary physical education, coaching, and adaptive and corrective physical education. It seems that many girls were also interested in the exhibits and displays of the various equipment and supply companies. The way this author understood it, several girls put on their own display - for example jumping for ten minutes - right Betty, Louise, Carol, and Judie?

At the end of the events on Friday, the Longwood students attended the student section meeting. The program was a panel discussion concerning graduate school opportunities in physical education. Among the speakers were Dr. Mary Heintz, and Miss Fath of Longwood.

Also during the meeting, next year's officers of the student section of the VAHPER were elected. Cherie Weeks, who is now vice chairman will step down from her office in April. But Longwood will have another representative among the officers. Judie Guidice was elected Chairman of the student section. Kris Anderson of ODU was elected Vice Chairman.

The student section of the VAHPER functions as a section of the State Association and is composed of student members of the state's colleges and universities. Representatives include ODC, University of Virginia, Norfolk State, Virginia State, Madison College, Radford College, and Longwood. This student section offers those who plan to teach physical education a chance to become active in their professional organization and more aware of the opportunities that the state has to offer.

Physical Education Fraternity Chooses Four New Members

On November 20, the Beta Lambda chapter of Delta Psi Kappa officially pledged four new members. Senior Carolyn Thompson and juniors Lynne Coleman, Judie Guidice, and Linda Southworth were pledged into this honorary physical education fraternity.

The requirements for this honorary are a 2.4 cumulative average, a 3.0 professional average, and just be at least a junior. This honorary organization is a small one as yet because of the size of the department and the requirements. It does, however, provide service functions, physical education events, and an incentive for all physical education majors to achieve the highest possible goals.

Delta Psi Kappa was also responsible for a department dinner that was held Thursday, December 11. During this party, all freshmen majors were given a big sister in the department and the staff provided the entertainments.

Frosh Carol Chory, Diane Weymouth Win Intramural Tennis

Have you ever played tennis and hockey at the same time? Well, ask any who participated in tennis doubles and you'll find out that it's hard! The tournament lasted for over a month with people working matches around hockey games. But, nevertheless, games nor cold stopped us!

Points this year go to the Green and Whites who were represented by both teams in the finals. Kathy Long and Janet Harpold, juniors, were the runner-up team. The winners by a 6-2, 6-4 match were Carol Chory and Diane Weymouth of the freshman class.

Thanks to all who participated and congratulations go to Carol and Diane.

Civil Service Exam

College seniors will have an opportunity to compete in the very popular Federal Service Entrance Examination (FSEE) when it is given on a walk-in basis at our campus on January 17, 1970. Complete details and FSEE announcements are now available at the Placement Office.

During the past year 728 on-campus tests were given throughout the country. More than 19,000 men and women were tested on campus in 1968-69. Overall, more than 47,000 competitors were eligible under the FSEE program. In 1968-69, more than 8,000 eligibles were hired through the FSEE.

The FSEE was designed with the college student in mind. One test, taken one time in one place opens the door to approximately 60 different and challenging career fields in many Federal agencies at locations all over the country.

Open to seniors and graduates in any academic major the program is appropriate for students in all curricula except Engineering, Physical Sciences, Accounting and a limited number of other technical fields. This examination is unquestionably the most popular avenue for Federal employment ever devised.

Longwood's 65-member concert choir and woodwind ensemble will present a 30-minute program of Christmas music on WBTV - TV (Channel 7) of Roanoke at 1 p.m. on Sunday, December 21. It will be the first appearance on television of an organized Longwood student group. The choir made special preparation for its TV appearance prior to traveling by bus last Thursday to the TV studios where the group spent more than two hours of intensive activity before the cameras in order to produce the film footage necessary for the production of a net 30-minute presentation which will include the following compositions: Cantata. Folk Songs of the Four Seasons. R. Vaughan Williams (1872-1958); Gloria in Excelsis Deo. Robert Cooper; Hodie Christus Natus Est. Claudio Monteverdi (1567-1634); Puer Natus Est. Cristobal Morales (c. 1500-1553); See the Shepherds Dancing. 17th Cent. Spanish arr. Goodale; The Virgin's Slumber Song. Max Regner (1873-1916); Glory to God in the Highest; Giovanni Battista Pergolesi (1710-1736). It is anticipated that sound recordings and video tapes of the same program will be presented on other radio and TV stations during the holidays, but no schedule of such presentations was available in time for this issue of Rotunda. The public relations office has indicated, however, that an announcement of other scheduled presentations will be made before students leave for the holidays.

Batiks On Exhibit, Former Instructor Currently Studying

By MARY ALICE CARMODY

If you have not yet seen the batiks on exhibit in the Library Gallery, you have just two more days to see this exciting exhibit of works. The batiks are done by Nanene Jacobson, a former instructor of art at Longwood.

Mrs. Jacobson, who was at Longwood during the 1967-68 school year, received her bachelor of arts degree from Evansville College and her master of arts in teaching from Indiana University. The native of Evansville, Indiana, has also studied at the University of Southern California, John Herron Art School, and New York University. At the present time, she is living in Edwardsville, Illinois studying art.

Mrs. Jacobson says that she enjoys doing batiks because of the "immediacy and freedom of the medium (the wax), the reaction of the dye to cloth textures, and the overlay of colors. I feel these materials lend themselves to a very direct and personal expression."

Of the twenty-six batiks in the gallery, there is a variety of designs and materials: velveteen, silk, burlap, linen, rayon, cotton, and organdy.

All the batiks in the show are for sale, and sales are being arranged through Paul Rouillard in the art department.

Registration Day Now Eliminated For Most Students, It Is Hoped

Under the new preregistration procedure, "registration day," as such, will be eliminated for all except new students and students who need to make adjustments in their preregistered schedules due to unexpected failure of a first semester course or mechanical error in their scheduling. The library will be open on February 3, the day previously designed for registration, for such students, but no others need to be present. All students will be expected to be back on campus on that day however, to receive their grades and thereby determine the necessity of any re-scheduling. If scheduling adjustments due to course failure or mechanical error are necessary they must be made on February 3 if they are to be made without charge.

Any schedule changes for reasons other than the above stated will be made during the Add-Drop Period, February 4-11. These changes will be made only if space is available in the alternately desired courses and sections, and a blanket course-change charge of $5 plus $2 per class changed must be paid. These changes are necessary to cover the cost of the additional processing that is necessary when a course is changed.

Processed schedules will be available sometime during the exam period. According to previous registration procedures, no schedule will be distributed to a student who has not paid her fees by January 15.

Nona Davis and Lois Wells head the 1970 VIRGINIAN staff. Nona is a Junior social science major and is Editor-in-Chief and a member of Phi Mu sorority. Lois is a Junior business major and an Alpha Delta Phi. She is the current Business Manager.

The panel and audience mainly discussed how much say a student should have in deciding social and academic regulations for the school.

not bigger, than life. The two finest performances were those of Linda Dexter and Rick Vaughn. Miss Dexter's bubbly Brooklyn spinster was the comic high point of the entire show. Complementing Miss Dexter's Daisy was Vaughn's portrayal of Mr. Shardul, the forlorn matricidal cynic; his deadpan looks and flat vocal tones gave on the impression that Shirdul could remain in the Elysian Fields forever without hearing the music. Also worth noting were Belinda Brugh as the domineering Mrs. Zero and Dave Clark as one of eternity's henchmen. Not to be overlooked was the chorus of Twos, Threes, Fours, etc., who could have easily allowed the show to sink into mediocrity; instead, they carried their scenes with ability and precision. Except for a slight break in timing and an unlighted cigar, the choral actions were as mechanical as their lines.

All factors considered, very few improvements could have been made. In fact, when Daisy was gazing about, gushing her praise of how "grand" everything was, I was inclined to sigh, "Yeah, ain't it, though."

Mr. Curley And Dr. Jackson Invited To Eclipse Conference

Mr. James W. Curley and Dr. Elizabeth B. Jackson of Longwood's science department have been invited to participate in the Solar Eclipse Conference which will be held at East Carolina University on March 6 and 7. One hundred selected teachers of astronomy in the colleges and universities of the United States have been invited to attend the conference.

On March 7, 1970, there will be a total eclipse of the sun. This eclipse is expected to be the best of this century, at least since the California eclipse of 1923. There will be only one more visible in the United States during this century. It will occur on February 26, 1973, in Washington state, and relatively few people will see it.

Mr. Curley is very excited about going to East Carolina University in Greenville, North Carolina. He declares the opportunity to witness the spectacular celestial event a "one in a lifetime affair."

The campus of East Carolina is located within two miles of the central line of totality. Complete totality will last 177 seconds, much longer than most other eclipses.

A solar eclipse occurs when the moon moves in front of the sun, thus blocking the sun from view. In other words, an eclipse occurs when the shadow of the moon falls on the earth.

No matter where in the United States one may be, a partial eclipse of the sun may be seen. Mr. Curley cautions everyone in observing the event. One should never look directly at the sun. The brightness of the sun can cause permanent damage to the retina of the eye. It is important to note that sunglasses or smoked glass do not provide adequate protection.

Observing condition probabilities for the solar eclipse are placed at 40% fair to excellent, 30% fair, and 30% unsatisfactory.

Dr. Willett relentlessly pursues Longwood's problems, as girls participate.

Plagiarism, Drinking, And Rumors Discussed At Press Conference

For those of you who did not attend Dr. Willett's monthly press conference, it was held last Thursday, February 19, in the Gold Room at Landford. Dr. Willett announced that the first half hour would be devoted to general questioning, and the second half hour would deal primarily with questions having to do with the new registration policies.

Dr. Willett did have before the general questioning period, several points that he wished to make public to the students. These included an announcement about the Longwood Golf course. The golf course has a clubhouse which is being renovated. This means that when it is completed, drink, food, and other comforts will be provided for those students who wish to take advantage of them. The president indicated that the 103-acre Longwood estate is open to all students and their friends. He requested, however, that if you plan to drive through the estate, you are to drive slowly, for his children or someone else's might be playing in the road area.

Dr. Willett then spent a few minutes dispelling several rumors that seemed to have grown tremendously out of proportion. The first rumor . . . A rape had been committed in the Gold Room or in some other discreet place in Landford. Dr. Willett pointed out with a slight grin on his face that this was, of course, nonsense. It is to be made clear that this type of rumor does nothing but scare parents unnecessarily. The next rumor that found its way to the president's office was that 32 freshmen were "picked out" for plagiarism. This rumor also included the scorching news that four faculty members were put on probation because of their grading policies. To further this ridiculous rumor, some of the 32 former Longwood students were protesting their punishment for plagiarism by having lawyers called in to review their cases. This is all false. Dr. Willett announced that three students had been dismissed for plagiarism, and that there was no policy for putting faculty members on probation. Dr. Willett said that there "is no perfect grading distribution." He did mention, however, that if there is some really serious problem with a teacher's grading policy, the administration can suggest to that particular teacher that reviewing the grades might be advisable.

The dress code was again mentioned. Pant suits cannot be worn to artist's series. To further clarify a point in the overall dress code, plain T-shirts cannot be worn. These T-shirts look like man's underwear, and are extremely messy looking. Dean Blackwell was asked what the administration thought of the changing dress codes, and whether the Longwood lady has become sloppier. The response was that matters of student dress have nothing whatsoever to do with the faculty. It should be noted, however, that the administration does notice student dress and each student should try to avoid extreme sloppiness.

Another point of discussion revolved around the planned April 10 beer drinking night in the dining hall. It seems that Dr. Willett has received many letters concerning this decision to allow beer to be served on that night. Dr. Willett pointed out that much consideration has gone into the decision to take Longwood off the tee-total list for that night. The whole point of mentioning the drinking night was to emphasize the fact that it took much thought and concern on the part of the administration to allow the beer, and it is now up to the students to conduct themselves properly. The responsibility is definitely on the individual.

When Dr. Willett opened the floor for general questioning, there was one extremely interesting point that was brought out. This had to do with the freshman plagiarism case. It seems that this particular student was asked to leave Longwood for a semester, and told that she wasn't to return even for visiting purposes. One of the students at the press conference felt that this punishment was a little strict. This is, of course, a question of opinion. Dean Blackwell made it evident that before the Judicial Board reviews any case, they do not have a fixed punishment for each offense. In other words, there is no absolute penalty already decided upon. Each case is reviewed separately, and whether the other students find their ruling a bit harsh, is of no consequence.

The last half hour of the press conference dealt with the registration problem. It was noticed and commented upon that in each registration the sophomores will be at a disadvantage. For the sophomores are forced to salvage classes only after the juniors and seniors have chosen. Perhaps in the future a full year registration will take place. In this proposed system the students will designate what is required, and the advisors will be able

Longwood Professor Dr. Berkis, Doubles As History Writer

By ETHEL REITER

Dr. Berkis, history scholar and author, has recently finished his second book. The first work of Dr. Berkis was a historical volume originally written in Latvian, and since that time it has been translated into English. "The History of the Diech of Courland, 1561-1795," published by Paul M. Harrod Company of Baltimore, Maryland, was officially completed in December, 1969. This date marks the culmination of several years of research. The summer and holiday vacations of Dr. Berkis were devoted to the gathering of research and the writing of the book. "The History of the Diech of Courland" is a single historical volume which presents an intensive study of western Latvia, the homeland of Dr. Berkis. The book is based upon documentary sources, yet Dr. Berkis lends his own conclusions and interpretations to the history of his people.

To this date Dr. Berkis is also the author of approximately 330 letters printed in newspapers throughout the United States. His letters are somewhat different than his book. They tend to be less scholarly and more political in nature, concerned with various national and international issues such as: foreign policy, fiscal responsibility, civil law and order, and communism. Dr. Berkis has received the Congress of Freedom Award for his letters, and he is Director of Press and Information.

Art Work Of John Sargent On Display Includes Figure Studies

Until March 1 in the Library Gallery is an exhibit of drawings by John Singer Sargent, an American artist born in Italy in 1856 and who lived until 1925. These preliminary sketches are on loan from the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D. C. Most of the drawings are for a mural in the Boston Public Library. One, "Study of Male Torso," even includes an address the artist wrote on his sketch paper. Some of the sketches are executed on brown wrapping paper rather than charcoal paper. Another sketch, the circular "Draped Figure Gazing at Stars" shows that the artist used a grid to develop the placement in his composition. "Two Soldiers," not part of the mural study, is an interesting study of World War I doughboys, complete with gear.

Although Sargent's drawings are interesting to look at, they are not displayed to their best advantage. It is too bad that there is not an introduction to the drawings which would help explain their purpose as preliminary sketches for a finished work. If a photograph of the finished mural could be displayed, it would help the effectiveness of the exhibit. Even with these display criticisms, the exhibit is one that should not be missed.

Longwood Southern Belle Changes Concept Of Fashion

By ANNE DYER

The "Longwood lady" is an expression that has been associated with the Longwood College student for quite some time. With this title, a sense of pride and tradition is suggested. However, this concept of the Longwood student often reflects the "old-fashioned Southern belle" image.

Longwood prides itself in its individuality and uniqueness, but also realizes the need to stay in step with the times. Since Longwood is rapidly growing and progressing, so too, Longwood's dress code needs revisions. Because of trends in the fashion world, the Residence Board has passed new rules concerning the dress code of the "Longwood lady."

The following is a copy of the dress code regarding proper attire as suggested by the Residence Board:

Neat sports attire (Bermuda shorts, jeans, slacks, pant-suits, sweatshirts, and gym suits) is allowed on campus and downtown with the following exceptions:

1. Gym suits are not allowed downtown.
2. Cut-off jeans and cut-off sweatshirts are not allowed in the dining hall, classes or downtown.
3. Tee shirts are not allowed (with the exception of knits, polo shirts, wringers, and those that have official insignias) in the dining hall, classes, or downtown.
4. When leaving Farmville by public transportation a student may not wear a gym suit, jeans, a tee shirt or a sweatshirt.
5. Sunday attire is required for Sunday noon dinner and special dinners.

6. Skirts or dresses are required for all assemblies except student or

Susan Spotless Has The Plague

Susan Spotless is dying. It seems that students and faculty members have run out of trash receptacles. In order to cover the shortage they have substituted the Longwood campus. Behind bushes and in the gutters dates have flung various types of beer cans and bottles. Some don't even bother to find a bush. At the last count it seems that the visitors to the campus prefer Budweiser, the king of beer, and Call 45 over any other brand. The blame for the general appearance of the campus should not, however, be pushed solely on the students and their dates, for some faculty members have been seen flinging cokes and coffee cups on the grass. If Susan Spotless were well she would be parroting "every litter bit hurts." This little saying becomes more than just a simple little maxim, when you have to kick the trash aside to get to class.

One Plus One Equals Three

It seems that every year before registration, someone forgets to count the chairs in the classrooms. This must be what accounts for students standing in their classes the first day. When the professor discovers that he is faced with half of an army, some students must be switched to another class. This entails the chosen few standing again — this time, for the registrar's approval. Having to have your courses changed would not be as bad if all changes were made the first day you entered the class, before books and supplies are bought and before you miss out on material covered in another class. A lot of changes are made after students are in one class for several meetings. By the time, the instructor has discovered that there is not enough equipment or space for the number of students who are attending the class.

Some students must then try to sign up for another class which many times changes a schedule completely and causes much inconvenience. Once in these new classes, the students must catch up on a week's homework and once again run around the campus for books, professors' signatures, and other students to help them catch up on their homework.

There may be no infallible method to registration, but it seems that size and equipment should be calculated more carefully when considering the number of students to be assigned to one classroom and professor.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

Recently approved by the Student Council of the University of Virginia, the Student Dating Services office is to provide dates for your students with the students of our college. There is no fee charged your students. Only a small fee to cover basic expenses is charged our students.

Our immediate goal is to provide dates starting with the weekend of February 27-29. The dates may either be at your school or at U. Va. Students will be matched through questionnaires which they fill out. Interested Longwood students should write us and include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. We will send them copies of the questionnaire. They can simply fill one out and send it back to us to arrange the date. The students of our college will then get in contact with their dates by phone or letter.

Once upon a time as lowly freshmen, we envied the seniors as they rode by in their very own Cadillacs, drew first for room assignments, ate in their very own Senior Dining Hall, and received the Gourmet's Delight, i.e., Beanie Weenies at Sunday supper buffets first.

Now as venerated and sadder but wiser seniors, we wonder what the senior privileges are. Though we do not have Cadillacs on campus, we do have VW's and Mercedes for which we pay $2 a year to park on city streets. We draw first for room assignments; but we have the joy of welcoming a third member into our rooms and closets which are really too small for two healthy, red-blooded American jiggies.

Not only this, but we get to eat in our very own Senior Dining Hall — along with almost as many freshmen. The first week of every block is spent in looking over prospective table sites and efficient waitresses in order to select a suitable home for the remaining seven weeks. Of course, we must spend a lot of time away from home — sometimes as many as three of the nine meals a week. We really pity those poor, nonprivileged students whose lunches are interrupted by announcements and who eat in the well-lit, attractive and even decorated upstairs dining hall.

After three years of waiting for the privilege of eating first on Sunday night, we now must wait in line with the underclassmen.

Where, O where did the Senior Privileges go — or have they ever existed?

Editor's Note: The above girls have recommended that the following action be taken:

- 1) To make announcements downstairs.
- 2) Brighten the downstairs dining hall with paintings or other decorations.
- 3) Give seniors a choice; is it a privilege?
- 4) Why does reassignment take place every eight weeks?

New Equipment Serves To Update Business Department

By ETHEL REITER

Several events and changes have occurred in the Business Education Department. Recently negotiations were completed for 20,000 dollars worth of new equipment to be delivered as soon as available. The staff is very excited about the securing of such modern and expensive equipment for instructional use. The department will be furnished with such updated machinery as a Mag Card Electric, an overhead projector, a printing calculator, sound and filmstrip projectors, electronic calculators, and duplicating equipment. Air conditioning units are also going to be installed. Academic revisions include the change of type-writing from a 2 credit to a 3 credit course. Also the Dean has granted the department permission to schedule a General Business Principles course for the first time this summer. This course will be open to Longwood students and Stackpole Company employees. Business Education 353 will begin Monday, June 15, with classes scheduled on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings from seven to nine o'clock for the convenience of the Stackpole employees.

Mr. Leeper has been asked to work with the business education staff of Randolph-Henry High School. He will aid in establishing certain curriculum innovations to serve a three-fold plan: 1) to better the needs of the slow learner, 2) grading in upgraded skilled subjects, and 3) to set up typing classes for the low ability student. Mrs. Tallaferro, president of the Local Business Woman's Club, will be traveling to Washington to attend a national convention as a representative of this organization. The program includes a tea at the White House given by Mrs. Nixon. The Business Department is quite proud of Miss Joyce Temple who has recently been honored with the Junior Citizen Award of the Prince George Ruritan Club. A FLA meeting is scheduled for March 7.

Helms Seeks Legislative Post, Regards Himself As Idealist

By LINDA FLOYD

Dr. James M. Helms, Jr., associate professor of history at Longwood since 1954, is currently seeking a seat in the nation's Congress. Aiming to represent the 4th District in the House of Representatives, Dr. Helms has been an active Republican since 1964.

Dr. Helms repeatedly calls his story a "corny" one and himself an idealist. He feels that there is an urgent need for careful reading of the bills presented in the House, as well as a need for intelligent men to consider them. Having worked as a legislative consultant in Washington, Dr. Helms has seen at firsthand some sloppy handling of bills; he would like to take a leading part in seeing that a better job is done.

Dr. Helms feels that he is the man (Continued on Page 4)

Greek Lecture, March 4, Dr. Bernard Knox; Euripides Tragedies

Dr. Bernard Knox, director of the Center for Hellenic Studies in Washington, D.C., will lecture here at Longwood College on Wednesday, March 4, at 1 p.m. in the A, B, C room. His topic will be "Euripides, The Most Tragic of the Poets."

A former student at Yale University where he received his Ph.D., Dr. Knox was a member of that University's faculty for 14 years before joining the Center for Hellenic Studies. During the academic year 1962-1963, he was a Sather Lecturer at the University of California. He wrote the script for and performed in four half-hour color films for educational television on Sophocles' "Oedipus the King," "Oedipus at Thebes," "The Ajax of Sophocles," "Oedipus the King," and "The Heretic Temper." A recipient of the award for literature of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, Dr. Knox is a member of the American Philological Association and a former professor of classics at Yale University.

Dr. Knox will also speak at Hampden-Sydney College on March 4, at 7:30 p.m.

Gulliver's Travels First Classical Film Presentation

"The 3 Worlds of Gulliver," based on Jonathan Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," was shown February 21 at Jarman Auditorium. With the aid of Mrs. Lockwood, films will continue to be presented at 10 o'clock on Saturday mornings when available.

Mrs. Lockwood explained that the local theatre is very cooperative, but cannot always get films that interest and entertain children. Many of the classics are on sixteen millimeter film which requires equipment that the theatre does not have.

The film depicted human nature in an easily understood, entertaining manner. An audience of about eighty people, which consisted of children, a few parents, and some Longwood students, seemed to enjoy and appreciate the movie.

Basketball Team Defeats VCU, Bridgewater

By JOAN LAWTER

After defeating the Virginia Commonwealth University teams and the Bridgewater College teams last week, the Longwood basketball teams remain undefeated. Their record is now 5-0 for the first team and 6-0 in the second team.

On their home court last Wednesday night the "Blue and Whites" topped VCU 60-46 in the first game and 42-32 in the second game. Saturday the teams went to Bridgewater College and won 46-38 and 37-26 in two very exciting games.

Under the direction of new varsity coach, Miss Faye Ripley, and assistant coach, Miss Carolyn Callaway, the Longwood girls have practiced hard and this work seems to be paying off. "Every girl on the team works hard and they want to play," commented Miss Callaway. The coaches are pleased with the enthusiasm shown by the team this year.

Veteran players Judy Turner, Carolyn Thompson, Freda Lunsford, and Lynne Coleman and freshman Sue Manahan started the game against VCU while sophomores Janet Ford and Margaret Lowry, who are both sophomore transfer students, substituted often. Another freshman, Joy King, also played.

The Longwood girls jumped off to an early lead and held this lead throughout the game. At halftime, the score was 30-24 in favor of L.C. Judy Turner and Lynne Coleman led the team with 18 points each. Sue Manahan, who went into the game averaging 20 points a game, had 10 points against the Richmond team. Margaret Lowry shot a 100 per cent in the game and ended up with seven points. For VCU, Linda Sheppe had 15 points and Judy Clarke had 10.

Sue Manahan led the defensive team pulling down 16 rebounds while Carolyn Thompson got 12 rebounds. For VCU, Andrea Barnes had 10 rebounds. In the second game, again the Longwood team took an early lead and led the entire game. They led at the half 22-15 and finally won the game 42-32.

Freshman Dottie Bohannon led the scoring by getting a total of 16 points. Senior veteran Marcia Trench had nine points, making some pretty shots from the outside. Also playing a good game were Fran Anthony, Margaret Pulley, Barbara Cridlin, Gail Gossage, and Cindy Brandley.

Freshman Linda Moody did not play due to a knee injury. She has been out for several games but hopes to return soon.

In a close game with Bridgewater on Saturday the Longwood team was behind 24-21 at halftime but managed to come back the second half and win 46-38.

The Bridgewater team was tall and fast. They were scoring easy lay-up shots against Longwood's man-to-man defense in the first half but in the second half the Blue and Whites pulled their defense together and again were victorious.

Sue Manahan and Lynne Coleman were high scorers for the team and Sue Manahan and Carolyn Thompson did outstanding jobs on the boards against the tall Bridgewater team.

Winning the second game easily the Longwood team led the entire game. The scoring was well-distributed as everyone on the team scored.

Co-captain Judy Turner, commenting on the team, said, "We are enthusiastic and are looking forward to the rest of the season.

The team will play Old Dominion College in French Gym at 1:30 on Saturday.

The Longwood Varsity Fencing Team competed in its first meet of the season at VCU, March 15. The fencers included Penny Eberly, Frances Moran, Mary Frances Baldwin, Sue Meador, Phyllis Colombero, and their coach, Miss Sally Bush. Longwood's students fenced against students from the Richmond area. Mary Frances Baldwin placed first in the meet, with Frances Moran receiving third place. The next meet will be on March 3, against Randolph-Macon, at 7:00 p.m. in Gym III at Longwood.

Gymnastic Team Victorious In Meets With Radford, Stratford

By SANDY OLIVER

Silence punctuated by enthusiastic applause prevailed in French gym as the Longwood College varsity gymnastics team was victorious over Radford College with a final score of 58.1 to 32.8. The meet held on Friday, Feb. 20, at 7:15, was the third meet, the first being an informal meet at William and Mary and the second, a meet with Stratford here at Longwood, with Longwood winning both.

Ten Longwood girls competed in various events, taking first place in all of them. The first place in floor exercise went to Curry Pettis with a score of 6.0. In her routine that demanded much body control, she included many difficult stunts such as an aerial cartwheel. Suzanne Morgan earned a score of 5.8, Karen Lewis a 4.9, and Jackie Ashe a 5.1. Radford's highest scoring competitor obtained a rating of 2.9.

In the next event, vaulting, Terry Reese took first with a 6.2, the highest rating given in the meet. Radford's Marcia Trench came in second with a 5.3. Other scores are as follows: Debbie Ellenbrand, 4.7; Nedra Distel, 2.7; Diane Derrick, 2.4; Anne Fischer, 3.1; Anne Steger, 2.7; and Anne Trent, 1.6.

Four Longwood girls competed on the uneven bars with Debbie Ellenbrand taking first place for Longwood by her performance that earned a 4.8 score. Diane Derrick received 1.9; Curry Pettis, a 1.7; and Marty Murphy was rated 1.2. Radford's only competitor in this event, Marcia Greado, finished with a 0.9.

Longwood took first place in tumbling through Karen Lewis' efforts that earned 5.2. Terry Reese came in second with a 3.6 and beginner Marty Murphy was rated 3.4. Gail Thompson received a score of 2.0. Competing for Radford were Anne Fischer with a score of 3.2; Marcia Treado earned a 3.1 and Ginger Himbright and Anne Steger were rated 2.9 and 1.1, respectively.

The final event was the balance beam with Suzanne Morgan taking first place with a rating of 4.2. Curry Pettis came in second with a 3.8 and Nedra Distel was rated a 0.7. Radford's Anne Fischer earned 2.4 and Carolyn Luet's competition earned a 2.1.

In addition to competing in meets, some of Longwood's gymnasts also judge high school gymnastic meets, in such places as Arlington and Roanoke. In order to judge a meet, it is necessary to attend a clinic to learn judging procedures and to be invited by the school. Along with Marie Fath, those girls on the gymnastic team that judged in Roanoke were Nedra Distel, Maxine Stone, Suzanne Morgan, and Nancy Fowlkes. Pam Harrison, Debbie Ellenbrand, Nedra Distel, Suzanne Morgan and Nance Fowlkes judged the meet in Arlington.

The conclusion of the season will come Tuesday, February 24, when the team competes against Stratford once again in an away meet.

Karen Lewis demonstrates ability which carried Longwood gymnasts to victory.

Green And Whites Earn Color Points In Volleyball Competition

By TERRI GADSBY

The 1969-1970 Intramural Volleyball season was brought to a close Monday night, February 16, as the Green and Whites won the color game. In an evenly matched contest the Green and Whites took the first game 11-3, the Red and Whites won the second game 12-4, and the clincher coming the final game as the Green and Whites won 9-7 in overtime.

This color game, as in all the intramural sports, was the climax of many weeks of participation by the students in dorm and class volleyball. The regular intramurals, which had a successful turnout of 36 teams representing the dorms and sororities, were won by Curry I, with North Cunningham I coming in second.

The intramural players met to choose the individual class teams to represent their class in the class competitions which began February 4. Each class played the other classes twice and after a week of stiff competition the Freshmen won first place. They were closely followed by the Juniors who took second place.

After the class games, the Color teams were selected. The Red and Whites were represented by Suzanne Turner, Judy Turner, Bobbi Thurston, Patti Coogan, Kay Haves, Jo Ann Melchor, Gretta Harrison, Carolyn Thompson and Martha Hicks. The players on the Green and White team were Freda Lunsford, Lynne Coleman, Janet Harpold, Sandy Wilson, Carol Chorey, Sue Manahan, Joy King, Barbara Cridlin, Connie Shield, and Gail Gossage.

Press Conference

to register the student right away. It was also indicated that several of the departments hope to increase their teaching staff for next year. It is also hoped that the entire general education department will be re-evaluated in order that their courses will be of use to all students, not just for elementary education majors.

Dr. Willett brought the press conference to a close by announcing that by next September a new music, art, and home economics building will be completed. The Ruffner complex will be finished, and the student enrollment will probably grow to 2,000. Dr. Willett felt that this was good news . . . What do you think?

Officers Elected Guests Speak On Paris And Congo

The officers for "Les Franco-philles" for the year 1970-71 include: Deanna Bryson, president; Laura Paterson, recording secretary; Susan Dupriest, corresponding secretary; Nancy Stout, treasurer; and Peg Anderson, reporter.

On February 5, the club had its first meeting of the semester. Martin Hofstetter of Switzerland and Albert Ndandu of the Congo, who are at the present at Virginia Union University, were the guest speakers. Ndandu spoke on the Congo and Hofstetter presented slides of Paris and Switzerland. Before the slides there was an informal discussion and refreshments.

The next meeting of "Les Franco-philles" will be March 5. Gerald de Berly from the Franco-USA Society will be the guest speaker. The purpose of his visit will be to discuss the "Longwood in Europe" program. Further details concerning the meeting will be announced later.

Longwood Selected To Participate In Opinion Competition

During February and March, Reed and Barton, America's oldest major silversmiths, are conducting a "Silver Opinion Competition" in which valuable scholarships totaling $2,050 are being offered to duly enrolled women students at a few selected colleges and universities.

Longwood has been selected to enter this competition in which the First Grand Award is a $500 cash scholarship; Second Grand Award is a $300 scholarship; Third Grand Award is a $250 scholarship; Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Awards are $200 scholarships; and Seventh, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth are $100 scholarships. In addition, there will be 100 other awards consisting of sterling silver, fine china and crystal with a retail value of approximately $75.

In the 1970 "Silver Opinion Competition," an entry form illustrates twelve designs of sterling with eight designs of both china and crystal. The entrants simply list the three best combinations of sterling, china, and crystal from the patterns illustrated. Scholarships and awards will be made to those entries matching or coming closest to the unanimous selections of table-setting editors from three of the nation's leading magazines.

Linda Murad is the Student Representative who is conducting the "Silver Opinion Competition" for Reed and Barton here. Those interested in entering the "Silver Opinion Competition" should contact her at 104 Cox for entry blanks and for complete details concerning the Competition rules.

Have you applied for your State Teachers' Scholarship for the 1970-71 session? These applications should be filed by April 15, 1970 in the Financial Aid Office now located in Old Alumnae House.

Dr. Helms Seeks Legislative Post

best qualified to serve the 4th District. Because of his national experience as a legislative consultant and his local activities as party secretary, he believes that he knows what the people want and what their problems are.

The interest that Dr. Helms has for politics has deep roots. His parents were interested in politics themselves, and he was brought up in a political atmosphere. Whereas most bored students aimlessly doodle in the margins of their notebooks, 23 years ago in college Dr. Helms was already sketching campaign posters. Since then, he has concentrated in political and constitutional history in both undergraduate and graduate work in order to prepare himself for the Congressional seat. Because most of our national problems center around economics, Dr. Helms has studied a great deal of economics.

The Republican party has made almost a phenomenal growth in the past few years. Having seen the party grow from infancy to adulthood in a mere six year span, Dr. Helms predicts that the next 30 years or so will be a Republican dominated era. He cites the situation in Virginia. In the 50s the Republican party was dormant, if not completely dead. As a one-party state, Virginians called themselves "Southern Democrats" and were reluctant to admit their Republican tendencies. Consequently, the "Southern Democrat" followed a middle road that was neither Democrat nor Republican. Since 1964, Republicans have come on the scene, and both state parties are now more in accordance with the national parties. In 1968 Virginians supported a Republican president, in 1969 Virginians elected a Republican governor, and in 1970, Dr. Helms believes Virginia will seat a Republican majority in the House of Representatives. Led by upper middle class and professional people, the Republican party can furnish good representation for all classes, Dr. Helms maintains.

A native of South Carolina, James M. Helms moved to Virginia in 1952 and to Farmville in 1964. Dr. Helms is an active member of the Farmville Methodist Church, is married, and has two children. He received his B.S. in economics from Clemson College in 1948, and his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Virginia in 1955 and 1962 respectively, both in history. The candidate lists golf and oil painting as his major forms of relaxation, but says he enjoys learning something in every field; including as a special enjoyment, the game of politics.

Knox College Initiates New Academic Program; Classes Offered Without Grades, Credit, Charge

GALESBURG, ILL. — (I.P.) — Dr. Lewis S. Salter, dean of Knox College, is optimistic that the Experimental College, introduced on this campus, will teach Knox some lessons in educational flexibility. "In the long run," he says, "this venture will test innovations that can enrich teaching and learning at Knox."

Basic to the notion of the EC is that learning should be exciting, that it should be a group activity, and that it should be unforced and pursued for its own sake. Not all classes are esoteric or artsy-craftsy. Courses in Italian and Midwest Indian culture are offered in EC but not in Knox's regular curriculum.

A few Knox professors are offering the same courses in the regular College curriculum and in the Experimental College, curious to know whether interest can be sustained without tutoring courses with grades, tuition and prerequisites. A course in political theory is now reproduced in both colleges; a course in existentialism will be available both ways during the winter term.

Knox has for some years given credit for "group interest" courses, initiated by students who can find members of the faculty to take charge. These courses in black literature, pop culture, jazz, photography and political conservatism entered the curriculum. Extracurricular "free" university courses have also existed on the campus, but until this year they were isolated phenomena.

Student Senate President William Holway, a leader in the Experimental College movement, often bears the criticism that the EC curriculum is not "academic," and he also agrees to the charge.

"Students too often enter traditional classes as isolated individuals, sit down, transfer professors' lectures to their notebooks, and leave, without once having any contact with one another. We believe we learn best when we learn together and from one another."

The Tulsa, Oklahoma, senior became interested in the Experimental College concept while attending an educational brainstorming seminar on the University of California's Davis campus last summer. He and other Knox student leaders invited a number of faculty members to a late summer Oklahoma weekend to plan how the idea could be applied on the Knox campus.

Successes and failures with the Experimental College will undoubtedly shape the future formal curriculum on this campus. Professor Philip S. Haring, in duplicating his political theory sequence for the EC, says, "My hope is that this (EC) course will someday replace my regular courses."

Mathematician Dr. Robert J. Oberg hopes for more. "I hope the EC will become central to our community and not peripheral," he says. "We should be able to spend the lion's share of our time in what really engages us—either studying or teaching. Right now EC courses are in addition to regular ones. I hope they can replace them!"

Student Leader Holway admits that if the Experimental College is successful, traditional education will reform along EC lines. Eventually we ought to get rid of grades and credit, major requirements and degrees in the regular curriculum," he says. "We should afford the professors freedom from the old standard courses to teach new ones that engage them."

Dr. Jay P. Minn, chairman of Knox's Modern Language department, has already begun to teach such a new course. The French scholar is now teaching French bread baking in the Experimental College.

The Experimental College makes more departures from formal education than subject matter suggests. For example:

Courses are free, and they carry no credit.

There are no grades.

Classes may start or end at any time.

They may meet anywhere.

They may die of lack of interest any time.

Although the full extent of renovation is not entirely visible, the Longwood estate club house, should be completed in a few weeks.

Police Strive To Provide Protection Machines Lend Valuable Assistance

"Calling all cars, calling all cars!
There has been a purple Mustang stolen from Farmville, license number . . ."

Wonder what would be done in this case - and in other crimes? We were curious enough to interview Chief of Police O. S. Overton and his brother, Sheriff James W. Overton, who were kind enough to answer some questions concerning the Farmville Police Department.

Probably most of you are vaguely familiar with some of the equipment used by the police, such as the radio. In the above case of an imaginary stolen car, the police would broadcast a description of the car to the patrol cars and to various other stations within a certain radius. (Here, the police chief's radio will broadcast fifty miles; the sheriff's, one hundred.) The station receiving the message then relays it to their cars and to stations within their broadcasting range, expanding outward like a ring of water around a dropped pebble. In a relatively short time the message can be relayed to all parts of Virginia.

ALL-POINTS BULLETIN
The teletype machine performs a similar function, only it is quicker. Police can send out an all-points bulletin that will reach thirteen states, covering territory from Pennsylvania to Florida and west as far as Kentucky and Tennessee. If not all states need to be notified, only selected states are called. Since two years ago, Farmville can reach any state in the Union by means of teletype. To facilitate its use, codes are used, breaking down messages into various divisions such as licenses of cars to be picked up. The teletype can also be used if a death occurs and family members must be notified. Not all police departments will do this, the staff was told, but Chief Overton said the Farmville police will.

RAINY NIGHTS
What are some methods of solving a crime? One method known to nearly everyone who watches or reads Perry Mason is familiar with fingerprints and footprints. The latter can only be used if the crime took place, as most do, on foggy, rainy nights. When a good footprint is found, police mix plaster of paris to the proper consistency and pour it into the print. Just before it dries, the name, date, and time are scratched into it. It is sent to the FBI along with the suspect's shoe. There, experts can determine through marks which the eye cannot see whether the shoe in question made the print.

Fingerprints are often hard to obtain, perhaps because mass media have resulted in a better-informed criminal, who now knows enough to wear gloves. Prints, caused by perspiration, must be on a smooth surface, such as glass, metal, or even paper. Police spray on powder, which comes in various colors (Sheriff Overton prefers gold), then photograph the results.

What can be done about stealing? Suppose a bank has been having trouble with embezzlement. Police plant money coated with a special grease or powder which is invisible until put under an ultraviolet light. This grease rubs off onto whatever it touches and will not wash off for eight to ten days. When the money is stolen, the police may line up employees in a dark room and turn on the ultraviolet light. Chief Overton demonstrated this technique to the fascinated ROTUNDA members; the powder glows an iridescent yellow.

BOMBSCARES
Once a suspect has been brought in, a polygraph - otherwise known as a lie detector - can be used. It is about ninety-nine per cent effective and is used frequently even though courts will not go by it in making decisions. It has instruments which measure rate of breathing, perspiration, and heartbeat. Only the operator and the accused are in the room; other officials watch hidden in another room as the operator skillfully leads up to a specific question.

In the case of a bomb report, police have an instrument which can locate metal bombs. However, in a

The Easy Riders Polarized Group Of Inarticulate Heroes

By ETHEL REITER
Communication is said to be the problem of our time. Class doesn't communicate with class, race with race, man with woman, youth with age, anyone with God. Loud and resounding, the new breed of communicator is coming through. But to tune in on the new media, it is necessary to decode their vague message, and to understand their philosophy one must descend to knowing this modern jargon, because "that's where it's at." It is hard to say whether the communicators of today are products of the twentieth century middle-class revolution, or simply puppets of the new medium. Nevertheless, overnight they became well-known. They pontificate, demonstrate, and dictate on God, sex, mini-skirts, campus revolutions, blacks, pot, abortion, Vietnam, love, Agnew, peace, morals, and any other issue. Their views are flexible, changing from day to day, but you notice? They are not listened to because they might have anything important to say, but because they are there.

Dr. Alexander Theroux recently had an article published in the February 24 issue of National Review, "The Inarticulate Hero; was written last year in London after witnessing an anti-American demonstration. Dr. Theroux is critical of people who adopt manners blindly, rather than think about ideas. If the Easy Riders of our age are going to rebel, they must be able to explain why in sensible terms." Dr. Theroux summarizes his article to mean this:

"People are upset at the illiterate and stupid behavior of the young people, often violent, but the stupidities, cruelties, and lack of understanding of many groups in the right are just as much in evidence. The howling mob that booed Humphrey at the University of Massachusetts is in no way different than the muffled hysteria and violence of the audiences which Agnew addresses in Iowa and Minneapolis, which Nixon characterizes as the 'heartland of America'. Each group polarizes itself, creating in a proliferating way a swell in the opposite camp. The tragedy, however, is not so much that there is no communication, but that there is no love. And maybe it's the same thing."

What do you have to say?

Mr. Hathaway points out aspects of art work to interested viewers.

Instructional Grants Program To Improve Art Instruction

By KATHY NOONAN
Mr. Walter M. Hathaway, Assistant Professor of Art, has received acceptance for an instructional grant for Longwood's art department.

The purpose of the Longwood College Instructional Grants Program is that of providing financial support whereby a faculty member may improve the quality of classroom instruction.

The title of the project for which Mr. Hathaway has requested aid is "Photographic Essay and Analysis of Art in Selected Virginia High Schools." Twelve student teachers in art participating in this project will photograph products created in their classes. Slides of these pictures will be used in Art 400 to aid in discussing student teaching experiences and will provide an up-to-date and large collection of student work.

Art student teachers will be furnished for one week with a camera, tripod and film to be used in photographing student art. Mr. Hathaway has requested an Instamatic camera, a case, a tripod, 36 rolls of film and processing. The total amount of the instructional grant is $250.00.

Plans for publication of the work have been made for the "National Art Education Association Journal" and for presentation at the Southeastern Arts Conference.

Mr. Hathaway feels that this project will be valuable for the student teachers in evaluating their own experiences and will also provide a wide sample of contemporary high school art.

Private Tours In New York Educational Experiment

By ETHEL REITER
An extremely exhausted proverb states that experience is the best teacher. In other words, learning comes from doing. Virtually every outstanding thinker in the educational world realizes that a modern and progressive education cannot depend completely upon textbooks, lectures, and examinations. Recently the History Department of Longwood College, either aware or unaware, experimented in this theory of education through personal experience, and the results were outstanding.

On Wednesday, February 18, thirty-three students left Longwood for the "United Nations Trip." Arriving in New York the following morning, the "Longwood Ladies" were free. There were no tours scheduled, no obligations, and no restrictions. Naturally each girl had her preconceived notions about New York, and knew exactly what she wanted to see there.

That evening the girls were free.

Many attended Broadway shows, small groups visited Central Park, the Empire State Building, Park Avenue, Tiffany's, Chinatown, Greenwich Village, St. Patrick's Cathedral, and various other points of interest. Friday morning there was a tour of the UN, and the group had lunch there. Saturday, arriving in Washington, D. C., the students toured the Pan American Union, the Capitol, and various embassies. However, the threat of riot activity prevented independent touring. The group returned to Longwood Saturday, February 21.

Several criticisms have circulated that the purpose of the trip was neglected, that of the UN visit, and instead it became a vacation. Mr. Duke feels very strongly on this and other such rumors. "The experience in New York was extremely educational. All learning cannot take place in the classroom. One must see, experience, and do, in order to know. The trip was a monumental educational experience."

Mr. Duke looks over his agenda before New York tour.

Choir Presents Spring Concert; Music Emphasizes Va. History

The Department of Music of Longwood College will present the Longwood College Concert Choir in a Spring Choral Concert on Sunday afternoon, March 8, in Jarman Auditorium, at four o'clock under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar, Chairman of the Department and conductor of the choir. The choir will be assisted by Mr. Paul S. Hesselink, Assistant Professor of Music, at the harpsichord, and four members of the Richmond Symphony Orchestra, who will play the string accompaniment to the numbers.

The program will be repeated on March 15 at eight o'clock in Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg. The music to be performed is of particular interest to Colonial Williamsburg and to those interested in Virginia social history, since two of the numbers were in the library of Thomas Jefferson, who was an excellent violinist. His scores, from which the string accompaniment was taken by Dr. Molnar, is in the Jefferson library at the University of Virginia; these are marked in Jefferson's handwriting. He put in fingerings and bowings in the violin parts; evidently he played them at least for his own enjoyment. It is not known if the compositions were sung, but it is quite possible that members of his family or friends joined him in performing the pieces.

The program will open with "How Excellent Thy Name," from Handel's oratorio "Saul." Selections from this oratorio, in score, were in the library of Cuthbert Ogle, a musician who arrived in Williamsburg in 1755. Upon his death, his music was sold, but no record exists as to who brought the music. The next number, one of the two in Jefferson's library, will be the "Statut Mater" of Pergolesi. Soloists for portions of this composition will be Helen Fortune, Nancy Parsons, Jennifer Boykin, Janice Brown, and Jacqueline Lee. This will be followed by "O Praise the Lord," by Graun, a contemporary of both Handel and Pergolesi. The final number, which also was in Jefferson's collection, will be the Coronation Anthem, "Zadok the Priest," which Handel composed for George II.

The concert is open to the public.

Better Late Than Never Or Is It?

With all the hustle and bustle of running here and there, trying to get everything done, we are sometimes guilty of forgetting things and of being late for appointments. Sometimes things happen so that we have an acceptable excuse for our lateness and forgetfulness, but other times we have no legitimate reason. We find it very aggravating to go see someone, and to have him or her show up very late for a scheduled appointment, but the worst thing is to wait for someone and then he (she) doesn't show up at all.

We on the newspaper staff know only too well how it feels to wait for a person, then to have him (her) show up late or not at all for an interview. We are given an assignment, and we only have a few days in which to do it. If the person shows up late, we may have a class or another appointment before the interview can be finished. If the person does not show up at all, then we either have to make another appointment or forget about conveying our news beat. The faculty and administration are as busy as we are, so many times another appointment cannot be made due to class conflicts or other reasons.

Let us be the first to say that we are not the only ones who find themselves in this situation. Students, as well as faculty members, are guilty of this. We on the staff often find the students to be less cooperative than the faculty. Students often are late for scheduled appointments with advisors or instructors, and we are sure that the faculty does not appreciate their lateness. They have papers to grade, classes to prepare, meetings to attend. The instructors and advisors willingly give up their time to the students. These students should show them some respect and courtesy. We students are busy with classes, homework, activities, etc., so we also deserve this same courtesy from others.

Amy Vanderbilt states in her book, Complete Book of Etiquette, "If one is meeting a person at an appointed place, lateness of five to ten minutes is acceptable, but it is always better manners to be there slightly before the guest's arrival. Greater lateness than this can be acutely embarrassing to the person, and if some emergency has arisen an explanatory message should be sent it possible."

We do not think it would hurt anyone to call or send a message when we know we will be late or cannot make the appointment at all. Generally, people are understanding about unexpected things that come up, and make someone cancel the appointment. If only we let them know before hand, they can go on with their work and will be more willing to meet with us at another time.

A little courtesy and consideration for others never hurt anyone. If we respect others, they will respect us. Let us strive to keep the relationship between the faculty, administration, and students a good one. Will you cooperate?

— M. F. B.

No. 266, Did You Make It Through The Week?

Do you wait all week for Thursday and Friday to come, not for the weekend, but to see if your laundry has made it through the week?

Something has definitely got to be done about the laundry service. All boarding students must pay for their laundry service. This fee is included in the comprehensive fee described in the catalogue as including "charges for Room, Board, Laundry, Post Office, Infirmary, and any other applicable fees!" Some of the students paying for the laundry service have either never used it or have used it so few times that they could be considered not having used it at all. In many cases, it is fear, not laziness, which determines whether you will take your items to the laundry on Thursday or Friday. There is the fear that your laundry will not come back in one piece.

I do not expect the laundry to take loving care with the items sent to it, but when a button-down collared shirt is sent, I do not expect to have the collar and shirt returned separately. Other instances have included buttons entirely devoured, pillowcases in shreds, and laundry ink spilled on sheets.

Laundry sent back in two pieces might not seem too bad. Once is forgivable, but the laundry number being imprinted on sheets eight times — three times in one corner — is a little ridiculous. Then there is the problem of the laundry numbers being put on washcloths twice with little metal clips. This is very dangerous. A face could be cut or an eye put out!

If the students continue having no choice in deciding whether they want to pay for the laundry service, then the laundry should take better care of the items sent to it.

— M. A. C.

Letters To The Editor

Unnecessary Criticism

To the Editor:

On the evening of February 16 an invited guest to this campus and I were subjected to unnecessary criticism by some of the respected, and supposedly more responsible, college employees. Loud remarks were made regarding my visitor's appearance, which would not have been, in most groups thought strange enough to warrant rude comments (e.g. long hair and a beard). We were treated enough to disregard the comments and make no reply but a nasty incident could have easily occurred had we retorted. Some other long-haired male visitor to this campus may not accept such uncouth conduct from college employees in such an adult manner.

Work for Peace,
Donna Wadsworth

Is It Legal?

Dear Editor:

It was stated on page 2 of the February 25, 1970 issue of THE ROTUNDA that the college newspaper is "published weekly during the college year except during holidays and examination periods . . ." Although presumably THE ROTUNDA is celebrating its golden anniversary year, the February 25 issue is labeled volume XLVII. I've heard of the New Math but not of the New Roman Numerals! And, please tell me, how are you going to explain to all of the Longwood students' parents that we've had only nine weeks of school since the middle of September, excluding holidays and examination periods? Maybe the seniors are spending too much time driving around in their VW's and Mercedes. By the way, is it legal to charge $2.00 a year to park on the streets of Farmville, as some of our healthy, red-blooded, American pigmy seniors have stated?

Sincerely yours,
Dr. Robert D. Gibbons
Associate Professor of Education

Moratorium Day

To the editor:

Moratorium Day is long over with now and it has become just a memory in some people's minds. In the October 15 issue of THE ROTUNDA there appeared a letter to the editor which seemed to me to take an odd view on the Moratorium. The letter said a better activity to do on that day would be to write your congressman. Apparently the person who wrote the article was unaware of ALL the purposes of having a Moratorium Day. Admittedly in some places the day was used by students to boycott classes and just protest the war. However, I feel that in the Farmville-Hampden-Sydney Colleges this day was not interpreted in that capacity. I heard that Professors at Hampden-Sydney College made speeches, not during class time, but at night on our involvement in the war; why we are there, our obligations, the economic and political reasons for being there. So much is written about the war that it is hard for a student to get a really clear view of our objectives there. Therefore, I think if more students had gone to hear the speakers maybe there would be a better understanding of the United States' position in Vietnam. Your congressman doesn't have the time to write you a letter and explain the aspects of our involvement in that country.

Linda Jones

Infirmary Issue

Dear Editor and Student Body,

"I wouldn't be caught dead in the infirmary!" Do you have a reason for saying this? Now it's possible to clear up any questions you may have about the infirmary.

For we now have an Infirmary Committee in action. It serves as a liaison between you, the students, and the Infirmary Staff. We discuss any complaints you may have as well as any ideas you may suggest for improving the facilities of our infirmary.

We are fortunate to have a professionally-staffed infirmary on campus and the staff there wants to give you their best services. But there are some considerations we must give them if we are to receive these services.

1. Respect sick call. Often girls abusing 12:30-2:00 sick call period — going in to ask for medicines or excuses they could have gotten earlier, and yet these girls become quite angry if they are reminded by the nurses that they should come at another time. Sick call is for those girls requiring the service of a physician, so please respect sick call.

2. Students should NEVER telephone another girl's parents — the infirmary will do this.

No Mention Of Poet

Dear Editor,

Several weeks ago when I was reading the RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH, it came to my attention that one of the foremost Western poets of this century had spoken at Randolph-Macon Men's College. W. H. Auden is one of the writers listed in the "Rorton Anthology of English Literature" used by our English department. Auden was written up this year as a feature in a January issue of LIFE MAGAZINE. Knowing about the poet's fame as a contemporary writer, I cannot understand why Longwood made no mention of his appearance to her students. As a consequence, transportation was not provided. It seems a cultural waste that so many students weren't even offered a choice as to whether or not they would want to miss this opportunity — thereby missing a chance to see and hear a poet whose works they read.

Sincerely,
Margaret Blair

Table Closing

To the Editor:

The year before last, Mary Karen Maher, the past editor of THE ROTUNDA, wrote an editorial entitled, "Why Close Tables?" In this she explained why it was necessary because of the cost of operating the dining hall and normal rates of student's cutting meals to close tables. Perhaps in Mr. Martin's day this was sufficient because there were very few instances of mass miscalculation of the number of tables closed in the dining hall. However, during the past semester or more, there have been numerous gross errors in determining these numbers. Surely something can be done to aid the situation.

ED. Note: After having checked THE ROTUNDA files, I have found that in past years, the volume numbers had not always been changed. This accounts for the 1970 issues being Vol. XLVII.

I cannot speak for publication policies not under my editorship, however it takes a complete week to collect material and lay out THE ROTUNDA. This is why the paper is not published during the seven-day period preceding exams or during the week after vacations. Due to lack of an editor, this semester's paper was a week late. Any questions concerning this should be addressed to Legislative Board.

Tennis Players, Faculty Plan Trip To Fla.; Tryouts, March 16-25

For twelve Longwood students and six faculty members, spring break will mean lots of tennis and sunshine. They will leave March 27 for Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and return April 4.

Tennis coach, Mrs. Harriss, and five other faculty members, Miss Huffman, Dr. O'Neil, Dr. Heintz, Miss Callaway and Miss Fath, will accompany the Longwood tennis players and coach them in their playing. The girls will play five hours of tennis each day. Those girls going include Judy Turner, Patti Coogan, Diane Weymouth, Carol Chory, Jo Anne Hairfield, Sharon Farmer, Mary Ingram, Laurel Baldwin, Sherry Dossett, Lynn Kwiatkowski, Freda Lunsford, and Lynne Coleman.

According to Mrs. Harriss, tennis team tryouts will be March 16, 17, 18, 19, 23, 24, 25. All students interested in trying out for the varsity or junior varsity teams should sign up outside Mrs. Harriss' office on first floor French by Friday, March 13.

These girls signing up should meet with Mrs. Harriss and Miss Callaway, the JV coach, March 16, on Barlow Courts. In case of rain, they will meet in Classroom 3 in French building. All participants will play in a round robin tournament. They must play a pro set and although there will be no coaching at this time, Mrs. Harriss and Miss Callaway will observe the matches. Mrs. Harriss said that all girls were responsible for making arrangements to play people.

Mrs. Harriss wanted to stress the fact that whether a girl is going to Florida or not has nothing to do with her making the team. The team will be selected before the group leaves for Florida. Commenting on this, Mrs. Harriss said, "Everyone has an opportunity to make the team and we're looking for a big turnout this season."

LC jumps for the jump ball in the Lynchburg College game last Saturday. The final score was 72-59.

L.C. Cagers Defeat Lynchburg, ODU; Retain Undefeated Record

After two hard fought games last Tuesday and Saturday against Lynchburg and Old Dominion University, the Longwood varsity basketball team remained undefeated with wins of 72-59 and 57-50 respectively. Their record is now 7-0 with three games remaining in the regular season.

In the game against Lynchburg College, Longwood led by Sue Manahan and Lynne Coleman as they scored a total of 48 points in the winning effort. Sue led all scorers with 25 points and Lynne was close behind with 23. The Longwood JVs also captured a win over Lynchburg in a 58-28 victory boosting their record to 6-0.

In the game against ODU, Lynne Coleman and Sue Manahan paced Longwood to an exciting overtime victory as they tallied 14 points each, while Freda Lunsford contributed eight points to the win. Longwood also dominated the backboards as Sue Manahan brought down 13 rebounds followed by Lynne Coleman with 8, and Margaret Lowry, Joy King, and Judy Turner who each had seven rebounds. Carole Johnson of ODU led all scorers with 20 points and was followed by Diane Hunt with 13.

The Longwood girls jumped off to an early lead over Lynchburg and by the end of the first quarter they led 16-8. Much of the action in the second quarter still favored Longwood and at halftime the score was 25-18 with Longwood on the lead.

In the third quarter the Lynchburg team began to strengthen as the action brought about five interceptions in their favor. After scoring 19 points, Lynchburg took the lead at the end of the third quarter: 37-34.

The final quarter of the game was tense and close as each team was evenly matched in their scoring efforts. The fast breaks and close playing of each team caused many fouls and interceptions. By the end of the quarter the score was tied 43-43, and overtime had to be played.

As the two minute overtime started, Longwood began to strengthen as they held Lynchburg to only six points to their 13 points. Although the game was close, Longwood finally pulled out in front to stay and won 57-50.

Although the game was close and victory was uncertain until the final seconds, the Longwood fans followed the action and cheered their team on to win. The Longwood cheering team, using musical accompaniment, kept the winning spirit up throughout the game, even when the action got tense.

Longwood Student Conducts Opinion Poll

Dissatisfaction, Unhappiness Rate High

During the past week a reporter interviewed students and Longwood College employees to find that there are several things which they are dissatisfied with, do not understand, or want an explanation for. She has collected five pages of opinions and due to space limitation she cannot begin to mention them all, but the ones that she felt were most repeatedly mentioned or which she has tried to include.

GRUB GRIPES

"Lately, why have so many people been left without a table in the dining hall?" Junior.

"The current system in the dining hall is inconvenient for eaters and waitresses." Junior.

"The waitresses are often ill-treated in the dining hall." Junior.

"It is too crowded in the dining hall." Junior.

"I would like to see the dining hall changed into a cafeteria." Sophomore.

"A considerable amount of money is spent for flowers in the dining hall each week. Why doesn't the dining hall put this money into the food?" Junior.

HOUSING HASSELS

"I would like to see a longer Sunday night curfew." Junior.

"I think that boys should be allowed in the dorms on the weekends, or at least on Saturday or Sunday afternoons." Junior.

"Why can't the students drink in the dorms?" Junior.

"Why can't beer be served on campus?" Junior.

"There are insects in North Cunningham." Freshman.

"Room check is juvenile." Senior.

"Do away with pink slips." Senior.

"People keep stealing food from the fridge." Freshman.

"How can you find a bomb in fifteen minutes?" Freshman.

"I do not like being a floater." Junior.

"Closed meetings of the Residence Board where rule changes are concerned are unfair, and representatives shouldn't have to keep things secret from the people who elected them." Junior-Sophomore.

"Change the sign-in-sign out system." Sophomore.

"Call downs are outdated. Who is afraid of getting a call down?" Junior.

"Phone duty should be done away with." Junior.

"I feel there is no good sense in having such a late curfew. I think that Longwood is losing its individuality when it tries to copy or imitate the large Northeastern colleges or universities, which are situated mostly in large cities where they have a use for such a late curfew." College Employee.

THE ACADEMIC SCENE

"I am sick of filling out impertinent questionnaires." Senior.

"There is a need for more faculty in the P. E. department." Sophomore.

"Why can't something be done about the high prices in the bookstore?" Senior.

"Classes are too crowded." Senior.

"Spring will do all the changing I want done." College Employee.

"I wish there were more animal biology courses." Sophomore.

"If the student's opinion in class is not in accordance with the teacher's, the teacher should not disregard the student's opinion. More voicing of opinion should be exercised rather than memorization." Freshman.

"The cutting policy should be more liberal. As long as the student doesn't miss more than a third of her classes, cuts should be unlimited." Junior.

"I think the charge for changing your schedule is too high." Junior.

"The dean's list should be lowered to 3.2." Junior.

"Tell professors not to read out of textbooks, we can read on our own." Junior.

"Why does it matter what we wear to learn in as long as it covers your body?" Junior.

"I think we should have prerequisites for certain courses or have the departments better organized." Junior.

"I would like to see the faculty stay around more on the campus." College Employee.

"I would like to see the school re-examine some of the traditions. For example, the Mr. Longwood pageant, which was not put on this year because of the lack of participation." College Employee.

"I do not think that students should be compelled to attend the Artists' Series." College Employee.

"Students should have more voice in the hiring of entertainment and speakers." Junior.

"Faculty should keep personal opinions of other faculty members to themselves and not involve the students. These actions make them seem immature to the students." Senior.

MISCELLANEOUS

"Why do we have to pay two dollars to park our cars?" Senior.

"The YWCA has been criticized for not providing adequate spiritual activities. Religious Emphasis Week was sponsored by the YWCA to alleviate part of the problem and the participation of the students was not large." Junior.

"The girls are apathetic." Sophomore.

"I am satisfied that Longwood has changed their weekend curfew. Now I wish that the fraternities would change theirs." Freshman, Hampden-Sydney.

"I'm happy." College Employee.

"Everything's great." College Employee.

ED. NOTE: To comment on or clarify any of the above statements, please do so in writing, by addressing your letter to the editor.

Mr. Law, As Visiting Scientist

Speaks At Crewe High School

As a visiting scientist for high schools in Virginia, Joseph J. Law, Assistant Professor of Chemistry, spoke to the students of Crewe High School on February 20, on the topics of "The Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy" and "Forensic Applications of Neutron Activation Analysis." Professor Law's visitation was sponsored by the Virginia Academy of Science. The objectives of the Visiting Scientists Program are to strengthen and stimulate the science curriculum in schools, to transmit some up-to-date knowledge to students, to aid the motivation of students for careers in science, and to provide school teachers with the opportunity to contact science specialists and professors. Two other Longwood professors participating in the program are Drs. Robert T. Brumfield and Marvin W. Scott.

The highlights of Mr. Law's first lecture were the discussion on the use of implantable radioisotope power source for the artificial-heart operation and the description of how the nuclear generator used by the Apollo crews on the lunar surface worked. In his second talk the principles and methods of Activation Analysis were outlined. The detection of trace materials in hair and gunshot residues by means of gamma-ray spectrometry were explained. Several court cases of murder, rape and narcotics, in which the nuclear techniques had been introduced were illustrated. The investigations of the suspected arsenic poisoning of Napoleon and of the assassination of President Kennedy were also covered. In addition to his lectures Law told the students of some recent developments of Longwood and answered the questions about the academic life in college raised by the girls.

Spanish Club As Hosts Of Tea

For Students Of Latin America

The Longwood Spanish Club, with Dr. Narkinsky, sponsored a tea for a group of Latin American exchange students from Marymount High School, Linda Bobbitt organized the tea.

Among the guests were: Pile Ventura (Costa Rica), Yoyi Velasquez (Panama), China Wright (El Salvador), Nina Avila (El Salvador), and Chella Lafaurie (Columbia). The girls are staying with Diane Taylor from Farmville. They ate dinner Friday night at Dr. Silveira's house.

From interviewing the girls, we discovered Pile's first impression of the United States. She thinks that it is a big, beautiful country and that the people are friendly. She came to the U.S. to study English. Nina Avila could not speak English when she arrived in the U.S., but now she has had three years of English and speaks it very well. At home, the girls date older boys and usually double date because it's more fun. Their parties last until 3 or 4 a.m. They think that American boys are more immature than those back home.

The officers of the Spanish Club are: President - Amila Nespoli, Vice-President - Lynn Giles, Secretary - Jo Brown, Treasurer - Sue Yeatts, Chaplain - Judy Gregory.

Most Rock Groups Fade Out;

The Jefferson Airplane Last

Most rock groups fail to age gracefully and become stagnant after a few albums. Noteworthy exceptions are The Beatles, The Rolling Stones and The Jefferson Airplane. The Airplanes' sound blossomed naturally in the summer of 1967 with a single called "Somebody To Love," followed by a succession of albums. The Airplanes' new album is labeled "Volunteers" and as usual most of the material performed in the album was written by members of the band. The instrumentation on this album excels all the Airplanes' previous ones. Their great soaring sound is stabilized by the earthy piano playing of Nicky Hopkins, one of the real rock artists, who plays with such greats as Janis Joplin and The Stones. The added impact of his piano is obvious in cuts such as, "We Can Be Together," "A Song For All Seasons," "Volunteers," and "Hey, Fredrick." As usual Jorma's lead guitar is perfect for the songs and for the vocals by Marty and Grace. Grace Slick's control of her voice is reminiscent of the control a fine musician has over his instrument. Her voice can be cruel and demanding, as in "Hey, Fredrick," or questioning and innocent as in "Wooden Ships," but in all the cuts her voice slides over octaves with an icy precision.

The topics of the songs range from the misfortunes that can plague a rock group — the inability to help each other, helping America by revolution — to the impermanence of sexual love and the hazards of speed (methedrine). The jewel of the album, though, is a one minute organ solo of an obscure traditional song called "Meadowlands." Grace plays the organ here with a sensitive intensity that is almost religious. To stress the point, "Volunteers" is a good album; The Jefferson Airplane has again proved itself a group with an intellectual approach to recording and the capability to produce an honest, relevant album.

European Studies

Provides Incentive

And Valid Credits

Foreign study and travel for college credit is not a new concept. However, it is a valuable experience in the training of teachers. Last summer Mr. Rubley and Mr. Nunn conducted very successful classes in Geography (with 56 students) and French (with 19 students) in Europe.

Longwood has four trips planned for next summer. Mr. Rubley will take a group to Prague, Warsaw, Cracow, Moscow, Leningrad and Helsinki. The college will give six credit hours for students who enroll in this course, Geography 470-471. The study of Eastern European Geography will last from July 7 through July 28, with two weeks spent in study at Longwood prior to departure.

The Department of Foreign Language is offering six-credit courses in both Spanish and French. The courses, which last from July 2 through August 4, will feature four weeks of study at the University of Poitiers French Language Institute in Tours, France, or four weeks of study at the University of Barcelona, Spain. Mr. Nunn, Mrs. Ernouf and Mrs. Silveira will accompany the students to Europe.

The fourth European study-travel course sponsored by Longwood next summer is in Art. Mr. Walter Hathaway will teach Art 320-321, Survey of Western Art in Europe, for six credits. The trip will last from July 24 to August 14, with nine additional days spent at Longwood. The cities of Rome, Florence, Venice, Milan and Paris will be included in the trip.

Rubley To Speak

On Soviet Union

Thursday, March 5

By LINDA SMALLLEY
Mr. E.A. Rubley, Associate Professor of Geography, will present a lecture on the Soviet Union, Thursday, March 5, at 7:30 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium. The lecture, sponsored by the Class of 1971, will feature slides made by Mr. Rubley during his trip to Russia last spring. There will be an admission charge of fifty cents. The money will be used to aid the expenses of the Junior Ring Dance set for April 11.

Letters concerning the lecture have been sent to all Virginia colleges. Also invited are all high school students within a fifty mile radius of Farmville. Local civic groups have likewise been asked, and the entire Longwood body is welcomed to attend.

Officers Required To Read Rights; Jailhouse Comparable To Dorms

By JENNY YOUNG

Are you aware that when you are arrested—

1. You have the right to remain silent?
2. That anything you say can and will be used against you in court?
3. That you can hire a lawyer of your own choice to be present and advise you before and during your statement if you choose to make one?
4. That if unable to hire a lawyer, you can request and receive appointment of a lawyer without cost to you?
5. That you can refuse to answer any question or stop answering at any point?
6. That no law officer can prompt you in your statement, nor write it out for you unless you so desire?

Well, consider yourself forewarned. These are your legal rights, which should be read to you by a law officer in case of your arrest. You will be able to read the above warnings on a voluntary statement sheet which you will fill out if you decide to make a statement following your arrest.

How busy is Farmville's jail? In 1969, 364 criminal arrests were made and 1,614 complaints were answered. January commonly has the lowest crime rate of the year; crime is highest in March and August, and there is considerable theft before Christmas. If you have ever been irritated by store clerks following you around during Christmas, it is because shifting occurs more and more frequently, and this is an especially busy time of year.

DRUNK

Perhaps one of the least offensive "crimes" is simply that of being drunk and wandering around town. The "town drunk" is the man who generally occupies the overnight lock-up, separate from the rest of the jail. The purpose of taking him to, as Chief Overton pointed out, for his own protection, as he might inadvertently wander out in front of a passing car and be injured. This was the case in the town's sole pedestrian death during the last five years.

Demonstrations place quite a strain on the police department, which has found that the wisest policy is to record on film and tape the actions and words of police who are trying to control the crowd. They must be able to "tell where, why, and give positive identification" of those they arrest. The real fun, however, comes when they later attempt to identify in a lineup those that caused trouble. Those in the lineup have often greatly altered their appearance by either shaving or not shaving.

FIREBUGS

Other criminals encountered in Farmville include firebugs, peeping Toms, and suicides. Firebugs are generally people who for some strange reason like to hear fire sirens or watch fires — sometimes those they have set themselves. They usually show up at every fire that is announced over WFLD. Incidentally, are

Art Department Expanding; Dedicated To Miss Bedford

The art department of Longwood College is in the process of expanding. The new two part fine arts complex is scheduled for completion this summer and use in September. Designed by Ben R. Johns, Jr., of Richmond, and built by Motley Construction Company of Farmville. The complex is located in the general area of the high rise dormitories. With dimensions of 184 feet in width by 109 feet in depth, the structure will consist of an auditorium with sound projection booth and stage area, classrooms, studios, kiln and dark rooms, conference room, as well as instructional space for sculpture, general crafts, ceramics, graphics, drawing, and painting, and art education, plus a gallery and faculty offices. Art purchases, made over a number of years with departmental funds, will hang at various points in the building.

On the evening of the faculty banquet, February 27, President Henry I. Willett, Jr., announced that the $760,000 section of the $1,285,000 fine arts complex will be named for Virginia E. Bedford, Miss Bedford is currently the chairman of the art department, but she will step down from this position on July 1. Miss Bedford came to Longwood in 1928, and since that time the art department has progressively expanded. The department has grown in the areas of faculty members — from two to eight majors, and students in art classes. Miss Bedford's activities go beyond the classroom, though. She has served as a member of all major committees, adviser to the annual, and chairman of the faculty committee that sponsors the Institute of Southern Culture.

But Miss Bedford is unbelievably active outside of the college. Being a Farmville civic leader, she has helped promote numerous cultural and educational projects in the community. She has served as president of the art section of Virginia Education Association, council member of the National Art Association, and president of the Farmville chapter of AATW. Professionally, her areas of special interest are ceramics, enameling on copper, and other crafts.

A native of Missouri, Miss Bedford received her B.S. degree from the University of Missouri, and M.A. from Teacher's College of Columbia University. She has spent summers studying at Columbia, Harvard, Ohio State, and the University of New Hampshire.

Commenting upon the honor given Miss Bedford, Dr. Willett said, "I think it most fitting that our Board of Visitors would wish to recognize in this way the singular contributions Miss Bedford has made to Longwood over the years as an effective teacher, able administrator, and member of the faculty, who served the college with distinction in numerous capacities beyond her classroom and department."

Undoubtedly, this is only a small payment of the tremendous debt owed to an outstanding and gracious woman.

MISS BEDFORD

Administration Frees Upperclassmen With Supplication Approval

Legislative Board would like to announce that final approval has been given by the Administration to accept the proposal of Student Government that blanket permission slips be abandoned for all sophomores, juniors, and seniors. In a coverletter written by members of Legislative Board to be sent to parents of all students the Board explained to the parents that "Since we are deeply interested in the well-being of each individual member of the student body and as members elected by the students, it is our purpose to suggest that we should aid in the development and maturity of your daughter." Student Government recommends a discussion with parents of the social and dormitory regulations found in the Handbook which will be sent to freshmen and transfer students.

"Such a discussion would aid to inform the parents, as well as the student, of the rules which reflect the college's policy of dealing with the students as young adults."

Students who were enrolled at Longwood College prior to June 14, 1970, no longer will be restricted by former permission blanks, as far as the college is concerned. However, Student Government recommends strongly that all parents and daughters reach a mutual understanding as to the privileges the daughter may have within the framework of the rules and regulations set forth by Student Government.

Freshmen will be required to have a revised permission blank initiated by one parent or a guardian in order to receive these privileges . . . The blank will be effective for the entire freshman year. For summer-February girls, the blank will be ineffective after their second semester on campus.

Casey Wilkes, President of Student Government, commented that she thought the student body as a whole would be pleased with the change. "Because the Administration will co-sign the letter with Student Government, speaks for the fact that they are behind us all the way in this change. They have been most cooperative and helpful in getting this change through, which once again, progress and problems and suggestions children can be worked out very nicely through meetings."

Elementary majors learn the fundamentals of printing with Mr. Springer.

Springer Advances Theory On The Creativity Of Children

By LINDA FLOYD

Mr. Homer Springer, instructor of art at Longwood College, has an interesting theory of how and why children become creative. The responsibility, Mr. Springer says, falls in large measure onto the shoulders of parents and elementary school teachers.

The native of Virginia is a graduate of VCU. He took a B.F.A. degree in Art Education from that school and moved to Maryland to teach in the public schools around Annapolis. While in Maryland, he earned his master's from Towson University.

Married and the father of a 14-month old son, Mr. Springer teaches art for elementary education majors. This one year course is designed to offer a theory of art education and techniques applicable to elementary pupils for students who, for the most part, have had no art. The course covers such general categories as painting, design, composition, lettering, printmaking and strives to give prospective teachers some background in art, plus some confidence in themselves.

Creativity is a thing that has been neglected in elementary school. Because CQ, creativity quotient, cannot be measured as can IQ, intelligence quotient, there has been less emphasis placed on creativity. CQ, however, is important for everybody. Quality comes from the creative mind; in many areas such as business, home-making, etc., creative people are the most successful.

Children are born artists. This talent grows in kindergarten. At kindergarten, it levels off a bit as the child is totally involved in new situations and surroundings. Soon, though, this creativity starts up again and grows until about third grade. The fourth grade is awful as far as creativity is concerned because children become aware of adult criticism and criteria. It is especially important at this stage that the child have a good teacher to encourage him. In junior high school creativity grows again but levels off at about eighth grade. After high school creativity wanes and probably be at a minimum or slightly decline unless the person has been stimulated or challenged to be creative previously.

The creative child deserves special attention just as the so-called "brilliant" child deserves special attention. The children that are original and fluent in verbal associations and questioning are generally the ones that are most creative — someone needs to help them. These creative people can be leaders and tops in their field if guided properly. The energetic and good teacher takes advantage of this creative ability.

What can parents do to encourage creativity in their preschool children? Parents should let their children explore. Usually there is a relaxed atmosphere in the homes from where creative children come. The ties generally are not too strong — there is love, but not of a smothering nature.

Coloring books actually stifle creativity since neatness and "staying within the lines" are so strictly emphasized. For the two-year old, newspaper and one large, thick, black crayon are probably the best art supplies. When the child asks for more colors, then it is best just to get him a small box of about six or eight crayons.

Toys that can be used more than one way, such as building blocks or cardboard boxes, are best for the child. Toys with batteries that do simply everything, hinder creativity as do Barbie dolls which have so many premade clothes.

Supplies for art can be inexpensive. Also, art does not have to be messy. The good teacher will not let it be that way. Bulletin boards in the classroom encourage creativity; however, there should not be competition. Everybody's work should go on the bulletin board at some time or another. All forms of creativity should be encouraged — art, storytelling, writing, — all are creative. People now have spare time in which they are bored. The future holds the possibility of a four-day work week. It is the person who has been stimulated creatively who will, most likely, fare the best in such an environment.

Mr. Springer concludes a most interesting interview by a bubbling revelation. "I sure am happy," he says, "I don't have much, but I'm the luckiest man in the world. I love my family and my work. Art is my love and my life."

Young Republicans Attend Convention At Natural Bridge

Rosemary Lohman, chairman of the Longwood College Young Republicans, was elected First Vice Chairman of the College Republican Federation of Virginia at the state convention in Natural Bridge.

The Young Republicans had a constitutional convention, and after debate several amendments were passed. They will rebate 50% of the dues paid to the State Federation back to the College and Teachers Federation. Attendees were Rosemary Lohman, Linda Holt, Carolyn Cummins, Mary Estes, Marge McCormick, Diane Haley, and Dale Payne, as delegates, and Marcia Harris, Jane Atkins, Gail Brown, Bela Parks, Joyce Daugherty, Susan Christian, and Bev Hight as alternates. March 17, J.T. Baxter, chairman of the State Republican Federation, will speak in the A room of Lankford. All are invited.

The Region 3 Convention will be held in Hampton, March 20-22. Longwood YR's will send a delegation. Announcements of speakers will be made by Rosemary Lohman. Other club members will go to the Fourth District Convention in Petersburg. Anyone interested in attending this convention on Saturday, March 22, see Carolyn Cummins.

Unnecessary Stagnation

Censorship has become a very vague term on the Longwood campus. It has been made clear that students involved in the three major publications are free to print any material that is not considered unsuitable. But, somehow with these ground rules, the newspaper has fallen into the rut of being a glorified public relations release. The newspaper should be a direct medium of exchange between students. This means that the newspaper should not only cover student activities, but also student thoughts, opinions, and ideas. The Rotunda is not doing this, and one may ask why. Perhaps it is because the unstated censorship laws are a bit confining and confusing.

3 A.M. And All Is Not Well

Do you fall asleep during your classes because you're tired? And are you tired because you listened to your neighbors' uninvited stereo blaring Bill Haley's Rock Revival until 3 a.m.?

If you haven't been plagued by stereos lately, have you heard the Music 237 pianists practicing scales from 8:30 a.m. until 12:30 a.m.?

We realize that everyone must have time to study and relax, but why at such odd times?

Supposedly there is still a strict study hour. Isn't that why we have phone duty — to make sure the ringing phone does not disturb those studying? A ringing phone is certainly easier on the ears than girls running up and down the halls screaming. At least we got accustomed to the sound of the phone, but it takes awhile to adjust our ears to the pitch of people's voices.

Have you also noticed the increasing number of Longwood students interested in tap dancing? It's odd, but there never seems to be a dance recital for these students. Perhaps they really aren't interested in tap, but why else is there all that noise coming through the ceiling?

If you've been by-passed by all these noise-makers, surely you must live near an interior decorator who enjoys moving furniture or an arts and crafts student who must nail pieces of wood together in preparation for a class the next day.

There is one solution — call-downs, but aside from creating hard feelings, who really is afraid of a call-down anyway?

Most annoying noises would not bother us as much if they were made at a more convenient time (e.g. 3 p.m. instead of 3 a.m.) All it takes is a little courtesy and consideration on the part of everyone.

Now, if you've decided on anonymously slipping this editorial into your neighbor's mailbox then maybe you had better look into yours first.

Kappa Deltas are busy preparing for the annual Workshop to be held at Longwood this year. Alpha Province representatives from Madison College, William and Mary, American University and University of Maryland will be arriving this week-end to exchange ideas and suggestions during the Officer's Workshop.

Kappa Delta's Province President will be remaining on campus to combine the Workshop with her Chapter visit of this week.

Alpha Delta Pi had its first installation of new officers on January 8. Those installed were Gwen Phillips, President; Dianne Lawhorn, Vice-President; Annie Anthony, recording secretary; Donna Hale, corresponding secretary; Gay Snead, treasurer; Judy Jones, registrar; Helen Hance, chaplain; Verona Leake, guard; and Judy Haynes, reporter-historian.

Initiation ceremonies were held on February 14 for Donna Dowling.

A D Pi would like to congratulate Dianne Lawhorn, Merlyn Smith, Fran Moran, and Donna Gibson on making Dean's List and Mary Alice Carmody for being named Editor for the "Rotunda."

The following girls are AD Pi's new pledges: Brenda Hollins, Beverly Burke, Patti Lett, Janice Russell, Miriam Miller, Mary Ellen Sosowski, Carol Servies, Sally Foster, Ellen Dunn, Sandi Carper, Donna Gibson, Fran Moran, Lee Sharp, Angela Foley, Linda Floyd, and Elise Caldwell.

During semester break, installed president Trisha Spillan, Wanda Spicer, Ann Holt, Nona Davis, Joanne Darby, Ginger King, and Miki Urnes, went to the College of William and Mary on invitation from the Gamma Alpha chapter of Phi Mu for rush week. Living in the sorority house for the week provided a unique chance for all of the sisters from the two chapters to become better acquainted and to share in the challenge of rushing. Also in Williamsburg for the week was Mrs. Landon Frear, Phi Mu's National Panhellenic Conference delegate. She gave each of the sisters ideas and provided an opportunity for exchange on problems and suggestions. Climaxing the week, on Saturday afternoon in the mass bid-acceptance run, the Gamma Alpha and Gamma Iota sisters welcomed the new pledges.

Letters To The Editor

Read With Interest

Dear Miss Carmody:

I read with great interest the list of areas of dissatisfaction published in the March 4 issue of the Rotunda. It is difficult for me to comment on the individual items presented although I would certainly be glad to discuss them with any of the persons involved at anytime.

No situation is perfect and certainly we are not. At the same time I believe that we have avenues of communication available to all connected with the College that are the equal of those found anywhere. If a person has an area of dissatisfaction or question I would certainly advise them to bring these to the attention of the person in charge of that particular aspect of the College operation or bring it directly to my attention. If a person is sincerely interested in seeking change or improvement in a particular area then the quickest way they can achieve this would be through the utilization of the channels that are provided. If a person is undecided as to whom to contact my office will be happy to give them suggestions in this regard. Suggestion boxes are provided in two locations for those who would care to submit questions or recommendations in this manner. Press conferences are scheduled for March 18, April 16, and May 12, for those who would care to use this avenue.

In spite of the many problems incurred through budget limitation I am still optimistic enough to believe that most problems can be resolved when everyone works together for their solution.

Sincerely,
Henry I. Willett, Jr.

Enjoyed Comments

To the Editor:

Finally "The Rotunda" is doing more than reporting student and faculty activities, future programs, and sports events. I found the article on the police department most informative. I agree with your comments on the laundry. Most of all I was glad to see that some of my fellow students have the same gripes as I. You have touched on a subject area that is just as significant to our college life as who won a basketball game or who went to the National Art Museum. It may not be a bad idea to continue publishing a gripe column.

I think that you and your staff are to be commended for this better than average issue of "The Rotunda." I hope the students will continue to use their newspaper as their avenue of expression.

Proposed Changes

Ed, note: The following letter is a carbon copy of the original which was sent to Legislative Board.

To: Legislative Board

From: Carolyn Cummins

The following are some changes that I think should be made for they are in the best interest of this institution. I would be glad to discuss them with you at anytime.

1. I resent the invasion of my privacy which results from our pink slips. If it is necessary to have a head count for the dining hall, it can be taken on a piece of paper that says that I will either be here or not. If it is necessary to have a phone number where I can be reached in case of emergency this can be accomplished through a sealed envelope system such as those used at other institutions.

2. I would like to see the sign and out tables in Wheeler, Cox, and Stubbs removed from public access. Under the current situation anyone can enter these dormitories and look at these cards. There are times when this availability has resulted in a most embarrassing situation.

3. You might also consider making available permanent post office boxes in the old bank of Lankford Building or some other vacant space for the campus organizations. Having been an officer in many campus organizations I know how difficult it is to get mail for that organization because it is still being sent to the old officer.

4. Sometimes I feel that this is more like a Girl Scout camp than a college. I see no reason for us to be permitted to talk to girls out our windows, but not boys. I think that room check for any other reasons than checking for property damage and maintaining state health standards is childish. The call down system has also outlived its usefulness. For-the-most part call downs are scoffed at when someone even bothers to issue one. Blanket permission slips are also an insult to my womanhood. If I am not responsible for my actions by the time I am ready for college then it is time I became responsible.

5. I feel that this Board should hold an open meeting at least once a month. I also think that are student body should know how its representatives vote on issues whether they are passed or not — particularly those concerning rule changes. I would make the same suggestion to Residence Board.

6. Perhaps this is the most important of all my suggestions. I would like to see more emphasis on the academic life at Longwood during our Orientation period. This first week does much to set the mood we

From The Board

The Committee for "Crises in Our Environment" has met in hopes of promoting needed enthusiasm among the Student Body. On April 22, there will be a nationwide campaign in acknowledgment of our current and future environmental problems within our nation and world.

The Evaluations Committee is working its annual spring membership drive. Any organization at Longwood wishing to appropriate funds must have a written and approved constitution.

Editorship of the Summer School Handbook has been accepted by Mary Ingram, Sue Goodson and Selena Lee have accepted responsibility of membership on the By-Laws Committee.

PI Gamma Mu, the History and Social Science Honorary is conducting its annual spring membership drive. Any junior or senior who has 20 hours in history and social science and has a 3.0 average in these classes and a 2.5 accumulative is eligible. If you are interested in becoming a member, please contact any History and Social Science faculty member by Friday, March 13.

follow for the next four years. It so conditions the student for the "goodtimes" to be had that they lose sight of the real purpose for coming to Longwood College. I think that we could afford to put a little of the academic atmosphere into this week.

Thank you very much for consideration of my proposals.

The Reply

Dear Editor:

In answer to the previous letter written by Carolyn Cummins, I wish to comment on several points. Her suggestions are very constructive and have been well received by Legislative Board. However, many of the proposals which she has suggested have received attention prior to this article.

In answer to her third point concerning permanent post office boxes in Lankford Building for campus organizations, this proposal has already been taken care of by the Physical Plant. Mr. Bristol has said that these boxes for campus organizations have been ordered and will be ready for use by next fall.

With regard to point four, concerning blanket permission slips, I would refer to the article in this week's ROTUNDA "Blanket Permission Forms to be Abandoned for Upperclassmen." I believe the article is self-explanatory.

Concerning point five regarding open Legislative Board meetings. Let me remind the entire student body that Legislative Board meets every Monday night at 6:45 in the Student Government Room and our meetings are always open. We welcome anyone who wishes to come, give suggestions, or just listen. With regard to a meeting involving all three Boards, we have scheduled one for April 16 to be held in the Gold Room of Lankford. Further information will be given later.

Finally in reference to point six, I totally disagree with the statement that our Orientation program "conditions the student for the 'goodtimes' to be had and they lose sight of the real purpose for coming to Longwood College." I have always considered our orientation program to be a well-balanced one involving all aspects of college life. However, Academic Affairs Committee will be working on a more "academic-oriented" program for the fall which will put a little more academic atmosphere into the week.

Once again let me say on behalf of Legislative Board that these suggestions have been well-balanced and we always welcome them. However, it would be greatly appreciated if one would check with the proper channels to see if the information submitted has been previously evaluated.

Tabb Wins Trophy For Intramural Cagers; Class Players Picked

The Tabb basketball team proudly accepted the championship title at the completion of their 13-10 victory over Cox on Thursday, March 5, at 7:30 in French gym. This game brought the intramural basketball season to a close as the freshmen battled it out with the upperclassmen, while Lynne Coleman and Freda Lunsford officiated.

Tabb had eight girls who played in the championship game. They are as follows: Diane Padgett, Mary Ann Bentley, Betsy Minor, Cindy Dixon, Donna Brown, Connie Shield, Lorraine Service, and Linda Wall.

Class games will be played Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, in order to choose the class team, each team turned in a list of their best players. These girls will scrimmage Monday night and the varsity will rate them on their skill. The twelve girls with the best rating will be representing their class. Vying for the places on each team will be 26 freshmen, 17 sophomores, and 19 juniors. Since only six seniors were voted outstanding by their teams, they will not participate in the tryouts.

The color basketball teams will be chosen from the class teams. The tentative plan for their selection is for the varsity basketball team to rate the girls during the class games. The game between the Reds and Greens for points toward the cup will be played next week.

All Interested Students! Lacrosse practices are being held Monday, Wednesday, Friday at 4:00 p.m. on Barlow Field for the next two weeks. Try-outs for Varsity will then be held.

Dr. O'Neil, Dr. Heintz, Dr. Smith, and Mrs. Babbitt attended the Southern Association For Physical Education Of College Women Annual Conference. Last week in Columbia, South Carolina.

Longwood fencers are in form for competition, however, Madison outmaneuvered them for a win last Wednesday.

Longwood Fencers Downed By Madison, MWC In First Meets

The Longwood varsity fencing team had their first two meets this past week. Wednesday, March 4, at 4:00 p.m. they faced Madison College and lost 7-2 and 5-4; Saturday they fenced against Mary Washington College and lost 6-3, 6-3.

The fencing meet against Madison was held at Longwood in Gym III. The Longwood fencers were divided into two teams, the first team consisted of Patti Coogan and Mary Frances Baldwin.

win, both veteran fencers from last year, and also Fran Moran, a freshman. Members of the second team are Phyllis Columbus, Sue Mesdies Penny Eberly. The Madison team consisted mainly of senior experienced fencers, so the Longwood team was outmaneuvered.

The L.C. team traveled to Fredericksburg for their meet against Mary Washington College. The six fencers again competed in teams, each fencer bout against an MWC fencer of the same rank. The team was downed by a 6-3 score in both matches.

Number one fencer for Longwood, Mary Frances Baldwin, commented, "Although we were defeated, it was a great deal of fun and I really enjoyed it."

This is the second year for our fencing team, and the coach, Miss Sally Bush, has great hopes of its progress.

Today at 4:00 p.m., in Gym 3, the team will fence against Lynchburg College. March 13-14 they will travel to Randolph-Macon in Lynchburg for the Intercollegiate Fencing Finals. Saturday, March 13, there will be a clinic for fencers of all levels and Sunday a round robin tournament between the participating schools will be held.

Fencing is a French skill dating from the 17th century, and requires much wrist flexibility and agility in the fencer.

Varsity Cagers Meet First Defeat At Westhampton; Stomp W&M

By TERRI GADSBY

In two exciting games during the past week Longwood varsity basketball team defeated William and Mary by a score of 39-15, and bowed to Westhampton 46-39. Their record for the season is now 8-1 with one game remaining.

In the game against William and Mary last Tuesday night on our home courts, Sue Manahan and Lynne Coleman paced Longwood to the win as they tallied 15 and 14 points respectively, while Judy Turner contributed 8 points. Longwood also dominated the backboards as Sue Manahan pulled down 13 rebounds and Carolyn Thompson grabbed 10 rebounds. High scorer and rebounder for William and Mary was Lyn Clay who had 5 points and 7 rebounds. By the end of the half it was evident that Longwood was dominating the game by a score of 36-6, and as the second half began the team was spurred on by the enthusiastic spectators to win 39-15.

The Longwood JV basketball team maintained their undefeated record as they won over William and Mary 56-21. It was a very exciting game as Longwood led in scoring and rebounding. High scorer for the game was Dotty Bohannon as she tallied 17 points followed by Fran Anthony with 15 points and Margaret Pulley with 10 points. High scorer for William and Mary was Diane Bromar with 10 points. Longwood dominated the game as Fran Anthony had 13 rebounds and Gail Gossage and Cindy Bradley each had 7.

Last Saturday the Longwood girls traveled to Westhampton with their record of 8 wins and no losses. Westhampton jumped off to a close lead by the end of the first quarter as they scored 9 points to Longwood's 6. Although Longwood dominated the backboards in the first half with Sue Manahan grabbing 14 rebounds they could not overcome the scoring of Westhampton and the halftime score was 26-18.

In the third quarter Longwood began to strengthen and find their shooting range. Lynne Coleman alone contributed 10 points as Joy King and Sue Manahan took the rebounds. However Westhampton managed to maintain their lead as they led 36-28 at the end of the third quarter. As the last quarter started, the game was still undecided as both teams were evenly matched. Yet by the end of the game Westhampton pulled out in front to stay and won 46-39.

Westhampton's high scorers were Marilyn Bray, who led all scorers with 26 points, and Sally Ann Terry with 9 points. Leading scorer for Longwood was Lynne Coleman with 17 points, followed by Margaret Lowry and Sue Manahan with 6 points each. Sue Manahan of Longwood was top rebounder with 14 rebounds, followed by Westhampton's Lindsay Strubers with 13 rebounds.

The Longwood JV's took their undefeated record, 7-0 to Westhampton. It was a close game, yet Longwood was unable to match the scoring of their opponents as they bowed to Westhampton 48-34. Westhampton led throughout the game by the scoring of Ann Allport with 15 points, and Naina Harper and Gwen Fletcher who scored 10 points each. High scorer for Longwood was Barbara Cridlin with 9 points. Westhampton also led defensively with Naina Harper taking 10 rebounds and Gwen Fletcher bringing down 7 rebounds. After this loss the JV record stands 7-1 with one game remaining.

Does Joan Of Arc's Spirit Reign Within Contemporary, Outspoken Longwood Lady?

By CAROLYN CUMMINS

During the recent months Longwood College has been undergoing much re-evaluation. One particular area whether of insignificance or sacredness has avoided scrutiny. Some, students and faculty alike, have uttered quips about our patron saint but no real investigation has been performed. Most of these comments suggest that we discard Joan of Arc from our list of traditions. But perhaps what is really needed is a revival of the spirit of Joan of Arc.

Historically Joan of Arc was a peasant girl claiming to be commissioned by God to drive the enemy from France. She led the army in liberating most of central France from English domination. In 1430 she was captured, turned over to the English, tried by the clergy, found guilty, and burnt at the stake.

Joan of Arc was a woman of action — given to deed rather than word. She brought youthful energy, vitality and devotion to the cause for which she died. Records of her trial indicate unyielding convictions and devotion. She was a young woman, unknown and without influence in a country full of strife who through her courage and convictions helped deliver her people from oppression.

What does all this have to do with us? A great deal! The general attitude on this campus is to complain, but to do nothing about our complaints. Most of us are concerned with good grades, popularity and marriage — all very worthy ambitions, but not all there is. Joan of Arc has become a mere piece of plaster gathering dust in the Gold Room. When she had an opinion she voiced it and then had the courage to follow through with action. We sit in our dorms, or at the dinner table or in class and gripe but generally that is where it stops.

Recently some have mustered up enough courage to write letters to the Editor. But this is only the first step on what may be a long hard climb. Next take the complaint to the most appropriate student government body, and if they do not offer a satisfactory reply, see the appropriate Dean and if necessary the President. Also another effective course of action is through parental letters to the administration and state legislator or petitions from the student body to student government and the administration. Fortunately these last steps are usually unnecessary. As long as this system continues to work in the students' best interest court action or demonstrations will never happen.

Studying the trends of our aired gripes one aspect is noticeably neglected. We have been overconcerned with the social and unconcerned with the academic. As an example, why do we require attendance at Jarman and Artist Series when we should attend them out of curiosity and for our own intellectual growth? What has happened to the many fine speakers and programs that we once had? Even when we have guests, the attendance is usually deplorable! Our rationalizations are terrific: "I've already got too much to do," or "I'm expecting a call from ---," or "I've got a --- meeting at the same time and I'll be fined $5 if I don't go," or "Not during my favorite T.V. program," or "I'm just not interested." Terrific, but also tragic! For many of us, college is our only opportunity to be exposed to "culture." Unfortunately this gripe is not the type that student government can legislate on or parents' letters can alleviate. For this we must search our hearts and revamp our priorities. Here our devotion to the cause of education meets the real test and we will discover if it is more word or deed.

Controversial Joan of Arc sits pensively in Lankford's Gold Room.

If we investigate a little more we would find that Joan of Arc knew more about the political, economic and social situation of her day than we, the college educated women, know of our day. Occasionally one of us voices a conviction about Vietnam, Biafra, the Middle East, air and water pollution, violence and disorder, poverty, the population explosion, inflation, recession, desegregation, drugs, permissiveness or religion, but most of the time these issues are dismissed because of lack of knowledge, insignificance or apathy. The best way to arouse anyone on this campus is to criticize Joan of Arc, Geist festival, May Day, Chi, sororities, class competition or some other tradition. Again we can learn a lesson from Joan of Arc. When questioned by the judges at her trial about her attire she dismissed the accusation by replying that matters of that type are a small thing — less than nothing. Like the judges, we are guilty of concerning ourselves with the small things. Admittedly the world problems are immense and we alone cannot solve them, but like Joan of Arc against England we must do our share.

That was Joan of Arc — a woman of action, given to deed rather than word. Someone with convictions and willing to stand by them regardless of the consequences. Someone concerned with more than the petty things. It may be too difficult a task for us to revive the ideals of the spirit of Joan of Arc. Perhaps instead we should revise the words of a very familiar song so the gentle voice would call:

"It's Joan of Arc that's slighted by our apathy, Oh Longwood, our own Longwood, should we give thanks to thee?"

Brenda Fariss Receives Honorable Mention In Fellowship Competition

Over 1,000 future college teachers from the United States and Canada have been elected winners in the annual Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Competition. The 1,153 finalists, known as Woodrow Wilson Designates, topped a field of approximately 12,000 outstanding graduating seniors nominated for the honor by more than 800 colleges. Brenda S. Fariss, a Longwood senior, has been selected for the honorable mention list of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship. She is a biology major from Phenix, Virginia. The Foundation's selection committees picked the Designates as "the most intellectually promising" 1970 graduates planning careers as college teachers. Foundation president Hans Rosenhaupt explained.

A list of the Designates will be sent to all graduate schools deans in both countries with recommendations that the schools provide winners with graduate fellowships. The names of 1,152 students who received honorable mention also will be circulated among the graduate deans.

Cars on Campus

All students are reminded of the following regulations in regard to having cars on campus:

- The first time a student has a car without permission, the car will be taken home immediately, the student will lose her senior privilege, and a letter will be placed in her permanent folder.
  - A second violation may result in suspension.
  - Seniors registering a car for an underclassman with the intent to give false information is FALSIFICATION OF RECORDS and is violating the Honor Code.
- Underclassmen must have permission to have a car on campus BEFORE bringing it. Permission is obtained by contacting Mr. Bristol. In cases of emergency, students may contact Mr. Bristol at his home (392-3067) or Dean Holt (392-3798). Cars must be registered within 48 hours of being brought on campus.

Va. Museum Loans Art Print Exhibit In Grainger Building

Longwood currently has a collection of "Contemporary American Prints" on exhibition from the Virginia Museum on second floor Grainger. The Museum obtained the prints from the Society of American Graphic Artists, Inc., of New York.

This Society, originally known as the Society of American Etchers, is America's most prominent printmaker organization. Membership is restricted to artists who have a high degree of technical proficiency in printmaking. It encourages young artists to exhibit their works in large exhibitions, and sponsors an annual exhibition to include works of both members and nonmembers.

The Society has two main purposes: To provide information concerning the techniques of printmaking and to educate the public as well as the artists about printmaking's contribution to the world of art.

Avant-Garde Films Shown In Kinetic Art Series; First Program Tonight

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffers Auditorium, program one of "The Kinetic Art" will be shown. "The Kinetic Art" is a series of short films from around the world. The complete three-part program contains 26 short films, running from 35 seconds to 55 minutes in length. The first program will contain 11 films and will last approximately 2 hours.

"Spiderephant," one of the films from Paris, is set in an imaginary time. It concerns a confused animal, half elephant and half spider, who wonders whether he is moving backward or forward. After finding that he can walk to the right and to the left, he decides to accept this as his fate and finds a mate.

"Why Did You Kiss Me Awake?," a German film, begins with a girl holding a camera. She then places the camera in a drawer, which leaves the viewers in total darkness. Voices explain the rest of the film.

"La Pomme," set in Paris, is an impressionistic record of Charles Matton's happy life with painting, love, babies, and Paris. This film won First Prize for Experiment at the Tours Festival.

Program two will be shown Monday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffers. The cost for this unique film festival in Jeffers is 75¢ for students and $1.00 for adults.

you aware that you must not follow closer than five hundred feet behind the back of a fire engine when going to a fire? Also, it is a state law that you can burn no fires before 4 p.m. After this time, any wind usually has died down and if the fire does spread, it is more easily seen by firefighters. Sheriff Overton enthusiastically led us through the Farmville jail, a two-story brick building located behind the courthouse which looks something like a cross between the infirmary and gym number three. It can properly hold 28 or 29 people, though on occasion there have been as many as forty occupants. In 1969, 16,107 meals were prepared by trustees at an average cost of 23¢ per meal. The basic menu is set by the state. Since food can be stored in the jail's freezer, it is possible to take advantage of food sales. For example, not long ago the jail was able to get cut rates on chicken.

OFF-WHITE EVERYWHERE
Inside, the walls are off-white everywhere, perhaps to lighten a natural gloominess. None of us expected to see the prisoners, but we not only saw them, we were able to step inside an unoccupied exercise area and several empty cells. If you complain about the plainness of the dormitories, go down and visit the jail. Picture yourself a prisoner. You sit in a cell which seems to be composed entirely of metal. There are a sink and a toilet in one end of the cell — with no privacy, of course. There may be an exercise area adjoining your cell which has about twice the area of the cell itself. Unless you are merely a "town drunk" in for the night only, you will have a two-inch mattress on an iron shelf to sleep on. (The drunks have no mattresses because they often catch them while smoking.) You may, as many prisoners do, have a grumpy deck of cards to play with, or perhaps a dirty book to read. Like not, you will spend much time just sitting — or sleeping. You may or may not have one or more cellmates. You might have a visitor during visiting hours; otherwise your only contacts with the outside world are the policemen and, on rare occasions, interested outsiders such as the college newspaper staff who want to let the students know about what goes on in town. Think about that, next time you get the urge to run your fencing fold through the midnight furniture-mover upstairs.

Dept. Of Education To Sponsor Second Educational Forum

The Department of Education at Longwood College will sponsor the second in a series of three educational forums Thursday, March 12 at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffers Auditorium. Guest speaker will be Miss Dorothy L. Gibboney, former superintendent of schools in Roanoke, Va. Miss Gibboney's topic will be the role of women in public administration.

Mr. Dalton, Director of Special Services, explained that the purpose of these forums is to bring practitioners to inform education students of the different aspects of teaching.

St. Patrick Charms Irishmen, Snakes With Shamrocks

Today is the day that all the Irish and those who aren't so Irish celebrate St. Patrick's Day. Few people, however, really know something about St. Patrick. Born about 389 A.D., St. Patrick was taken by Irish pirates from his home in Scotland to Ireland where he spent six years as a shepherd, for an Ulster chieftain. During this time he became a devout Christian. Hearing voices which commanded him to escape, St. Patrick made a 200-mile journey to the coast, sailed to France and became a monk. He soon had another vision which told him to return to Ireland and spread the Gospel. All in all, Saint Patrick established more than 300 churches and baptized approximately 120,000 people.

Many legends have arisen about this man. One of the most popular legends tells how he charmed all of the snakes in Ireland to come to the seashore where they drowned. The shamrock, so one legend says, was used by Saint Patrick to illustrate the Trinity.

Ten Students Work On Projects For Credit And Honors

The Honors Committee announces that there is currently an active Honors Program in progress on the campus. The ten students — from six departments — now enrolled in the program, their topics, and their advisors are as follows:

Sharon Bourne: Virginia Immigration, 1865-1890 (Dr. Etheridge)
Sharon Brown: Gov. Henry Carter Stuart (Mr. Couture)
Susan Davenport: Introduction to Portraiture (Miss Leitch)
Mary Alice Elwang: The Great Dismal Swamp (Mr. Mortimer)
Beverly Hampshire: Respiration Changes in Fish (Dr. Scott)
Carol Mcullen: Absurdist Drama of Max Frisch (Mr. Sandidge)
Margaret Nuccols: Effectiveness of High School Counseling (Mrs. Wacker)
Mary Palmer: Oedipus Myth in Literature (Dr. Hooker)

Gwendolyn Robinson: Organic Unit in Hemingway (Dr. Sowder)
Vivian Whitted: Herman Melville Reconsidered (Dr. Frank)

These students presented their topics to the Honors Committee for approval last spring and have been working during this academic year on their research and writing. Upon completion of their projects these students will receive six hours of credit. Additionally, if they pass an oral exam on their topics, they will be graduate with honors in their major fields.

The Honors Committee urges the faculty to continue their support of the program by encouraging a new group of students to enter it during this semester, in preparation for next year. For further information the faculty may consult the college catalogue, pages 79-80, or any of the following members of the Honors Committee:

Shirley O'Neill, Chairman; Darrell Harburn, Jack Hardy, Charlotte Hooker, Lee Land, Mary Alice Whaley and Susan Yeatts, Student Representatives.

In following editions, THE ROTUNDA will interview each student working on an honors project.

Union Vespers Feature Current Issue; Guests Discuss Drugs

Union Vespers will be held March 18 at 6:45 in the Wesley Foundation building. Three distinguished guests, Miss Elizabeth Robinson, Dr. Ebbe Curtis Hoff, and Rev. Wayne Womer, will comprise a panel speaking on the topic, "Drugs."

Also, she is interested in activities which interpret alcoholism as an illness and in enlisting citizen interest in supporting programs of treatment and prevention. She has also lectured throughout the United States.

Dr. Ebbe Hoff is professor of Psychiatry and Physiology at MCV. He is medical director of the Bureau of Alcohol Studies and Rehabilitation at the State Health Department.

He received his B.S. degree (summa cum laude) at the University of Washington; his B.A. (Honors), M.A., Ph.D., B.M., B. Ch., and M.D., at the University of Oxford. Dr. Hoff received his L.R.C.P. from the Royal

Players And Jongleurs To Present "Summer Brave"

The Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs will present William Inge's "Summer Brave," the rewritten and final version of the Pulitzer Prize winner, "Homicide," in the Jarman Auditorium on March 19, 20, and 21 at 7:30 p.m.

The play deals with Hal (Rick Vaughan), a discontented vagabond, and his effect on the Owens family; Flo (Belinda Brugh), the forceful protesting mother; Madge (Carol Leacock), her beautiful daughter, and Millie (Joyce Sanders), her rebellious adolescent daughter. Ken Shick plays Alan, the banker's son, who is Madge's fiancé, and Hal's old college friend. Joyce Foster plays the optimistic and romantic next door neighbor, Mrs.

Potts. Lyn Snyder is Rosemary, the disenchanted, spinster schoolteacher, and F. M. Hite is Howard, her sympathizing victim. The set, designed by Dr. Patton Lockwood, is a realistic one — something that has not been seen on the Jarman stage for several seasons.

The music used in the play is provided by Mike Edging and his group who come from Prince Edward County. The sound for the play will take advantage of Jarman's new stereo sound system.

Tickets for the play are one dollar. Tickets for students may be obtained from the box office on the night of the performance by presenting their I.D.'s at the box office in Jarman.

Mr. Sneiderman points out a few hints in stage for his drama students.

Modern Theory Of Drama Basis For Current Education

By LINDA FLOYD

A newcomer to the speech and dramatic arts department this year is Mr. Harvey Sneiderman. Earning a bachelor's degree in Psychology from the University of Connecticut, Mr. Sneiderman got into drama completely on the spur of the moment.

While associated with a stock broker's firm in New York City, Mr. Sneiderman got tired of the 9 to 5, dark-suit routine. While walking down the street one day, he spied a sign reading School of the Theatre. On impulse, he went in for an interview. Although he had never seen a play until after college and always thought that drama was for sissies, Mr. Sneiderman decided to go to drama school and studied at The School of the Theatre for two years. He has also studied directing under Gene Franklin.

Other background for the present position which Mr. Sneiderman holds includes working in an off-Broadway house and summer stock, touring the country in shows, and being resident actor at a girls' school in New York state. He is presently a member of the Actors' Equity Association, a professional union.

Mr. Sneiderman expresses a preference for working with girls. "Girls," he says, "are easier to work with. They're more dramatic, more malleable, and take direction easier. All in all, they have more to offer in terms of drama."

Education provides fundamentals and techniques of drama, but it is only by being involved in as many things and ways as possible that one gets real experience in the field. Mr. Sneiderman directed "The Adding Machine" here last semester and will direct "Six Characters in Search of an Author" this semester. This summer he hopes to work somewhere in summer stock.

There is definitely a need for good drama in colleges. In recent years there's been a rapid growth with more student plays, more originality, and more interest. However, Europe is still ahead of us. They seem to have a sense of adventure, whereas we are bogged down in our racial problems, economic ones, etc.

Mr. Sneiderman would like to see a new form of audience-actor relationship. We should do away with the audience on one side; we need something new; drama does not go out to the people any more. Drama should be exciting and mysterious, there's presently a lack of spontaneity in plays. We need a new way to present plays, not necessarily offering entertainment, but rather confrontation.

While in New York, Mr. Sneiderman had 30 jobs in three years and a variety of experiences. The first year he lived quite luxuriously, but the last year he decided to live the life of a vagrant and thereby experience the lowest form of status. Consequently, he existed on $1.00 per week for an entire year. Living on a loaf of bread for three or four days and sleeping in parks, Grand Central Station, etc., he recalls the experiences as "very painful, but worthwhile." By experiencing the lowest form of life, Mr. Sneiderman feels that he can more fully appreciate the things that he now has. A newlywed, Mr. Sneiderman says that he is "Very happy," wants to maintain his professional status, and work at his first love, directing.

Balcony To Be Added In June $45,000 For Construction

In the midst of unbelievably rapid and tremendous expansion, renovation, and construction, one institution appears to have been overlooked. Students are quite curious concerning the future of our dining hall. Being such a central and dominant part of campus activity, it is obvious that something must be done to coordinate its growth with the rest of the school. General opinion had it that a cafeteria was to be built near the Curry dormitories to serve the 800 students to be residing there, but this was merely rumor.

In the near future the existing dining facilities will be renovated and expanded. It actually involves two separate projects. The first project provides for the addition of a new balcony in the present dining hall. It will be built at the south end between the east and west balconies. This will begin in June in order to seat 124 more students next fall. The total amount designated for construction and the purchasing of accessories of $45,000. The second project will begin next winter. It will serve to enlarge, air-condition, and carpet the dining hall and the new west wing to be built at the same time. Next year the students will enjoy a completely modernized and comfortable dining hall.

The Longwood girls were accompanied by Miss Fath, the varsity lacrosse coach, who has high hopes for a winning season this year.

Saturday afternoon games mixed all three skill levels: beginner, intermediate, and advanced, for a series of 25 minute games.

Lacrosse tryouts are being held this week, with the girls who have been coming out for practice the past two weeks. Although there are very few experienced players left, the beginners are progressing very well.

The first game is scheduled for April 14, 1970, at 4 p.m. against Lynchburg College on Barlow field here at Longwood.

Finishing its season, the Longwood basketball team participated in a Sports Day last weekend at Westhampton College in Richmond.

Sixteen teams were present and each team played three games. Longwood defeated VCU 37-35 in their first game and came back to win over Mary Baldwin 38-28 in their second contest. But in their third game the "Blue and Whites" were downed by Old Dominion University 42-24.

Junior Lynne Coleman and freshman Sue Manahan were among eleven players for the Sports Day.

In their last game of the regular season the Longwood team beat Sweet-Briar College 74-38 as the "Blue and Whites" completely dominated the game. Not only did the Longwood team lead the scoring but they collected 49 rebounds to Sweet Briar's 25.

Leading the Longwood scorers was Sue Manahan with 22 points, Lynne Coleman and Judy Turner collected 10 points each, Carolyn Thompson led the rebounders with 15 as Gail Viro had 22 points for Sweet Briar.

In the second game the Longwood second team topped Brookville High School 52-24. Marcia Trench and Doty Bohannon led the scoring for the "Blue and Whites." Doty had 19 points and Marcia had 15. Doty Bohannon and Fran Anthony led the rebounding as they combined to pull down 23.

The Longwood basketball team ended its season with a 11-2 record.

Miss Longwood 1970?

Contestants will soon be vying for the Miss Longwood title. All it takes is a little nerve, a talent, a good character, poise, personality, intelligence, charm, and beauty of face and figure. Most of all it takes a girl who would like to face the most fun filled year of her whole life. She will try for a $200 scholarship, valuable presents, the crown of Miss Longwood, and a chance to vie for the Miss Virginia title. A girl only needs eight students to sponsor her, and a $5.00 deposit to Sue Rinaldi, general chairman, in Stubbs 116 by March 18.

Fencers Attend Area Meet; Miss Bush Wins Third Place

Miss Sally C. Bush, instructor of Health and Physical Education and coach of the varsity fencing team at Longwood, captured third place in the open division of the Intercollegiate Fencing Tournament held at Randolph-Macon Woman's College this weekend. Miss Bush defeated fencers from various colleges throughout the United States. First place in this division went to the coach of Randolph-Macon and second place went to the coach of Penn State.

Longwood College's first and second teams also competed in the tournament. Although they did not come home with any trophies, they played well and defeated various schools in the tournament. "Compared with last year's results, the Longwood team has greatly improved, and has hopes of bringing home some awards next year," said fencer Sue Meador.

North Carolina State won the first team division, Madison College the second, while Mary Washington captured the novice honors. Results of the individual student division were: Madison College, first, and Randolph-Macon Woman's College, second and third.

Colleges participating in the tournament included schools from Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and North Carolina.

This fencing meet ended the season for Longwood College varsity team. There will be, however, a novice competition between Westhampton and Longwood College beginning fencing class here, Saturday, March 21, at 10 o'clock in Gym III. Miss Bush will serve as director of the meet, and varsity team members will serve as judges and score keepers.

Withering Words, Retch "Id" Poetry Projected Literary Trends For 70's

By LISE WORTHINGTON

"The word is withering and its place is being taken over by visual images." "The age of versimilitude is finished for some time." "The novel is dead."

These were thoughts expressed at the tenth annual literary festival at Hollins College on March 14. Pessimism in literary fields was not, however, the ruling emotion at the festival. The panel's thoughts on artistic trends in the 70's were a bit gloomy, but in spite of what they proposed, Malcolm Cowley, the well known literary historian and critic, insisted that "story telling has not yet become a primitive skill. In addition, Howard Nemerov, the creative poet, proved by reading his poetry and reviewing student poems, that poetry as a literary form was not likely to be dissipated in the 70's."

The stimulating festival began with a very interesting and outstanding panel discussion on "New Directions in the Seventies." The panel consisted of Mr. Louis Rubin, Mr. Daniel Hoffman, Mr. Robert Scholes, and Mr. Walter Sullivan.

Robert Scholes, from the University of Iowa, is the author of several articles, reviews and eight books of criticism. According to Mr. Scholes, time is an unforgivable villain. "One can't live in the past creatively." The creator has to find forms in the present, and literature must be new and vital. In the 70's for example, Mr. Scholes predicts that the successful writers will not be realistic. "Realism has lost its effectiveness. The Existentialist thought, the I and thou, and the I and it formulas are not acceptable any longer. They generate little intellectual activity, only "stock responses." Therefore, the new literary figures must be able to make genuine contact with those around them. Mr. Scholes pointed out that in the late sixties the literary trend of quasi fiction began to interest the public. Those contributing heavily to this non-fiction form were among others, Norman Mailer and Tom Wolfe. In Mr. Scholes' opinion, this type of fiction will continue in the 70's.

Daniel Hoffman from the University of Pennsylvania, has had four books of poetry published. Not only does he write poems which "touch the invisible world behind the visible" but he also deals as a literary critic. Mr. Hoffman feels that it is foolish to try to predict what poets will write in the 70's, for we live in an age in which democracy and industrialism deprive poetry. "The times are anti-verbal, and the word is withering and quickly losing ground to the visual image," Mr. Hoffman posed the question, "How do you get poetry with no language? The results are 'Op art poems, moon dust poems, pot poems, Retch Id poems, revolution poems and thoughts of Chairman poems.' "Unfortunately with this kind of poetry verse become totally ephemeral, and the "power of the word" is lost. Mr. Hoffman does, however, feel that "the resources of art are where the muses sing, and the future poet can still find ways to use poetry's archaic poetry."

Mr. Malcolm Cowley, the current writer in residence at Hollins, presented a very informative and amusing talk on "In Defense of Tale Telling." His speech revolved around the supposed fact that storytelling has lost its privileged place in literature as well as its appeal to the reader. But, Mr. Cowley refuted this idea strongly. With examples of different story types, and general rules to follow, Mr. Cowley proved that the story is a universal object, and that its form will never really be deviated from. Mr. Cowley concluded that life is an excellent place to look for stories, but potential writers just don't know where to look for them. The problem young writers have today is that they have to recognize stories and get them out before life has gotten to them. Thus, Mr. Cowley repeats, "It remains that story telling in whatever form is still the most challenging and richest of the arts."

86th Founders Day Marks Dedication Of Alumnae House

Longwood College's eighty-sixth Annual Founder's Day celebration will be held Friday, March 20, and Saturday, March 21. The weekend will be highlighted by the dedication of the new Alumnae House, and a symposium featuring remarks by members of the Longwood faculty. Other events include a water show by the H2O Club and Corkeettes, and the play "Summerbrave," presented by the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs. An Alumnae luncheon, business meeting, and reception are also planned.

The dedication ceremonies for the opening of the Alumnae House will be held Saturday morning at 10:30 in Jarman Auditorium. Miss Sarah Derder, former chairman of Longwood's Foreign Language Department, will offer dedicatory remarks. The Symposium, featuring the topic "Issues and Answers at Longwood," will be held later the same day at 3 p.m. in the Games Room of Curry. The panel will include Dean Herbert R. Blackwell, Mr. Thomas Dalton, Director of Special Services, Dr. E. Lee Land, and Dr. Jo Leslie Sneller, Dr. William L. Frank, Chairman of the English Department, will be moderator.

Unusual Orchestra But Longwood Ladies Need Better Training

On March 10 the Longwood College Artists' Series presented the Cologne Chamber Orchestra.

The timelessness of great music was shown to best advantage, as well as the diversity of the orchestra's skills. With selections ranging from the Romantic Mendelssohn to the classic Haydn to general favorites, the orchestra displayed their tremendous talents of virtuosity and precision. The orchestra's excellent performance in addition to the variety of selections seemed to appeal to the majority of the audience. The Longwood College Artists' Series should feature more evenings of quality entertainment.

Although both the attendance and the response of the audience was good, the student body and/or the public attending such events need to brush up on a few points of etiquette before future performances. Proper attire, conduct, and appropriate pauses for clapping are areas which should be considered and remedied.

Proposed Talks On Birth Control If Weekenders Club Supported

By PATRICIA LIVERMAN

Mrs. Crandall, dorm mother in Curry, has much to offer to other dorm mamas on Longwood campus. She, along with several students, has been credited with a new activities program that is steadily growing over in the Curry dorm.

One phase of the Activities program is referred to as the Weekenders Club, a suitable title, for the program is basically concerned with girls left in Curry dorm on the weekends. Mrs. Crandall does not consider the Weekenders Club a club, as such. She says that the organization is still in an experimental stage and no officers have been elected.

The purpose of the Weekenders Club is to promote dorm activities, instill hospitality, and encourage philanthropy. The procedure is fairly simple. Those girls interested and available on a weekend night may gather in the games room around 9:00 p.m. where refreshments are made and a program is held. Mrs. Crandall admits that there have been several disappointments as well as numerous successes in these weekend programs. One success consisted of Mrs. Wu holding a talk and discussion on birth control devices. There was such a widespread interest and enthusiasm that there are plans for Mrs. Wu to return with a more detailed talk on the same subject.

The Weekenders Club is only the beginning of other ideas used by Curry dorm. The dorm has accumulated a great amount of clothing which is to be distributed to the needy. Ice cream cones are sold from the Curry kitchen, and so far little profit has been made off this idea; but Mrs. Crandall hopes to see a marked improvement in which proceeds will buy shoes to supplement the accumulated clothing.

To further promote activities, a dorm fee was collected last semester. This idea, on a trial basis, was intended to support dorm activities. Mrs. Crandall feels that each floor should have a special activities chairman in charge of this dorm fee. This chairman would accept the responsibility of fees rather than adding extra responsibility to the hall presidents. Although this suggestion is still on the drawing board, it is being highly considered since there were complications in attaining a dorm fee from each girl last semester. Even with the drawback of lack of interest, a little money was collected in which a Christmas party was held and faculty members entertained.

All of these ideas and activities originated just a short time ago when a few girls, along with Mrs. Crandall, began anticipating life in a high rise. From past experience with a high rise, Mrs. Crandall was aware that numerous girls in a dorm could easily lose the close association the girls once had in a smaller dorm. Using this as the major problem, a solution was reached. The solution, of course, being activities. And Mrs. Crandall has done an excellent job through much effort to make the activities available. All she needs now is the support of the girls to make her efforts pay off.

Idealism Struggles In Triangular Love But Realism Prevails

By MARGARET BLAIR

At a time when the movie trend seems to dwell in the depressing "real life" themes, it is refreshing to see a movie that entertains as does the musical "Camelot." Based on the King Arthur legends, "Camelot" is about far away places and a long ago time. The beautiful costumes and scenery and the well-placed songs make the movie seem like an adult version of Walt Disney's "Sleeping Beauty." "Camelot" is a movie that one can easily enjoy and use to forget the problems of our day and age while watching it.

For those who must be instructed in the ways of life or who must find a moral, "Camelot" also fills these needs. In the character of King Arthur we see a man who is highly idealistic in wanting his people to be civilized. In the characters of Lancelot and Guinevere we see two people who are victims of their own passions, but also troubled by their guilt and love for King Arthur. Each of the three characters shares an uncommon and unique and complicated love for the other two. It is this triangular love that eventually causes the downfall of the three, as well as the workings of King Arthur's ideal kingdom. When all seems to be in destruction and despair and headed for an unhappy ending, we see that although the lives of three main characters are ruined, King Arthur's ideals will continue to live in succeeding generations.

DR. FRANCES BROWN

Dean Brown Resigns Assumes Full-Time Teaching Position

Dr. Frances Brown has resigned her position as Associate Dean of Students and will teach full-time this fall in the English Department.

Dr. Brown, who submitted her resignation last fall, said that she felt, "This was the time I should switch. Time-wise and energy-wise, it is not possible to combine the two (administrative work and teaching)." Dr. Brown stated that the strains in administrative work are not the same as the ones in teaching and that, "I want to go back to teaching full time."

This fall, Dr. Brown will teach two sections of freshman English and two sections of English literature. While Dean, she had taught freshman English for the first four years. While Dr. Brown feels that this was a hard decision to make, she said that, "If I were not going to be here at Longwood, then I would be shedding tears." Dr. Ruth Wilson, Dean of Students, added that, "Although I have known of Dr. Brown's decision for several months, I still have to think of losing her from my staff. She has done an excellent job for all of us and I could not have asked for a more dependable, dedicated and loyal associate than she has been in the years we have worked together. The only small consolation I can think of right now is that she still will be on campus as a member of our faculty."

Lankford Will Be Scene Of Organized Pre-Registration

Preregistration for all of next year will take place in the ABC rooms, April 29-30. The Juniors and Seniors will register on Wednesday and the sophomores on Thursday from 7-11 p.m. At this time colored pictures will be taken for the new ID cards in the Honors Council Room.

After spring break, fall and summer school schedules and instructions will be placed in the mailboxes. The advising period will begin on April 6 and will continue until registration time.

For a more organized registration period, the students will draw a registration number the same night they draw numbers for rooms, April 21. Time will be posted so that students will know which half-hour block to start walking through the line.

Preregistration for the entire year will help in setting up enough sections of required courses.

Preregistration for summer school courses will not take place at this time, but it is advisable to know what courses will be offered in summer school so that the 70-71 registration will be accurate.

Juniors Ring Dance April 11

Gold Room Site Of Festivities Blue Eyed Soul Provide Music

"A Time for Us," the Junior Ring Dance, presented by the Class of 1971, will be held Saturday, April 11, in the Gold Room from 9:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. Music will be provided by "The Blue Eyed Soul," who have played regularly at the Peppermint Lounge, the Golden Garter, and other places. This Virginia Beach group play many different types of music and will play the theme song from "Romeo and Juliet" as the Ring figure is formed. The highlight of the decorations will be a fountain with colored lights. Ivy will also be placed throughout the Gold Room. A professional photographer will be available to take pictures for a low cost.

Ticket sales will begin Tuesday, March 24, before and after lunch and dinner. At this time favors (brandy snifters) and boutonnieres can be ordered. Extra invitations may be purchased.

After the dance, breakfast will be held for the Juniors in the ABC room. Called a "Midnight Brunch," the menu will consist of ham biscuits, party sandwiches, potato chips with dip, and petit fours. For this event, the Juniors have been granted 2:30 late permission.

Glenn Yarbrough Presented In Concert In Jarman Auditorium

Glenn Yarbrough, nationally acclaimed recording star, will be presented in concert by the Junior class, 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. on Saturday, April 11, in Jarman Auditorium. Beginning March 24, tickets will be sold in the new smoker during lunch and dinner for three dollars per person.

Glenn Yarbrough's great professional style has pleased students on many college campuses such as University of Maryland, Georgia Tech, Colorado State, and UCLA. Not only is Glenn well known for his college concerts, but he is also known for his national television appearances on the Ed Sullivan Show. His reviews have been fantastic. Schools who belong to the National Entertainment Conference, including Longwood, send in reviews after every performance on their individual campuses. Glenn's reviews have gone like this:

"Yarbrough's concert was undoubtedly one of the most exciting we have had on our campus in years. He received three standing ovations. The lyrical quality of Glenn's voice is spell-binding - great concert."

Glenn's concerts are filled with a great deal of variety. Not only does he sing the popular songs but he is also known for his renditions of Red McKuen songs. To add to the quality of the concert the Junior class has rented a special stereo sound system. Also, Glenn enjoys remaining after the concert to talk to students. He loves to elaborate on his music, the world situation, or any other topic that is brought up. Recently a group from Longwood attended the National Entertainment Conference in Memphis and reported that Glenn was very interesting to talk to and that he was indeed looking forward to his appearance here at Longwood.

Glenn Yarbrough will be presented in concert April 11, 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. in Jarman. Ticket are $3.00.

Students Question, Gripe, And Discuss At Press Conference

By ETHEL REITER

In an age of social protest, all college campuses are faced with either violent or nonviolent forms of protest. Students challenge academic affairs, personnel matters, financial affairs, capital improvements, and student affairs. They are demanding that colleges be affected by the same forces of social change that are evident in other institutions. There seems to be a spirit of antiletticalism growing on the campuses, an attempt to avoid rational scientific solutions to problems. Bugged down with problems of providing quality in mass education, professional and capable instructors, and an intellectual atmosphere, the administration frequently finds itself overwhelmed with such matters as buildings, parking space, and student social life. Whether these issues are trivial or not, they are of vital student concern, and the power of gripe dominates.

Dining Dilemma

On March 18, at 4:00, in the ABC Room of Lankford Building, the Longwood students utilized one avenue of student-administration confrontation and communication. Topics at President Willett's Press Conference ranged from parking fees and car privileges to alcohol on campus to dining hall problems to censorship of publications. An area of growing concern and complaint lately has been the dining hall. Mr. Jim Treddle, district manager for ARA Slater Company, was available for student questioning. The first inquiry concerned food combinations, and Mr. Treddle explained that a master menu is prepared by a dietician in the Philadelphia office. It is then sent throughout the country where it is subject to change to satisfy regional preferences and tastes. It was pointed out that to operate the dining hall on a meal ticket basis would result in an increase in price. The present contract is based on student volume. If we were to begin paying for our meals on an individual basis a new contract would have to be renegotiated, and the price would jump from 50¢ a meal to approx-mately $1.00. One student expressed dissatisfaction with the blessings before the meal. President Willett said that he would not take any action on this issue unless presented with a court injunction, and then he would follow the majority vote to continue or discontinue the prayers. For those who would like to see an extended breakfast hour, it would be possible for Slater to do this. However, there are schedule conflicts and the resulting increased participation would cause an increase in price. There will be no more continental breakfast on the weekends, and various other improvements are to be investigated to satisfy the students.

Alcoholic Beverages

The topic of selling and possessing alcoholic beverages on campus was again brought up. President Willett showed amazement for this was the first time he had been directly approached by the student body concerning this. He informed the students that the state law prohibits possession of alcohol in a public place such as a street or auditorium, but it is not prohibited on public property such as a dormitory. Students should go to Residence Board and then to Legislative Board to see any action taken on this issue. The Board of Visitors has the final say.

President Willett had several points that had been brought to his attention that he wished to comment upon. The placement files containing evaluative statements and recommendations include only those personally requested. He then discussed parking and automobile problems. The $2.00 charge is not a parking fee but a registration fee, and the funds go towards physical improvement of the parking services. A survey revealed that other state schools charge no less than $5.00. Many have questioned extending the car privileges beyond the senior class. This, of course, depends on the parking space available. When all the construction is finished the problem will be reevaluated, and an answer given

Helms Wins GOP Nomination; Wants 'To Build Better World'

Saturday, March 21, at the Republican District convention in Petersburg, Dr. James M. Helms received the GOP nomination for the 4th Congressional seat. He carried 22 of 23 of the district's localities in his lopsided 62 1/4 to 16 3/4 vote victory over attorney William F. Davis of Suffolk.

Attending this convention from Longwood were Carolyn Cummins, Nona Davis, Marcia Harris, Marge McCormick and Linda Nance. They were among the 150 people to hear Dr. Dorothy Warriner, the district chairman, declare that this was the "great day to be alive, well, and a Republican in the Fourth District" as he called the meeting to order. Also in commenting on the current breakup in the Democratic party he said that we "Don't need any Democrats in the Senate and House or Independent Democrats in the Senate and House, but Republicans supporting the President of the United States without reservation."

Mrs. Dalton To Speak At Educational Forum

By GINGER MORRISON

As third speaker in a series of education forums, Mrs. Virginia L. Dalton will speak on the topic, "Professional Negotiations for Public Education." This program will take place Thursday, March 26, at 7:30 p.m. in Jeffers Auditorium.

Mrs. Dalton's speech is to inform the students and faculty at Longwood about an organization of professional negotiators who meet with public school teachers. The teachers voice their

Dr. Helms was nominated by Roland Walker of Kenbridge who compared him with the men who framed the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. In his seconding speech Webster Andrews of Colonial Heights spoke of Helms' ability as an organizer and leader. Helms' victory was never in doubt and the four votes cast by Prince Edward County gave him the necessary majority. When the voting was completed he had won all the district's counties and all the cities except Chesapeake and Suffolk.

In his acceptance speech Dr. Helms talked of two kinds of conservatives. One kind says "don't move, sit still, if you do anything at all it might make things worse." Then there is his kind who "lives in a real world with real problems, where there are solutions and we can build a better world." He asked that all take the oath that he had, to "elect the best man to every office and to give our country the best government it can have."

complaints or suggestions to the negotiators who in turn talk with the school boards throughout the state. The teachers in this way bring about needed changes in salaries, working conditions, and other problems of mutual interest. Virginia now does not have this negotiating committee, but hopes to in the near future.

Mrs. Dalton is presently Director of Institutional Services of the Virginia Education Association and is State Student Education Association Consultant.

Apathetic Teach-In?

The student apathy movement has gained great impetus on the Longwood campus. But this spring everyone will have a chance to exonerate himself and show how involved and interested Longwood students can be. For, on April 22, there will be an Environmental Teach-In.

This program which is intended to be nation wide will focus on the topic "Man and his Environment." The teach-in is designed to be a forum for students, faculty, and lecturers who are aware and concerned with the ecosystem. Colleges all over the United States are planning programs with discussions, groups, films, exhibits, speakers, and conferences on local and national environmental problems.

Longwood is spite of past apathetic trends will have in conjunction with Hampden-Sydney a very extensive environmental program. Speakers have been invited, panels have been constructed, and the only thing that will be needed during the week of April 22, will be student support. Longwood, get involved! I find it hard to believe that students are not interested in the fact that "mankind is rapidly destroying the very habitat on which he depends for his survival."

Keeping Pace

This past Saturday many Longwood grads came back for Founders Day, and some were astonished at what they thought Longwood was becoming. Now that the dress code and curfews have been changed, it seems that they were wondering what would come next.

Longwood students have not really changed. Granted, the rest of the world has changed considerably in sixty-five years and rules must be adjusted to fit the changing times. In talking with Mrs. Eleanor Abbott Thomas, a class of 1905 alumnae and the earliest class represented at the reunion, we discovered that the 1905 students broke some of the rules too.

Mrs. Thomas let us in on one of her secrets used back in the days of bloomers and middie blouses. Apparently stealing rolls from the dining hall was common then and the girls used to sneak them out under their bulky blouses. There was also a rule that the girls could not cook in their rooms, and Mrs. Thomas cited the case of the matron running up the Rotunda steps yelling, "Eleanor, I smell chocolate," whenever Mrs. Thomas was secretly making fudge.

"We had to be in bed by ten," was another rule, along with the fact that the girls had to have a chaperone even when going to a dentist in town.

Rules and regulations must be changed to keep pace with the changing times and attitudes. Traditions which had value at one time in a small college may become meaningless in a larger one. What had value at one time may not be relevant at another time. Reevaluation must take place. It is far better to make a needed rule change than have the majority disobey the current rules. Alumnae and others should not become upset at new changes made at Longwood, but instead, realize that a change, good or bad, means that someone has at least given thought to a problem and that not as much stagnation is occurring. And after all, is this not what a college is for, to let its students learn by their mistakes and successes.

Meaningful Editorial On Life Is Presented In 'Summer Brave'

Probably the most outstanding aspect of "Summer Brave" was the technical effects. The beautiful set drew applause on two nights as the curtain rose; both houses looked real enough to have practically been lifted off the streets of Farmville. Skillful lighting techniques gave added realism, especially with the dappled effect on the roof. Numerous and varied sound effects made the final touch. For some reason, however, the rooster crow in the third act resulted in a few unexpected chuckles from the audience.

Somewhat it is easy and yet difficult to fault the actors, for they seemed so real that one could find both good and bad points about them. Millie (Joyce Saunders) and Mrs. Potts (Joyce Foster) were well cast and appealed to everyone from the start. Hat (Rick Vaughan) was also well-played, though it has been pointed out that he hardly looks like the sort who could push a heavy bureau around as if it were a feather or attract girls like flies to sugar. Perhaps not, but there is a certain charm to the lone rebel type even if he does not look like Paul Newman. A couple of near-scene-stealers were the school teachers played by Katherine Goodwyn and Martha Ellis, appearing at awkward moments in the play. Lyn Snyder as Rosemary Sydney might have been more convincing if she had looked older, and she and F.M. Hite as Howard were ill-matched in height. F.M. did a good job with his part, however. While Ken Shick fit the image of Alan Seymour, he played the part a trifle thick. Belinda Brugh as Flo fit this reviewer's idea of the part, but her arm motions were at times distracting. Still, people do have annoying mannerisms, and possibly this was an intentional as the repetition of "May all your troubles be little ones."

The play itself was not the most powerful ever produced in Jarman; it seemed merely a slice out of life with nothing resolved in the end. Many of the audience doubtless found themselves asking "Just what is it all about? What is its purpose?" But consider: what is life all about? Perhaps this is the purpose of the play.

Letters To The Editor

Press Conference

To the Editor:
Out of curiosity about what went on at such affairs, I attended the President's press conference on the 18th. The place was packed. Since I had heard nothing about our closing down, hiring Eldridge Cleaver, abolishing the faculty, or the like, the crowd was surprising.

But soon the dawn — food. The spindle of the college universe, the tummy, was under consideration. And what considerations! Three-quarters of the questions asked were of that "Why can't we have?" variety that indicates total failure to give any initial thought to the relevance of money. One wonders if once, anywhere, a student has begun one of these queries with, "Why don't we increase prices so that we can have . . . ?"

Further, doesn't the concern this issue generates raise questions about our priorities? Admittedly, we'll gotta eat, and from cooking my own I know what horrors are possible, but last Wednesday I saw a level of interest that little else here creates. Is this a healthy sign in a college?

Finally, and by far most important, there was the reaction one student received when she asked what justification there was for prayers in the dining hall at a state school. Regardless of one's religious beliefs or lack of them, given a string of recent Supreme Court decisions, this is a most reasonable and relevant question. Yet it was greeted with looks of shock, and following what I feel can reasonably be described as the "putting down" of the questioner, there was a burst of applause. Victory for the mental lock-step.

Trusting that by now I have infuriated your readership, I remain
Sincerely yours,
Gerard Pyle

Loose Wheels

To the Editor,

Kiddle: What makes clunking sounds in the back of state cars? Answer: Loose lug nuts . . . But wait 'til the TIRE comes off.

And that, dear editor and fellow students, is just what happened as a part of the Longwood Concert Choir traveled in a state car towards Williamsburg for a concert Sunday, March 15. It seems that among the standard grips common to students and faculty, that of the state car is one of the most valid. Not only are there rattles, and forbid faulting rattles, but the power brakes are so unpredictable that either one goes through the windshield upon their application, or one simply goes! There have been several incidents where both students and faculty have been involved in mishaps in which the brakes have failed to operate properly. Obviously, this hasn't been considered as too serious by someone's standards. When a student or faculty member has to do a mechanical inspection of the vehicle to be driven that supposedly was done by someone PAID to do this work, the standards need revision. One might say that losing a tire is a freak occurrence. I would concur except for the fact that Sunday's mishap is the third of its nature this year. We were worried by the sound, but we had faith that those who would have us uphold the image of the Longwood Lady would also be a bit more concerned with our safety. It seems that we lose, Ladies. Had it not been for Miss Nancy Parsons' cool handling of the situation, all five of us would either be hospitalized or be dead. When we heard the chassis hit the pavement, Miss Parsons kept the car from going totally out of control, and was able to navigate it until she brought it to a complete stop. Had she as much as breathed on those brakes, the result would have been fatal. Although we were badly shaken, none of us was as much as scratched. Words are inadequate in the expression of thanks we four passengers owe Nancy. When we flagged down the following college bus, the driver did that which we would have been hard-pressed to think of, much less effect. Too, the men who stopped to offer assistance were more than kind, and went out of their way to help.

In my too-light blasting, I do not speak as one without prior knowledge. I have driven these cars. I am aware of the feeling of hitting the steering wheel upon the gentle application of the brakes. I am aware of the helpless feeling one has when trying to guide these cars around a curve, or upon a straight stretch, and having the rear end fish-tail as though this were a new rock dance. Let me state that these cars, driven by many different people with many different driving mannerisms, are subject to an unnatural wear and tear. However, there is NO acceptable nor reasonable excuse for letting these cars leave campus without more than a cursory going-over. Luck and the laws of chance do not forever hold in one's favor. I hope that those connected with those particular channels of operation will kindly get their heads out of the water long enough to do something to remedy this inexcusable negligence and seeming victory with life.

Disgustedly,
Tulita P. Owen.

The Reply

All state vehicles are subject to the same inspection as those privately owned. In addition to this, all reasonable efforts are made to correct known discrepancies and those turned in by the operators of these vehicles. We have now changed from the two-week inspections to that of weekly inspections to try to minimize the possibility of malfunction. We do not have the personnel in numbers or qualifications to thoroughly inspect all aspects of each vehicle each week and must rely on the operators to bring known deficiencies to our attention.

Most of the pool cars come in after working hours and go out the next day without inspection because of the time factor and the requirement for the vehicle.

In an effort to improve this situation, we have requested and the General Assembly has approved the construction of a service building which will house an automotive shop. In addition they have approved the hiring of an automotive mechanic to staff this shop.

It would be helpful if operators would also assist us in making these vehicles as safe as possible to use. Near accidents have occurred when drink bottles have been left on the seat and rolled out under the brake pedal when the operator was trying to stop the vehicle.

Speaking Out

Dear Editor,

I would like to commend Dr. Gibbons on his recent letter concerning the articles which comprise THE ROTUNDA. It's about time someone spoke out. How sad that the first to speak had to be a professor! I agree that more articles about controversial matters concerning college students should be written. THE ROTUNDA still seems caught on a high school level. Is censorship a problem?

Also, in reference to the major accomplishments of the Legislative Board, I am overjoyed to learn that freshmen will be seated at assemblies according to halls so that the hall presidents can count our heads like third graders. As an extra bonus, do we get to march in together and sit in alphabetical order? Again, this fine institution of higher education appears to be run like a high school.

Does anyone else have any ideas?
Sincerely,
Kathryn A. Gray
Freshman

Correct Channel

Dear Editor,

I would like to thank the administration and THE ROTUNDA staff for clearing up the question of censorship at the press conference held on the 18th of March.

The last three issues of THE ROTUNDA based on such controversial subjects as censorship stirred the student body into a wave of support for a "cause" and awareness of the problems at Longwood.

I sincerely hope, now that the controversy of censorship has been resolved, that students will continue to use THE ROTUNDA as a means for airing their views.

Your paper IS a correct channel!

German Student-Instructor Views Students As Immature

By LINDA FLOYD

Heidrun Ottmann, better known to the Longwood student as Heidi, is presently a student-instructor on the local campus. At Longwood under a fellowship-type program, Heidi teaches ten hours per week in the German lab and studies Beginning Spanish and fencing.

Heidi hails from the southern part of Germany. Not only does she speak German, but also English and French as well as having studied Latin for nine years. As a matter of fact, Heidi is majoring in English and French.

The school system in Germany differs a great deal from our own in the U.S. Those students who are going to the university study for four years in elementary school and nine years in high school. During high school they study eleven subjects each year for all nine years. Before going to the university, they must pass an exam, the Abitur, which is a difficult written and oral test in all subjects. Because of the wide background received in high school, the German student studies only in his major at the university.

Heidi says, that in general, Longwood students appear immature in comparison to German students. This she attributes to the fact that Longwood is a girls' school and to the campus-type life. German students are actually older, and there are no campuses at German universities.

Having seen almost all of Europe, Heidi came to the United States so that she could actually talk English. Since her home is in the southern part of Germany, she travels to France frequently and has plenty of opportunity to speak French.

Heidi relates that she is enjoying her visit here very much and says that she would like to come back to the U.S. again for a visit, but probably not to make her permanent home.

Heidi Ottmann, from southern Germany discusses students and school systems in the U. S. and Germany.

Swimmers Display Skill In Annual Watershow

Rattling typewriters and splashes were heard in French Pool on March 18-21 as "The Waterlogue" got off to a wet start. The annual spring water show presented by the H2O Club and Corkettes had nine members, and it was centered around a newspaper theme. The club was assisted in their production by the technical crew composed of Nancy Chase, Pam Lynn, Moogle Terrel, and Bev Thomas.

"Hot Off the Press," written by Patti Coogan, was the first number, with Anne Bishop, Judy Donohoe, Lois Hrubick, Carol Umbdenstock, and Kathy Wilson, Ellen Cahill, Cathy Carr, and Lynn Chamberlin pantomiming a typewriter and performed synchronized water stunts. Linda Campbell, Ann Marie Dailley, Katherine Hepskind, Paige Melhoff, Sandy Oliver, Betsy Raines, Carolyn Starmond, and Cathy Teague became part of a "Crossword Puzzle" as they executed various formations and spelled out several words. Following this came "Comics" written by Lynn Chamberlin. Clowning their way through this number were Lois Hrubick, Cathy Carr, Lynn Chamberlin and Bonnie Jewel. "The Movies" was the highlight of the evening. A duet written and performed by Anne Bishop and Judy Donohoe, it contained many difficult stunts.

The evening was brought to a close in a finale written by Dr. Barbara Smith, the sponsor of the club. All members performed in this number, demonstrating on a large scale their synchronized swimming abilities.

Immigration To Virginia Topic Of Honors Project

Sharon Bourne, an American History major from Waverly, Virginia, is currently enrolled in the Honors Program at Longwood College. The topic of her project is "A Study of Immigration to Virginia Between the Years 1865-1900."

Sharon chose this topic because she is not only interested in American history, but also in social and intellectual history.

She explained that through her research, she found out that there was once an Immigration Association in Farmville. This association had big rallies telling the immigrants that they should not go out west, but should come south instead. After the Civil War, a lot of the young men had been killed and the slaves were moving around, thus causing an unstable labor force. Virginia got worried and tried to get immigrants. "Being the snobs they are," said Sharon, "the Virginians would only accept immigrants from Germany and England; they did not want the Italians in their territory."

Sharon's research has included work with original pamphlets from the state, railroads, magazines, newspapers, and books. She started her research work this fall, but she already had some bibliography accumulated. She hopes to have her project done by the end of April.

When asked about any problems she has had doing her project, she stated, "I've had to make a lot of trips to Richmond to get information, but other than that, I have had very few difficulties. The main problem has been in finding time. I've had to use a self-discipline program."

Sharon says she is excited about presenting her paper before the honors board, but feels she will do all right on it. "When you have put as much time into something as I have into this project, you sort of know your topic. The benefits outweigh the disadvantages, but this is not a project for someone who doesn't like to work," she commented.

Sharon plans to attend graduate school after graduation. She has been accepted at University of North Carolina, University of New Mexico and the University of Virginia. She has also applied to Vanderbilt, but has not decided to which school she wishes to go. Sharon plans to teach introductory courses in American History at a junior college.

She has been very active in school activities while at Longwood. Sharon is president of Pi Gamma Mu, past secretary of the German Club, and SA editor of the Gyre. She is also a member of Alpha Psi Omega, Kappa Delta Pi, and Alpha Lambda Delta honorary fraternities, the Longwood Players, and the Young Republicans.

The 1970 basketball intramurals were brought to an end last Thursday after a week of hard fought games between the classes. Although the teams are equally matched, the junior class team overcame their opposition and went on to win points toward the class cup. The sophomores came in second place, followed by the freshmen, and senior class teams, respectively.

The games were officiated by the junior physical education majors and the players on the teams were rated by members of the varsity basketball team for the purpose of selecting the teams for color basketball.

Representing the Red and Whites are Bobbie Thurston, Darlene Almond, Gretna Harrison, Chris McDonnell, Jo Ann Canada, Suzanne Turner, Barbara Paxton, Diane Padgett, Barbara Jenkins, and Becky West.

The Green and White team is composed of Janet Harpold, Jane Richardson, Carol Chory, Sherry Williams, Lynn Sheretz, Diane Padgett, Barbara Jenkins, and Becky West.

Sweetwater Rock Festivals Avoids Wood Stock's Faults

You were at Woodstock! Well, you ain't seen nothin' yet.

In the pop culture records, 1969 will be noted as the true dawning of the Age of Aquarius. At least 400,000 people from all over the nation met in an upstate New York woods, in an enormous commune, and named themselves the "Children of Woodstock."

The above reference is to the Folk-Rock festival at Woodstock that defied the fundamentals of mob behavior through happiness, peace and complete freedom.

In viewing all the problems, financial losses, and sleepless nights caused by the Woodstock Music and Art Fair, one would believe the country had seen its last great rock festival. On the contrary, Mike Forman and Burt Cohen of Concert Hall, Inc., are going to produce a festival this Easter that may make Woodstock look small in comparison.

The Festival, Winters End, will be held in Sweetwater, Florida, just a few minutes outside of Miami. It is budgeted for close to a million dollars and is scheduled to continue for three days. The idea is to make the rock festival safe and efficient while keeping all of Woodstock's good aspects.

According to Burt Cohen, to run a good festival you can't think of profits all the time. "Of course there is money in presenting rock festivals," he said, "but profits should come from the gate and nowhere else." Overcharging for items purchased on the festival site simply breeds resentment. Once you have your ticket there should be no hidden charges.

At Woodstock the roads were so blocked by traffic that food and supplies could not be brought in. At Sweetwater two main highways run less than one-half a mile from the festival site so food shortages should pose no problem.

Tickets, priced at $20 for the full three days, will be limited. Food and drinks will be sold at concession stands and at specially built supermarkets. Whereas Woodstock had 300 acres, Sweetwater has over 600 acres, for the same purposes, so it appears the basic problems have been taken care of.

As for security, The Hog Farm and other communal groups will comprise the majority, there will be no police or state intervention at the festival. The promoters have also hired two hundred equestrian units to patrol the festival and maintain order without violence.

The promoters want the festival, entertainment-wise, to run itself. Groups will be free to visit the audience, and will be afforded the best possible equipment to perform with. Appearing in concert will be: Canned Heat, Joe Cockler, Country Joe and the Fish, Grand Funk Railroad, Grateful Dead, B.B. King, Richie Havens, Sweetwater, Iron Butterfly, Mountain, Kinks, Little Richard, John Mayall, Steve Miller, Johnny Winter, Sly and The Family Stone, Ten Years After, Ike and Tina Turner, and anyone else who turns up ready to perform.

It seems everything is under control and destined for success. Publicity has begun, in the same manner as for Woodstock, via underground press, FM radio, and school newspapers. By March 27 all will be anxiously waiting for the Sweetwater Rock Festival's opening.

IRVING HOWE

American Literature Topic Of Lecture April 9, ABC Room

Irving Howe, professor of English at Hunter College, will be guest lecturer at Longwood on April 9, at one o'clock in the ABC Room of Longwood. His topic will be "Anarchy and Authority in American Literature."

Howe, who is also an editor and critic, is the author of "William Faulkner: A Critical Study," "Sherwood Anderson: A Critical Biography," "Politics and the Novel," "Steady Work: Essays in the Politics of Democratic Radicalism," and "Orwell's Nineteen Eighty-Four: Test, Sources, and Criticism."

He is the co-author of "The U.A.W. and Walter Reuther," and "The American Communist." Howe is also the editor of the "Dissent" and contributing editor of the "New Republic."

Mr. Howe has received the Kenyon Review fellowship, the Longview Foundation prize for literary criticism, and the National Institute of Arts and Letters award.

He is a former instructor at Brandeis and Stanford Universities. The entire study body is invited to attend.

Broadway Comedy To Be Presented On Local Campus

By PATRICIA LIVERMAN

On Tuesday, April 7, 7:30 p.m., The Artist Series will present Barter Theater of Virginia in "The Hasty Heart," a very successful comedy-drama. This three act-play not only ran for two years on Broadway, but is also rated as one of the most popular plays from Barter.

"The Hasty Heart" was written by John Patrick, who is also famous for "The Curious Savage," and "Tea-house of the August Moon." Each of his plays have been successful on Broadway. Patrick has a tendency to instill within each play "arm" sensations that appeal to the audience. "The Hasty Heart" is no exception.

The play is centered around a wounded soldier and his experiences in a hospital. His experiences are even more interesting because he falls in love with his nurse. All are invited to attend "The Hasty Heart."

Longwood Students Compare Family Style Vs Cafeteria Service

In order to give Longwood students a chance to compare Slatter Service, we have arranged for an exchange program with Hampden-Sydney. Under this program Longwood students will be able to compare cafeteria service to family style and the preparation of food to that of Hampden-Sydney. The system will be worked out so there will be no change; a certain number of boys will eat in our dining hall one night and the same number of girls at Hampden-Sydney the following night. Transportation will be provided. The program will begin sometime after spring break and at this time specific details will be given.

It is our hope that this program will not only enable students to compare Slatter Service, but will also improve relationships between the schools.

at that time. It is fairly definite though that Freshmen will not share this privilege. The Car Committee recently proposed the amendment allowing out-of-state juniors to have cars on campus, and they hope to extend this to the entire junior class.

Tuition Increase

Concerning finances, the tuition will go up from 340 dollars to 400 dollars with no anticipated increase in board. Our total cost is still beneath other schools.

Due to a recent incident concerning a state vehicle, additional safety precautions are to be enacted. While a group of students was traveling from Williamsburg a tire came off the car. The car is now in Richmond being thoroughly inspected, and the tires will be checked every week from now on.

There has been quite a bit of doubt and questions concerning the bomb scare. President Willett referred students to his statement in the March 17 issue of the Rotunda. He did want to remind everyone that bomb scares are a criminal offense, and the warped individuals who resort to such crimes delight in reading about them in the newspapers. This is the reason the event was kept from publicity.

Longwood has more avenues of communication than any other college, and the press conference is one such avenue to discuss long range and pertinent problems. The administration is extremely willing to help the students, but they must personally be aware of the problems, thoughts, and opinions,

Lankford Union Provides Numerous Student Activities

Did you go to the Bridal Show? Have you been to a mixer lately? These are just a few of the many events that the Lankford Student Union has sponsored this year. With the help of its new coordinator, Tim Brown, the Student Union has worked actively to offer more student entertainment during the past semester.

The Lankford Student Union was organized last spring under the leadership of Mary Curtis Conrad. During the summer months plans began for weekend movies, concerts, and mixers to make the coming fall weekends more special for those students staying on campus. Exam time found the Student Union active in preparation for study breaks and tension relievers in the form of Road-runner cartoons and Flash Gordon series. The second semester calendar shows weekends filled with such movies as "The Graduate," "Man for All Seasons," and "Georgy Girl." These films are brought to the students at a minimum charge, for the purpose of the Lankford Student Union isn't to make a profit but to raise the caliber of films presented on campus. Besides presenting these films, the Student Union has sponsored fashion shows, art shows, and appliance presentations for student enjoyment.

A new objective of The Lankford Student Union is supporting each individual class in activities and money-making projects. In February they assisted the sophomore class in a mixer on Valentine's Day and gave them the use of The Lankford Building for a slumber party.

Sponsoring May Day activities is currently the center of attention for the Lankford Student Union. There will be the traditional Maypole Dance and skit for the May Court. The Student Union has worked to create new activities and entertainers to lead to the festivities of the weekend. Tentative plans are being made for a concert following the skit and the reception in the Gold Room. To cap the weekend a mixer with Ron Moody and the Centaurs is planned for Saturday night in the Gold Room.

Desire To Learn

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter, "Bluebird-Cardinal Rivalry," in the March 17 issue of THE ROTUNDA. I disagree with the author's conception of the "kidger garden spirit" prevailing at Longwood. Yes, there is spirit at Longwood — the spirit of learning accented by the spirit of the Blue and White. The desire to learn is most certainly the reason that most girls go to college. This is true because unlike high school a choice is involved — first, one must decide whether or not to go to college, and second, which college. Girls do not apply to Longwood because of its "playground" activities. Students come with the desire to learn but why not make it as pleasant as possible? Who enjoys all work and no play? There are not many girls' schools left with as much spirit as Longwood. It is this spirit which we will remember and will make us want to return on Founder's Day.

This is a democratic country and no one is twisting another's arm to participate in traditional activities. If the author wishes to refrain from these activities, that's her choice, but don't knock the rest of us who believe in the spirit of Longwood College.

Sincerely yours,
Carol Ellerton

Reasonable Priced Tearoom Offered To Students, Faculty

Tearoom Luncheon provides a congenial atmosphere.

"A Tearoom, widely known for its delicious food, is operated by Slater Food Service Management and is located in Ruffner Hall. Here, students, visitors and faculty members may obtain meals at reasonable cost."

Despite this friendly advertisement in the Longwood College Catalogue it was with slight trepidation that we approached the supposed faculty bastion. But, the moat was crossed with no trouble and we found the true castle hospitality awaiting us. It was true that the tearoom at the time of our entering, was completely filled with faculty members (25 of them) but they neither raised their swords nor gathered the troops. Consequently we are able to report to you a little about Castle Keep.

The tearoom proper is made up of eight tables that seat four and two that seat eight. They are much more spacious than those found in the dining hall. The menu in the tearoom consists of different Slater selections, all prepared from a central kitchen. Sandwiches and salads make up most of the menu but a few hot meals can be ordered. In order to get the food, a meal ticket is filled out and presented to the kitchen. You serve your self water, and wait for the waitress to do the rest of the work. The wait-

The following are suggestions on what an "individual can do as a consumer, as a worker, and as a voter," to solve some of the problems in the environmental crisis. Speakers will be on the Longwood campus for four days beginning Monday, April 20, until Thursday, April 23, to discuss this crisis. Teach-Ins will be held on many college campuses on April 22, which has been designated as the First National Environmental Teach-In.

These suggestions have been reprinted from "The Environmental Handbook," edited by Garrett De Bell.

1. Mail in any envelopes you get in advertisements for ecologically undesirable products. Each one sent in costs the polluter about seven cents of his profits.

2. When you go to the supermarket for milk, take an empty jug with you. At the check-out stand, pour milk from the disposable carton into your recycled jug; give the empty "disposable" carton to the checker, and explain your action to him. This type of action could be done with other goods packaged in nonrecyclable containers.

3. Conservation research organizations should be established to do research on the environmental effects of various products and practices. Such organizations could develop data on which companies produce the most pollution, so that pressure could be brought on offenders. They can encourage consumers to consider not only the quality of the product but also the total environmental effects of its production, distribution and disposal. How about an "Earth House-keeping Seal of Approval" for products with no harmful side effects of production, use and disposal?

4. Mechanized recreation, such as using snowmobiles, dune buggies, power boats, trail bikes and jeeps, is the epitome of a trend which is going in exactly the wrong direction. With our current population increase and the even greater increase in leisure time that people desire to spend in recreation, space should not be wasted. Mechanized forms of recreation use

Glenn Yarbrough In Concert Visions Of Humanity In Songs

By ETHEL REITER

The assignment was to interview Glenn Yarbrough, to find out some details of his life, his music, and his ideas. A few pictures were taken, a few friendly but formal questions were asked, and then he was hurried away in order to reach another engagement. Lacking such facts as previously mentioned there seemed to be little hope for a new story. Obviously, the interview was not substantial, but perhaps the man's performance and music provide a much more meaningful and revealing story.

Glenn Yarbrough resents the fact that no one has ever attempted to make a distinction between a college concert and a regular concert. He condemns the middleman who jacks up prices for a college concert. Therefore, his purpose is to define these two types of concerts. He hopefully plans to organize a network of entertainers to perform for college students. He is concerned with the quality of entertainment that students receive. Glenn Yarbrough works for an exact and standard price and prefers to have no guarantees in the contract. He also would agree to work for a lower price if a smaller college is unable to raise enough funds. Glenn Yarbrough is responsible for the popularity of several celebrities, such as Bill Cosby and Rod McKuen. His sincere concern for honest and professional entertainment is evident in his college concerts, and it touches the audience.

It's time to go, to run, hurry, faster, get the tickets, and grab your seats. In a smothering, simmering, busy auditorium you passively await the entertainment that you have paid for. Socialized, civilized, mechanized - you are a part of the audience, you continue in your locked-up existence; the stage is another world. But if you peel the plastic from your eyes, from your mind, you can enter those lost realms of sensation. The songs of Glenn Yarbrough weigh man in a balance - his worth, his limitations, his possibilities. They present a dualistic view of life, success and failure, hope and despair, love and loneliness. His deep, powerful, and soothing voice creates a lyrical beauty in his songs, which arouses a tear and a smile of understanding.

The Meaning Of Respect

Respect is a word that is constantly brought up in our homes and in our society. We often say we have respect for our families or for Mr. Jones, but are we sure that we know the meaning of the word we're using? Let us evaluate this word and see if our meaning and the dictionary meaning are similar or different.

Respect is defined as "regard for and appreciation of worth; honor and esteem; demeanor or deportment indicating deference, courteous regard, as to our elders." How often have our parents said, "If you had any respect for me you wouldn't do . . ." We often ask why our parents deserve any respect from us. What have they ever done for us? They've brought us into a world of hardships and trouble and we wonder why. A world with war and hatred doesn't seem to be a place where people would bring up loved ones. But, the majority of us make it. We are loved, nurtured, and cared for. Our parents shield, protect, and guide us the best way they can. As for the hardships and problems, they are just part of growing up. Life cannot be all peaches and cream. Our parents do their best to give us the things they never had and to prepare us for the hard life ahead of us. Yet, many of us continue to ask what our parents have done for us. Unfortunately, some of us realize the worth of our parents when it is too late.

Respect for our elders is very important. Older people are especially impressed when a younger person respects them for their age and for the knowledge they have of life and of the problems in the world today. Teachers and professors deserve our respect, too. We must realize their position and their authority.

"Conformity to duty or obligation compliance or observance" is another definition of respect. Laws were made to protect people against wrong doings. They were not made to be broken, although many of us do so every day. We as future citizens must accept the responsibility of upholding the laws of our state and federal governments. Even though our government and its laws are not perfect, we must admit that other people are worse off than we are. We must cooperate with and respect the laws of our land in order to make our society a better place in which to live.

Respect does not end with our parents, our elders, and our government laws. We must also respect ourselves. We want others to respect us, and in order for this to happen, we must consider others when we do things. We must think first how our actions will effect others. We must respect others for their beliefs, even though they differ from ours. We should respect ourselves enough to want people to have a good opinion of us.

Respect is a word that will never leave our vocabulary. We have evaluated it; now you must decide what this word means to you. Think about this and see if you live up to the true meaning of respect.

— M. F. B.

Trying Harder

Finally someone has done something! Now we can actually see proof of what a Longwood Committee is doing.

The dining hall committee and the dining hall should be commended for trying. After being confronted face-to-face with a few comments about the food and dining hall procedures, the dining hall was able to take action. It now knew what the students' complaints were. The students had finally made themselves heard to someone who could do something about their gripes. And now the dining hall was able to explain to the students what they were working on; what they could do something about; and what was impossible.

In order to appease the students who had complained about receiving cold food at the March birthday dinner, the food was served buffet style at the April birthday dinner. Student were to be in Sunday attire, which seemed to be the main complaint, but all went well for the students. The dinner was well planned. There were several lines which allowed for a minimum of waiting, and the food was arranged attractively on the buffet tables.

The dining hall has also started having hot breakfasts on Sunday and continental breakfasts served after the regular hot breakfasts on weekdays.

The dining hall has put forth a large effort to please the students and should be commended for it.

Both the dining hall and dining hall committee should serve as a good example to other committees whose accomplishments have not yet been seen by members of the student body.

Letters To The Editor

Childish Students

To the Editor:

Mr. Pyle (letter of 25 March) is not the only person who notices how astonishingly childish many Longwood students often are. There are a few (at least) students who (for instance) take seriously the question of justification for lunch-time prayers in a state school.

Probably Mr. Pyle did not realize that at the meal immediately after the press conference during which the question was raised, an obviously audible scattering of "Longwood Ladies" added to the mealtime prayer their own sardonic blessing for the girl who had had the audacity to ask if there might not be a hole in the dike of Christian conservatism that surrounds this college.

This sort of reaction from the Longwood Laughs to a serious, basic, human question may well open up the flood gates to a whole ocean of not-so-conservative and not-so-Christian opinion. Those who plan to be firm in their faith had better look around for high ground.

Means Of Expression

Dear Editor:

A freshman commended me for writing to THE ROTUNDA—a senior warned me that I would get myself into a lot of trouble if I continued to write letters to THE ROTUNDA urging the editor and her staff to publish controversial articles! (Is that what is meant by the generation gap?) No, I did not ask the senior what she meant by "trouble."

Although I believe students should use the proper channel as mentioned by Dr. Willett in a recent letter to the editor, students do have the right to express themselves through another proper channel, their school newspaper, and I would urge them to do so. After having talked with several people, I am of the opinion that THE ROTUNDA is not censured but I do believe the newspaper staff is under pressure to print and not print certain information. This pressure also seems to extend to many students who are reluctant to express themselves in writing.

Pressure is a part of life. If the students at Longwood expect to take the right places in this world, then it is their obligation to start asserting themselves by making their ideas and opinions known, regardless of whatever pressure is involved. The newspaper is a student newspaper and it should express the concerns and interests of the students. If the newspaper cannot or will not represent the student body, it should cease to exist.

I would also like to comment on Mr.

Pyle's letter in the March 25 issue of THE ROTUNDA. No, Mr. Pyle, you did not infuriate me, one of your readers. Students have been griping about food for centuries. Why do you think the Longwood students should be any different? I gripe, too, as Mr. Ammonet will probably tell you. Personally, I don't believe there is anything unconstitutional about students praying before each meal at a state school, providing it's done on a voluntary rather than a required basis. This is not a "victory for the mental lockstep." I consider it a victory of another kind—that one student on campus was willing to express herself publicly on a problem that was bothering her by using one of the proper channels open to her (the President's Press Conference). If she so desires, she can continue to express herself through THE ROTUNDA and through other channels. If only other students would do the same.

Sincerely yours,
Dr. Robert D. Gibbons

Equal To Others

Dear Editor,

Recently there has been a lot of controversy and many complaints on the campus. First, I would like to say that Longwood is not as bad a place as all the complaints make it seem to be. If it was such a bad place many of us would not be here. But we should be glad that there are avenues, such as THE ROTUNDA, to express our complaints. The administration, faculty, and students can all see how each feels. With this type of communication we can see what others are thinking, and in turn, act accordingly. Longwood has frequently been ranked as "equal to other institutions," but with this communication, we should be more able to provide perfection and satisfaction for all.

Sincerely,
Lydia White McCarthy

Margaret Nuckols Hopes Her Findings Will Aid Counselors

Margaret Nuckols is one of several girls working on the Honors Program. She is soon to complete her project in the field of high school counseling.

Margaret chose this subject for several reasons. First of all, she is going into counseling as a career. This area has been an interest and question to her for several years. It was something that posed a challenge to her and was an area that needed questioning.

The question of values of counseling has been on her mind for about three years. She started her research for her project about one and a half years ago. She began by doing a literary search for all background information on counseling. She then incorporated all possible aspects of counseling into a questionnaire. This was administered to new freshmen in colleges. This questionnaire was to estimate the value of high school counseling. It was meant to collect the opinions of students rather than facts.

In the years to come Margaret will incorporate this information into her own counseling on the college level. She also hopes to refine and standardize her findings and analyses more completely so that other guidance counselors can use this information to recognize weaknesses in their own guidance systems. She also plans to send her results to the State Director of Guidance Counseling for possible assistance.

In conclusion Margaret highly recommends the Honors Program to students at Longwood. She commented that it was difficult but also rewarding and enjoyable. She feels it was a great contributing factor in her acceptance to graduate school. Margaret will be attending University of Virginia studying counselor education in the fall.

Student Government Holds Open Meeting April 16 In Lankford

An open meeting of Legislative Board, Residence Board, and Judicial Board will be held immediately following Dr. Willett's press conference on April 16 in Lankford.

The boards will follow their regular business meeting procedure with reports from all committees. Residence Board will report on the dining hall; what it is doing now and what it plans to do next year. After all reports are heard, the floor will be opened to all questions, suggestions, and comments.

Two proposed changes in the Student Government constitution will be presented at this time. These changes concern student body voting and the position of the Orientation Chairman. In the past, the vice president of Student Government has served as the chairman of orientation. The proposed change would make this position an elected office, instead of the vice president of Legislative Board having this responsibility.

The changes are stated as follows: Executive Council of Student Government proposed the following changes in the Student Government Association Constitution: Note: The underlined words are the changes to be considered.

Article IV

Elections

The election to office requires a simple majority of the student body voting. There shall be no voting by proxy.

Section 2

The Chairmen, the Vice-Chairmen, the Recording Secretaries of the three boards, and the Chairman of Orientation shall be elected for a term of one year. These elections shall be held each year during the fall semester with official duties to begin at the start of the spring semester.

A. The Chairmen and Vice-Chairmen of the three boards and the Chairman of Orientation must each be members of the Rising Senior Class.

Article III

Varsity, J.V. Tennis Teams Picked; Busy Schedule Set

Seven girls have been named to the Longwood varsity tennis team and seven girls to the junior varsity team. Making the varsity squad are Lynn Coleman, Debbie Elin, Freda Lunsford, Laurel Baldwin, Lynn Kwachowski, Lynda Driver and Judy Turner.

Bobbie Elin, Becky West, B. J. Rogers, Sharon Farmer, Diane Weymouth, Mary Johnson, and Carol Chory will play the junior varsity matches. Varsity coach, Mrs. Harriss, and J.V. coach Miss Calloway would like to thank all those girls who came out for the team. "We hope that those girls who did not make the team will continue to play and remember to tryout next year."

On April 30 and May 1, 2 and 3 four Longwood girls will attend the Middle Atlantic Collegiate Woman's Tennis Championships at Mary Baldwin

College in Staunton. The Longwood participants will be announced later by Mrs. Harriss.

Commenting on the upcoming season Mrs. Harriss said, "We're looking forward to a good year. We'd also like to thank the faculty for their cooperation in assisting tennis players when they miss classes for matches."

The first match is scheduled for Tuesday with William and Mary here at 3:30 on Barlow Courts. Come out and support the team.

Many of the girls, accompanied by faculty members, traveled to Fort Lauderdale, Florida, over Spring Break to practice tennis. The girls played every day for an hour in the morning and then 2-3 hours every night. This proved very beneficial, not only did their tennis skills improve, they also got a head start on their tans.

all over the state to find the plants for his book in their natural habitat.

The author's original major was music, but he later changed to botany. The Princeton, Kentucky native studied two years at Murray State University in Kentucky, then at the University of Kentucky where he received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in Botany.

For his master's, Dr. Harvill did a composite of Kentucky, and for his doctoral degree from the University of Michigan, his thesis was on "Mesquites." Later, while teaching at the University of Alabama, Dr. Harvill discovered and named a new moss in the United States.

Other activities of Dr. Harvill's include working with azaleas in England, and holding the position of research botanist for Firestone Rubber Company in Liberia for two years.

In 1962, just before joining the faculty at Longwood, Dr. Harvill did a geological survey in Washington for the military.

Dr. Harvill is presently chairman of the floral committee of the Virginia Academy of Science, a position which he has held since 1966, having served on the committee since 1964.

Dr. Harvill says, "Virginia is the cradle of systematic botany in the United States." Although many scientists have contributed botanical knowledge about areas of the state, Dr. Harvill's book covers the whole state like no other book has done.

The book itself contains descriptions of plant species that flower before June, including such information as family, common and scientific names, descriptions of the plant and the area where it may be found, and many illustrations. The book should prove to be of great value to those interested in and those working with plants in Virginia, and should soon be found in many college classrooms.

Graduation Plans Occupy Seniors, Various Activities Interest Graduates

By ANN ANTHONY

Graduate school, teaching, federal employment, housewife — these are a few of the alternatives that the 1970 college senior must consider as she concludes her undergraduate days and makes definite plans for the future. While some are able to execute their decisions with relative ease, others find overcrowded conditions in their fields, low salaries where there are job openings, and discouragement as they attempt to continue their education.

According to Frances D. Brooks, director of the Longwood College Placement Office, graduates with elementary education degrees will have the most promising job prospects this year in Virginia and in other states.

There is also a definite shortage of teachers in fields of math, chemistry, physics, and physical education. Commenting on the great demand for health and physical education teachers and on Longwood's well recognized department, Mrs. Brooks added that some physical education majors have gone directly into college teaching.

The subject areas most difficult to find available jobs are history and the social sciences. Because there are approximately fifty applications for every vacancy, many school systems are now requiring a master's degree to teach these subjects.

Although there are vacancies throughout the state for business education and home economics teachers, they are generally located in the rural and lower-paying areas. While Richmond is plagued by an overflow of applications, southwest Virginia is left begging for teachers.

The status of open positions for English majors has been fluctuating in recent years. Portsmouth alone needed four English teachers last year, but with an increased number of English majors this year, chances of employment will not be as great.

Most beginning teachers tend to seek jobs in the populous areas of northern Virginia or in the cities because of better teaching facilities and higher salaries. Virginia Beach and Henrico County, paying $6500 and $6300 a year respectively, each employed 33 Longwood graduates last year.

For the 1968-69 term, the salary scale in Virginia school systems ranged from $7050 a year in Alexandria to $5700 a year in Wise County. Work is now underway toward making $6500 a year the minimum salary for any regularly employed teacher in Virginia.

In addition to the 28 counties and 21 cities interviewing prospective teachers on campus, a number of out-of-state school systems are represented. Girls have met with interviewers from Washington, D.C., Delaware, Georgia, Florida, Maryland, and California.

Mrs. Brooks explained that representatives from out-of-state school systems continue to return because they are pleased with past employees from the ranks of Longwood graduates, and because of the excellent reputation Longwood has in many fields as a teacher training institution. As estimated six per cent of Longwood's 369 seniors last year are now teaching in out-of-state schools.

An interviewer from Seaford, Delaware, was interested in Longwood graduates because one young "Longwood lady" with a bachelor of arts degree is the most effective teacher in a history department in which all other teachers have master's degrees. "Her emphasis is on content and the pupil, rather than on teaching factual material," the interviewer said. It is regrettable, Mrs. Brooks added, that no one went to this particular interview when he was offering a $7100 a year salary.

Although the majority of Longwood students do enter the teaching profession, a number of them are launched in other careers by taking the Federal Service Entrance Exam offered twice a year, or by consulting the College Placement Annual. Noneducational employers this past year included the state of Virginia, the Welfare Department, the FBI, insurance companies, newspapers, and airlines.

Miss Longwood 1970 Chosen Congratulations To Debbie Hyatt

By GINGER MORRISON

First runner-up was Jo Anne May, who received a one hundred dollar scholarship. Second runner-up was Cathryn Webb receiving a seventy-five dollar scholarship. The other two of the five finalists were Mary Anne Lewis and Cynthia Leigh Borill. The most talented award went to Mary Anne Lewis for her piano selection. Miss Congeniality also went to Debbie Hyatt.

The other contestants were Jill Kidd, Deborah Brown, Betty Jo Hicks, Karen Lewis, Jennifer Boykin, Kathryn Moffitt, Margaret Gibbs, Karen DeBord, Kathryn Kutcher, Nancy Frost, and Catherine Nelson. After the contest a reception for contestants, judges, and all others involved in the pageant was in the Gold Room.

Failures No Longer On Grad Transcripts At Linfield College

McMINNVILLE, ORE. (O.P.)—Failing grades need no longer appear on a student's transcript at Linfield College. The faculty has passed a measure to make a student's transcript a record of satisfactory completion of requirements.

The student now has the option of dropping a course at any time, even within 60 days after a final examination, and having the record of his enrollment removed from his transcript at his request.

The innovation is one which has also been adopted recently at Brown University. The philosophy behind this move is that a record of failure often precludes another chance in education or lessons acceptability in graduate school or employment.

Linfield will require a 2.0 average for graduation and that a student be suspended for failure to complete fewer than five courses by the end of the first year, 10 courses by the end of the second year, 15 courses by the end of the third year, and 20 courses by the end of the fourth year. This would allow a student to complete his academic work in nine semesters, rather than eight, with no academic penalty.

The number of courses required above applies after the fall of 1970 when Linfield goes on the three courses per semester system.

Dr. Heintz Named As New Associate Dean Of Students

By PATRICIA LIVERMAN
The new Associate Dean of Students will be Dr. Mary A. Heintz. Dr. Heintz is a former chairman of the Physician and Health Education Department, where she is presently a professor. Dr. Heintz is filling the position in the administration currently held by Dr. Frances R. Brown. Dr. Brown plans to begin a full-time teaching position in the fall and has resigned her position as Associate Dean of Students.

In regards to the new dean, President Henry I. Willett commented, "I want to say how fortunate we are to have someone of Dr. Heintz's academic background and administrative capacity available in our faculty to succeed Dr. Brown as Associate Dean of Students."

Dr. Heintz received her B.S. from Boston University and her masters degree at the University of Tennessee. During 1966-67, she earned her Ph.D. degree at State University of Iowa. With the exception of her 1966-67 leave of absence, Dr. Heintz has been at Longwood since 1962.

Previous experience with counseling and advising has given Dr. Heintz a good background in supervisory work. She has served as advisor to majors and been a member of the Advisory Council for Undecided Majors and Committee on Academic Policies here at Longwood. She has previously been an advisor to the Athletic Association and the Longwood chapter of Delta Psi Kappa, national honorary fraternity for women.

Field Day Activities Held 71,73 Take Song Contest

The Athletic Association held its annual Field Day, Tuesday, April 14, 3-6 p.m., on Stubb's Mall. Although a threat of rain may have dampened the ground, it did not dampen the spirits of the students assembled for the events. There were approximately 200 Red and Whites and Green and Whites waiting for the chance to compete for the events.

Carol Chory, Chairman of Field Day coordinated the activities such as the three legged race, the balloon race, the potato sack race, the shoe relay, the obstacle course, the football game, and the annual tug of war.

The greens carried the potato sack race, the balloon race, the shoe relay, and the obstacle course. The Reds took first place in the three legged race. The football game was called on the account of rain.

As usual the tug of war ended with both Reds and Greens biting the dust as the rope broke.

The main event, the greased pig race, was called to a halt as the pig continued to escape even before anyone had a chance to catch him to grease him.

The obstacle course proved to be the funniest event of the day with contestants leaping hurdles, scurrying under bamboo poles, carrying hard boiled eggs around in spoons, pushing oranges along the ground with their heads, and gobbling up cream puffs.

That evening the classes assembled in Jarman, to vote for the first place in Song Contest. The Juniors and the Freshmen tied for first place and each received five points toward the class cup.

Orchestra members Sherry William and Pam Patterson demonstrate skill and grace from one of last year's dances. Orchestra will present its annual Spring Concert May 6 & 7 at 7:30 P.M. in Jarman.

LC Netters Defeated By W&M; Victorious Over Roanoke College

The Varsity tennis squad had held its first two matches of the season this week, Tuesday, April 14, they met William and Mary College on Barlow courts and were defeated 4-1. Saturday, April 18, the girls traveled to Roanoke, where they played Roanoke College and were victorious 4-1.

In the match last Tuesday there were two doubles matches, Laurel Baldwin and Lynn Kwakowski were defeated while number two doubles, Judy Turner and Linda Driver, won. Number one singles player, Lynn Coleman, was defeated, as were Freda Lunsford and Debbie Elin.

The match against William and Mary last year had been cancelled because of rain.

Saturday's match against Roanoke College proved more beneficial for the netters as Laurel Baldwin and B. J. Rogers, a member of the J.V. team, substituting for Lynn Keval Cowski, and Judy and Lynda both took honors in the doubles competition.

Since Lynn Coleman could not attend, Freda took over the number one singles position and defeated her player, while number two player, Debbie Elin, was victorious also. However, Bobbie Elin, then playing third, was defeated.

This is the first year Longwood has played Roanoke College in tennis competition.

The Varsity players face two schools this week in Tennis, Tuesday, April 22, they play Sweet Briar College from Lynchburg, here, at Longwood, Saturday, April 25, they will meet Westhampton in Richmond.

Mrs. Harris, the Varsity tennis coach, is very optimistic for the season's matches.

The Junior Varsity team including Carol Chary, Diane Weymouth, Becky West, B. G. Rogers, and Bobbie Elin, have been practicing for weeks. Miss Callaway, the J.V. coach, has arranged a match for later in April.

Lacrosse Teams Defeat Lynchburg In First Games of Season; 7-5, 6-2

In their first game of the season the Longwood varsity lacrosse team defeated Lynchburg College 7-5 on Barlow Courts last week. The junior varsity won 6-2 over Lynchburg.

Veteran player Barbara Snellings scored three of Longwood's goals, while veteran Suzanne Turner scored two. Chris McDonnell and Carolyn Lathan each had one field goal. High scorer for Lynchburg was Nancy Dix with three goals.

The Longwood players led the entire time in a well played game. Both the offense and defense did outstanding jobs.

In a great defensive game the "Blue and Whites" held Lynchburg scoreless in the second half. At halftime the score was 5-2, and when the game ended it was 6-2.

Longwood Coach, Miss Fath, commended on the games, "I'm pleased with the way both teams played," she said. "The junior varsity did a nice job and since most of the girls have never played lacrosse, the experience will prove helpful in future games."

On Wednesday, both teams will travel to William and Mary for their next game. The teams will play again at home Saturday, April 25, against Bridgewater College at 1 o'clock on Barlow Field.

Although Longwood has never played William and Mary in Lacrosse, the team is looking forward to the challenge

Academic And Social Matters Taken To Proper Channels At Press Conference

By ETHEL REITER

Never before have American college students been so politically active as they are now. From the civil rights demonstrations of the early sixties, students have turned to protest both the war in Vietnam and the policies of their own schools. This revolutionary spirit has spread to all campuses in one form or another. While not necessarily outspoken on vital national issues, some students show concern for local and personal problems.

On April 16, at 7:00 p.m., students and administration discussed such recent areas of concern as pre-registration, alcohol on campus, and general academic matters. The meeting was devoted to covering various details. In the academic area, President Willett first informed students that he had just signed an application which would call for a department concentrating in the field of social welfare. Specialists in social work would come to Longwood as part of this program. The college is also reintroducing a program in library science. There have been several questions about the depletion of faculty members from the registration forms. President Willett pointed out that this is one of the faults of pre-registration, and he emphasized the fact that it is impossible to know at this time who will be teaching what. Several new professors have been recruited, and the contracts are not yet final. In the area of rooming, Dean Holt said that accommodations can be made for tripling or a five-girl suite. The opening of Frazier is to avoid this situation, but if completely satisfactory, girls can talk to Dean Holt about this.

The present inability to cash checks on campus exists because the college is in the process of negotiating a new contract for the book store. One provision in the contract is an obligation to cash checks. The book store will not be college operated, and at this time everything is pending the new management. There have been complaints about the lack of change on campus, and some students have suggested a change machine. This, how-

Magnusson

North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C. He has been an active member of the faculty and served as faculty marshal and chairman of the faculty staff steering committee that made a major internal evaluation of the college for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools in 1962-63. Magnusson is former president of the Longwood Chapter of Virginia Education Association. He has served also as president and treasurer. Magnusson has been Longwood's registrar for four years.

Magnusson was succeeded by Lieutenant Colonel Raymond Gilchrist, Jr. Lt. Col. Gilchrist is a 43-year-old native of Richmond. He has been associate professor and assistant registrar since February 1. Lt. Col. Gilchrist came to Longwood after his 26-year career in the U. S. Army.

Gilchrist is a former student of Virginia Military Institute. He was graduated from the University of Maryland in 1957, and received his master's degree in business administration from Syracuse University. He was graduated from the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

He has served as finance officer of the 82nd Airborne Division, based at Fort Bragg, N. C., finance officer for 5th Special Forces Group in Vietnam; division finance officer of 5th Mechanized Division at Fort Carson, Colorado, and deputy controller, Allied Land and Forces Southwest Turkey.

Gilchrist has been cited for "exceptionally meritorious service." He is the possessor of the Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Joint Services Commendation, World War II, Victory and Parachute Badges. It has been stated that Gilchrist's broad background enabled Lt. Col. Gilchrist to apply the principles, methods and systems of finance in an exemplary manner and won him the respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact.

Gilchrist, his wife Carolyn, and their five children will reside in Worsham, would cost close to six hundred dollars. Next fall when the Rotunda is complete, the information office will provide change. Another financial matter was that of tuition increase. Last month President Willett had said that the only increase would be a sixty dollar rise in tuition, but it will be necessary to increase the dining hall expenses. It is not an overwhelming increase, being less than 10 per cent. The extra money will help alleviate many of the problems in the dining hall.

Attention was again given the alcohol issue. President Willett said that it is necessary to approach this matter from a legal standpoint. Since the legalities and technicalities are unknown at this time steps must be taken to find these out before approaching the Board of Visitors.

Immediately following the Press Conference, Student Government held an open meeting. Under old business, students were again reminded of the Dabney Lancaster Scholarship. This is an award of two hundred dollars granted to a student who has been enrolled at Longwood for one year, has a 2.0 cumulative average, is in need of this money, and who shows promise of being a worthy example of educated womanhood. Election of summer school officers will be held the evening of April 23. Students who wish to run for an office must have a 2.2 cumulative and be attending both sessions.

Casey Wilkes then discussed constitutional changes. The Chairman of Orientation shall be a separate office. This job was previously the responsibility of the vice-chairman of Student Government. The statement, "There shall be no voting by proxy," was placed under the Elections Committee Policies, and it should be under Legislative, Residence, and Judicial Board Policies.

The meeting then moved on to committee reports. The Dining Hall Committee reported on the experiment going on in the dining hall. There is now hot breakfast on Sunday, and continental breakfast on week days from 7:40 to 8:45. For the next few weeks buffet meals will be served on a trial basis. Next year the third balcony will seat the seniors and the downstairs dining hall will be for the freshmen. The dinner hour will be at 6:15 since classes will last until 6:05. The plans for air-conditioning and carpeting have been postponed due to a lack of money. Residence Board reported that there are now very few crimes that merit call downs. For the most part, only a violation of the dress code will result in a call down. Next year there will be no room check, eliminating call downs in this area also.

The purpose of this meeting was to make students aware of student government procedures and to give them an opportunity to ask questions and discuss personal opinions.

Tuition And Fees Increase To Provide Quality Education

By MARY FRANCES BALDWIN

As a continuation of Longwood College's policy to announce tuition and fees of actual registration, charges for the 1970-1971 academic year are as follows:

1969-70 Virginia Student
Tuition	340
Post Office Fee	1
Room	356
Board	370
Student Health	33
Laundry	40
Student Union	9
Campus Activities	30
Construction Fee	30
	1,200

1970-71 Virginia Student
Tuition	400
Post Office Fee	1
Room	456
Board	410
Student Health	33
Laundry	40
Student Union	9
Campus Activities	35
Construction Fee	15
	1,415

1970-71 Out-of-State
Tuition	750
Post Office Fee	1
Room	456
Board	410
Student Health	33
Laundry	40
Student Union	9
Campus Activities	35
Construction Fee	15
	1,765

The only difference in the in-state and out-of-state fees is a $350 extra charge in tuition for out-of-state students. Tuition increases were necessary to provide those services for which the funds. Although an $85 increase was authorized in tuition, Longwood reduced this increase to $60 for Virginia students through certain economies and delaying certain projects for future years. Tuition for out-of-state residents was increased $110 to a total of $750.

Fee increases of $100 in room charges were necessary to provide funds for a new 400-student dormitory which will be available for occupancy in September, 1970. The cost of dormitories is paid entirely from student fees and high interest rates require the cost of a new building to be charged to the entire student body rather than just the ones living in the new facility. The board fees were increased by $40 to meet rising food costs and to provide additional services that are requested by student enrollment.

The remaining $15 increase over 1969-70 charges was necessary to provide funds to repay bonds that were sold to build a Student Activities Building in 1965. The state of Virginia has been paying this charge, but did not provide funds for 1970-71 since other colleges and universities are not receiving funds for student activities buildings from state revenues.

Longwood College feels that the $215 tuition and fee increase could not have been avoided or delayed to continue giving the students the quality of education they expect from Longwood. Longwood remains among the lowest two or three state colleges and universities in the total charges to students. Although the cost for next year has increased, the fees for summer school will remain as published in the summer school booklet.

Students may ask where their money goes and how it is spent. The budget for the 1970-71 term will be used in the following manner:

Faculty salaries will be paid to a comparable level with peer institutions in the state. Thirteen new faculty positions will be provided. Coupled with staff members teaching classes this maintains our faculty-student ratio at 15 to 1. Scholarships aid is doubled. Central switchboards and operators will be provided. New positions will be filled, including a Director of Development, a full term financial aid officer, professional librarians, a secretary for the Physical Education department, and 16 new maintenance and custodial workers.

The budget will also provide for staffing and funding of the Campus School, a full-time doctor, a part-time psychiatrist, and substantial increases in money for library books. There will be modest increases in equipment and supply money for the academic departments.

The capital outlay includes television for the Campus School, money for the Service Building, an addition to the Fine Arts complex, a roof on the Hiner Building, and planning money for the Physical Education building. Capital outlay totals $313,720 with planning money amounting to $38,000.

General Fund appropriations for 1968-70 were $765 per student with a total for the biennium of $3,260,230. For 1970-72 the General Fund appropriation per student will amount to $864. The total for the biennium will be $4,405,160.

Rolling Stones Latest Album

Diverse, Superb Musicianship

By DONNA WADSWORTH

The Rolling Stones are still rolling! If you have innocent ears or a cardinal condition, for your own protection don't listen to the Stones' album, "Let It Bleed." But if you're physically 1-A and not too easily appalled, then don't miss hearing it.

The musicianship through the album is diverse, superb, and together, ranging from unadulterated hard rock in "Live With Me," pure honky-tonk rhythm in "Let It Bleed," the simple blues of "Love in Vain," and a combination of country and blues in "You Got the Silver."

Without any doubts, "Let It Bleed" is the raunchiest album the Stones have ever made, and most of it will never be heard on the radio. The lyrics of the songs on "Let It Bleed" deal with some of the Stones' time-honored subjects — drugs, sex and rejected love, but still manage to sound fresh. For the most part, this freshness is due to Mick Jagger's vocals. He sounds pure Okie on "Country Honk," bitter and scorned in "Love in Vain," and maliciously evil on "Midnight Rambler." Keith Richards' lead vocal on "You Got the Silver" is a nice resting place amidst Jagger's intense singing. A mild example of one of the songs, "Live With Me," masterfully slinky lyrics runs, "Don't you think there's a place for you/in between the sheets." And remember, that's a mild example suitable to appear in this paper.

Instrumentation is a mixture of the usual guitars and drums with autoharp, French horns, mandolins, slide guitar, and vibes. Additional vocal effectiveness is added by the use of the London Bach Choir on the final cut, a lecture on evil, "You Can't Always Get What You Want," with a moral "You get what you need."

Critics say the Stones have begun to sound more like Bob Dylan, The Beatles, and the Byrds, but may be they have begun to sound more like the Stones. And like the liner note says, "This record should be played loud."

Hesse Novel, Steppenwolf, Portrays Sickness Of Our Times

By ANN ANTHONY

In his gripping novel, "Steppenwolf," Herman Hesse has exemplified his brilliance as a writer in the existential tradition by evoking the moving story of a discontented, lonely, and weary middle-aged individual in modern German society. Harry Haller is portrayed as the thoughtful "Steppenwolf" who has strayed into "the towns and the life of the herd" of postwar Germany and found the aims and pleasures there so distasteful that death becomes his only hope of relief.

Despite the intense eversion Haller often displays toward the cleanliness and comfortableness of bourgeois life, he reveals a deep-seated yearning for a simple, contented existence by renting a room from a middle-class old lady.

The Steppenwolf feels doomed to continue his life as a recluse in his new surroundings. A nephew of the landlady observes Haller as he occupies his time with intellectual pursuits and with planning his ultimate suicide to be carried out at the age of fifty.

It is this nephew's recollections of the Steppenwolf that comprise the preface to the story. Following this is a manuscript left by Haller in which he attempts to express the deeply lived spiritual events in his life.

His documents include conversations with the great geniuses, Mozart and Goethe, but the major portion is devoted to recording his unceasing experiences with Hermione, another figure who cannot fit into the prescribed social circles. Their relationship brings to Haller brief intervals of happiness, but he is constantly aware of the fact that one day Hermione will issue a command for him to murder her that he will be compelled to obey.

With remarkable accuracy, Nobel Prize winner Hermann Hesse has made savage indictments in "Steppenwolf" which will point the reader toward the sickness of our times that has made life a "dreadful specter," Hesse does not conclude, however, on this pessimistic note, but manages to lead the Steppenwolf to the triumphant decision to accept the good with the bad and to make an honest effort in living.

By FALETA WINSTON

The advent of Spring is celebrated at Longwood by the crowning of the May Queen and her court. Events begin at 1 p.m. with a tour of the college and end at 1 a.m. with a dance in the Lankford Gold Room with Ron Moody and the Centaurs.

The freshmen of 1970 and their families are invited to the festivities. From 3-4 p.m., the May Day Program will be held on Stubbs' Mall. After the May Pole dance the May Court presentation will take place.

Cherie Weeks, Queen of the May Court, will be escorted by Mr. Tom Fowler, while Maid of Honor, Susan Davenport, will be escorted by Mr. William E. Davenport.

The seniors on the May Court are Jo Ann Melchor, Brenda Dudley, Joyce Temple, and Patsy Peach, Maxine Stone, Susan Talbot, Andee Maddox, and Mary Lou Sowers are the junior representatives. The sophomore members of the Court are Brenda Waters, Kay Powell, Anne Becht, and Betty Ann Glasheen. The Court's freshmen are Amy Thomas, Janet Howard, Beth Blanchard, and Cindi Schatz.

CHERIE WEEKS

Austrian Tanning Company Invents Easy Tan Fabric

Tan through your clothes! Now it is possible to tan through swimsuits, slacks, or dresses that are made in a new fabric manufactured by Alencorp.

The idea for this fabric was developed by Pils Bula, an Austrian sun-tan preparation manufacturer. The fabric is woven of 65 per cent polyester and 35 per cent cotton and will allow 50 per cent of the sun's ultraviolet rays to shine through.

The swim wear originally started out to promote the tanning products, but after realizing the fashion possibilities of the fabric, a line of sportswear was added. The fabric is fast drying but must be rinsed thoroughly after washing so that soap powder and suntan lotion do not clog the holes in the fabric and stop the tanning process.

Play Adds Variety To May Day Plans- To Begin April 30

The play, "Six Characters in Search of an Author," by Luigi Pirandello, will begin its first performance Thursday, April 30, at 7:30 in Jarman Auditorium and will be put on May 1 and 2.

The play begins with a director and cast rehearsing a play by Pirandello. The six characters interrupt the play looking for an author to write their story. They request that the director write it.

These six are characters thought up by an author who planned to make them into a story and then decided not to write their play.

The director agrees to write it and the characters are going to act out the scenes of the play which is their lives. The emotions are built up constantly as the story progresses to a very moving and dynamic climax.

The main characters are: Bob Hearn, the father; Maggie Parker, the mother; Ann Taylor, the step-daughter; Dave Clark, the son; Randy Hallman, the director, and Frank Johns, the stage manager.

The remaining cast is Linda Dexter, Vivian Vascot, Steve Pearson, Suzanne Surface, Cathy Nelson, Virginia Robertson, Beth Faulkner, Bonnie Hundley, Cris Walker, Guy Rubley, Brian Lokot, F.M. Hite, and Rick Reed.

Farmville Children Can View Classical Films In Jarman

By WANDA TALLEY

Farmville children (of all ages) have the unique opportunity of seeing classical films in Jarman Auditorium on the Longwood campus every third Saturday in each month. The time is 10 a.m.

The program was the original idea of Mrs. Nancy Lockwood, wife of Dr. Patton Lockwood, who works with and teaches Children's Theatre at Longwood. Mrs. Lockwood said that she felt "children should be exposed to classical films which they might otherwise miss—films which are no longer available in the commercial theatres." She took her idea to the Colonade Club. They approved her idea and the program was set in motion for the first time this year.

"Getting Jarman on Saturday mornings was one of the least of our problems," stated Mrs. Lockwood. Choose-

Sarah Brown Represents LC In Apple Blossom Festival

Sarah Brown has been chosen to represent Longwood in the 43rd Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester April 30 through May 2. Many thousands gather in the "Apple Capital" each spring for this event when the blossoms are pink and white against the new green of hills and the Shenandoah Valley.

Sarah, an elementary education major from Charlottesville, is a member of Who's Who, Geist, Legislative Board, Baptist Student Union, and Chairman of the Examination Board.

Sarah, along with princesses from colleges and universities in Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Washington, D.C., and Virginia, will participate in this annual festival. The first event is the Coronation of Queen Shenandoah the 43rd, Miss Merle Ellyn Fong, daughter of U.S. Senator Hiram Fong of Hawaii. This will take place Thursday, April 30, at 2:30 p.m., and will be preceded by a musical program and the pageant of Springtime. Governor Linwood Holton will perform the honors of crowning the Queen. Later the Queen and her court will review the Fireman's Parade, and after a dinner for the court, they will attend the Queen's Ball.

Friday afternoon the princesses will ride in the Grand Feature Parade. In addition, there will be concerts, tours, exhibits, the Apple Blossom Twirling event, the Antique Car Meet, and the Shenandoah County Music Jubilee.

A committee of faculty, administration, and student representatives selected three nominees for this honor. They were chosen on the basis of their academic standing, their contributions to Longwood, and their attractiveness. These names were submitted to the officials of the Apple Blossom Festival and the final selection was made by a committee on which there was student representation.

Grants, Aid Available For Longwood Students

By MARY FRANCES BALDWIN

"There are many scholarships and loans available to Longwood students," said Mrs. Edna Watkins, Director of Financial Aid here at Longwood. "We feel that we have enough financial assistance so that no girl will have to drop out of school because of financial difficulties," she commented.

The State Teacher's Scholarship is available to any student who is a resident of Virginia, and who is preparing to teach in the Virginia public schools. A student must maintain a 2.0 average in order to renew her scholarship, which consists of $350 per year. A note to the Commonwealth of Virginia is signed by the student saying that she agrees to teach in the state of Virginia one year for every year she receives the scholarship. If she does this, the note, including the 6% interest charge, will be canceled. If the student does not wish to teach in Virginia, then this note is held binding.

The National Defense Student Loan is awarded to any student who has a cumulative average of 2.0. Students awarded a loan under this program, must sign a promissory note and loyalty oath. Repayment begins one year after the borrower graduates or ceases to be a full-time college student. Repayment must be completed in 10 years. Interest begins nine months after the borrower ceases to be a student, and interest is to be paid at the rate of 3% per year. Up to 50% of the loan (plus interest) may be canceled in the event the borrower becomes a full-time teacher. The average loan under this program at Longwood College is $300 per academic year. College and Federal Work Study programs are also offered. Students are employed in the dining hall, library, and in the various offices of the College. Each student is employed for a maximum of twelve hours per week and are paid on an hourly basis. A student must maintain a 2.20 average. Students may earn from $200-$700 each session under this program. All part-time positions under the Federal Work program are assigned on the basis of need and determined by the College and the Federal Government.

The Educational Opportunity Grant is a program of awards to a limited number of students with unusual financial need who show exceptional academic or creative promise. Awards under this program are not repayable and are made to students meeting the qualifications outlined by the Federal

Chi- Its Meaning And Purpose

With the recent burning of CHI, we felt it appropriate to remind the student body of the meaning and purpose of CHI. The 1969-70 Student Handbook explains rather well the purposes of this organization. It reads as follows: "The purpose and function of CHI are many. It is not a collection of individuals but a group representing the entire student body. CHI's essential purpose is to encourage and maintain the spirit of cooperation among students in every phase of college life, to foster the high ideals and standards of Longwood College and to be an organization which never seeks to find fault in others."

Tangible evidences of CHI's presence on campus include the signs on sidewalks, secret walks at night and letters to the student body encouraging support of college functions and academic excellence. The banner of CHI is white and a red skull and crossed bones. Further evidence of CHI's work is shown in the gifts to the college which have included the sundial behind the library, red tulips to beautify the campus, the tiled white X in the old rec, the college flag and gold eagle standard in the ABC Room of Lankford Building and most recently, two plaques for French Building.

These tangible activities represent one purpose of CHI, one reason for its existence. That one goal is to instill into every Longwood student a respect and, concern for all phases of campus life and a sense of high ideals and standards.

Our real purposes are deep and strong. To us CHI is more than an organization. It is and institution as old as the college itself — one of the many traditions which are interwoven with the spirit of Longwood. We hold this spirit next to our hearts, and realizing that its existence depends upon each student, we strive to kindle its flame and keep it burning."

Many of us have disregarded this true meaning of CHI. We often think of it, but we usually associate it with the walks at night and the CHI scores before burning. Very seldom do we think of its true worth to the student body and to the college itself. Let us strive to improve our thoughts of CHI and keep this campus spirit with us always.

Stash It

Last week the Environmental Teach-Ins made many people aware of the pollution in our environment. But even with this increased awareness, the litterbug is still around.

There are several ways of trying to attract the litterbug to throw his trash into a trashcan. One method is the heavy fine for littering. The other way is to have an irresistible trashcan to attract the attention of the litterer. Some places have acquired trash receptacles in the shape of zoo animals in which the trash is thrown into their mouths. Longwood seems to be trying the "attraction method" by using new shiny blue-and-white, monogrammed trashcans as bait. But people are still littering.

It does not take any more effort to throw trash into a trashcan than it does to throw it onto the ground.

Cigarette butts, matches, ice cream bar wrappers, napkins, gum wrappers, film wrappings — all these create unsightly and unnecessary litter. While most Longwood students do not throw beer or soft drink cans on the campus, friends and guests do. Guests and others should be informed of the proper place to throw trash (i.e. the new trashcans and not the ground). Some people must be re-educated on to what to do with their trash, and a college is certainly the proper place to do it.

It is only with everyone's cooperation of informing others and refraining from littering that the country will stay clean.

YWCA Sponsors Brazilian Girl, Urge Student Interest

The Y.W.C.A. of Longwood has just begun an exciting sponsorship of a 12-year-old girl from Brazil through the Christian Children's Fund, Inc. Maria das Gracas was born on February 5, 1958, and she is presently working with the fourth year primary grade. Her favorite subject is Portuguese, and her favorite play is playing house. Her health and progress are both fair, and her main chore is washing dishes. Maria's parents are very poor although they are hard-working people. In the part of the country where they live, labor is so cheap that hard work is no guarantee against poverty. Try as she will, the father cannot earn enough to meet the basic needs of his family. The resourceful mother could see no way to provide their daughter with clothing and other basic needs.

The "Y" is very anxious to help make Maria as happy and comfortable as possible. Since so many students here are members of the YWCA, we would like to encourage the entire student body to feel as though they have a part in this sponsorship, and especially feel free to write to Maria whenever they wish. She will receive the English letter and also a translation of the letter in Portuguese, in return you will receive Maria's original letter and a translation in English.

Again we encourage the entire student body to share with the "Y" in this sponsorship and help us to make Maria a happier child. Let her know that we care about her and her future, and that the students of Longwood College are concerned about important problems of the world such as poverty. Who knows, maybe she will grow to love us too, and maybe come to Longwood one of these days!

Child Theatre Class Proves Interesting To College Students,

By BIC KOLCUM

According to two members of Mr. Sniedeman's Children's Theatre class, the course is one of the most interesting offered at Longwood. Both girls had a personal interest in dramatics before they signed up for the class.

Carol Leacock, who had the female lead in the production of "Summer Brave," said, "I didn't think I would like the course at first, but the creative dramatics has gotten really interesting."

She explained that creative dramatics is a mode used in teaching. "You start by telling a story; then the kids act it out. You work with it a while until it turns a play. There is no script. The children build it themselves."

Besides their work in creative dramatics, the class is now in the midst of reading children's plays, which should appeal to children from the ages of three to fifteen.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor,

I am most concerned over the childish behavior of some of us. There are two petitions being circulated around the campus. In some dorms petitions have been removed while in other dorms cute fictitious names have been signed. Perhaps the ideas expressed on a petition do not appeal to some, but even so, others have the right to express their beliefs. If one disagrees with a petition one should not deface it or destroy it, but sign the other one, then all of us will have an equal opportunity to express our feelings.

Change And Progress, The Upcoming Thing At Colleges

By ETHEL REITER

"The world has changed, yet it is the only thing that has brought progress." Today a vast network of colleges, universities, junior colleges, community colleges, and institutes sprawl across the land. This network is no longer a system of merely academic institutions. Discontent, protest, and even violence are forces pulsating through the veins of higher education. Campus revolution is not necessarily violent and disruptive. It is a movement in search of change, progress, and institutional reform. Educational establishments in the United States, in spite of recent attempts at liberalization and experimentation, remain for the most part what they always were, i.e., an ideological power hierarchy. Old rules give way to updated regulations. Nothing has really changed.

Longwood campus has never been the scene of violence or mass protest. In fact, it has been quite the opposite, evidence being the "Administative Love-In" staged in Willett Country last year. However, many "Longwood Ladies" are requesting changes in academic and social areas. If Longwood students are demanding a modern, progressive spirit at Longwood, it seems only logical that her attitudes, views, and behavior must likewise modernize. Experimenting in a case of simple and insignificant deviance for a sociology assignment, it was evident to me that Longwood girls go by tradition more strongly than the elderly people of this community. While being slightly disapproved of by the elderly, nondeviant, Farmville church-goers, I was being ridiculed, ostracized, and shunned by my fellow Longwood students. It seems somewhat contradictory that Longwood girls approve of change but not nonconformity. Somewhere on the levels of maturity and open-mindedness the "Longwood Lady" must search for a new definition of herself before expecting a modern, liberal, and progressive college atmosphere.

Sheilah Martin, Guam Sophomore Concerned With Education; Compares U.S.

By LINDA FLOYD
Sheilah Martin, a Sophomore transfer to Longwood from the University of Guam, is a Navy offspring who has lived in a wide variety of places. She has called home such places as Virginia, Massachusetts, Florida, South Carolina, Colorado, Cuba, Canada, and Guam.

Sheilah provides us with some interesting facts about the most recent of her homes - Guam. For example, did you know that there are 20,000 bachelors compared to 200 single women above age of 18 in Guam? Did you know that the demand for teachers in Guam is so high that the government provides special benefits? Did you know that Guam is a resort area, considered by many to be a perfect honeymoon island?

Guam is a small U.S. territory with no real industry except tourism. For the most part, food and clothing are shipped into the island. The majority of Guamanians work for the government or are connected with one of the few military bases there. The society is basically slow and easy going, but is becoming faster moving. The island, although very proud of their American ties, retains her own culture. Almost all people there are bilingual, speaking their own language in the home and for social occasions, and using English for business purposes. Generally, the north side of the island is American, and the south side retains the older traditions. The people are very, very friendly. The villages give elaborate fiestas in honor of the patron saints, and strangers passing through are welcome to attend these parties, indeed, their friendliness is such that they might be insulted were you not to accept their hospitality.

The typical menu in Guam almost always includes red rice. The Guamanians eat lumpy, which is like egg roll, roast pig, pancit or fried noodles, finil-dinni, a hot sauce, and raw fish in sauce. Bananas and coconuts grow on the island.

Orchids grow wild on the island and when one decorates for a party, one uses flowers rather than crepe paper. The vegetation is very dense, and combined with the many waterfalls, Guam seems to be a tropical paradise.

The people are very conscious of their history, and folklore plays a vital part in the lives of most Guamanians. The people always ask permission from Taotaoona, the spirit of the ancient people, before entering the jungle. A prominent family in Guam, the Guinatos, has, through the years, been stricken with a disease caused supposedly by their ancestors picking mangoes. The disease is a paralysis, and afflicts the members of the family.

Test-Out Exams Given To Freshmen For 3 Credit Hours

ABERDEEN, S. D. — (A.P.) — Freshmen at Northern State College who pass a three paper test-out examination in an experimental English curriculum will be excused from class the remainder of the semester and receive three semester-hours credit for the course.

Dr. John W. Proctor, chairman of the Division of Language and Literature, outlined the new system:

After five weeks of class instruction, a freshman may take an examination consisting of three papers which he must complete in a certain time period.

To receive a passing grade on the exam, the student must be given a passing mark by two instructors on each of the three papers. Each instructor grading the paper will not know the grade given by another instructor. The instructors will not know the names of the writers of the papers they are grading. This is done to insure a maximum amount of fairness.

If the student does not pass the exam, he can attempt a test-out only after three more weeks of instruction. If he fails again, he may try again three weeks later.

If the student is not passing at the end of the first semester, he will be given an incomplete and will have three hours credit and a grade based on the test-out papers.

ly when they reach 35 or so. Although doctors have studied the disease, they can find no physiological reason for it and believe its causes to be psychological.

Guamanians are becoming more and more concerned with education. Because of this concern, the government will give a full 100% scholarship to those planning to teach. To attend the University of Guam is free for the Guamanian; for a nonresident, the cost is $10 per credit hour, and $5 per credit hour plus a $25 activity fee is charged to the military people on the island. Scholarships are given throughout graduate school, especially in the fields of education and special education.

Sheilah Martin, who has lived in a variety of places, discusses Guam with a "Rotunda" staff member.

Guamanians are very patriotic to the United States. They want to keep their ties with us and are now considering applying for statehood. However, now they are probably not ready for statehood as they are not politically mature. The people of Guam, since they live in a U.S. territory are American citizens and are drafted into the military, although they have no vote. Guam has its own legislature and will

Shaw, Music Director, Lectures On Arts On May 5 In Lankford

Robert Shaw, music director and conductor of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, will lecture on "The Conservative Arts," Tuesday, May 5, at 10:50 a.m. in the ABC room.

Mr. Shaw, founder and director of the Robert Shaw Choral, was also organizer of the first Fred Waring Glee Club and founder of The Collegiate Choral.

He has served as director of the choral department of the Juillard School of Music and directed choral activities at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. In his first symphonic post he was conductor of the San Diego Symphony Orchestra, then went to Cleveland where he was director of the Cleveland Orchestra Chorus for eleven years. He has been a guest conductor with the New York Philharmonic and the symphony orchestras of Chicago, Boston, Minneapolis, Dallas, Washington, and Cincinnati.

Mr. Shaw was the first conductor to receive the Guggenheim Fellowship. He is a recipient of the National Association of American Composers and conductors award for the outstanding American-born conductor.

be electing its own governor in the next election. Guam is definitely militarily important to the United States, serving as own main base in the Pacific because of its connection with all of Asia and its central location. Sixty per cent of the population in Guam is below the age of 18 and fifty per cent below 15. By 18 many Guam-ans leave the island. This is one reason for the education problem. Dating is chaperoned in Guam. The young people marry early, usually by the time they finish high school.

Sheilah says that she thinks Guam is a great place and that she is considering teaching there for a few years. A note to prospective teachers: If you sign a contract to teach in Guam, the government will pay your transportation over, pay half your rent, and give you one trip back to the U.S. free, all in addition to your salary - here's your opportunity to see the world!

Most sensitive to this pollutant is the undeveloped orchid plant. Injury to the opening orchid is caused at the concentration of two parts per billion. As a result, green houses raising orchids around New York City and other large cities have not been able to survive in recent years, he said.

From The Board

On April 16, at 7:30 p.m., in the Gold Room, there was an open meeting of all three Boards. Various committees had reports. They are:

For the "Crisis in Our Environment," Frankie Brown announced the schedule for the program of April 20-22 and urged all students to attend, and Sally Gill reported on the dining hall changes for next year. The Lankford Student Union announced Laurel Baldwin and Bobbie Thurston as co-chairmen for May Day, while Lois Wells reported the purpose of the Publications Committee and announced the editors of Publications. The Handbook of 1970-71 has been completed and Lynn McCurdy has asked that organizations submit the names of their officers for next year by May 4.

Carolyn Kimmins, chairman of the Evaluations Committee, discussed the committee's evaluation of an organization before it can receive appropriations. The Academic Affairs, headed by Freda Lundsford, discussed suggestions made by the committee and reminded the student body that the committee acts as a liaison between students and faculty. Suggestions concerning alcoholic beverages, were raised before the Legislative Board. Casey Wilkes, President of the Legislative Board, suggested that a petition, signed by one-fourth of the student body, must be presented to the board before consideration of alcohol on campus. Judicial Board was confronted with the reason for secrecy of trials and Bonnie Bowers stressed it was needed for protection of each student involved.

Swedish Students Study Air, Water, Earth, Town Planning

(ACP) — Stockholm (OBS) — Sweden's five universities now offer courses on environmental and pollution control. Based on trials in 1968 at the University of Lund in south Sweden the courses consist of 10 weeks of study covering such widely varied topics as ecology, toxicology, human genetics, air and water pollution, effects of noise, solid waste problems, problems, or radioactivity in the environment, conservation, town and country planning. The courses are open to students and to others whose interests lie in environmental planning and conserva-

Problems Of Air Pollution Is Acute

(ACP) — THE DAILY UNIVERSE, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah — "Plants tell us that the problem is a problem . . . and the story they've been telling us is that the problem is becoming acute." This is how Dr. Robert Daines, professor of plant pathology at Rutgers University, summed up the effects of pollution on plants at a seminar recently sponsored by the College of Biological and Agricultural Sciences.

Dr. Daines discussed the effects of five types of pollutants — fluorides, sulphur oxides, ethylene, ozone and peroxyacetaldehyde (PAN).

Dr. Daines said some plants are highly sensitive to each pollutant while others are resistant. He added that the effects are different for each pollutant and that as a result scientists can determine which pollutants are present and guess as to the concentration.

In 1963, 2,015 tons of sulphur oxide per day entered the New Jersey atmosphere from the burning of coal and oil to heat homes and run industries, according to statistics presented by Dr. Daines.

Of this, 57 per cent was caused by industry, 39 per cent by electrical generation, seven per cent from residential uses, and only one per cent from gasoline.

He showed slides of damage between the veins of apple leaves caused by this pollutant.

Exposed to one part per million of ethylene, the buds of some plants turn white, never to open. Most sensitive to this pollutant is the undeveloped orchid plant. Injury to the opening orchid is caused at the concentration of two parts per billion. As a result, green houses raising orchids around New York City and other large cities have not been able to survive in recent years, he said.

Other subjects were considered. Such topics as the effectiveness of call downs, and their true relationship to discipline, as well as the problems concerning public versus private phones, were discussed.

Qualifications for the Dabney S. Lancaster Scholarship were discussed. The scholarship will be awarded at Honors Assembly May 12. The Assembly Committee reported a new method of checking attendance will be tried next fall.

The May Day Committee has chosen their theme for this year as Peter Pan. Sue Rinaldi has recently been elected as the Legislative Board representative to work with Mr. Dalton on the Student Government Retreat. Mr. Brown and a representative of Lankford Student Union were given the authority to book entertainment during the summer school session for next year.

Becky Kelso was asked to serve on the "Committee on Purchase of Art Objects by Contemporary Virginia Artists." Instead of the annual Student Government picnic, the Board decided to invite old members to their Board meeting which will be followed by a reception. The meeting will be May 11 at 6:45 in the Student Government Room.

Legislative Board has made the following suggestions concerning the Campus Fee Committee: (a) a junior will be elected next year to serve as chairman of the committee, and (b) in succeeding years, a sophomore will be elected to serve as a member her sophomore year and chairman her junior year.

This Stranger My Son; Relates Ordeals Of Schizophrenic

"This Stranger My Son" relates, in chronological order, the ordeals and depressions of a schizophrenic child from infancy to early manhood. The author, Louise Wilson, tells the true story of her eldest child, Tony.

Tony's story is told from a mother's point of view. Her thoughts, attitudes, and fears are interpolated into and become an integral part of the book. However, she makes no attempt to color or cover up anything which relates to her son. The book provides a realistic look into the life of a schizophrenic. The events in Tony's life are told with objectivity and reality.

There is irony in the title of Louise Wilson's first book. How could a woman's son be a stranger to her? Yet, when Mrs. Wilson refers to her son as a stranger, she is actually characterizing the basic personality of the schizophrenic. For a schizophrenic is many people in one — he can be lovable and kind, hateful and obstinate, harmless or dangerous. Only a schizophrenic could say in one breath, "I love you so . . . you and Dad, I want to live happily with you," and scream in another, "You God-damned son of a bitch! Get the hell out of my room before I kill you."

"This Stranger My Son" has a universal appeal — the desire of all parents to have normal, healthy children. Yet, it also appeals to those who have retarded or mentally defective children. To these parents the book says, "You are not alone." There are those who have been through the ordeal and those who there will be in the future. Mrs. Wilson says, is the purpose of her book, "If in any small way our story can relieve other families, who have been carrying the same fearful burden, it will have been worth telling." "This Stranger My Son" accomplishes its purpose very effectively.

ACP Editor Poll On Pollution Shows It As Threat To Lives

(ACP) — Fifty-nine per cent of the nation's college newspaper editors see pollution as an immediate threat to their lives according to a new poll conducted by the Associated Collegiate Press.

Two hundred polls were sent out to college editors across the nation and of the 98 polls returned, 29% indicated that this threat of ecological pollution had lessened their desire to propagate.

Organized movements dedicated to fighting pollution have been in 45% of the campuses represented, and 20% more should experience such movements in the near future.

However, 52% of the editors polled did not believe pollution would become a more important issue on their campuses in the near future than the draft or the war in Vietnam.

Sixty-eight per cent of the editors have considered or waged an editorial campaign against pollution, but only 13% are members of an organized group against it.

When asked what they were doing to prevent pollution, 46% admitted they were doing nothing.

Many of the others are using their editorial pages to make the public aware of the problem.

Some editors are organizing rallies and teach-ins, but about 20% don't seem to consider pollution to be a major threat to their lives or their campuses.

One fellow from Nebraska comments, "I do not do anything to aid pollution, but the problem here is not as bad as in many places, I feel."

Another from Georgia says he is doing "nothing because of the location of our college — in a small southern town. Pollution is not so obviously a threat here as it is in metropolitan areas."

One girl expressed the opposite viewpoint: "I'm finding out as much about it as I can, so I can act intelligently to prevent it. In the meantime, I'm doing what I can."

Better Films Committee Hopes To Encourage Student Enthusiasm

By LYNNE WILSON

"A film series which fails to provide intellectual stimulation is a waste of time and money. One which fails to entertain is a disaster. To avoid such failures one must know both his films, and his audience," says Mr. Paul Rouillard.

Mr. Rouillard, who has been Chairman of the Better Films Committee, during its three years of existence, believes, "Films are now a challenge to theater — even to books," Dr. Blackwell, Mr. Sandidge, Miss Fritsche, Miss Hooker, and Mr. Rouillard were responsible for last year's series which included such films as "Ulysses," "Othello," "Dr. Faustus," and "Elvira Madigan." Mr. Rouillard and Miss Hooker submitted this year's list. This list is given to the theater manager, who will send it to three film viewers from Richmond. These men view the films in Washington, D.C., and decide which are financially feasible and artistically acceptable for the neighborhood theaters.

The films from Longwood's list this year included "An Evening With

The Royal Ballet," "Joanna," the story of an interracial love affair, the sensitive film "Faces," the beautiful love story "A Man And A Woman," and the acclaimed picture "Staircase." The committee also scheduled a W. C. Fields classic "My Little Chickadee," "The Loves of Isadora," and the classic, "Oedipus The King."

When questioned about some of the more controversial films chosen by the committee, Mr. Rouillard replied, "If it's human activity, it's worthy of our understanding and attention," Mr. Rouillard is encouraged by the fact that students are going to the theater more often. He believes that in previous years the girls thought of films only as entertainment, but now they are beginning to see that films can be almost as worthwhile an experience as reading a book.

Since the audience is composed almost entirely of students, the theater's income is limited. The Neighborhood Theaters are continuing their services in Farmville in the hope that the college's will grow to the point that the theater will become a profitable enterprise.

The theater needs the support of the students to continue its program. To encourage student support of the theater, and especially of Longwood's Better Films Committee, Mr. Rouillard is going to invite students to join the committee this year. Hopefully, student participation will encourage student enthusiasm in promoting good film entertainment.

Research Begun On A Twelve-Month School To Test Student's Performance And Effects

Is it more economical to operate a public school system on a year-round basis than on a nine-month schedule?

Will students learn as well under a 12-month system?

How would a year-round public school schedule affect the community? Information on questions such as these will be sought by school officials and researchers under a project announced by the U.S. Office of Education.

The Office's National Center for Educational Research and Development said it has awarded a $45,000 contract to Valley View School District #96, Lockport, Ill., to conduct the study. "We plan to make two ten-year cost projections," says James R. Gove, assistant superintendent and project director. "One will show the costs of operating Valley View Schools over the next decade on a traditional nine-month schedule, the other will show cost figures over the same period on a 12-month basis."

The researchers will explain their procedures and present the information in such a way that any school district considering a 12-month schedule will be able to substitute its cost figures for the Valley View estimates and get some idea of what its costs might be to operate all year-round.

"Experts often recommend extending the school year as one response to overcrowded schools and the failure of school bond issues," says Dr. Gove. "The theory is that using school buildings during summer months might increase their capacity by about one third and ease demand for more classrooms."

But there is little scientific knowledge about the overall economies of a 12-month schedule, according to Dr. Gove. "So we plan to project costs item by item, including personnel, maintenance, capital expenses, daily operations, and the like."

Equally important is the question of whether students learn as well (or better) going to school 180 days spread throughout the year, Dr. Gove adds. He plans to design alternative ways of measuring student performance in a 12-month schedule and the impact on the local community.

Researchers will also provide a case history of the experiences of the Valley View School District in converting from a nine-month schedule to a 45-15 (45 days in school, 15 days out) continuous school year plan.

The Valley View plan is to take effect this summer and the record of events that made it possible is expected to benefit other school systems thinking about a similar year.

Federal funds for the project are being provided under the amended Cooperative Research Act which authorizes research, development, and dissemination to improve education at all levels.

Pass-Fail Grading Topic At Academic Affairs Conference

"The grading system must be formed to fit the individual college or university," said Mr. Phillip Royse, who recently reported on the 3rd Annual Midwestern Regional Conference of Academic Affairs Administrations, "I look at grades as a means of communication."

Asked if he sees any future for the "nontraditional grading system" at Edgely College, Mr. Royse, assistant professor of education, replied: "The students will probably eventually force us into some type of experimentation with it."

"Nontraditional grading" was discussed at the conference held at Michigan State University. Mr. Royse took part in the discussion "Experiences and Problems with Nontraditional Grading Systems."

Michigan State University, Indiana University, University of Illinois and the University of Michigan were among the colleges and universities represented who have tried the "pass-fail system."

As Mr. Royse reports, "all the members presented their ideas and variations of the system which they had tried. For the 'Big Ten' schools the system is 'old hat' because they have had it for four or five years but they still are not completely sold on it."

Number one player, Lynne Coleman, makes a fast return in a recent home match.

Government.

The Legislature of Virginia has made available a limited amount of money for gift scholarships to needy students of good academic ability. These scholarships are known as the General Undergraduate Scholarships. The recipient must be a legal resident of Virginia and must be in need of funds for her education. The student must possess good scholastic ability. Scholarships are limited to $350 per session.

Longwood College has a limited amount of money that may be used for direct loans to students. These loans are not to exceed $350 for anyone session. The interest rate is 3% and begins on the date that the note is signed. Repayment in full is made one year after graduation, or after the student ceases to be a full-time student.

Mrs. Watkins says that 65-70% of the students at Longwood take advantage of the State Teacher's Scholarship. The applications for scholarships and loans are "increasing terrifically." "With the rising cost of tuition," Mrs. Watkins said, "we have to allow for this increase and for inflation when we consider the amount of scholarships and loans given. Each student's application is carefully analyzed. We compare the cost of schooling with their actual resources and work from there," commented Mrs. Watkins.

Varsity Lacrosse Team Loses To W&M BC; JV Victorious

Last Wednesday the Longwood Varsity Lacrosse Team traveled to William and Mary College for their second game of the season. They were defeated 10-2 in the first game. The Junior Varsity were victorious over the William and Mary's second team as they won 4-2.

William and Mary dominated the first half as they scored seven field goals to Longwood's one goal. In the second half Longwood's defense began to strengthen as they held William and Mary to only three goals, while the offense again scored one goal.

High scorers for W&M were Ann Schwenk with three goals and Linda Graves with two. Scorers for Longwood were Barbara Shellings and defense Barb Jenkins.

In the Junior Varsity game, Longwood led the entire time as both the offense and the defense did outstanding jobs. Leading the offensive attack were Renea Harrison and Kathy Wilson who scored two goals each, while the defense held William and Mary to only two goals.

Last Saturday afternoon Longwood was host to Bridgewater College in their second home game of the season. The Varsity team was again defeated 12-4, and the Junior Varsity team maintained their undefeated record with a 5-0 win over the Bridgewater second team.

After a loss last year by one goal to Bridgewater, the entire team was anticipating another chance for victory. However, the Bridgewater team played a superb game both offensively and defensively, and dominated the play. In the first half Bridgewater jumped an early lead which they held throughout the game. At halftime Bridgewater was leading 7-1. In the second half Longwood's offense began to rally as they scored three more goals. However, Bridgewater's team tightened their defense and their offense came alive to score five more goals. At the end of the game, Bridgewater led 12-4 giving Longwood its second loss. Leading players for Bridgewater were Mary Speck with four goals and Linda Evans and Jane Carlisle with three goals each. Longwood's scorers were veterans Suzanne Turner and Barbara Shellings, scoring two and one respectively. Newcomer to first team, Renea Harrison, added another goal to the tally.

The Junior Varsity held their undefeated record once more as they won over Bridgewater, 5-0. Longwood's fine defensive play held Bridgewater scoreless as the offense led a strong attack. Scoring for Longwood were Chris McDonnell with two goals, and Kathy Wilson, Ruth Holden, and defensive Nedra Distel with one goal each.

Next Wednesday, April 29, both teams will travel to Westhampton College in Richmond with hopes of raising their records for the season. The Varsity will play the Westhampton Varsity team while the JV contend with the team from St. Catherine's School. Next Saturday on May Day the Lacrosse teams will begin the day's events at one o'clock when they play Roanoke College in the final home game of the season.

Children View Films

ing the right film seems to be the major problem of the committee. Mrs. Lockwood pointed out the many limitations in film selection: "You're not allowed to show Walt Disney films except to private audiences and the Saturday Films Program is open to everyone in the Farmville district. Also, you can't charge admission for Walt Disney films." At present a 50¢ donation is received from each child or adult to cover the cost of the film. She continued, "No film can be shown when a commercial theatre is open."

When available films have been found the last question seems to be "should we choose familiar stories?" Many children, she stated, have responded favorably to familiar stories, "I knew what would happen, I was just waitin'." But a few responded negatively, "Aw heck, I knew what was gonna happen!"

The program has one limitation. "The club now requires one adult to be present with every five children under the age of ten," Mrs. Lockwood explained. "This, of course, is for the safety of the children." And she continued, "More children would come, I feel, if mothers, could simply leave their children." Student assistants, she feels, would eliminate this problem - but "the club would not be able to pay the students for their help" - except by free admission to the movie being shown.

Attendance at the three movies so far this year ranged from "100 to 180 children, students, and adults . . . Funds barely covered the cost of the film."

Films viewed this session were "Sleeping Beauty," "Rhapsody Boy," and "The Three Worlds of Gulliver." The film-cost runs from $20-$40, shipping $4, and advertising $10. "It's a very time-consuming program," Mrs. Lockwood commented, "but it is a very worthwhile program." She is in hopes that the new board members of the Coleman Club will continue the program when they take office the end of March.

"Students are welcome to attend our meetings," she stated. "We encourage them to help us . . . Anyone interested in working with children would find Children's Saturday Films a worthwhile experience - and the film too. Your help is needed NOW!"

Indian Women Less Liberated Than American Counterparts

By LEE WORTHINGTON

Walking hand in hand with Kiril Doshi, a 24-year-old Indian from northern India is relatively simple here in the United States. But, if Kiril were in India, as he was two years ago, walking hand in hand with any girl would be virtually impossible. For, even today few young couples in India have any romantic relationships before marriage. Often, a bridal couple are almost strangers. In fact, in place of our dating, and engagement period, the Indian marriage arrangements may start with a classified advertisement in a newspaper setting out very clearly what a prospective mate offers and expects. Kiril who has just obtained his M.A. degree from Northeastern University in electrical engineering, smiled after this admission, for he has found life in America much different. The girls here he said, "are much freer, and more open about sexual matters. Kiril admits that Indian customs regarding marriage are changing, but they are not changing very fast. "The young generation wants to make its own way, but things are going slowly." As an example, Kiril mentioned that in rural areas a girl may be formally married when she is 7 or 8, but she does not move in with her husband until she is around 14 or older. In this case, the parents are not required to furnish such a big dowry as they would have to for a teenage marriage.

Kiril who has two brothers and a sister said that often a birth of a daughter is not greeted with great joy. For, with the birth of a daughter, the family is required to furnish her with a dowry for her wedding day. Although the dowry system is slowly becoming obsolete, it is still considered a social custom.

Another area that Kiril found very different here in the United States is the position of the widow. In India, the plight of the widow is very pitiful. No one wants to marry a woman once she has seen a husband to the grave. In the United States, however, Kiril noticed that there is no stigma attached to the widowed woman. They may marry as long as there is someone to propose to them. According to Kiril, the divorced woman in India is in the same predicament as the widow. A divorce is allowed in India by law, but it is costly and very difficult to get. After the divorce, the woman finds that no one is willing to marry her again. The divorcee, and the widow, are essentially in the same position — lonely and deserted women.

Kiril, who plans to work for Vecpo in Richmond, makes it clear that he disagrees with many of India's fading customs. He finds that the opportunities here in the States are much more promising than in India. With a shy grin he mumbles, "I want to find my own wife, and marry her my own way."

Student Newspapers Rotunda, Bullet, Reflector Find Censorship And/Or Apathy A Problem

(Ed. note: The following article is reprinted from "The Bullet," of Mary Washington College, March 23, it was originally entitled "Censorship: MWC too?" by Robin Darling.)

The following petition has recently appeared on strategic doors in College dormitories:

"We, the undersigned students, often find the college newspaper, The Bullet, to be highly distasteful. We realize that we are now required to support The Bullet via the Student Activity Fee, and do not consider the practice ethical. We therefore propose the elimination of forced support of The Bullet, by the termination of the use of student fees for this purpose.

"If a campus newspaper is printed, it should derive its support from funds obtained voluntarily from the sale of ads and the purchase price of the paper."

According to the College Press Service, this kind of censorship — by the withholding of funds — is increasing as college newspapers become more outspoken. The Mississippi State REFLECTOR contained, in its January 27 issue, two articles — an editorial and an opinion column — criticizing the state legislature's ban on the teaching of evolution in public schools, and ridiculing its meddling in University affairs. Malcolm Mabry, a farmer Representative in the state legislature, has introduced a bill to cut off financial support from state-supported college and university publications. Apparently irritated by the REFLEC-

TOR's criticism, Mabry said, "What right does the college have to force (the student) to pay money for something which has nothing to do with his education?"

The student papers at Ohio State and at Bowling Green University have also been threatened. They have offended a state senator, Robert Cortis; he is initiating an attack against the Ohio POST and the BG NEWS. Covered in THE POST was an on-campus sex symposium, in which five professionals conducted a discussion on birth control and abortion. Cortis also objected to various letters to the editor, and to a front page cartoon of Chicago Judge Julius Hoffman, which he called "pure smut."

Similarly reports the University of Maryland's DIAMOND-BACK, the Maryland State legislature has made a move to permit censorship of the state university and college papers, both by abolition of funds, and by prepublication review by a board designated by the administration.

The specter of censorship is as absurd as it is frightening. A student publication is a necessary part of on-campus communication. Considering the general apathy of students on most campuses, a newspaper without a dependable means of financial support would be almost certainly doomed to failure.

State legislatures are inclined to be shocked at student newspapers, and it is understandable that the more conservative legislators would attempt censorship. However, when the stu-

Strawberry Statement A Brief Over-View Of A Revolutionary

By KATHY NOONAN

"The Strawberry Statement" is a journal by James Simon Kunen who participated in the student insurrection at Columbia University two years ago. The book is a delightful, often hilarious potpourri of diary entries, pithy sayings and reflections on youth, democracy, student radicalism, baseball, long hair and the American dream. The title comes from the remark made by a Columbia dean in the midst of the student uprising that "whether students vote 'yes' or 'no' on an issue is like telling me they like strawberries." Kunen declares that he does like strawberries, "trees... williness in a good cause... nice policemen," and dislikes "Texas... calling people consumers... racism, poverty, and war." These dislikes are what he is trying to do something about. "There used to be a dream for America. I wish people would wake up and dream again."

One of the ways Kunen attempted to rectify the situation was to join the occupation of Columbia administration buildings to bring about an end to the university's involvement in war research and termination of the school's plans to erect a gymnasium in city park land used by Harlem residents. Far from being the stereotype of the hard-core, student radical, Kunen shows himself to be a kind of all-American Charlie Brown in Holden Caulfield style. He rows on the varsity crew, is a Boston Red Sox fan, is fond of Walt Disney, falls in love, and in the middle of a student strike meeting, wonders "whether Lenin was as concerned with the breast size of his revolutionary cohorts as I am."

Kunen writes in an articulate, personal, clear, unpretentious style. This helps to make what he has to say worth listening to not only by members of his own generation but also their parents. Kunen advises the reader of "The Strawberry Statement" not to "spend much time reading it because I didn't spend too much time writing it." True, the book is brief, but the value of it lies not in its length, rather in what is has to say to all interested American citizens.

Asian Studies Program Held At Longwood College May 9

By LINDA SMALLEY
The Spring Colloquium of the Virginia Consortium for Asian Studies will be held at Longwood College, Saturday, May 9, 1970. "Thought and Culture: East and West" will emphasize informal talks, presentation of ideas, active discussion between listening audiences and speakers.

The purpose of the Colloquium will be to stimulate interest in Asian Studies. Five films will be shown for general interest and background in the culture of Japan, China, and India. These films are "Buddhism," "Hinduism," "Arts of Japan," "Japanese Calligraphy," and "City of Cathay." The Japanese film, "Gate of Hell," was shown May 4, 1970.

The activities of the Colloquium will begin at 9:30 a.m., in the ABC Room of Lankford, with registration. Dean of the college, Herbert R. Blackwell, will welcome all at 10 a.m. Following the welcome the program will consist of guest speakers and films.

Charles F. Baldwin, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Virginia Consortium for Asian Studies, will give a brief history of the Consortium. Kurt F. Leidecker of Mary Washington College and Mary F. Williams of Randolph-Macon Woman's College will also speak before the buffet luncheon at noon.

Paul Chaffee of Emory and Henry College, T. Sato of Virginia State College, and Richard C. Rowland of Sweet Briar College will continue the program. Before and after their talks group discussions and films will be presented.

Harvard Professor To Speak May 8th On Society In Middle Ages

Dr. Giles Constable, Henry Charles Lea professor of medieval history at Harvard University, will lecture at Longwood College on Friday, May 8, at 10 o'clock a.m. in Jeffers Auditorium. This program is under the sponsorship of the University Center in Virginia.

A specialist on medieval religious life, Dr. Constable has done research on various aspects of the history of monasticism and has taught courses in general medieval history and on the Empire and Papacy. During the summer of 1961, he lectured at the Centre d'Etudes Supérieures de Civilisation Médiévale at Poitiers, France. His topic will be "The Orders of Society in the Middle Ages."

Dr. Constable received his Ph.D. from Harvard University. He has formerly served as professor at Radcliffe College and the State University of Iowa.

He is a fellow of the Royal Historical Society, a member of the Medieval Academy of America, advisor to the "Journal of Ecclesiastical History," and associate editor of the "Speculum." Dr. Constable is also the author of "Monastic Tithes From Their Origins to the Twelfth Century."

All are invited to attend.

Longwood Professor Publishes Book On Women Poets

Dr. Rosemary Sprague of Longwood's English department, recently published her twelfth book for the Chilton Publishing Company in Philadelphia. The book, "Imaginary Gardens," deals with the lives and works of five American women poets: Sarah Teasdale, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Emily Dickinson, Marianne Moore, and Amy Lowell.

When asked by a ROTUNDA interviewer why she chose this particular subject for her new book, Dr. Sprague responded that her editor, Job Marlon, approached her with the idea some two years ago and then she accepted the undertaking because she believed that each of these women was, in her own way, a great poet and that they had been too long neglected by the literary public.

Research for "Imaginary Gardens" required intensive background study in American literature as well as very impressive and interesting exploration into the lives of the poets. Her work involved interviews with such people as Margaret Conklin, Sarah Teasdale's literary executive; Mrs. Norma Millay Ellis, sister of Edna St. Vincent Millay; and Miss Marianne Moore, who read and approved the chapter written on her own life.

"The major standpoint of the book," stated Dr. Sprague, "is to reveal each of the poet's attitude toward her poetry and toward poetry in general." And in keeping with her belief that "no author writes to be studied," "Imaginary Gardens" offers much in the area of pure pleasure reading as well as scholarly information.

Dr. Sprague also revealed, oddly enough, that she began writing before

Search For Personal Authenticity Is Theme For Group Discussion

Throughout time man has sought to realize a sense of purpose, direction and meaning in his life. This search for personal authenticity is the theme for an exciting and thought-provoking weekend planned for May 8-10, Mr. Harold Waking, Assistant Professor of Psychology and Pastor-Counselor at Georgetown College, Georgetown, Kentucky, will lead discussions on this theme at the Baptist Student Center throughout the weekend.

Mr. Waking is an extremely popular speaker among college students, and is a fascinating person to know. His background includes working as a civil engineer and naval officer. He holds masters degrees in both psychology and theology. For five years he served as chaplain of a state mental hospital. Mr. Waking is the author of a book published this April on man's search for personal authenticity, "Being Christlike." Students who have participated in discussions and sensitivity experiences led by Mr. Waking in the past have found these sessions most meaningful and memorable.

The schedule for the weekend is as follows:

Friday, May 8, 7:30 - discussion led by Mr. Waking (at the center)
Saturday, May 9 - 9:30 - discussion led by Mr. Waking (at the center); 1:30 - leave the B.S.U. center for a picnic at Dr. Johnson's farm; 8:00 - discussion at the B.S.U. center, led by Mr. Waking Sunday, May 10, 11:00 - Worship service, led by Mr. Waking, Farmville Baptist Church

Everyone is invited to attend any or every event scheduled for this weekend. If you are planning to come to the picnic, please sign the list on the religious bulletin board or on the board at the B.S.U. center, so you will be included for food and transportation. Several other Virginia schools have also been invited to participate in these activities.

Richardson And Voyten Win MENC Offices

By FALETA WINSTON

Jeanne Sharon Richardson and Willie Ann Voyten were honored by the Virginia chapter of Music Educators National Conference at its annual convention held in Norfolk.

Jeanne Richardson, a junior, was elected state president of the Virginia chapter. Jeanne is the president of Longwood's chapter of M.E.N.C. and a member of the national professional music fraternity for women, Sigma Alpha Iota. Jeanne's area of concentration is piano and she plans to teach upon graduation.

Willie Ann Voyten, a sophomore, was elected state secretary of the M.E.N.C. Willie Ann is a member of Longwood's woodwind Ensemble. She is also a member of Longwood's chapter of M.E.N.C. and Sigma Alpha Iota. Studying instrumental and piano she intends to teach upon graduation.

Music Educators National Conference is a professional organization which tries to develop interest in music education by exemplifying the profession by programs and talks given by leaders of the field. M.E.N.C. is a national group affiliated with the National Education Association.

Student Assistants Chosen To Aid New Freshmen

Mary Adkisson, head Student Assistant, has announced the new student assistants for the session 1970-71. These girls are chosen each year to help freshmen adjust to life at Longwood College, especially dorm life.

The Student Assistant will be assigned to a hall in the freshman dorm. The day on which the freshmen arrive, the Student Assistants will stay in their assigned hall the entire day, doing everything from finding a handyman to bringing up the luggage to finding the contact lens that just popped out of that freshman's eye.

The Student Assistants were chosen primarily from the Rising Junior Class, the sister class. However, a limited number of outstanding sophomores and seniors were chosen. The job of the Student Assistant does not end when the Orientation period ends; this job lasts the entire year. During the first few days and this period of adjustment, the freshman needs an upperclassman to whom she can turn for anything. The Student Assistant is usually there, ready and willing to help. The Student Assistants have been highly recommended. Their job is a huge one, but they can do the job well!

Carol McMullen, Bev Hampshire Prepare Honors Presentations

Two students are participating in the Honors Program. These Honors papers, which must be finished by May 4 to be judged by the Honors Committee Examining Board, entitle the students to graduate with honors in their major fields.

Carol McMullen, a German major, chose the topic, "The Elements of the Absurdist Drama of Max Frisch." She has had much background in both French and German literature, including a study of the absurd theatre of such writers as Albert Camus and Jean Paul Sartre.

Bev Hampshire chose to do her paper on the effects of temperature changes on the metabolism of tropical fish. Bev, a Biology major, began working on her paper during the spring of her junior year. Her advisor is Dr. Scott.

These students presented their topics to the Honors Committee for approval last spring and have been working this academic year on research and writing. They will receive six hours of credit upon completion of their papers, after passing an oral examination concerning their topics.

Students Work On Gross Street

Help Human Relations Project

By JO ELLEN REID
and JANE CRAWFORD

This past weekend Longwood College carried on its annual festivities in celebration of May Day. Beginning with a tour of the college, May Pole dance, and ending with a picnic on the mall. A group of twenty paint-splattered, barefoot students arriving at this picnic were greeted with glares, stares, etc. Possibly these looks were not of contempt but of questions to their appearance. In answer to these doubting persons - It should be not they who doubt but the twenty individuals should question them. These few persons had spent the day - not celebrating May Day but humanity. The visitors of Longwood for the weekend would not be expected to know about Gross Street, but their hosts should. It was on this street which these twenty students spent the day cleaning, painting, screening, sheet-rocking, and glazing windows of devastated row house.

The name given to this street is definitely appropriate. As one student commented, "It IS Gross Street." This street consists of twenty-seven row houses inhabited by black citizens of Prince Edward County. These persons share two outside spigots which are the only source of water. There is no plumbing or sewerage and there seems to be little expectation of any in the future. The students peeled as many as three layers of wallpaper held by nails, tacks and staples from the walls before they were able to paint. To their surprise, at times beneath the paper they found nothing. It was necessary for them to construct walls with sheet rock. One door had been patched with tin cans and should have been replaced, but as one student said, "The generosity of the community is outstanding."

The people at the picnic saw only the physical results of the efforts of these students. It was the satisfaction which they received that is more important. One little black girl said, "I like you all." This was not blacks and whites but as one elderly black man stated, "We have to work together," and that is exactly what they did - work together. Kids from two to five helped to paint. Although some of the smaller ones applied blue polka dots to green walls it made no difference. The pleasure in their eyes made up for all mistakes. These persons worked from nine to five and were still unable to finish. And what was the reason for this? As one student said, "Why with six hundred students at Hampden-Sydney College and two thousand at Longwood only twenty were there?" There are no spoken or written words that can express the feelings which these students held from this experience. As one said, "No comment."

This was the last weekend for the work project on Gross Street. It is unfortunate that not more could have experienced what these twenty did. But as one said, "It is easy to talk, but hard to act." After all it was May Day at Longwood. Is it not possible to find time for both traditional celebrations and problems of today?

We realize that the previous comments may be scorned as were the students at the picnic. They appeared in colors of green, blue and white. To others they were colors of paint, but these twenty students would color it real.

Amy Thomas helps with the clean-up and paint-up on Gross Street.

The Week That Should Not Have Been

Chi burning was announced last week in the dining hall because it was decided that the numerous scores were cutting into student study time. But, if one takes a look at last week's schedule they will find that the entire week was planned in such a way that little or no student study could be accomplished. For example, the week began with the required room registration, — the same night, as was announced, Chi burned. Tuesday, April 28, was the only day students had a pseudo reprieve for the only activities scheduled were; a student teacher exodus, and a room registration. On Wednesday evening, until Thursday morning preregistration, Longwood's new endurance test was held. Study time as well as sleep was scarce, as everyone including those who were recovering from the previous night's strenuous hassle were blasted out of bed at 8:55 A.M. by the required fire drill. Those who were blasted should not complain, however, for at 6:45 A.M. the student teachers left to visit their prospective schools and were absent all day. That night, the sophomores were the guinea pigs for the revised preregistration, which was scheduled at the same time as the Pirandello play.

In the midst of all these required activities students were supposed to study and complete projects for the end of the semester marathon, not to mention required class attendance. It would seem then, that if arrangements can be made for the announcement of Chi, because of its disrupting influence, some planning and consideration can be taken in scheduling so many major events in one week.

The Great Wait-In

Registration seemed to be a lightly disguised fiasco. The fact of it seems to be that there were more tears and waiting to get nothing than any other registration within the last few years. There was one consolation — registration the second night went better than the first.

One problem was the inorganization of when the pictures for the I. D. cards would be taken. The ROTUNDA received preregistration reminders last week and included in this was "Don't forget to have your ID picture taken in the Honors Council Room." There was nothing mentioned about having to have the pictures taken before registration. This created a hassle and left students wondering when and why their pictures had to be taken first.

It was felt by the organizers of this registration that it was not really an experiment but that it had resulted from a request from the student body to initiate preregistration. Still, things could have gone better. Course numbers which were closed could have been listed on the walls to eliminate waiting in line for nothing. For all that the numbers were used, we could have drawn a slip that said 1, 2, 3, or 4 since all groups from 1-100 were let in to register at the same time the first night. Many times when a course was required and other required courses could not be changed, students were told to wait. But what was all this waiting for? Apparently it was hoped that an I. B. M. card would magically appear on the horizon. Then after waiting for a card to pop up, there was the waiting line to check out. The whole affair could have been termed a Wait-In.

Perhaps, because the second night for preregistration was better than the first, there is hope that the planners of it are planning better registrations for the future.

From The Board

Various committees have met and presented their recommendations. Carolyn Cummins, chairman of the Evaluation Committee, submitted recommendations for committee members for next year. The committee feels it should be increased by two Freshmen and one rising Junior appointed in the fall. The committee also has made several proposals to the Campus Fees Committee concerning the appropriations of fees based on the organization's evaluations. The Board's proposal, concerning the appointment of the Campus Fees Committee chairman, was approved by the administration. The Examinations Committee decided to send out letters in the fall to various colleges concerning their respective examination policies. By studying these policies, the Examination Committee hopes to utilize an method which may help our present exam system.

The Board accepted Dean Wilson's proposal that during the summer session the new permission blanks will apply only to new students and transfers. This was due to the fact that it is impossible to get an accurate account to the upperclassmen attending summer school. The Board would like to announce that the constitutional changes were approved by the student body. These changes were concerning the office separation of Vice-Chairman of Student Government and Orientation Chairman.

The following students were elected to summer school offices: President of SGA, Nona Davis; Vice-President of SGA and Judicial Board, Mary Alice Clements; Secretary-Treasurer of SGA, Nan Byrd; Judicial Board Chairman, Penny Jones; Residence Board Chairman, Bonnie Irby; Residence Board Vice-Chairman, Selenia Lee; Residence Board Secretary, Phyllis Brown, and Orientation Chairman, Mary King Coleman. Donna Edwards and Sherry Foglesong will serve as student representatives to the Honors Council Committee.

The question of alcohol on campus has been brought up by a few students. Anyone wishing to express their opinions concerning alcoholic beverages on campus should write to Casey Wilkes giving her your ideas and suggestions.

Letters To The Editor

Fed Up

Dear Editor,

I am a rising junior who is completely fed up with the registration system to which we are currently being exposed. I want to use myself as an example. On Wednesday, April 29, I went to Lankford Building at 4:30 p.m. to get my picture taken as a necessary prerequisite for our registration. At 4:45 p.m. we were informed that no more numbers (which were a prerequisite to the picture) would be given until 6:30 p.m. In order to be near the front of the line, I remained in Lankford, bought my dinner there, and proceeded upstairs to sit and wait for the photographer to return at 6:30. The photographer came at 6:45 only to find the doors in which his things were locked. Within the next ten minutes, the line was informed that only rising seniors, with numbers 1-100 could get their numbers to get their pictures taken. Also, the seniors were informed that day students, junior and senior, would be registered first, regardless of number.

And then there was the actual registration. . .

My question is why are the students here at Longwood subjected to experiments such as this which are doomed to failure from the beginning? The absurdity of this experience would astound even the weakest of minds.

Sincerely,
Sharon Breedon

From Chi

Dear Editor:

Chi 1970 would like to thank the ROTUNDA Staff for the editorial, "Chi — Its Meaning and Purpose," in last week's paper. In a further examination of this meaning and purpose, we would like to expand your comments by pointing out the growing goals of Chi which include:

1. More extensive public recognition of academic excellence as reflected in the Honors Program, recognition of students for membership in Geist, the Honors Assembly, etc.
2. Recognition of college functions which strengthen the bonds of respect for cultural and civic activities such as the Heart Fund, Red Cross Bloodmobile, Artist Series, Cancer Crusade, Institute of Southern Culture, and the Visiting Scholars Program as well as Red and White and Green and White class activities.

Evidence of this recognition is reflected in letters of announcement, gratitude and support to individuals and organizations, the hanging of banners, and "Colonade" walks. These communications are not arbitrarily distributed, but given careful consideration. It remains true that because we have a great number of worthwhile activities on campus not all can be recognized each year, but it is the hope of Chi that members of the student body will support these endeavors by their participation and attendance.

As a continuing contribution of tangible gifts to the college, Chi has recently contributed the tulips behind Lankford Building, is publishing in conjunction with Lankford Student Union a Longwood College Song Book, and is soliciting funds from Chi Alumni for a scholarship program, details of which will be available within the next year. These projects are our way of saying "Thank You" to the student body for their continuing support of Chi's positive ideals and goals.

It is becoming more and more evident that if a tradition such as Chi is to continue its existence at Longwood, then it must keep pace with the times which necessitates continual evaluation and relevant changes. As a direct result of such evaluation, the decision was reached to make an announcement this year of the time and place of burning. This announcement was not intended to anger or disappoint individuals, but to properly communicate with members of the college community who were interested in attending this annual event. The real need for this announcement was expressed by groups of students following extensive disruption of the evening study hours of the preceding week. We can only ask that the student body will have respect for our decision and become more cognizant of the real purpose of college attendance.

We would like to thank the ROTUNDA for its continuing support of the ideals and goals of Chi and the student body for the warm reception, support and approval of those members of the student body, faculty and administration who were recognized for their individual accomplishments and service to Longwood.

Most sincerely,
Chi 1970 and 1971

Diploma Mills

Dear Editor,

I was amazed to see in your issue of April 22 an advertisement from the Free Life Church of Hollywood, Florida. At first, I thought my eyes deceived me, but, no there it was. "We Want You To Join Our Church As An Ordained Minister And Have The Right of Doctor of Divinity," the headline read. Then the ad continued: "Enclose a free will donation for the Minister's credentials and license. We also issue Doctor of Divinity Degrees."

In an article entitled "Praise the Lord and Pass the Diplomas," Life Magazine (Nov. 14, 1969) probed extensively into the activities of such diploma mills where ordination is instant, but a PhD. takes longer. Would you believe 22 days? Surely, the Rotunda, whose publication is sponsored by an accredited college which prides itself on high standards, is not so desperate for advertisers that it must resort to hawking the wares of this charlatan and fraud.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Etheridge

(Ed. Note: The advertisement for this church has also appeared in the newspapers of several other colleges with "high standards." One of these newspapers is the William and Mary "Flat Hat.")

After having read the article in "Life" magazine, I feel it is the responsibility of the Florida State government, where "practically no public control is exercised over the establishment of institutions with respect to their educational legitimacy," to do something about these churches and not the ROTUNDA.

Increase Membership

Dear Editor:

Spring at Longwood is always a welcome sight and with it comes the expectation of the annual Chi burning. This year was a very special one as Chi broke a tradition and announced the awaited event. May I commend Chi for its action and also for eliminating the final act of condemning,

Chi, since you have broken one tradition or maybe two, look at yourselves again and break another long standing tradition. Perhaps you need to increase your membership to really represent the student body. The student body has grown in size. Perhaps Chi should do the same.

For Spirit

Dear Editor:

When we think of distinguished contributions to Longwood College, our class, and red and white spirit, one name immediately comes to our minds. To Pat Quinn we owe so much and we have officially recognized her so little.

For her never-ending service to the college, her class, and her color; for her spirit of cooperation and her leadership without which much of the last four red & white skits, May Day, Class of '70 Freshman and Sophomore productions, especially Class of '70 songs and much else would not have been possible, we commend Pat Quinn.

Carolyn Cummins,
Marcia Harris,

Ross And Lemen Win Awards In Shows At UVA And Farmville

Miss Annie Lee Ross and Mrs. Janice Lemen, instructors in our Art Department at Longwood, recently won awards in two different art shows. One showing was held in the Farmville Shopping Center from April 19 through April 25. This exhibit was sponsored by the Central Virginia Chapter of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. Mrs. Lemen entered an oil painting, "Rose window," and a serigraph of Longwood House. Miss Ross exhibited two woodcuts. They were, "White Narcissus" and "Violets." "White Narcissus" was judged best in its class.

The other showing was held at the University of Virginia. Miss Ross entered "Screech Owllet" and "Narcissus," which are woodcuts. Mrs. Lemen entered "Venetian Valentine" which is a serigraph. All three were rated as preferred.

Varsity Lacrosse Has Winning Streak Goes To State Tournament May 7, 8

After a two game losing streak the Varsity Lacrosse team came back with two strong wins in the past week against Westhampton College and Roanoke College. Meanwhile, the Junior Varsity team met its first defeat against St. Catherine in Richmond.

Last Wednesday the two teams traveled to Richmond for their fourth game of the season. Despite the two recent losses to William and Mary College and Bridgewater College, their spirits were high. Beginning the game with three goals in the first five minutes, the Longwood Ladies regained their confidence. By the end of the first half, Longwood held a six point lead over the Westhampton team, leading seven to one.

The Longwood College team kept up the scoring blaze as Westhampton's defense tried to block them. The entire game was punctuated by good passes and catches. The final score was 13-6.

In the Junior Varsity game the team went in with hope of an undefeated season, but they were soon running for all they could. Although St. Catherine's girls, a private girls high school, were younger, they had some girls who were veterans of six or seven years of experience in Lacrosse, while the Longwood team is mainly composed of first year players. The score was 7-2. This gave the Junior Varsity a season of three wins and one loss.

On May Day the Varsity team opposed Roanoke College at 1 o'clock on Barlow Field. Since this was the first year Roanoke has had a competitive team, Longwood hoped for an easy win. The first few minutes of the game proved this to be false, as Roanoke plowed through our defense to score two goals. The defense quickly retaliated by switching from man to man defense to a zone set-up in front of the goal. This held for Roanoke, except for one more goal until the half, at which the score was tied 3-3. At the beginning of the half the zone held the Roanoke attack down to one more goal, while Longwood pulled through with two more giving us a slim 5-4 victory.

Monday, May 4, the team was supposed to travel to Amherst to meet Sweet Briar, however the rain had different ideas and the game was cancelled. This gives the team a winning 3-2 season.

Friday and Saturday, May 7 and 8, the Varsity team, plus two substitutes from the second team, Renea Harrison and Terri Gadsby, will attend the Virginia Women's Lacrosse Association Tournament at Westhampton in Richmond. There they will meet several teams they have played in the regular season, as well as some they did not play such as Madison. Games will be played Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. Then after lunch at Westhampton, the players on the Virginia Lacrosse team will be named. Last year Senior Barbara Snellings received an Honorable Mention. This year they hope to have several players on the second or even the first state teams.

Old P.E. 'Dresses' Outdated As New Gynsuits Shown

Are you tired of hemming your gynsuits every year or washing and ironing them when you forget to go to the laundry?

Well this story may not help you, but the incoming class of 1974 will not have your worries. The figure-flattering gynsuits of the present will be obsolete next year.

The decision to change was brought about by the Physical Education Department this year. After checking the apparel from various companies and having some of these outfits worn and laundered by some of the Junior Physical Education majors, a new type of gynsuit was ordered.

The new outfit consists of two pairs of stretch nylon shorts with an elastic waistband, one red pair and one blue pair, and two cotton knit shells, one light blue and one white one. The red shells will alternate with green to coordinate with the class colors of each new class.

The new attire is completely washable and drip dry. It needs no ironing and dries quickly. The shorts have a hip pocket for cigarettes, or for notes of the day, etc.

The price is approximately the same as for the old gynsuits, and they will be ordered from the same manufacturer, Aldrich and Aldrich Company, Chicago, Illinois. Eat your hearts out upper classmen!

LC Netters Win Over R-M, 3-2; First JV Match Played

Winning its fourth match of the season, the Longwood Varsity tennis team defeated Randolph-Macon Woman's College here last week 3-2. The team has lost only one game, and was their first one against William and Mary.

Lynne Coleman playing number one singles, easily defeated her opponent 6-1 and 6-2. Freda Lunsford and Debbie Ellen also scored easy victories in singles play. They both won 6-2 and 6-1. In a hard fought double match Lynn Kwiatkowski and Laurel Baldwin were downed 10-8 and 7-5. Longwood netters Sharon Farmer and Lynda Driver also lost 6-2 and 6-3 in a well played match.

"The girls looked good," Coach Mrs. Harris said. "I am pleased with their hard work and devotion to the team. They devote 15 to 20 hours a week to their tennis and this work has paid off," continued Mrs. Harris.

In the first Junior Varsity match of the season the "Blue and Whites" were again victorious defeating Ferrum Junior College 4-1.

While freshman Bobbi Ellen lost a hard fought contest 6-4 and 6-2, B.J. Rogers and Becky West won their singles matches 6-1, 6-4 and 6-0. In doubles Carol Chorey and Debbie Ellen won 6-0, 6-0 and Sharon Farmer and Mary Johnson won 6-1, 6-0.

On Wednesday, three Longwood players, Lynne Coleman, Freda Lunsford, and Diane Weymouth left for Mary Baldwin where they competed in the Mid-Atlantic Lawn Tennis Association Tournament. "Each year Longwood sends representatives to this tournament," said Mrs. Harris.

On May 8 the Varsity team will play Westhampton there, and May 12 the team will journey to Mary Washington College. Their last match of the season will be home against Madison at 3:30 on Barlow Courts. Come out and support the team.

Members of Orchestra, Sherry Williams, Jane Sakahawg, and Kaydell Edwards relax in a offstage pose during practice for their annual Spring Concert. The Concert will be given in Jarman Auditorium tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30. It includes class studies for the comic touch as well as orchestra. Members returning from last year are the flashlight dance and the spotlight establishment.

Navaho Indian Finds Reservation Life Squalid And Unsatisfactory

By LISE WORTHINGTON

Why are American Indians revolting, trying to recover Alcatraz and other lost areas? According to Jack Betsule, a 22-year-old Navaho Indian from New Mexico, much of the problem exists in the reservations run by the government. Jack admitted that he lived with his six brothers and sisters on a reservation for eight years. There he found living conditions to be grossly inadequate. When asked about living facilities Jack mumbled that many of his friends are still forced to live in hogans, a dwelling composed of sticks and other odds and ends. According to Jack, many of the living quarters lack electricity, proper sanitary disposal units or even a constant water supply. When asked why reservation life is so poor, Jack could only answer that many of the Indians lack steady employment. It was with a quick grin, however, that Jack mentioned that his father works for the railroad, and that they no longer live on the reservation.

When queried about Navaho customs, Jack smiled sheepishly and admitted that many old customs still exist. For example, many tribal dances are still held. When Jack enlisted, his people danced for his safe return. Other dances are held for sickness and good crop production. Another custom that is still practiced is that if an Indian dies in a house (other than a hospital) the house is burned to the ground. Jack explained that in order to rid the dead man's spirit from the dwelling the house must be burned.

When it was time to return to Fort Bragg, Jack confided that he has had enough of reservation life and old customs. When his army stint is over he hopes to travel to California and take advantage of the vocational school training that will be open to him. Just before leaving Jack promised that in the year 2000 he and his family would not be living in a hogan on a reservation. Jack is progressive. He wants something more for the American Indian, even if it is only Alcatraz.

Excessive Details Disappoint Readers Of 'In Cold Blood'

By CATHERINE LEARY

The long awaited and much heralded "nonfiction novel," "IN COLD BLOOD" by Truman Capote has finally reached the market. The book is a rather long, (343 pages), true account of a multiple murder and its consequences. It specifically involves the November, 1959 murders of a wealthy Talcomb, Kansas farmer, Herbert Clutter, his wife, and teenage son and daughter by two apparently psychopathic killers, Perry Smith and Richard Smith. Because of the several years of research involved in gathering information for this novel and the notoriety of the author undertaking the task, the book has received much prepublication publicity. With completion and publication it will undoubtedly be a disappointment to those expecting a resulting work of quality comparable to Capote's efforts of research.

The extensive research, or rather Capote's inability to discard in publication the many details collected, is the central downfall of the book. Capote often says in five pages what could be said in two, and would be better discarded altogether. Lengthy diversions into such cute little irrelevancies as the relationship of Nancy Clutter's boy friend and her best girl friend and the sentimental home-life of the detective who solved the case serve little purpose other than expanding the distance between the book's perch and the front.

The excessive length of the book could perhaps be more justifiably delved more deeply into the psychological complexities of the criminals involved. For all the surface details contained about the two men, at the end of the book the reader finds himself unsatisfied in his understanding of them and their motives. Whereas the book is an interesting, better than journalistic account of a hideous crime, it is on the whole a disappointment to those who were expecting more from Capote's extensive preparation than a stylistically presented research study.

she was born, a statement prompted by a story written in her childhood which she stamped with a date some years before her birth. Her first published work, however, was "Northward to Albion," a children's book. From this she went into the field of literature for young adults with such works as "Red Lion and Gold Dragon" and "The Jade Pagoda," then into adult literature. "My books are now direct-

"Imaginary Gardens" is at present enjoying a good deal of success and Dr. Sprague admits, with reason, to a certain pride in her latest work.

Women's Liberation Movement Provides Interest For 1970's

Courtesy of Women's Liberation

By CAROLYN CUMMINS

In this age of social protest there is one movement in which ongo students should show particular interest. The 1960's were marked by civil rights and student rights movement while the 1970's may unveil a full-scale women's rights movement. Unfortunately, few people understand the women's liberation movement (WLM). It is an attack on a male-dominated society where women are second-class citizens. It wants to change social attitudes and customs to permit women to function as separate and equal persons.

In 1848 the first Women's Rights Convention met in Seneca Falls, N.Y. These women sought and eventually got some states to liberalize divorce laws and to grant women the right to own property, make contracts, and bring suit. With the coming of industry, the women's role changed. Factories, canneries, public schools and hospitals took away some of her functions, giving her leisure time to participate in this movement. In the 1920's, after she got the right to vote, this movement tempered. Soon electricity, household appliances, and refrigeration added to her leisure time. During WWII while the men were off fighting, she showed her ability to do the traditional male occupations. But after the war she again took her place as wife and mother. This was the age of Dr. Spock where women were told that child-rearing was the most challenging thing that she could do.

The mid-60's saw a revival of the women's liberation movement on two fronts. In 1963 Betty Friedan's "Feminine Mystique" was published telling women that their role as a producer of children was trivial and empty. Under her leadership in 1966 the National Organization of Women (NOW) was founded to attack job inequalities and other injustices through the courts, to get more women elected to public office and as a legislative lobby. This organization admits men and now has over 35 chapters including one in Richmond. The other group sprang from those women working in the civil rights movement. They found themselves being used for sweeping floors, cooking meals, making coffee, typing, and bedding down. The actual protesting was considered too dangerous for women. In mid-1967 these dejected women started their own organizations. Some of these are: Sisters of Lilit, the Galtstones, the Redstockings, the Sisters All Learning Together (SALT), Women's Liberation Front (WOLF), Media Women, the Feminists, the Radical Feminists, and the Women's International Terrorist Conspiracy (WITCH).

The WLM has a stigma of silliness. Female Liberation Cell 16 wears tight pants, polo shirts, heavy custom-made mountain boots, and short hair in protest of the male-dominated society. At Temple University eight women take the ROTC course. At Berkeley 20 take a karate class and dress in the men's locker room. At one Miss America contest women took off their bras and burned them. There are also those who give the movement a bad name by stripping in public and using dirty language.

For-the-most-part this is a revolt against being treated as a sex object, a guinea pig in the use of birth control pills, a chick by peace radicals, and second class thinker. These women resent the equating of manliness to Tom Jones and womanliness to Rachael Welch. Thirty-one million women work—one third are secretaries and clerical workers, and over one-fifth are waitresses or domestics. The average yearly income for a full-time working female is $4,150, while it is $7,200 for a full-time working male. The major occupations of working women are teaching, nursing, making clothes, cooking and cleaning—simply extensions of their home functions. The WLM seeks to change these situations.

There are five states where a wife must get court approval before she can operate an independent business. In five states (not all the same as in the first example) a wife may not dispose of her property without her husband's consent. In three states, women are excluded from jury duty. Such inequalities exist throughout America and the WLM wants to rectify them.

Some factions of the WLM advocate living in female communes, avoiding men and overthrowing the male-dominated society. But most of the WLM is dedicated to getting better jobs, abortion reforms and more child-care centers and to eliminating sex difference in education, home life, politics and manners. The membership is mostly under 30, radical, white, and located in New York, Boston, Washington, Pittsburgh, Chicago, San Francisco and on college campuses. Behind these activists are many nonjoiners who have indicated their support in their voting patterns reading habits, and letters to Congressmen and to editors.

This movement has its opposition. Some women feel that their present position is a natural one and resent the belittling of it. Those women already well-established in the male-dominated world resist the WLM because they like the sense of superiority they receive from their achievement. Some men view the WLM as an assault on their masculinity by a few uppity women. Others feel that the women involved must be frigid, lesbian, or self-haters. Most are frightened or angered by the idea of restructuring the society's role of the woman and the family.

Like all protests, this one has its radicals, but they do not make the rest of the movement invalid. Hopefully the WLM will be influential in rectifying the injustices, equalizing the opportunities, and changing public opinion. An unhappy wife is not a good wife. If she would be happier with a full or part-time career, then she should pursue it. Those who want to maintain their role as a full-time wife and mother should be allowed to also. But even more crucial those who do not desire marriage should not be condemned and should be allowed to pursue their chosen profession on an equal basis with men. The WLM reminds us that the American Dream does not apply to men only. The decade of the 70's may prove to be an enlightening one.

This was the scene on Friday at 11:10 a.m., when students, faculty, and administration gathered under the flagpole at Hampden-Sydney for a memorial service honoring the seven dead Kent State students. The Reverends Vassey and Griffin and Professors Heine-mann and Meliwaite from H-SC were the main speakers. Another memorial service for the students was held on Wheeler Mall at Longwood on Monday night.

Action On College Campuses Reflect Presidential Decision To Expand War

By ETHEL REITER

President Nixon's decision to send U. S. troops into Cambodia has re-awakened the dormant peace movement. Students are massively striking, marching, demonstrating, mourning, rioting, burning, and protesting in a nationwide storm of rage and passion. Morbid shadows of bloodshed and death no longer exist as imaginations of disaster, rather as realities.

It is absurd for college administrative officials to restrict or advise students against demonstrations. ALL campuses in Virginia and over the nation will be affected by the realization of the murder of innocence and disgust over extension of the war. Polarization and alienation are inevitable when protestors are referred to as "bums" and "choleric young intellectuals" by the President and his rhetorical scapegoat, Vice-President Agnew. A weary society sick of far, foreign involvement, and death finds the promise of military victories through escalation little consolation. American youth resents Nixon's deceptive policies. Only ten days after announcing successful Vietnamization of the war, he called for more U. S. troops to combat Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia and resumed limited bombings of North Vietnam.

The youths killed were not 'bums' or radicals, and the majority of protestors are not. The violence cannot be considered as a result of parental permissiveness or childish stupidity. Several American students simply cannot respect a President who, without the consent of Congress, reescalates a hopeless war in a country whose people are generally ignorant, uncooperative, and unappreciative of our efforts.

However, it would be gravely erroneous and narrow-minded to condone and justify the behavior of radical students. It is senseless to fight violence with violent dissent. It is obvious where this leads; evidence being the Kent State University massacre. Pseudo-intellectuals and pseudo-radicals do more harm than good. To ignorantly and violently wave the banner of peace and love is ridiculously ironic. And naturally, it is this mindless minority that is the loudest and receives the most attention. This radical subgroup delights at the present social and political crisis of our nation and would like nothing better than to see a spread of violent protest. Bombings, arson, and destruction cannot create peace and social change, only chaos

Student banners later removed caused much discussion and dissent.

Concerned students held a peace rally on Wheeler Mall which consisted of speakers and a candlelight burning.

Financial Assistance Regulations Stated For Student Jobs

Students should be aware of the following regulations concerning off-campus employment:

- 1) Students employed off-campus must register with the Financial Aid office, presenting a letter from their parents indicating approval.
- 2) The Director of Financial Aid will notify the Dean of the College and Dean of Students of any students employed off-campus, giving place of employment as well as work schedule.
- 3) The Dean of College will confer with those students employed off-campus who do not have satisfactory academic records.

Students employed on-campus should be aware of the following regulations:

- 1) Accumulative average of 2.0 is required for student employment on-campus except by permission of the Dean of the College.
- 2) A ten-twelve hour work week represents a maximum employment schedule except by permission of Dean of College.

Any students seeking employment should present Miss Watkins, Financial Aid advisor. Information concerning academic scholarships and other financial assistance may also be obtained from Miss Watkins.

Abortion - A Two Sided Subject

Abortion has come to be a popular word in today's world. Once almost obsolete, it now hits the headlines in many state and national newspapers, as state legislatures attempt to set up abortion laws for their people. As it now stands in many states, a legal abortion may only be obtained to save the life of a pregnant woman.

Legislators, pro and con, are hastening with new suggestions about abortion laws. These people for extended abortion laws have presented the suggestions that abortion be legalized if done by a licensed physician in an accredited hospital up to 19 weeks after conception, provided the expectant mother's physical or mental health would be seriously affected by continual pregnancy, if in case of rape or incest, or at times when the fetus seems reasonably sure to be malformed or mentally retarded.

Defendants of liberalized abortion laws cite the facts that 31,000 women each year are raped in this country and that one out of four become pregnant. After the 1964 rubella epidemic in the United States, which claimed 30,000 lives, 15,000 children were born handicapped, yet in these cases, under present laws, these women could not have a legal abortion. Most of the women seeking abortion today are married and 70% were attempting some form of birth control at the time they became pregnant.

Some say why bring a deformed or unwanted child into the world? Why break up a happy home because of a faulty birth control system?

Opponents of the liberalized abortion laws say that the child may be unwanted by the real mother, but what about the childless couple? With vaccines, genetic counseling and other recent medical advances, it is not as dangerous on the mother or baby if a disease is caught. The risk of embry malformation is one in four if the disease is contracted in the first eight weeks of pregnancy, and one in ten if contracted in the eight to twelve weeks period of pregnancy.

The opponents also say that it is impossible for a doctor to say for certain in the early stages of pregnancy that the fetus is deformed. Suppose a woman has an abortion, and then finds out the child she was carrying was normal? What does she do then? How does she feel?

Defendants say that state legislatures are dominated by men who don't know what its like to feel, "I am pregnant and ecstatic about it," or "I am pregnant and desperate." Also, they say influences of the Roman Catholic Church have kept the popular will from being put into law.

Opponents say they are not attacking womanhood. They have more respect for womanhood because they believe in the sanctity of life, and life is the unique force which only women can bring into this world.

Over 1,000,000 American women each year resort to illegal abortions performed by themselves with coat hangers, poisons, screw drivers, and other dangerous tools, or by shadowy practitioners who often have had no medical skills. Eight thousand women die every year from consequences, making illegal abortion the leading cause of maternal death.

Opponents say extension of legalized abortion laws will not help the poor, but will only be for the upper class. The poorer people could not pay the $350 to $1,000 cost of the abortion. Also, they would be under pressure from relief case workers to have abortions because they have to keep down welfare costs.

Who is right and who is wrong? Who has the power to say who will live and who will die? Someone will have to decide, and that decision will most definitely be made in the near future. What are your opinions.

Free Expression?

Dear Editor:

Once again I find it necessary to use THE ROTUNDA as a forum for my rhetoric. It is the best way to communicate with the whole student body. I only wish that more students would express their opinions in their newspaper.

During the past week two protest banners were displayed on this campus. One, "In Memoriam," was willingly removed by its owner after it was suggested to her that it may provoke outside agitators to action. The other, "America, R.I.P." was removed by its owner at the request of the President through the campus police. Instead of allowing the owner to keep her sign, she was told that she could reclaim it from the President.

Although I do not agree with the implications of "America, R.I.P.," I do realize that some people feel this way and I respect their right to express their feelings. I would prefer that our campus dissenters hang a banner out a window than paint the words on a wall, demonstrate on the mall, boycott and prevent others from attending classes, burn buildings, throw rocks or shoot someone. Some students complained about the sign being on their dorm — I am glad to see that Longwood students can get upset about something other than Slater floor. I hope that these students will do more than complain to their head resident; I hope that they will write to the Congressmen and the President explaining their sentiments. I also hope that if the time ever comes that our campus police will respond as efficiently to violence as they did to banner protesting.

I remind all my fellow students that not words on a banner, but actions and reactions could make the sign come true.

Banner Defended

To the Editor:

Out of sympathy for the Kent State students who were killed and a feeling of disgust and regret at what America has become I hung a mourning banner outside my window. I read, America, R.I.P. (rest in peace). The banner was hung May 6 and I heard no disapproving comments from any of the "authorities." On the night of May 9 the Campus Police (Gestapo?) were sent to have me remove the banner. They told me President Willett wanted the banner taken to him. Naturally I let them have the banner. To reclaim the banner, I have to go to have a conference with President Willett. Having studied a Student Handbook for Longwood College, I could find no regulation about flying a banner on the dormitory. Actions such as the ones taken by the President and the Campus Police in my case serve only to stifle the self-expression and emotions of the students and breed campus unrest. Regrettably a Longwood "lady," Donna Wadsworth

Opinion Imposed?

Dear Editor,

Last week for a very brief time a black mourning banner was hung on Wheeler. The banner read "IN MEMORIAM." It was put there to express my sense of tragedy, and that of others at the death of four Kent State students. That was its sole purpose. There was no intent to protest or involvement in Cambodia (or any part of Indo-China), nor was it meant to support and/or incite riots. I felt that a mourning banner was a quiet, sincere expression of sorrow. Granted, it was a public expression of my personal feelings. However, I do not feel that a banner would impose my feelings on others.

I was told that "many" students had objected to the banner. According to my information these girls felt that its location implied that the entire dorm shared my feeling. There have been several signs hung in the same place this year, and the entire dorm has not sanctioned them. But that is not what worried me the most. Many girls seemed to think it was a symbol of insurrection, or at least an attempt at subversion. As I stated above, this was not my intention. The words "In Memoriam" are used in conjunction with mourning someone's death. I know of no other use of this phrase. Perhaps Longwood students should be required to own a dictionary, or at least check one before they jump to conclusions.

The mourning banner was up for less than 24 hours. It was taken down (at least on my part) because of the students' objections. This letter is an apology to those students who felt that I had imposed my personal feelings on them. I am sincerely sorry that my action offended them, and I hope they will accept my apology. However, I would like to put a question to these girls: Is public mourning really an imposition on you?

Sincerely,
Pieter Laundon

Lost Or Strayed?

Dear Editor,

Several weeks ago there appeared in the dorm a petition for liquor on campus. Mysteriously one day it disappeared. What became of it?

The legislative board minutes, April 27, 1970 state, "The Board decided it was not obligated to take any actions at this time concerning alcohol on campus." The minutes do not, however, state why.

A report on drinking on other college campuses has been compiled by Dean Wilson. This information has not been posted or announced.

In general, all actions for liquor on campus have been ignored or just given no consideration. The mere fact that any action has been taken at all on the part of this somewhat apathetic campus is evidence of a strong desire to have the proposal objectively considered.

Shouldn't the student body be more informed about proposals which circulate on campus? That petition?

Sincerely,
Salli Akers

Apathy At L.C.!!

To the Editor:

The total blanket of apathy that covers the Longwood College community is very sad indeed (LC) seems to breed apathy. But even sadder still is the deliberate attempt of the administration to stop those few students who are concerned from becoming involved and from acting to express their beliefs and ideals. It seems to me that when parents grant blanket permission they are saying that they believe their daughter is mature enough to make her own decisions. Therefore, it should not be the privilege of the Dean of Students to call (collect, even) parents about their daughters' activities. I am referring specifically to the students who went to U.Va. to hear a well-known speaker with whom certain members of our administration do not agree. This seems to me to be a breach of trust somewhere, and I personally resent being treated like a six-year-old rather than a twenty-year-old.

And while I'm griping, I also resent being harassed by a head resident with 18th century values, about my activities. (It is very sad that some of our head residents can find nothing better to do than gossip with each other and with some students about "their girls," who have "gone astray.") It is neither her right, duty, or privilege to impose her beliefs on "her girls" and I'm getting sick of her telling me, oh, very subtly, and with all the graciousness to be had, that I am an immoral person, when she doesn't even know what I've been doing. Seems like she's been taking lessons from Vice-President Agnew.

Gripe number three: I resent the disgusting ways our black students and our black guests are treated by the administration and employees (i.e. head residents). Most are covert acts, but there are enough overt to be felt. It is time that the fact be realized that these are not objects but people and should be treated as such.

Thank you for your ear,
Peace and Power,
Travis Smith

Proper Channels?

Dear Editor:

If a person wants something done on this campus, she is advised to go through the "proper channels." At a press conference on March 18 (which was over a month ago) I asked Dr. Willett what were the proper channels to go through to see about having alcoholic beverages consumed on campus. He said to consult Legislative Board, and I did so in a letter and requested an answer. In return I received a phone call from the president of Legislative Board asking me to wait until after Ring Dance Weekend (April 11) to start a petition or such, so that the board could see how the situation went with beer on campus one night. I felt this was a reasonable request. In this same phone conversation I was asked to come to an open meeting of the board a week after Ring Dance to discuss the matter. Also, I was informed that I would need a petition to see any action, but the person did not know how many people I would need to sign this petition and she said she would find out. I was unable to attend the open board meeting due to four tests during that week. I never heard from Legislative Board again.

Now I went through the so-called "proper channels" and I feel as though I was put off. Because I didn't attend the open board meeting I don't see why the board had the right to ignore my letter. On May 5, I called her. She, in reply, said she thought I was going to attend the open board meeting. Then, I asked her how many people I needed to sign a petition. She said a fourth of the student body which consisted of four hundred or five hundred people. There is a difference of a hundred people there. I would think that the Legislative Board should be able to tell me exactly how many people I needed to sign a petition and not some misbush about four hundred or five hundred people. And that's not really the main point; why has it taken over a month to find out how many people are needed to sign a petition? I was courteous to the board and the administration by trying to do things in a proper manner. I feel the board was lackadaisical in this matter, and the "proper channel" in this case was a bummer.

Unimpressed,
Linda Lee Jones

What's A University?

By BILL FRAZIER

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA

A university is a place for learning and knowledge; to be taught and nurtured — but if we are not aware, do not comment on what is happening around us, no one will. It is our duty to protest actions that we deem unacceptable. It is our duty to work for change, wherever and whenever it is needed. This is our country. What good is an education which prepares us for a society which is ultimately not for living in? For these reasons a university must speak out — it simply cannot remain silent to the injustices and stupidities of our society.

I cannot support any country — least of all my own — which slaughters 500 women and babies at the U.S. La; I cannot support National Guardsmen shooting on an unarmed crowd; I cannot support a President who calls protesters "Bums," or a Vice-President who calls them "thieves, perverts and irrational people." I will not sit idly by and watch my country stagnate — I am proud and relieved that universities feel they must protest — even if that means shutting them down. We are at a watershed.

The blood battle in Vietnam must end. We don't have to be the world's policeman — let us get out and return that poor land to its people.

The time for sitting around is gone — action must be taken; preferably in the universities rather than in the streets. I support any university's action to bring a return to reason in our country.

and anarchy. We need not destroy any public order and civil liberty to make the government aware of our discontent and disgust with its war policies.

Our nation is unfortunately succumbing to an Era of Irrationality: senseless student rage, senseless killings by National Guardsmen, senseless war. We are in an age of gloom, chaos, and tragedy. One cannot help but to take on a Fierlingian view of the world, where suffering humanity writhes in a rage of adversity, and "lost teacups full of our ashes floated by."

Elastic, String, Hot Oil Set Scene For Orchesis Concert

The annual Spring Concert presented by the Longwood Modern Dance group, Orchesis, was given last Wednesday and Thursday nights at 7:30 in Jarman.

The open sequence, "Five Psalms," represented various phases and characteristics of life. These were executed well, a choreography was done by Mrs. Betty Bowman. One of the most outstanding of the Psalms, "Let us number our days," was a beautiful study of shapes and movements, done in the form of a prayer.

The class studies bordered on the modern theatre, as such props as strings attached to the toes, elastic webbing, and even one ingenious dance used the various sounds made by the world today as its accompaniment.

Two solos were presented, one by Debbie Henshaw and the other by Pam Patterson, both were choreographed by Pam Patterson.

Returning from last year, the "Flashlight dance" and the spotlight dance, "The Establishment," were great hits again this year. This type of inventiveness was also witnessed in the usage of light in a new dance "Improvisations." With the help of an opaque projector, colored oils were shown mixing together to form eerie shadows on a screen. This highlighted the forms of the two dancers as they improvised to the music.

The big hit of the night proved to be "Bach Revisited," a satire on the elegant music used earlier as the setting of a serious dance study of flowing movement. However, "Bach Revisited," was by no means serious. Conductor, Fran Anthony, directed the most hilarious combination track meet, fencing class, scooter derby, and dance class ever imagined.

The entire concert was as it has been advertised, "A Delightful Evening of Dance."

Madison and LC got along fine, off the field. Here some of our Varsity players share a tournament mascot with a Madison player. Longwood graduate, Jane Erdman, front right, played on the Virginia Club Team.

Tournament Held, Two LC Players Named

Longwood's Lacrosse team represented the school at the annual Virginia Women's Lacrosse Association Tournament May 8 and 9. Amid flutters, sight-seeing, and sore muscles, they did well, receiving two wins and having two players picked to attend the district tournament.

It seemed the team to beat in Richmond this week end was Madison College. Unfortunately Longwood didn't. Neither did anyone else for that matter. The Longwood Lacrosse team ended its season well with two wins out of three games at Westhampton.

Friday afternoon the L.C. players faced the most nervous game of the entire season, Madison College. Madison proceeded to pile up goals immediately, and even though the L.C. defense pulled together well, the Madison offense outran and outplayed them to a towering final score of 19-2.

The next morning found the L.C. team warming up at 8:30 a.m. ready to go at 9 o'clock against Randolph-Macon Women's College from Lynchburg. The game was a complete fiasco with L.C. passing and catching like beginners, however R-MWC was playing just as badly and maybe a little worse. The game improved at the half, and the scored did too, and except for RMWC's first home Bobby Shirley, the going was pretty easy. The final score was Longwood 6 R-MWC 3. Following the Randolph-Macon game the Longwood team rested for their game against Sweet Briar College. They were looking forward to this game for two very good reasons. One, the game scheduled in the regular season had been cancelled because of rain and secondly, Sweet Briar's coach Diane Davis will be teaching here at Longwood next year and she especially wanted to win that game.

The first half went slow, it seemed that both teams were evenly matched, the half closed with a 2-2 tie. In the second half Longwood started out strongly and kept it up throughout the game, scoring four more goals while holding SBC down to none. The final score was 6-2.

Eleven colleges were represented at the Tournament. Longwood, Madison, William and Mary, Hollins, Lynchburg, Mary Washington, Westhampton, Roanoke, Sweet Briar, Bridgewater, Randolph-Macon, and a team composed of college graduates, the Virginia Club team.

Players were being rated for the district teams. Of these Longwood's third man, Barbara Jenkins, was chosen for fourth team and Sherry Williams received an Honorable Mention. As expected, Madison and W&M constituted the first team; with a smattering of other schools.

Archery Team Is Victorious In First Matches

The Varsity team hosted Madison College here last Tuesday. This was their first meet of the season. Longwood won with a score of 2,300 to Madison's 2,100. High scorer of the match was Georgia Freeman with a score of 531. Also shooting were Susan Stutz, Barbara Criffin, Penny Edrly, and Jude Guidice.

On the following Thursday, the team traveled to Westhampton in Richmond to play them, and they were again victorious, 2,300 to 2,000. This was the first time in six years that the Longwood team has beaten Westhampton. Georgia Freeman was again the high scorer with a score of 550. Sophomore Susan Stutz placed second in the match.

Tuesday, the team had an away game at Randolph-Macon in Lynchburg and hopes were high for victory.

The state tournament will be held at Westhampton Friday, and the coach, Miss Ripley, will take eight girls to represent Longwood, these will be chosen from the high scores made at practice in the next week.

The AST pitcher and catcher had quite a few conferences Monday but North-Main Cunningham still downed them 8-3.

Creativity and variety are the passwords for this year's Annual Student Art Exhibit.

Annual Student Art Exhibit Featured In Library Gallery

Currently in the Library Gallery is the Annual Student Art Exhibit. This exhibit, which will continue until May 20, features work done in various art courses. This year the show includes more crafts than in previous years, this year's addition is tie-dyed and stitchery pillows. One pillow which takes advantage of its spontaneous tie-dyed design to employ stitchery is #54 by Phyllis King.

There are several painting categories. A watercolor, #7, done by Brooke Baxter, shows a pillar of a dilapidated house painted in mystical colors of gray and blue. An acrylic by Sherry Van Walkenburgh, #13, employs a small canvassboard window adhered to the canvas to give a three-dimensional effect. A painting-collage by Sandy Cordle, #31, includes Andy Warhol, Peter Max, and the statue of Liberty to show the effect of pop-art in our culture.

Advertising designs and TV spots are also included in this show. One, #26, by Margaret Ware, is an advertisement for Wanamaker's Department store. Another, this one in the hall, is a commercial expressing love for mankind through the phrase, "The Blind are also Color Blind," #6 by Linda Walsh.

These are just a few of the many things included in this year's Student Exhibit. Many more works are scattered throughout the library, and some may be seen on the Art Department hall on the second floor of Grainger.

Spring Colloquium Of Asian Studies Held Participation Poor

The Spring Colloquium of the Virginia Consortium for Asian Studies was presented at Longwood, Saturday, May 9. Student representation was poor. About ten students attended part of the lectures and films throughout the day. However, many scholars and professors from other institutions in Virginia attended the Colloquium.

Freshman, Becca Carroll, enjoyed the Colloquium and was particularly interested in "Buddhist and Hindu Concepts in American Thought and Culture" as presented by Kurt F. Leidecker of Mary Washington College.

Different lectures of the Colloquium were of interest to various groups. Mary F. Williams of Randolph-Macon Women's College spoke on "Far Eastern Influences on the Arts of the West," while T. Sato lectured about "The Greek Classical Theatre and Noh Theatre: A Structural Comparison." Richard C. Rowland of Sweet Briar College presented theories on "Echoes from the East in Contemporary Verse." Following the lectures and films and preceding other films, the speakers and participants held a group discussion.

From The Board

Student Government Committees are continuing their organization of their various groups. Legislative Board has reviewed and accepted the list of nominees for next year's Evaluation Committee, submitted by their present chairman, Carolyn Cummins. These girls were asked to serve on the committee: Jeanne Woolfolk, chairman, Val White, Lee Sharr, Dragon Chandler, Wendy Searle, and Kitty Willis. Carolyn Latham will be asked to serve as the Junior member and two freshmen will be appointed in the fall. The Campus Gess Committee has appointed Melinda Lewis as chairman next year and Nan Sayles, the Sophomore representative, will serve as chairman her Junior year.

The GYRE and VIRGINIAN were asked to submit their nominations for next year's advisors. The two publications were also requested to submit a statement of the duties and responsibilities of their advisor to the Legislative Board.

Junior Class officers, President Nancy Fowles, Vice President Verona Leake, Secretary Martha Marchase, Treasurer Beisy Craig, Historian Donna Gibson.

Womens Liberation Movement

Saturday, May 9, Challenge '70, at a workshop organized by Young Republicans, The Women's Liberation Movement was among several topics for seminars. S. Jane Chittom, a professor of philosophy at U.V.A. and Debbie Marquel, daughter of the Richmond organizer of N.O.W. were the speakers.

Miss Chittom emphasized the need for society to offer equal employment opportunities for women, from 24 hours day care centers, conscription for women. She also felt that women's education did not prepare them for procuring employment. Miss Marquel talked about dating. She suggested that girls begin to share the costs of a date and that they open their own doors. She also complained that the women are pictured as unintelligent and helpless especially in the media of television where men usually solve the household problems in the commercials.

Authenticity And Realism Provide Easy Reading For Current Best Seller

By DIANE STOUT

THE HOUSE ON THE STRAND. A Current Best-Seller by Daphne du Maurier. 1969. Garden City, New York: Doubleday and Company, Inc. 298 pages.

Miss du Maurier has combined authenticity, realism, and mysticism into an intricately woven tale of a young man's experiences with hallucinogenic drugs. All his experiments take him back in time to the fourteenth century. As he becomes involved with his new-found world, his real world loses its appeal — his wife becomes dull and sometimes rather disgusting, his children become boring and impossible, and their presence becomes a hindrance. The realistic, mystical web of this ancient-modern Gothic tale created by Daphne du Maurier, will hold the reader's attention until the last surprising twist.

Authenticity seeps from each turned page — in dates, family lineage, historical data, and in the maps on the back and front inside-covers of the book. Miss du Maurier has delved deeply into factual data and has completed the family tree of Sir William Ferrers and Isolda Tracy nee Cardingham. Miss du Maurier is more able to speak intelligently of the area about which she is writing also, because she is now living in Cornwall as the mistress of Kilmarth, the house whose six-hundred-year-old past was the inspiration for this tale. In her writing, she is constantly inserting some tidbit of factual data to aid the reader toward a deeper understanding and appreciation of the characters and the historical setting of fourteenth century England.

Realism and mysticism are developed through the main characters' actions and feelings. Magus Lane is a London University biophysics professor who used undergraduate friendship as a lure to get Dick Young to be his human guinea pig for experimentation with drugs that might lead to the reproduction of the brain cells concerned with memory. Dick Young is a young married man, between jobs, who comes with his family to live rent free at Kilmarth, Magus' summer cottage, while he is helping Professor Lane with his studies.

Though not a major part in the plot development, he is a recurring figure — with each new appearance we see some unusual situation.

Miss du Maurier's book can be easily read because of her freely-flowing active style and vivid descriptions. While reading her book, one becomes a part in the action and can identify with Dick Young and his experiences. One can almost feel the nausea and vertigo that overcomes Dick as he returns to the real world if he has touched anyone or anything while under the effects of the hallucinogen. One can ride beside Dick as he tours the countryside of fourteenth century England with his contact in this new world — a horseman named Roger, whose master is Sir Henry de Champenoune, lord of a large manor. One can see Dick with his hands twisting around his own wife's neck when he, while under the effects of the hallucinogen, thinks she's Joanna Carnoune whom he has grown to hate.

The writer thinks that the popularity of this novel is based on the free-flowing style and contemporary subject matter. Anyone who is contemplating the use of LSD, marijuana, or hallucinogenic drugs may well profit from reading this timely novel. Those people who desire to broaden their world through vicarious experiences may also find this book stimulating.

Culmination Of Sr. Activities Marked By Lantern Parade

Now that the year is almost to a close, the seniors have been engaged in a multitude of activities, culminated by Senior Assembly last Wednesday night and Senior Banquet and Lantern Parade Thursday night. The assembly, produced by the seniors, was the traditional review of the class of 1970's four years at Longwood. This year the skit showed Longwood life as seen through the eyes of four "typical" students. It contained many of the often-heard snide remarks about food, faculty, and other facets of college life.

The senior banquet contained a similar skit produced by the sophomores, many parts of which drew loud laughter from students and administrators alike. The "awards" handed out after the skit were also amusing, particularly Carolyn Cummins' award for "the quietest senior."

At 10:30 that night, the black-robed seniors and their little sisters in white gathered behind Jarman. As they lined up with lanterns lit, the chatter was stilled by the plaintive notes of a trumpet emanating from the roof of Wheeler. One senior remarked that it sent chills down her back. It was, in truth, a moving farewell to the class of 1970. On that note, the long line started its trek around to the main dormitories, omitting Curry. The walkers returned to form an immense circle on Wheeler Mall, singing a few class songs before breaking up.

LC Students Have Many Plans For Summer Diversions

By LINDA FLOYD

How is the typical Longwood student planning to spend her time this summer? The answer is not to be found! Concerning summer plans there is no "typical" Longwood student. During this summer, Longwood girls will do practically everything under the sun and in a wide variety of places. Activities range from more study to office work to teaching, rather than being a student. Summer abodes include Farmville, all the way across the states, or abroad.

Many students will be learning the secrets of the business world as they work in offices. Offices big and small, hold positions for typists, receptionists, and file clerks. New insights into law, and government problems, and local concerns will be gained by those working for lawyers, the government, county officer, private businesses, banks, etc.

Some students will realize their desire to work with people by working in schools, hospitals, and camps. School programs such as Headstart and camp counseling positions afford the prospective teacher an opportunity to see if she really does enjoy working with children. Being a nurse's aide lets one know what a hospital atmosphere is like from the viewpoint of one who works there.

The local department store or drugstore on the corner will employ some girls, while others will go away from home to work, perhaps even selecting a beach as the site of their summer activities. Many girls find summer jobs in restaurants located at scenic vacation spots.

U. S. Involvement In Southeast Asia Topic Of Symposium

Under-Secretary of Defense, Robert Moot, will be guest speaker at a symposium in the Gold Room of Lankford, May 22, at 7:30 p.m. He will talk on U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia.

This is an opportunity for those interested in the situation in Southeast Asia to hear the story from one who knows. Secretary Moot will talk and then answer any questions which may arise. Everyone is invited to come to listen and ask questions concerning U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia.

Project For Letters To Hanoi Phi Mu Sorority Sponsors

Today there are approximately 1,400 Americans classified as Prisoners of War or missing in action in Vietnam. In 1957 North Vietnam endorsed the Geneva Convention, agreeing to certain tenets and among them were the:

- 1) immediate release of a list of prisoners
- 2) immediate release of sick and

- 3) wounded
- 4) impartial inspection of prison/prisoners' facilities
- 5) exchange of mail between prisoners and family

Hanoi has done little to live up to these commitments. There are many families in the U. S. who do not know the status of their husbands, brothers, (Continued on Page 4)

Dr. Sandridge, Speaker For 1970 Commencement

The 1970 commencement exercises for some 450 seniors and graduate students will be held on Saturday, June 6, on Wheeler Mall. This year's graduating class is the largest number of degree recipients in the history of the college.

Formal exercises will begin at 9 a.m. Following the ceremonies, a buffet-type brunch will be planned in the Lankford Student Union for graduates, faculty members, and guests.

The Commencement address will be delivered by Dr. Sidney E. Sandridge, president of Southern Seminary Junior College. Dr. Sandridge was the invited speaker at the college's fall Convocation in 1967.

A native of Albemarle County, (Virginia), Dr. Sandridge received his Baccalaureate degree from the University of Virginia, B.D. degree from Candlor School of Theology at Emory University, and Ph.D. from Northwestern University.

Dr. Sandridge has served as a Methodist minister, professor of sociology, dean and academic vice-president of Ferrum Junior College; academic dean, executive vice-president, and now president of Southern Seminary Junior College. On July 1, 1970, he will become president of Athens College in Alabama.

Presiding over the entire graduation exercises will be President Henry I. Willett, Jr. The Reverend Horace L. Ford, of Richmond, father of Betty Anne Ford, will give the invocation.

Evening Of Theroux Presents Two One-Act Plays

By LINDA SMALLEY

The final drama presentation of this year was given Friday, May 15, in Jarman Auditorium by the Hampden-Sydney Jouglers in connection with the Longwood Players. Featured were two original one-act plays, "The Confessions of Mrs. Motherwell" and "Christmas Eve at the Gordon Crumms," written by Dr. Alexander Theroux, associate professor of English at Longwood.

"The Confessions of Mrs. Motherwell" concerned a middle-aged woman whose son dies from a rare, incurable disease. Starring as Mrs. Motherwell was Longwood junior Edrie Bays, an English and drama major. Portraying the reporter, who is called to check into the son's death, was Frank Johns, a senior English major at Hampden-Sydney. The play was directed by Hampden-Sydney philosophy major Frank Faust, a senior. All three are members of Alpha Psi Omega National Honorary Dramatics Fraternity.

The second play, "Christmas Eve at the Gordon Crumms," is the story of a Northern boy who attends college in the South. The play centers upon the events following his return home for Christmas vacation. Bob Hearn, a senior biology major at Hampden-Sydney, played the role of the father, while P. M. Hite, a junior psychology major at H-SC, starred as the college student. The play was directed by Hampden-Sydney senior Randy Hallman, an English major. Assistant director was Longwood's Barbara Roukema.

Presidential Press Conference Deals With LC, National Topics

By ETHEL REITER

In his last conference with the student body, President Willett appropriately spoke on a vitally relevant issue, that of university resistance and revolution. President Willett strongly commended the group which displayed their antiwar and antilaughter sentiments through their "Silent Plea for Peace." He believes that there has to be room on campus for dissent. This is as it should be, for the campus is a forum of differing views and opinions. However, he is vehemently opposed to any deviation from the academic program of the college. President Willett will discuss political and social issues in classes, not in a cessation of classes. As far as an institution of higher learning, at Longwood it will be "business as usual." Asked to state his own views on the Vietnam war, Dr. Willett expressed strong personal reservations which stem from a number of factors. He looks to the Korean War, and the contrast that exists between Korea and Vietnam. In the Korean War the people of that country and the citizens of America supported and desired U. S. involvement, whereas, in Vietnam there is much controversy. He realizes, though, that the United States cannot withdraw immediately, and he sees the Viet Cong as the enemy. Flying the Viet Cong flag is, therefore, banned on campus. Dr. Willett reminded the student body that dissent must follow the proper channels. Any event must be scheduled. There can be no disruption of the rights and privileges of any student.

President Willett also discussed registration and other local matters. Next year there should be a better system of scheduling of classes for registration. The administration is aware now of where the needs and faults are in the present system of registration. More sections will be offered for courses in great demand, such as health education and sociology. First semester changes can be made as late as August 15, and the fifteen dollar fee is for arbitrary changes only.

On September 11 there will be a Student-Faculty Retreat at Holiday Lake. Previously, only Student Government officers had represented the student body, but next year we will see a

Complaints vs Compliments

Complaints are always more frequent than compliments. But, this week the administration is to be commended for its forward looking policies. The 1969-70 school year is almost over, but not far off is the 1970-71 semester. In the fall, Longwood will house nearly 2,000 students. Many of the buildings presently under construction will be completed, and students will be able to take advantage of the new facilities. In addition, many new faculty members have been appointed and many new course offerings have been approved. All this growth is of course, expensive, as the increased tuition expenses for next year show. But, students should be reminded that Longwood is still one of the cheapest state schools in Virginia. Certainly we should be thankful to those administrators and faculty members who are willing to devote so much of their time to helping Longwood improve.

Sun-Strike?

Recently across the nation students have been boycotting classes to protest the Kent State incident and the Nixon Administration's re-escalation of the war. Some students at Longwood have also been boycotting classes, many not because of the "strike but to head for the roofs and partake of the sun. Either way, it is all a bit silly.

To begin with, students are in college for an education. True, one can be self-educated from reading, but the main value in a college education is the interplay of thoughts and ideas that come from listening to others. While students may have discussions on the roof or at a massive peace rally, is this really an education? Learning needs direction. If a student does not attend classes, why bother to pay tuition for a year of study? Why not just stay at home or get a job. That may be the answer. For those who are here who do not want an education, college provides some freedom from parents and the pressures of a 9 to 5 job — at least for a short time. Students are looking for action and a cause, and it seems that when a new cause comes along, there will always be someone for or against it.

The last few weeks of the academic year are hectic, and there is much to be gained by going to classes at this time. Professors stress what is to be on the exam, and the last week is a wrap-up of the most important ideas in a course.

It is the student's own decision as to whether she wants to participate in a lay-in on the roof or a pray-in at a peace rally, but these students should not try to infringe on other students' rights by wanting either classes cancelled or the college closed.

From The Board

The Student Government Committee has finalized their work for this year. This Miss Longwood Pageant Committee for next year met and discussed ways of making the production better. The Chairmen for next year are Pat Necessary, General Manager; Gail Waldron, Producer; Joan Putney, Director; and Bev Aston, Business Manager.

Four proposals were made by the Infirmary Committee and approved by the Board. They are as follows: A) The committee be allowed to continue for 1970-71 school session. B) The present members be allowed to serve next year with Bonnie Davis as chairman. C) Two incoming freshmen be appointed by the committee with the approval of the Legislative Board. D) A new advisor to be chosen through Sponsor Board in the fall.

The Boards are trying something new for next year's day students. They will be living in the dormitories during Orientation week. This will give the dorm and day students a better chance to know one another, as well as give the day students a chance to see dorm life.

Exchange Program To Begin In The Fall

Due to the conflicts in the scheduling of events at Hampden-Sydney and Longwood, the exchange program will not begin this year. The program will enable "xx" number of Hampden-Sydney boys to eat here one night and "xx" number of Longwood girls to eat at Hampden-Sydney the following night without charge. This program will begin next fall and if enough interest is shown, it will continue.

Letters To The Editor

Graphis Magazine

To the Editor of the ROTUNDA:

I have been requested by the faculty-student Library Committee to communicate the following information to the college community.

Lost, stolen, strayed, or mislaid — the entire file of a very valuable periodical, GRAPHIS MAGAZINE, is missing from Lancaster Library. Any information concerning this distressing matter will be greatly appreciated and treated with complete confidentiality.

We (the committee) apologize for intruding so mundane an item into the "Letters to the Editor" column, however, since — it is to be hoped — the library will be in existence long after the present generation of faculty and students have departed from these walls, the concerns of the library should occasionally be voiced as part of the "wider view."

Sincerely,
Rosemary Sprague

Disruption Or Destruction

Ed. Note: This statement was received by President Willett and was given to the ROTUNDA.

The Virginia Farm Bureau is deeply and gravely concerned with the disruption of quality education in Virginia. This concern of our more than 21,000 member families is shared with a growing number of citizens of the Commonwealth.

This year the General Assembly approved, with the support of the people of Virginia, a 28 per cent increase in the budget for higher education. An appropriation of more than $300 million for capital outlay and operating cost is ample evidence of support and concern for quality education by every citizen.

This system is now threatened with disruption or destruction. During the past week there have been disorders, strikes, threats of strikes, closing of schools, student arrests, and threats of violence to students who wish to attend class.

On some campuses professors have been participants in, or leaders of, activist movements.

This leaves a doubt in the minds of many parents and taxpayers who have supported quality education in Virginia, if administrators and teachers at our tax supported colleges have not transformed our state universities from institutions of learning, with the freedom to debate intellectual issues, to institutions for organizing and massing movements for social reforms.

Therefore we ask other citizens to join 21,000 Farm Bureau families in writing, telephoning, or wiring the Governor of Virginia to support the following recommendations:

1. That the Governor take whatever steps necessary to withhold funds from state supported colleges where disorder has disrupted the orderly process of education.

2. That the Governor take whatever steps necessary to place a moratorium on merit salary increases for college professors.

Upon determination of the Governor that the orderly process of education has been restored, the Governor may exercise the administrative authority of his office to authorize the expenditure of any funds withheld. The Farm Bureau commends those students who are attending our colleges for educational purposes, and feels that those students deserve public support, and deserve to continue their education uninterrupted.

Alcoholic Beverages

Dear Editor,

I would like to express my feelings concerning the letter written by Linda Jones which appeared in last week's issue of THE ROTUNDA.

I am very pleased to see more people expressing their views in the newspaper, for I feel that many misunderstandings and problems can be rectified when you are aware of the problems. I am most concerned about Linda's apparent feelings toward Casey Wilkes, Legislative Board, and "proper channels." From what she said in her letter, it is apparent that she did not go through the proper channels — she merely approached them. Linda stated that she was invited to a board meeting but did not have time to attend because of four tests. Members of Legislative Board have tests also. Because of their responsibility to the student body, they make time to sit through long hours of meetings and perform their other duties that go on outside of board meetings. I think that if Linda could follow Casey around this campus for just one day, she would wonder how she has time to even attend classes.

I do not feel Linda has grounds for criticizing Casey for not being able to give her the exact number of signatures needed on a petition. To my knowledge, there is no exact number required. I would assume she gave Linda the figure of one-fourth since that is the number required for amending the Student Government Constitution. I am confident that if members of students signing a petition was anywhere in the area of one-fourth, the petition would be given due consideration by Legislative Board.

Linda did receive a reply to her letter, but a request from one student does not warrant changing a major policy of the college. I do not feel the board was at all "lackadaisical" or that the proper channel was a "bummer."

If Linda is truly concerned about having alcoholic beverages on campus, I suggest that she, either singly or by forming a committee, make a proposal stating her reasons for wanting them on campus. Also, consider under what circumstances you would like to see alcoholic beverages on campus: in the dorms, in the snack bar, or both. Restrictions for students under 21, etc. Also, obtain the signatures of as many students as possible who have similar feelings. By presenting the board with a proposal accompanied by concrete suggestions, ideas for implementation, and an idea of how many students are behind this proposal, the board will truly have something to consider in trying to please the majority of the student body. A student government is just that. What Linda failed to realize is that 13 girls can't handle all the problems on this campus by themselves. It requires the combined efforts of all students.

In closing, I would like to cite an example of what I mean when I refer to a concerned student. As President of Student Government, I came to have much respect for Carolyn Cummins. Carolyn has written many letters both to the ROTUNDA and to Legislative Board. I have not always agreed with Carolyn, but when she feels that something needs to be changed, she comes to board meetings and is willing to devote all her energies to the problem she feels is in existence. For this reason I commend Carolyn, for she is a true example of a concerned student.

Sincerely,
Janice Austin

Pledging Allegiance

To the Editor:

In view of the letters published in last week's issue of the ROTUNDA we would like to say:

One Nation under God,
Indivisible,
With Liberty and Justice for all."

Dispelling Rumors

To the Editor:

In anticipation of student response to our letters in last week's ROTUNDA and to dispel rumors that we are subversive Communist types, we would like to list some little remembered rules:

"Thou shalt have no other gods before me
Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image
Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain
Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy Honour thy father and thy mother
Thou shalt not kill
Thou shalt not commit adultery
Thou shalt not steal
Thou shalt not bear false witness
Thou shalt not covet."

Along with these rules we found another interesting passage, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."

Peace,

Apathetic Students?

Dear Editor:

In the last issue of the ROTUNDA there was an article entitled "What's A University." Most would agree that a university is a place to learn, but today some students have forgotten that they came to learn and are trying to teach. It is also a place to comment, question, and reject, but some have forgotten that all do not share their convictions. I cannot support any group that infringes upon another's rights whether they are National Guardsmen, college administrators, or college students. I cannot support any move to deprive anyone of their education by closing schools. I also question how any of the recent protest actions have helped to return reason to our country.

The Peace Coalition of H-SC and LC should be commended for their Ending their season with an exciting victory over Madison College, the Longwood Varsity Tennis team won 3-2 last Thursday on Barlow Courts. The team posted a winning record of 5-3 for the season. Their only losses were two close ones to Mary Washington and Westhampton and the first match of the season to William and Mary.

The match last Thursday was a hard fought one with the "Blue and Whites" coming out on top. In number one singles Lynne Coleman lost to Madison's Chris Shelton 10-8, 2-6, and 3-6. Also in singles competition Longwood netters Freda Lunsford and Debbie Ellin were victorious. They won 6-2, 2-6, 9-7, and 6-2, 6-1, respectively.

Laurel Baldwin and Lynn Kwaiowski won doubles for the "Blue and Whites" by defeating their opponents 6-4, 2-6, and 12-10. Judy Turner and Lynda Driver lost 9-7 and 7-5 in two very close sets.

Coach Mrs. Harriss, with a big smile on her face, commented, "We're excited about winning this last contest."

In another close match on Tuesday the Longwood netters fell to Mary Washington College in an away match. Lynne Coleman won by the scores of 6-3, 6-2 and Freda Lunsford won 2-6, 6-2, and 6-3. Although the other Longwood players played well they were defeated in tight games.

On May 8 the team was on the road again as they were defeated by Westhampton College in Richmond 3-2 in another hard fought contest.

Lynne Coleman won over Marilyn Bray, of Westhampton, 9-7 and 6-3, while Freda Lunsford was successful in beating Mary Pearson 6-0, 3-6, and 6-4. Debbie Ellin lost her set 6-3, 6-3. Longwood was defeated in both doubles matches in some well played games.

The team celebrated their winning season with a dinner at Cedar Brook Restaurant, Tuesday night. Guests included Dr. and Mrs. H. I. Willett, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. T.C. Dalton. Both the varsity and junior varsity teams and coaches, Mrs. Harriss and Miss Callaway, attended the dinner.

Commenting on the season, Mrs. Harriss said, "We had a great season and we would like to thank all those who supported us by coming out to the matches. The girls played beautifully and we're all so proud of them."

Letters To The Editor

Apathetic Students

handing of the local protest movement. Acts of violence like those at other colleges throughout the state will only hurt their cause and eventually their college. The public will overreact, financial aid will dwindle and enrollment will decrease. In the past few years higher education in Virginia has made great strides forward. I hope that the legislators and the voters will continue their support, but I cannot expect them to if the current trend of violence continues. Change in the campus, community, state or nation should be sought through the ballot box and if you lose there is always a next time.

On my way to lunch Friday one student distributing memos remarked that nonparticipation of the peace movement by Longwood students meant that we are apathetic. I did not participate in their peace march nor sign their petition, and I doubt if anyone at Longwood would call me apathetic. I would like to suggest that the nonparticipation was not out of apathy but out of a willingness to give President Nixon a chance or a belief that he is following the proper course. Also those who say nonparticipation means that we are against peace use faulty reasoning. We all desire peace; we do not agree on the best method of obtaining it. May we all have the courage to accept the decision of the voters this coming November.

Last Monday we heard speakers opposing the President's policy in Vietnam and Cambodia. Thursday, May 21, we will have an opportunity to talk with Undersecretary of Defense Moot. I urge everyone to come, learn, and share their thoughts.

In the past I have spoken out on many issues — sometimes with success, most of the time with great resistance — but in doing so I have always followed one maxim: Be tolerant of other's opinions, try to get them to think, even to change, but always use dialogue, not denigration. Perhaps this can serve as a guideline for others, too.

Children's Theater

Dear Editor:

It was with great apprehension that the members of Longwood's Children's Theater class, including myself, began a tour of several elementary schools in and around Farmville and outlying towns, presenting children's plays and puppet shows. However, the results were devastating for both the actors and audiences.

I was appalled at the conditions of some of the schools, several little more than one-room school houses, and the conditions under which the children are expected to learn. We as actors had to learn to adjust to each audience according to level of understanding and were surprised at how difficult it was for even children in the upper elementary grades to follow a play.

We were told in many of the schools that this was the first time most of the children had been exposed to live theater. This and the fact that a good deal of Longwood graduates will be educators compelled me to write this letter. I see the need for more of this type of program for school children, especially in financially deprived school districts. Of course, not all teachers can be actors, directors, or artists, but some type of exposure to the arts, and more appropriations for such activities are needed.

The rewards I and the other members of our group gained were too numerous to list, but most of all I feel we gained from just seeing these morose school conditions, situations most will not face in student teaching or regular teaching positions. I think it would be worthwhile for anyone anticipating the field of teaching to experience the same.

The Virginian

As we are certain the student body is aware, THE VIRGINIAN, Longwood's yearbook has undergone a number of changes in the past few years. These changes affected the layout, the photography, and even the approach taken in depicting Longwood's scholastic year. Unfortunately, regardless of the changes listed above, THE VIRGINIAN, although technically responsible for both the fall and spring semesters, has been able to portray only the fall semester. This situation has existed because THE VIRGINIAN has been contracted in the past for spring delivery. Under spring delivery the material for the book must be submitted approximately three months before the delivery; thus, instead of a yearbook, Longwood has had a book about her fall semester with specially arranged photographs about spring events. Spring coverage has been; in short, merely previews of coming attractions. Spring delivery then, has hampered coverage of many of Longwood's major events: May Day, Honors Assembly, Chi's burning, and most of all, Graduation. And we feel if a student pays for a yearbook, she should receive just that, a yearbook, not a scrapbook that has relied on guesswork for half its copy.

With these views in mind, THE VIRGINIAN editors presented the following proposal to Publications Board: That THE 1971 VIRGINIAN be contracted for a fall delivery, in which case the subscribers would receive their copies in the fall of 1971. The Board gave the proposal unanimous approval.

Like all changes, this plan has drawbacks as well as advantages. The major disadvantages, obviously is the fact that the books will not be delivered until the following school year; however, this will simply keep THE VIRGINIAN in step with the better college and university yearbooks, which operate according to this system. Also, seniors will have a small mailing fee (approximately fifty cents) to add to their regular subscription rate to cover handling costs. Still, the advantages are rather attractive: more coverage, better photography, more specialization — in short, a higher quality yearbook.

As editors of THE VIRGINIAN, we can only hope that the switch to fall delivery will be accepted well by Longwood. We are certain that the resulting publication will suffice increasing whatever objections may arise.

Sincerely,
Cookie Howell

Gross Street

Ed. Note: The following letter was sent to the ROTUNDA from Travis Smith to thank all who were involved in this.

Dear Miss Smith,

On behalf of the Prince Edward Council on Human Relations, I want to thank you, and through you the students at Longwood, for the help you provided on the Gross Street community repair project.

There remain assorted minor jobs to be finished, but on the whole the effort is complete, and in looking back we can hope that several things have been accomplished. Certainly there was some material improvement, and more importantly, a number of more fortunate people saw at close range some things it is well that they know about. Lastly, the contact among normally separated people — the improved human relations — may in the long run prove the greatest dividend.

All of this was possible to a greater extent because the image of the Longwood student has been enriched by the willingness of several to help. Thanking all of you again, I am
Sincerely yours,
Gerald Pyle

Rotundas Sent

Dear Editor:

It has come to my attention that copies of your paper are being sent to the parents of all students who write letters to the editor. While I think it commendable that parents are being kept informed about the activities of their daughters' school, I condemn the discriminatory practice of sending copies only to parents of students who are using the paper to express their opinions. It is my hope that this practice, no matter who is conducting it, will not pressure the students into forgoing the use of the paper as a medium of expression. THE ROTUNDA seems to be well on its way toward becoming a real student newspaper, and I hope it will continue to follow along that path.

Project For Letters

or fathers. Only about 100 of the 1,400 have communicated with their families. Regardless of our stand concerning the war in Vietnam, the issue of POW should concern all. Hanoi, on numerous occasions, has said that Americans do not care about the fate of their men.

The American people must demonstrate to Hanoi that the apathy that they are counting on does not exist. Throughout the nation there is a movement to write letters to Hanoi expressing concern about our POWs in Vietnam. The students at Longwood College now have an opportunity to become involved in this humanitarian effort on behalf of the prisoners and their families.

Phi Mu Sorority is sponsoring a local campaign in behalf of our POWs. If each of us takes a moment out of our day and addresses a short handwritten letter to Hanoi expressing our concern and asking them to observe the Geneva Convention, it would help. There will be boxes in every dorm for you to place your letters. There are sample letters on the bulletin board in each dorm. Please make it hand-written and signed, so Hanoi cannot say that you were forced to sign a prewritten document or that a few individuals wrote many letters.

These letters will be collected and delivered to Mrs. W. N. Grubb of Petersburg, and she will see that they are delivered to Hanoi. Mrs. Grubb's husband is one of the Americans missing or prisoner in Vietnam. He was shot down four years ago and to this date she has received no word from or about her husband. She is one of the many wives trying to organize this national letter writing campaign. Surely the apathy that Hanoi is counting on is contrary to our feelings too. Surely we at Longwood can take a minute to write at least one letter. One day it could be your father, brother, husband, or fiancé that benefits from your concern today.

Summer Diversions

of what they are presently involved in — namely, study and books. Girls will remain at Longwood to gain extra hours, study at various schools in the state and in the country, or study abroad. Those studying abroad generally intend to combine study with sight-seeing and traveling. Some will go abroad just for the knowledge acquired from traveling, rather than for specific study. Reasons for studying in the summer include plans to graduate early, "... haven't anything else to do," enhancing one's education by taking courses somewhere other than Longwood, or the practical purpose of pulling one's grades up.

Some Longwood "misses" plan to become "Mrs." over the summer. Wedding bells will sound for both graduates and undergraduates. These students will probably be wishing they had taken a course in the culinary art rather than Arts and Crafts!

The summer, whatever it holds, should provide a diversion for all. Hopefully, fall will find all returning students refreshed and ready to start another year's work.

Miss Ripley has resigned from the faculty but she has not announced definite plans for the coming year. Mr. Blasch has been on leave of absence this year but will return to the faculty in September.

Mr. Graham will leave the faculty since he has been here only for the period of Mr. Blasch's leave. Mr. Ray Fawcett also will return to our faculty in September, as will Dr. Harvill, Mr. Lehman, and Mr. Stuart.

Miss May and Dr. Theroux will be teaching somewhat reduced loads, while they pursue their research interests.

Mr. Walter Hathaway has been appointed State Supervisor of Art Education for the State of North Carolina, and will assume the duties of that position in July.

Junior Festmeister, Sophomore Mittenmeister, Usherettes Chosen

With the Oktoberfest weekend not far in the future, Geist has announced the 1970 Festmeister, Mittenmeister, Geistmeister, and the eight usherettes for this year's activity-packed weekend. As the German word Geist signifies, the girls who were carefully chosen by members of Geist are recognized for their intelligence, imagination, and their overall outstanding Longwood spirit and devotion.

The position of Geistmeister, given to the senior who most represents the traditional Blue and White spirit, was given to Sue Rinaldi.

Sue, vivacious and fun-loving, comes originally from Portsmouth, Virginia. While here at Longwood she has been active in almost every facet of college life. Her various activities past and present include Secretary of Student Government, Junior Representative to Legislative Board, Sophomore Representative to the May Court, general chairman of the Miss Longwood Pageant, Sigma Kappa Corresponding Secretary, and she is also a member of the Colleagues. Sue is an elementary education major hoping for a Bachelor of Science degree.

Festmeister for the 1970 Oktoberfest is Beverly Aston, a junior. Her duties will include acting as mistress of ceremonies. This is the highest recognition that Geist gives a member of the Junior Class.

Beverly, from Suffolk, Virginia, plans to be an elementary education teacher, as she is working toward the Bachelor of Science degree in the elementary education department. Bev, a really dedicated student, has been the sophomore class historian, a Colleague, the YWCA sophomore counselor, a contributing member of the Financial Aid Committee, and she has been named the Business Manager for the 1971 Miss Longwood Pageant.

Tapped for the 1970 Mittenmeister is Carol Chory, a sophomore. Her duties Oktoberfest weekend will be to supervise over the midway. Carol, who has shown both spirit and loyalty, certainly deserves this recognition.

Carol, a physical education major from Virginia Beach, has been very active in all the physical sports offered here at Longwood. She has played varsity hockey, many intramural sports, and has been the representative to the Athletic Association.

In addition to these three important positions, Geist elected eight usherettes, two from each class. Their duties will consist of introducing the class skits in form of dance, and to seat the guests. Those honored were Debbie Remsburg, Brenda Brown, seniors; Sandi McMurry, Jody Mace, juniors; Martha Morrisette, Becky West, sophomores; Joan Foster, Bobbie Bannin, freshmen. Debbie Remsburg is an Elementary Education major from Loudoun, Virginia. Debbie's record for leadership certainly cannot be disputed. She has been class Vice President, Alpha Sigma Tau Rush Chairman, elections committee co-chairman, dining hall committee chairman, and she is also a Pea Picker.

Brenda Brown from Newport News, Virginia, is working towards a Bachelor of Science degree in History. Brenda, an extremely capable, girl, has held positions on Legislative Board ever since her freshman year. She has been chairman of Ring Dance, a member of the Concert Choir, and she was chairman of the Environmental Teaching in that was held on the Longwood campus last year.

Sandi McMurry is a Psychology major from Holland, Virginia.

Sandi has shown a great deal of Longwood spirit. She has been a red and white spirit leader, a Colleague, a student assistant, an active member of the Longwood Players, and a representative to the Lankford Student Union.

Jody Mace, an Elementary major from Newport News, is an outstanding example of the Longwood spirit. Jody has been the Rotunda's exchange editor; she has worked very closely with the Student Government Association as the recording secretary; she was the junior ring chairman, an active member of Sigma Kappa, and she is currently the Canterbury Club president.

Martha Morrisette, from Farmville, is an elementary education major. In spite of being a day student, Martha has been extremely active in activities at Longwood. She has been a Colleague, and is a member of Alpha Sigma Tau Sorority. Martha has also been a Nurse's Aid at the Southside Community Hospital.

Becky West is also an elementary education major. The active sophomore from Roanoke has held the positions of vice president of the freshman class, a member of the freshman commission, a member of the tennis team, a participant in the Geist production of last year, a member of the Athletic Association Social Committee, a supporter of the intramural sports program, and finally she is a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Joan Foster and Bobbie Bannin are the two prospective freshmen who have shown outstanding spirit and leadership qualities already. Joan is from Richmond and is yet undecided in her major. Barbara, from New York, is a Physical Education major.

These 11 girls, each a complimentary example from the four classes, will spark enthusiasm and purpose on the weekend of October 30, the 1970 Oktoberfest festival.

Graduate Record Examinations

First Testing Date October 24

PRINCETON, N.J. - Educational Testing Service announced today that undergraduates and others preparing to go to graduate school may take the Graduate Record Examinations on any of six different test dates during the current academic year.

The first testing date for the GRE is October 24, 1970. Scores from this administration will be reported to the graduate schools about December 1. Students planning to register for the October test date are advised that applications received by ETS after October 6 will incur a $3.00 late registration fee. After October 9, there is no guarantee that applications for the October test date can be processed.

The other five test dates are December 12, 1970, January 16, February 27, April 24 and June 19, 1971. Equivalent late fee and registration deadlines apply to these dates. Choice of test dates should be determined by the requirements of graduate schools or fellowships to which one is applying. Scores are usually reported to graduate schools five weeks after a test date.

The Graduate Record Examinations include an Aptitude Test of general scholastic ability and Advanced Tests measuring achievement in 20 major fields of study. Full details and registration forms for the GRE are contained in the 1970-71 GRE INFORMATION BULLETIN. The BULLETIN also contains forms and instructions for requesting transcript service on GRE scores already on file with ETS. This booklet may be available on your campus or may be ordered from: Educational Testing Service, Box 955, Princeton, New Jersey 08540; Educational Testing Service, 1947 Center Street, Berkeley, California 94704; Educational Testing Service, 960 Grove Street, Evanston, Illinois 60201.

Psychiatrist Latest Addition To Infirmary Staff

This year Longwood has added to its staff a psychiatrist, Dr. James C. Sams, Dr. Sams comes to us from the University of Virginia.

Dr. Sams is on campus every Wednesday and can be seen by appointment made through the infirmary nurses. He also reserves the hours after 3:30 for those girls who for some reason could not make an advance appointment. His office is located on the second floor above the infirmary. The student health fees pay the retainer for Dr. Sams, but any additional costs will be billed directly to the student.

Dr. Sams' services are open to any student wishing his help. He said he is "aware of the prejudice" psychiatrists encounter, but also pointed out that emotional conflict is a part of everyone. One of the major problems in treating college students, he stated, is that the student does not know how confidential his visit is kept. Dr. Sams' agreement with Longwood is that any records he may keep are his own personal records and not a part of the student's college records at all. Dr. Sams is a welcomed addition to Longwood.

Class Of '74 Speaks

Instead of the traditional formalized editorial welcoming the new freshman class, the Rotunda staff decided to devote this space to the freshman in a different manner. Since first impressions are always important a poll was taken dealing with Orientation, 1970 and how the freshman felt about it. The freshmen chosen at random, were urged to respond truthfully, but were under no obligation to answer everything in a complimentary fashion. It is to be remembered, however, that only a small number of the Freshman class was approached so naturally there are many opinions that were omitted; It is hoped however that many of these opinions express the views of those freshmen who have not yet had their say. In any case, pay attention upperclassmen, the freshmen are 800 strong and are speaking to you.

— L. K. W.

Q: What impressed you most about orientation?

A: The genuine concern that the administration showed to the freshmen impressed me the most — Kathryn Wood

A: Everybody's friendliness, especially the friendliness of the orientation leaders and colleagues — Elaine Johnson

A: Everybody's friendliness. The program lasted too long. Orientation test shouldn't be held during a school week — Kathy Taylor

A: The mixer! — Brenda Childress

A: The organization and timing — the student assistants were great — Lynn Hamilton

A: Honor code signing and beanie capping — Marie Wiemer

Q: What did you think of the orientation test?

A: It was awfully picky; but we should know the information — Brenda Burchett

Q: During orientation, which group left the greatest impression upon you, colleagues, student assistants or orientation leaders?

A: The student assistants were most friendly and therefore I felt they meant more to me — Karen Perkins

Q: What do you feel could have improved Longwood's orientation program this year?

A: There were boring orientation meetings; otherwise an excellent program — Janis Rowe

A: It should've been a little shorter. Make it on a day other than Sunday allowing the roommates to go downtown together for curtains rods, rugs, etc. for the bedroom, give the rest of the day off for getting settled in the rooms instead of rushing off to meetings — Vernie Harris

A: We thought Chl should walk after honor code signing — too many assemblies, we may flunk out — Kay Perkinson, Marie Wiemer

A: Not too many assemblies — Susan Talbott

A: Slow it down a little bit — Susan Dowdy

A: When classes started, don't have any more meetings — Lin Davis

Q: Did you learn anything from Longwood's orientation program? What?

A: Yes, everything written in the handbook told of the different aspects of college life and the orientation program gave you time to experience these aspects and get used to the college — Kay Biggs

Q: Does the orientation program make you feel more welcome than you would have felt at another college without the program?

A: Yes, well, another school might have the orientation program, but they couldn't make you feel wanted and welcome as this one did. — Daria Poole

Q: What was your first impression of Longwood's orientation program?

A: Your last impression.

A: Oh, I liked it . . . it got a little hectic; but I still attended everything and I'm glad I did, I felt the same from the first — Debbie Waldron

Longwood Apathy Movement Victimizes College Newspaper

By ETHEL REITER

Mourn not the dead . . .
But rather mourn the apathetic throng—
The cowed and meek
Who see the world's great anguish and its wrong,
And dare not speak.

Ralph Chaplin

Irrving Kristol in his essay, "What's Bugging the Students?" states that the students of the 1950's were conformists for plain, obvious, and traditional, conformist reasons. The death of this "silent generation" gave birth to an age of nonconformism, idealism, and active concern. However, if this responsible concern exists at Longwood it does so with only a handful of students. Cooperation, involvement, and interest are foreign words to a vast majority of the student body. Again this year the Rotunda suffers miserably as victim of the Longwood Apathy Movement. I know of no other movement so massively supported. I have visions of the Apathetic Student Society becoming the major organization on campus, encouraging the spirit of indifference, laziness, and unquestioning tolerance.

Every week the Rotunda weakly crawls off the press and humbly awaits your scorn and criticism. Skimming the headlines, you throw the paper aside. If you are not completely indifferent, then you are dissatisfied with the lack of pertinent facts, or maybe a slanted story, a misquote, or with another critical commentary which in your opinion is totally unfair. Several of these accusations may be valid, but with a staff of approximately five people it is difficult to interview, report, write, lay out, and circulate a perfect newspaper. When help is so scarce that one person is forced to write three articles, they naturally become quite biased. Then there are those of you who are content with a newspaper which contains campus gossip, student council activities, dining hall complaints, and so forth. However, this is the newspaper of the past. In recent years collegiate journalism has modernized, and the Rotunda staff would like to see the same trend in your paper. It is vital to show concern for problems in the larger society and their relevance to the academic ivory tower. Surely, a few students have opinions on academic and administrative affairs, community matters, and national issues. The Rotunda exists as a means of voicing such opinions and ideas. We, the members of the Rotunda staff, are concerned about the future of your newspaper. Without help it cannot survive. We voice this plea in the interest of the student body. In conclusion, I would like to quote the 1970-'71 Longwood College Student Handbook which states,

The Rotunda is a medium for the journalistic efforts of ALL students. Anyone interested in journalism can find valuable experience by contributing to this newspaper, which seeks to uphold the highest standards of journalism. It invites the interest and support of ALL in the college community.

Letters To The Editor

A Staunch Stand Complimented

Dear Editor,

At 1:00 Thursday in the Gold Room, I attended my first Longwood press conference. As a freshman it was a new experience for me and I was greatly impressed with the entire production. Particularly, I was impressed with Dr. Willett's views concerning the drug situation.

In the confusion and excitement of the past weeks I guess the thought of narcotics was pushed from my mind, temporarily, but hearing Dr. Willett answer the various questions last week, I was reminded once again of the many dangers of drugs. I remembered with apprehension how easily it was to obtain drugs in my home town and even in my high school. I thought about the lives that had been destroyed or altered because of a "bad trip."

It seems now that all a person has to do is walk down certain areas of any city and he will be confronted with pushers, users and go-betweens. It's frightening to think about our future generation when a great majority of them might be mutilated because their parents once "shot speed" or "dropped a few downers."

It is my sincere hope that Dr. Willett will continue his policy concerning narcotics. Until everyone is aware of the danger of drugs, someone must take the incentive and show his concern for the misuse of drugs. Longwood has taken a stand, true it's not a liberal stand but it is for the benefit of the students and should be supported by everyone here.

Sharon L. Sapp, 1974

A Definite Evaluation

To the Editor:

I was encouraged to hear at President Willett's press conference (10-17-70) that the Legislative Board has recommended that a study be taken on the proposal that alcoholic beverages be allowed on campus. It has been suggested that open meetings on the subject be held and a student survey be conducted.

This seems to indicate that at last Longwood has decided to move with the times and recognize the fact that college girls, even future elementary and secondary school teachers drink.

Many colleges in Virginia, including well-respected women's colleges such as Randolph-Macon, Mary Washington, Sweet Briar and Radford, allow the consumption of beer on campus either at a place designated for such or in the dorms. Many girls at Longwood would prefer having some places established on campus where they could drink or being allowed to drink in the privacy of their dorm rooms.

It seems to me that Longwood as well as parents would encourage rather than discourage students to drink within the confines of the college instead of while riding around in a car or at the local drinking establishments.

As with any suggested change in policy, there is bound to be disadvantage as well as advantages. The Cons as well as the Pros on this subject should be carefully considered. If drinking is allowed, either in the dorm or at a specified place on campus, additional regulations may be needed to insure that students do not infringe upon each other's rights.

Whatever side of this proposal a student may favor, she should be sure to speak out and let her opinion be known.

Stephanie Sivert
Class of '72

Non Existent Academics

To the Editor:

Recently I have heard of an academic affairs committee. Who is on the committee and what is their function? Does this committee evaluate the teachers at the college periodically? Each day the students are evaluated by their participation in class and by their work, but does anyone check up on the teacher to see if he or she is doing his or her job? In one class I had two years ago I never received any of my tests back until I walked into the exam. How is a student supposed to realize her mistakes if her teacher is too busy to ever hand back a test?

I know that a teacher has to do a lot of other things besides teach or his classes. But because we are in the process of learning to be teachers, shouldn't our teachers set an example for us?

If several students come to this committee with a real complaint about a teacher, does this committee investigate and if so, what is done to correct the situation?

I think a committee like this one is good for a college. Why is it that very few people know of its existence?

Linda Jones

Opinions And Comments Wanted

The Rotunda staff wishes to urge all students to submit to the Letters to the Editor column. There is no policy on length, or subject matter. The only stipulation that is rigidly enforced is that students must sign their names on the printed material. We hope that you won't feel intimidated in any way. Please support your college newspaper.

Mash Highly Fragmented And Badly Flawed But Good Show

Basically MASH is a comedy concerning life in an emergency medical aid station near the front lines in Korea. In tone and structure MASH is very much of the modern school along with movies like Easy Rider in which there is practically no plot but instead a heavy reliance on stringing together many independent episodes any of which could be cut without disturbing the rest of the movie. This is a technique which when used expertly as in Nicodem's excellent "Simon of Brooklyn" can seem to flow smoothly and yield a tight movie, or which as in "Easy Rider" can be fed to adolescents even when used sloppily if draped in a suitable message. Unfortunately, MASH is meant for an adult audience as well as adolescent yet the caparules anecdotes are not skillfully welded, resulting in a noticeably rough series of transitions.

The continuity of "Mash" is badly disturbed in the second half of the movie when a shift is made from the muddy hills of Korea to a football field elsewhere on which a game is played for morale building purposes between the MASH unit and another outfit. While the game episode is amusing, it constantly breaks the flow and gives the impression that Preminger and Nichols were looking pretty hard for material with which to pad the flick to salable length.

Sutherland and Gould are the drawing names but the rest of the cast is uniformly good. They do an excellent job of caricaturing men and women actually to be found in the service and they catch well the bawdy, crude, yet subtle humor of the military. It is the acting and the good direction of the unconnected episodes of the movie which make up for the fact that as a whole it is rather poorly made. All the stereotypes are present: the tough, mindless sergeant, the gang-bag WAC, who takes the service seriously — the Oriental kid being taught to mix martinis, the pathetic chaplain whom nobody takes seriously, and above all the fellow, whether doctor or jeep-driver, who was drafted and cannot quite figure why he is where he is but wishes he were not. The action of the movie combines these characters in portraying events far too good to be true but highly amusing.

All in all, the movie is well worth seeing, it should be kept in mind that it is a caricature. Amusingly, some students seem to regard it as pure idealism, which it, of course, is not.

Longwood Faculty Hosts Art Show Bedford Building

By KATHRYN WOOD

The new Bedford Art Gallery is the scene of a Faculty Art Show, which started October 1, 1970, and will continue through November 1, 1970. The Gallery is open from 9:00 a.m. until 6:00 p.m. daily and from 2:00 p.m. until 6:00 p.m. on Sundays. The students of Longwood as well as the public are invited to attend.

The artists are Miss Barbara Bishop, chairman of the Art Department, Miss Ann Lee Rose, Miss Elizabeth Flynn, Mrs. Janice Lemen, Mrs. Nancy Leitch, Mr. Paul Rouillard and Mr. William Stuckert. A reception will be held Sunday, October 11, from 2:00 until 5:00 p.m. for the public to meet the artists.

Some types of art represented in the show are photography, oil painting, ceramic, and collage.

Mr. Paul Rouillard feels that the "Art Department has worked very hard for the show. Each member is very well represented with the individuality of each member showing through. There is a great variety on display with a richness in style. The works range from abstract to pop to pleiglass."

When asked about the building, Mr. Rouillard said, "The Bedford Building is a beautiful building. It has made the Art Department very prominent."

Team Reorganizes Gets New Coach Adds New Faces

A young team, a new coach, a large schedule, and Longwood's varsity hockey squad begins its 1970 season. Led by Miss Dianne Davis, the team includes returnees Freda Lunsford, co-captain, Jane McCaffrey, Patty Coogan, Ellen Dunn, Debbie Ellenbrand, Janet Ford, Nancy Fowlkes, co-captain, Margaret Lowry, Susanne Morgan, Susan Stutz, Carol Chory, Diane Derrick, and Jackie Santoro. Senior Sherry Williams, sophomores Barbara Cridlin, Mo Hunt, Sue Manahan, Sandy Oliver and freshmen Loretta Bunting, Becky Burch, Beth Cobb, Dana Hutcherson, Brenda Price, Joy Ross, Beth Turner, Wanda Wallace, and Paula Williams are listed as those playing their first varsity hockey season. Managers are sophomore Diane Weymouth and freshman Jenny Johnston.

The team's first chance to work together against outside competition came Saturday, September 26, at Westhampton College where they attended the annual Tidewater Field Hockey Association clinic. The day included stickwork in the morning and games in the afternoon. This opportunity of playing preseason games at the clinic, plus many hours of laps, stickwork, and game situations here at practice sessions, should see Longwood's team ready for any situation.

The schedule for the remaining games is:

10	October

23	Madison	There
23	Bridgewater	There

Hockey Intramurals Brings Sororities, Dorms Together

Hockey Intramurals began this week with the dorms and sororities competing with one another. Each team gets to play at least two games before being eliminated. The games are played in the afternoon with junior physical education majors officiating. A trophy will be given to the champion of the intramurals. Class and color competition will follow intramurals.

The teams consist of players from Alpha Gamma Delta, Wheeler, Sigma Kappa, Cox, Alpha Delta Phi, Tab-French, Cory, Delta Zeta, Alpha Sigma Tau, South Cunningham, Kappa Delta, North Cunningham, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Main Cunningham, Alpha Sigma Alpha, Zeta Tau Alpha, Frazier, and Alpha Phi.

Georgia, the Maid Marriane of the 20th century practices for a hopeful victory in the October 10 meet.

Archer To Attend East Coast Tournament

Longwood College's archery champion, Georgia Freeman, will attend the East Coast Intercollegiate Archery Tournament at Glassboro State College in Glassboro, New Jersey, October 10. The tournament consists of shooting a Columbia Round at 50, 40, and 30 yards, 6 arrows to an end, and 4 ends to a distance - a total of 72 arrows. Also, the 300 Round will be shot - 25 arrows each at the 60, 50, and 40 yard distances.

Miss Freeman, a junior, has been a member of the Longwood Archery Team since her freshman year when she broke the school's standing record with a score of 548. In the fall of 1969, she placed fourth in the tournament at Glassboro. Miss Freeman was first place with a score of 566 at the State Collegiate Tournament in the spring of 1970. This summer, August 31-September 6, the Longwood Champion attended Teala-Wooket Archery Camp in Roxbury, Vermont, to learn different skills and to receive more training. The archers came from such places as Canada, Arizona, and the Virgin Islands to attend the session of training. Another archer at the camp, Barbara Brown, won third place at the World Tournament in Wales this September.

Wet Workouts And Practices Add Up To New Swim Team

After a week of workouts, practices, and a lot of "wet" fun, members of the Longwood's 1970 swim team have been chosen. Those selected for their skill and ability to perform well in the water were: Sherri Beatty, Tater Brown, Linda Burdort, Ellen Cahill, Eleanor Challen, Susan Clark, Leslie Edwards, Kathy Hipskind, Lois Hrubik, Kathy Kutscher, Mary Ellen Saslowski, and Kathy Umbdenstock. Manager is Carolyn Starnmont.

Tryouts were held each afternoon last week with the final decision resting with swim coach Sally Bush. Although the turnout for the team was not too good, Miss Bush is expecting great results from the selected members.

Team practices will be held Monday and Wednesday from 4-6 p.m., and each Tuesday and Thursday from 3:15-4:50 p.m., plus any extra practices which may be needed. The schedule for the season is as follows:

Hockey Team Loses Opener Coach Plays For Richmond

Longwood College's Hockey Team lost their opening game of the season to the Richmond Hockey Club by a score of 4-1. The game was played on Longwood's Barlow Field.

The Richmond Club picked up most of their scores during the first half. Three of the goals were credited to their powerful center forward, and the last goal was scored by Longwood's Hockey Coach, Dianne Davis. It was indeed ironical to see a coach play against her own team. At half time, Longwood's coach returned to her college players to give them helpful hints, then returned to Richmond's side to receive strategy plays from their coach.

Although Longwood's players looked good, they could not compete with the experience and team work of the Richmond team. The opposing team showed good foot work and speed with their forward line, and excellent passing.

Longwood, at times, showed good passing and good strategy. Her weakest part seemed to be with her forward line who frequently were neither keeping up with each other nor working together.

Outstanding players of the game were Freda Lunsford, Sue Manahan, Janet Ford, and Margaret Lowry. Two freshmen, Beth Cobb, playing fullback, and Becky Burch, who made Longwood's only goal, showed great skill and good prospects of becoming top hockey players.

Competition Rises As Tennis Singles Begin

Intramural tennis singles started last week with members of all four classes competing against each other. The tennis players play a Pro set in which the winner must win eight games, but she has only to win by one game. Therefore, the maximum number of games to be played are 15, (8-7).

To be completely out of the tournament, a player must lose twice. If there is a winner in each class, a round robin tournament will be held to decide which class gets the points toward class cup.

Barbara Cridlin, Linda Wall, Cathi Loper, Gail Gossage, Dottie Bolanmon, Terri Gadsby, Angie Beverly, Cindy Cain, and Andy Lassiter comprise the list of sophomore players.

Longwood English Department Adds Four Faculty Members

Longwood College has gained four new teachers in the English Department. New to the staff are Miss Cathleen Hoseny, Mrs. Camilla Mason Tinnell, Mr. David C. Vest, and Mr. Allen Wier. Both Miss Hoseny and Mr. Vest have been appointed assistant professors, Mrs. Tinnell and Mr. Wier are instructors in the English Department.

Miss Hoseny, a native of Pennsylvania, holds the B.A. degree from Rosary College and M.A. from Loyola University. In June, she expects to complete the doctoral degree in Classical Studies. When asked how she liked Longwood, Mrs. Hoseny replied that the "campus is unique and beautiful. It is setting in the heart of historical Virginia and isn't overwhelmed by the urban area." She also finds the girls "interested and enthusiastic and a pleasure to teach."
